Submission of a request for an applicant's military records (including a request pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act or Privacy Act) after the DD Form 293 has been submitted will automatically result in the suspension of processing of the application for discharge review until the requested records are sent to an appropriate location for copying, are copied, and are returned to the possession of the headquarters of the Discharge Review Board. Processing of the application shall then be resumed at whatever stage of the discharge review process is practicable.

DD FORM 293 - PLEASE PRINT OR TYPE INFORMATION.
(Items on the form are self-explanatory unless otherwise noted below.)

ITEM 1b. Use the name which you served under while in the Armed Forces. If your name has since changed, then also include your current name after adding the abbreviation "AKA". If the former member is deceased or incompetent, see Item 11.

ITEM 2. If you received more than one discharge, the information in this item should refer to the discharge that you want changed. Discharge Review Boards cannot consider any type of discharge resulting from a sentence given by a general court-martial.

ITEM 3. If the discharge you want reviewed was issued over 15 years ago, instead of applying on a DD Form 293, you must petition the appropriate Board for Correction of Military Record using DD Form 149, Application for Correction of Military Record Under the Provisions of Title 10, U.S. Code, Section 1552.

ITEM 5. If you request a change of narrative reason for separation, you must list the specific reason for discharge that you believe to be appropriate, otherwise the Board will presume that you do not want a change in reason for discharge. If you do not request a change of discharge characterization in this item, the Board will presume you want to change discharge to Honorable.

If you were separated on or after 1 October 1982 while in an entry level status with an under other than honorable conditions discharge and less than 180 days of active service, you can request a change of discharge characterization to "Uncharacterized" and discharge reason to "Entry Level Separation".

ITEM 6. "Issues" are the reasons why you think your discharge should be changed. You are not required to submit any issues with your application. However, if you want the Board to respond in writing to the issues of concern, you must list your specific issues in accordance with those instructions and regulations governing the Board. Issues must be stated clearly and specifically. Your issues should address the reasons why you believe that the discharge received was improper or inequitable. It is important to focus on matters that occurred while you served in the Armed Forces.

The following examples demonstrate one way in which issues may be stated (the example issues do not indicate, in any way, the only type of issues that should be submitted to the Board):

Example 1. My discharge was inequitable because it was based on one isolated incident in 28 months of service with no other adverse action.

Example 2. The discharge is improper because the applicant's pre-service civilian conviction, properly listed on his enlistment documents, was used in the discharge proceedings.

In Item 6 list each of your issues that you want the Board to address. There is no limit to the number of issues that you may submit. If you need additional space, continue in Item 14 or on a plain sheet of paper and attach it to this application.

NOTE: If an issue is not listed in Item 6, it may result in the Board not addressing the issue even if the issue is discussed in a legal brief or other written submissions or at the hearing. Changes or additions to the list may be made on the DD Form 293 anytime before the Discharge Review Board closes the review process for deliberation. Please be sure that your issues are consistent with the Board Action Requested (Item 5). If there is a conflict between what you say in your issues and what you requested in Item 5, the Board will respond to your issue in the context of the action requested in Item 5. For example, if you request a General Discharge in Item 5 but your issue in Item 6 indicated you want an Honorable Discharge, the Board will respond to the issue in terms of your request for a General Discharge. Therefore, if you are submitting issues for the purpose of obtaining an Honorable Discharge, be sure to mark the box for an Honorable Discharge in Item 5.

Incorporation by Reference. Issues that are listed on a legal brief or other written submissions may be incorporated by reference in Item 6. The reference must be specific enough for the Board to clearly identify the matter being submitted as an issue. At a minimum, it shall identify the page, paragraph, and sentence incorporated. Example: Issue 1. Brief, page 2, paragraph 1, sentences one and two.

Applicants should be as specific as possible with all references so the Board can clearly distinguish the scope of the issue. Because it is to your benefit to bring such issues to the Board's attention as early as possible in the review, if you submit a brief, you are strongly urged to set forth all such issues as a separate item at the beginning of the brief.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR COMPLETION OF DD FORM 293 (Continued)

ITEM 8. Evidence not in your official records should be submitted to the Board before the review date. It is to your advantage to submit such documentation with this application. This also applies to legal briefs or counsel submissions. However, you have the right to submit evidence until the time the Discharge Review Board closes the review process for deliberation. Documents that are of the most benefit are those which substantiate or relate directly to your issues in Item 6. Other documents that may be helpful are character references, educational achievements, exemplary post-service conduct, and medical reports. You should add your name and Social Security Number to each document submitted. The Board will consider all documents submitted in your behalf, but will respond in writing only to those issues set forth in Item 6.

ITEM 9. TYPE OF REVIEW REQUESTED

A Discharge Review is conducted in two basic ways:
(1) Records Review or (2) Hearing.

1. Records Review. You may have the Board conduct a discharge review based solely on military records and any additional documentation that you provide. This review is conducted without personal appearance by you and/or your counsel appearing.

2. Hearing. You may appear personally (alone or assisted by a representative/counsel) before the Board in the Washington, D.C. Metro Area or before a Traveling Panel of the Board in selected locations throughout the U.S., if appropriate. The Department of Defense is not responsible for, nor will it pay for, any costs incurred by the applicant or representative/counsel for appearance or providing testimony or documentation. Detailed notification and/or scheduling information for all personal appearances will be provided after the application has been processed. In addition, without appearing yourself, you may have your case presented by a representative/counsel of your choice.

Applicants participating in a personal appearance or hearing examination may make sworn or unsworn statements, introduce witnesses, documents, or other information on their behalf. Applicants may make oral or written arguments personally and/or through representative/ counsel. Applicants and witnesses who present sworn or unsworn statements may be questioned by the Board.

FAILURE TO APPEAR AT A HEARING OR RESPOND TO A SCHEDULING NOTICE. If you do not appear at a scheduled hearing or respond as required to a scheduling notice, and you did not make a prior, timely request for a continuance, postponement, or withdrawal of the application, you will forfeit the right to a personal appearance and the Board shall complete its review of the discharge based upon the evidence of record.

ITEM 10.a - d. Omit if you do not have a representative/ counsel. If you later obtain the services of either, inform the Board immediately.

The military services do not provide counsel representation or evidence for you, nor do they pay the cost of such representation under any circumstance. The following organizations regularly furnish representation at no charge to you. Representatives may or may not be lawyers.

1. American Legion
2. Disabled American Veterans
3. Veterans of Foreign Wars
4. State or Regional Veterans Offices

In addition, there are other organizations willing to assist you in completing this application and to provide representation at no cost. It is to your advantage to coordinate with your counsel prior to submitting this application. This will insure that your counsel is able to appear at the location you listed in Item 9. Please note that some of the organizations listed above only represent applicants who appear before the Board in the Washington, D.C. Metro Area. Contact your local veterans affairs office, Veterans Administration Office or veterans service organization for further information.

ITEM 11. If the former member is deceased or incompetent, the application may be submitted by the next of kin, a surviving spouse or a legal representative. Legal proof of death or incompetency and satisfactory evidence of the relationship to the former member must accompany this application.

ITEM 12.a. Indicate the address to be used for all future correspondence regarding this application. If you change this address while this application is pending, you must notify the Discharge Review Board immediately. Failure to attend a hearing as a result of an unreported change in address may result in a waiver of your right to a hearing.

ITEM 13.a. and b. A signature and date entered by the applicant or person identified in Item 11 are required.

INSTRUCTIONS

Under Title 10 United States Code Section 1552, Active Duty and Reserve Component Service members, Coast Guard, former Service members, their lawful or legal representatives, spouses of former Service members on issues of Survivor Benefit Program (SBP) benefits, and civilian employees with respect to military records other than those related to civilian employment, who feel that they have suffered an injustice as a result of error or injustice in military records may apply to their respective Boards for Correction of Military Records (BCMR) for a correction of their military records. These Boards are the highest level appellate review authority in the military. The information collected is needed to provide the Boards the basic data needed to process and act on the request.

1. All information should be typed or printed. Complete all applicable items. If the item is not applicable, enter "None."
2. If space is insufficient on the front of the form, use the "Remarks" box below for additional information or attach an additional sheet.
3. List all attachments and enclosures in item 9. Do not send original documents. Send clear, legible copies. Send copies of military documents and orders related to your request, if you have them available. Do not assume that they are all in your military record.
4. The applicant must exhaust all administrative remedies, such as corrective procedures and appeals provided in regulations, before applying to the Board of Corrections.
5. ITEM 5. State the specific correction of record desired. If possible, identify exactly what document or information in your record you believe to be erroneous or unjust and indicate what correction you want made to the document or information.
6. ITEM 6. In order to justify correction of a military record, it is necessary for you to show to the satisfaction of the Board by the evidence that you supply, or it must otherwise satisfactorily appear in the record, that the alleged entry or omission in the record was in error or unjust. Evidence, in addition to documents, may include affidavits or signed testimony of witnesses, executed under oath, and a brief of arguments supporting the application. All evidence not already included in your record must be submitted by you. The responsibility of securing evidence rests with you.
7. ITEM 8. U.S. Code, Title 10, Section 1552b, provides that no correction may be made unless a request is made within three years after the discovery of the error or injustice, but that the Board may excuse failure to file within three years after discovery if it finds it to be in the interest of justice.
8. ITEM 10. Personal appearance before the Board by you and your witnesses or representation by counsel is not required to ensure full and impartial consideration of your application. If the Board determines that a personal appearance is warranted and grants approval, appearance and representation are permitted before the Board at no expense to the government.
9. ITEM 11. Various veterans and service organizations furnish counsel without charge. These organizations prefer that arrangements for representation be made through local posts or chapters.
10. ITEM 12. The person whose record correction is being requested must sign the application. If that person is deceased or incompetent to sign, the application may be signed by a spouse, widow, widower, next of kin (son, daughter, mother, father, brother, or sister), or a legal representative that has been given power of attorney. Other persons may be authorized to sign for the applicant. Proof of death, incompetency, or power of attorney must accompany the application. Former spouses may apply in cases of Survivor Benefit Plan (SBP) issues.

EMPLOYMENT

The EMPLOYMENT CHAPTER will help you prepare to reenter the workforce and will guide you throughout the job application process. You will learn about your rights when an employer runs a background check on you, how and when an employer may consider your criminal record, and how to protect your rights in these situations. This Chapter will also help you if you want to apply for a professional or occupational license, start your own small business, or consider other alternatives to traditional employment. Finally, this Chapter will explain your rights in the workplace if your incarceration was the result of a disability, and how to protect yourself against illegal discrimination.

DISCLAIMER - YOUR RESPONSIBILITY WHEN USING THIS GUIDE: When putting together the Roadmap to Reentry: A California Legal Guide, we did our best to give you useful and accurate information. However, the laws change frequently and are subject to differing interpretations. We do not always have the resources to make changes to this informational material every time the law changes. If you use information from the Roadmap to Reentry legal guide, it is your responsibility to make sure that the law has not changed and applies to your particular situation. If you are incarcerated, most of the materials you need should be available in your institution's law library. The Roadmap to Reentry guide is not intending to give legal advice, but rather legal information. No attorney-client relationship is created by using any information in this guide. You should always consult your own attorney if you need legal advice specific to your situation.

EMPLOYMENT APPENDIX ..... 614

WHAT WILL I LEARN?

In this chapter, you will learn about:

- Your rights throughout the job search process
- How to prepare for the job market
- How to make the best impression on employers
- What to do if an employer or background check company violates your rights
- How to maximize your opportunities of finding the right job for you

I. INTRODUCTION: LOOKING FOR WORK

WHAT WILL I LEARN?

- What to expect as a job applicant with a criminal record
- How your criminal history will affect your job search
- The basic documents you need before applying for jobs
- How to prepare for questions about your criminal record
- Key terms to know and understand when reading this chapter
- How to improve your resume
- Basic information on cleaning up your record
- How to target your job search to find the right job for you, and what types of jobs may not be available based on your record
- Options for work beyond traditional employment
- Important information about filling out job applications
- How to succeed in job interviews and present your best self to employers
- Special benefits that are available to employers who hire people with criminal records

People with criminal convictions can and do get jobs—it happens every day! They are employed in the workforce at all levels, from entry-level jobs to executive positions. You may (or may not) have to work a little harder to get a job, but it can and will happen. Remember the 3 “P”s—be Persistent, be Professional, and keep a Positive attitude.

PREPARING TO ENTER THE JOB MARKET

Before talking about your employment rights, let’s review some basics. This section goes over what you can realistically expect from today’s job market, and the things you need to do and get before you can hold any job.

WHAT CAN I EXPECT AS A JOB APPLICANT WITH A CRIMINAL RECORD?

The job market is a competitive place for anyone looking for a job. Although it may be a tough process, finding a job is possible if you give it time and effort! It is important to get organized and learn about your options. This section will help you understand the unique rights that you have as a job applicant with a criminal record and how to exercise those rights during your job search.

HOW WILL MY CRIMINAL RECORD AFFECT MY JOB PROSPECTS?

Unfortunately, if you have a criminal record, it may be harder to get hired, paid, and promoted fairly. But you are not alone—one in four adults in the U.S. has a criminal record,<sup>1842</sup> and having a record does not mean you are unqualified for the job. If you take steps to understand your rights, responsibilities, and limitations, you can arm yourself with the knowledge necessary to secure the right job.

Employers often conduct background checks on job applicants and current employees. In order to be prepared, you must be highly proactive about:

1. Learning strategies for how to present your skills, credentials, and personal background (for more information, see PG. 564);
2. Understanding and cleaning up your criminal record (some record-cleaning can only happen later-on in reentry—for more information, see PG. 571); and
3. Knowing and protecting your rights (for more information, see PG. 609).

WHAT DOCUMENTS DO I NEED BEFORE I APPLY FOR ANY JOB?

You should get: (1) official ID and (2) copies of your criminal records to review.

FIND A TRUSTED PERSON

Find a trusted person and/or other local resources to help you prepare for the job search, navigate any record-related barriers, and find the right job for you!

OFFICIAL FORMS OF IDENTIFICATION:

Before you apply for any job, you should begin the process of applying for basic government-issued IDs. (To learn more about different forms of official ID, see the BUILDING BLOCKS OF REENTRY: ID & VOTING CHAPTER, beginning on PG. 22.) In most cases, you will need at least:

1. A government-issued ID (such as a driver license / state ID, PG. 43, or passport, PG. 60), AND
2. EITHER your Social Security Number (SSN) (PG. 38) OR your Birth Certificate (PG. 31).

You will need these ID documents when you apply for a job and complete the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) Form I-9, which all employees in the United States must fill out. Form I-9 proves you are legally allowed to work in the country. Your employer should give you this form to fill out. See Appendix A, PG. 615, for more information about Form I-9.

Please note that the employer cannot keep your documents, but may make a photocopy of them for your employment file.<sup>1843</sup>

COPIES OF YOUR CRIMINAL RECORDS:

You should get copies of your criminal records JUST FOR YOUR OWN REVIEW—so that you know what employers are likely to find out if/when they run a background check. This will help you prepare to answer questions about your history and to address any concerns an employer may have. It's also good to get a copy of your official criminal record (called a “RAP Sheet”) just for you, to make sure that all the information is accurate, and to correct errors if you find them. See UNDERSTANDING & CLEANING UP YOUR CRIMINAL RECORD CHAPTER, PG. 931, for information about how to get a copy of your RAP sheet. See PG. 571, below, to learn more about background checks and what information your employer can see.<sup>1844</sup>

With a copy of your record in hand, it will also be very helpful to schedule an appointment with a reentry legal clinic or “clean slate” clinic hosted by a public defender’s office or nonprofit like Root & Rebound in your area! You can also call Root & Rebound on our weekly Reentry Legal Hotline any Friday at 510-279-4662 for advice about what an employer will see from your record (most cannot see everything).

HOW CAN I PREPARE FOR EMPLOYERS’ QUESTIONS ABOUT MY CRIMINAL RECORD?

1. Know everything about your official criminal record.

Knowing absolutely everything about your criminal record means that you know not only what is in your record, but also what is NOT in your record. You should be aware of all arrests, convictions, dismissals, and sentences that are currently part of your record, but you should also know about any information that has been dismissed, expunged, sealed, removed, or corrected. When you know what your record should look like, you will have a better understanding of how it will affect your job search, and you can make informed decisions about what steps you should take to improve your chances of getting hired.<sup>1845</sup>

2. Know what employers might find out about you.

To know what information an employer might find out about you, you will need to do research on yourself. Doing research on yourself is how you will see what information exists out there about you—not just what is in your official criminal record, but also anything public, especially on the Internet (for example, on Facebook, Twitter, or Instagram). If you know what employers are going to see, you can be prepared to answer their questions about your history and address any of their concerns. You can also correct any mistakes, and ensure that agencies aren’t illegally providing information that they shouldn’t be reporting.

Here are some suggestions for how to conduct research on yourself:

- Look online - The best place to start is online. (If you don’t feel comfortable using a computer or the Internet, ask a trusted person—like a case manager, counselor, or friend—to help you.) Search for your name on www.google.com to see what shows up. If there is negative or untrue information, you (or a trusted person) can send an email to the person who posted the information or the website owner and politely ask them to remove it. Unfortunately, there is no guarantee that they will do so, and it could require a lawsuit to get the information down. If the person running the website won’t remove the information, you may want to get the advice of a lawyer (see list of legal aid providers on PG. 1127).

IMPORTANT PROTECTIONS FOR YOU & YOUR RECORD

Some of the information you will find on yourself will be things that employers CANNOT SEE, ASK ABOUT, or CONSIDER when you apply for a job. But it is good to know what information is out there, just to be aware of what employers might find and to know how to respond if illegal information shows up in a background check. For complete details on what criminal record information an employer can and cannot see, ask about, or consider, see PG. Error! Bookmark not defined. For a brief summary of this information, read the Know Your Rights Box on

- Call your references - When you apply for a job, the new employer and/or background check company may contact your past employer(s), people you list as references, and/or other people who know you (like a landlord, neighbor, or teacher) to find out about your work history or other information. An important way to research yourself is to call some of these people (or have a trusted person call for you) to find out what they will say about you. This way you know beforehand if someone is likely to say something negative about you, and you can be sure NOT to list them as a reference on the job application. For more information on listing references, see PG. 567.
  - Get copies of your criminal records - To learn how to get copies of your official and unofficial criminal records, see the UNDERSTANDING & CLEANING UP YOUR RECORD CHAPTER, beginning on PG. 931.
3. Know what employers CAN & CAN'T consider about your criminal record.

Knowing your employment rights means knowing what employers can and can't do when it comes to reviewing and using your criminal history when deciding whether to hire you. It also means knowing how to prevent employers from violating your rights by not hiring you, and what actions you can take if your rights are violated. See PG. 587 to learn more about these rights and how to protect them. In the meantime, below is a summary of what employers CAN and CAN'T consider about your criminal record.<sup>1846</sup>

4. Present yourself in the best way possible.

Presenting yourself in the best way possible means doing what you can to reduce any negative impressions that your criminal record may cause. This might include addressing your past during job interviews and talking about your rehabilitation efforts and all the changes you have gone through; obtaining proof of rehabilitation, where possible (see Appendix C, PG. 621); making thoughtful decisions about what jobs you apply for (see PG. 566); and cleaning up your record, where it is possible (see PG. 566).<sup>1847</sup>

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS

A Summary of What Employers CAN & CAN'T Find Out About Your Criminal Record

Most Employers CAN:

- Run a background check on you BUT ONLY after they have given you a conditional offer of employment
- Once they have given you a conditional offer of employment, they CAN consider certain criminal history information when deciding whether to hire you; however, when considering your criminal history, they are required to assess whether your conviction is directly related to and could interfere with job duties.

Most Employers CANNOT:

- See or ask about: arrests that did not lead to conviction, including pending arrests;<sup>1848</sup> convictions that have been dismissed/expunged/sealed; participation in court diversion programs; and certain minor marijuana convictions.
- See or ask for: Your RAP sheet (your complete, official criminal record); or your credit report.

Note: Local “Ban the Box” laws may give you even more rights and protections in certain cities and counties.

HOW TO PRESENT YOUR BEST SELF

HOW DO I PRESENT MY BEST SELF TO AN EMPLOYER?

While you can't control everything about the job search, there are MANY steps you can and should take to improve your chances of being hired for the job you want—whether that means cleaning up your record, finishing school, or learning new skills and getting more experience. This section will explain what you can do before you begin applying for jobs, throughout your job search, and during your application process, to help improve your chances of being hired.

- BEFORE YOU APPLY: 1) Beef up your resume before any new job application, and 2) Clean up your record.
- THROUGHOUT THE JOB SEARCH: Target your job search for jobs that are an appropriate fit for you.
- WHILE APPLYING FOR JOBS:
  - Ace the job application,
  - Interview well, and
  - Understand and explain the benefits to the employer.

TATTOO REMOVAL:

My visible tattoos are preventing me from obtaining employment and moving on with my life after incarceration. I'd like them removed. Is there anyone who can help?

Yes. If you are interested in removing your tattoos, there are several organizations in California that offer free or low-cost tattoo removal for people who are having trouble obtaining employment due to visible tattoos, particularly if they are gang-related tattoos. Homeboy Industries in Los Angeles, for example, offers free tattoo removal and a number of other useful services for formerly incarcerated people. Upon your release, you can search for more organizations that provide these services on Jails to Jobs' website at: <http://jailstojobs.org/wordpress/tattoo-removal>. For information about employment discrimination due to your tattoos, see PG. 593.

BEEF UP YOUR RESUME

HOW CAN I BUILD UP MY RESUME?

- 1. Explore volunteer opportunities. Volunteering is a great way to learn new skills, gain solid references, find out about local job opportunities, and show potential employers that you are dedicated and responsible. Although it is usually unpaid, it strengthens your application and offers experiences you can talk about in your job search.
- 2. Go back to school. Going back to school to get your GED or advanced college or professional degree shows that you are responsible, focused and driven—all qualities that employers look for when hiring. As a practical matter, going back to school can offer you training to expand your skillset and qualify you for more jobs.
- 3. Participate in a reentry program. Employers will be impressed if you are proactive and take steps to grow and learn from challenging past situations. Reentry programs in your local area may be able to help you in your job search, and support you in your transition. To find out about reentry programs or other employment opportunities, we recommend that you attend local reentry fairs and/or talk to people (in prison or jail or outside) who might know about these programs. Ask your counselor or case manager, parole or probation officer, mentor or sponsor, or others for recommendations.
- 4. Participate in workforce development (job readiness) programs. Many organizations have workforce development or job readiness programs for people with criminal records or other employment barriers. These programs help you to search for jobs, improve your job skills, and prepare for job applications and interviews. They provide services like job counseling, job training, resume writing, interview coaching, and sometimes job placement and referrals.

Even if there are no job readiness programs for people in reentry in your area, look for similar services. Sometimes the only workforce development program near you will be an America's Job Center, which is run by the government. If the America's Job Center is your only option, take advantage of the case managers and other programs there. If there are other workforce programs available in your area, try those first, as they often provide more individual attention and help. For a list of workforce development programs around the state, see Appendix B, PG. 619, or call 2-1-1 for local referrals.

VOLUNTEERING

Consider volunteering with local religious or community organizations, and plan to stick around for at least 6 months. The length of time you remain dedicated to the organization is more important than the amount of time you spend volunteering during a particular day or week. Your volunteer work can help to calm an employer's concerns about your past, and strong references can go a very long way in helping to secure a future paying position.

TALK TO YOUR TRUSTED PERSON

Talk to your trusted person or someone at a workforce development program to see what school, work, and volunteer opportunities are available in your area, and for other ideas about how to build your resume and gain new skills.

HELPFUL HINT

What are America's Job Centers of California?

America's Job Centers of California (once called One-Stop Career Centers) are job readiness centers run by the state through the California Employment Development Department (EDD), a state agency that assists workers and employers. America's Job Centers provide FREE services and resources to people looking for work, including: job counseling to figure out what jobs are right for you; free access to phones, fax machines, computers, and Internet; job search and résumé writing workshops; community resources and referrals for training; and job fairs. To find an America's Job Center near you, go to www.americasjobcenter.ca.gov. To find job fairs and workshops, go to www.edd.ca.gov/Jobs\_and\_Training/Job\_Fairs\_and\_Events.htm and follow the links to find events in your region.

CLEAN UP YOUR RECORD

CAN I CLEAN UP MY RECORD?

Maybe. Your record is not necessarily permanent for the purpose of getting a job. You may be able to clean up or lessen the impact of your criminal record, since, by law, most employers cannot inquire about convictions that have been expunged at ANY time in the hiring process.<sup>1849</sup> For more information about the different ways to clean up your record, see the UNDERSTANDING & CLEANING UP YOUR CRIMINAL RECORD CHAPTER, beginning on PG. 931.

Different organizations may offer “clean slate” services in your area, such as: Public Defenders offices; “Reentry,” “Clean Slate,” “Expungement,” or “Second Chance” clinics; and some civil legal aid organizations. For more information about finding expungement services and programs in your area, see the list of legal aid providers on PG 1127, or call Root & Rebound’s Reentry Legal Hotline any Friday at 510-279-4662 for referrals. To learn more ways to show employers proof of your rehabilitation, see Appendix C, PG. 621.

TARGET YOUR JOB SEARCH

HOW DO I TARGET MY JOB SEARCH AND FIND THE BEST FIT?

1. Consider the type of job you’re applying for.

Employers will be more concerned if the job position you are applying for requires you to do work that directly relates to your past convictions. For example, if you’ve been convicted of theft, this may concern an employer who is looking to hire someone to become a manager or cashier at a store. If you can proactively point out that the circumstances of your crime—including the seriousness of the offense and the length of time since it occurred—won’t affect your ability to do the job, an employer is more likely to feel you will be an honest and truthful worker. Also, there may be some types of jobs or occupational licenses that you can’t hold by law, based on your conviction offense. See PG. 600 for more information about legal restrictions for certain types of jobs.

2. Consider the type of employer you’re applying to.

Consider the type, size, and management style of the company to which you are applying. As of January 1, 2018, employers with five or more employees cannot ask whether or not you have been convicted of a crime until AFTER they have extended a conditional offer of employment.<sup>1850</sup> If you reach this point in the hiring process, you may have more success with a small business than a larger corporation, since you will have a greater opportunity to speak directly with the owner and explain what happened. Still, remember that even big corporate employers are legally required to do an individualized assessment of how your conviction relates to the position.<sup>1851</sup>

ARE THERE CERTAIN TYPES OF JOBS I CAN’T HAVE BECAUSE OF MY CRIMINAL RECORD?

It’s possible. Before applying for work, you should know that certain jobs have legal restrictions that disqualify people with certain past convictions from working in that position. Also, certain types of jobs require you to have a professional or occupational license from the state, and such licenses have their own legal restrictions and can be difficult to get depending on what’s in your record. For more information on legal restrictions and professional licenses—and how you can become re-eligible to work in some cases—see “Jobs & Professions Your Record Might Exclude You From,” starting on PG. 600.

Examples of jobs with legal restrictions for certain types of convictions: Airport security screeners; Law enforcement officers; Bank employees; Childcare workers in federal facilities or agencies; Port workers.
Examples of jobs that require a professional or occupational license: Barber; Beautician/Cosmetologist; Pharmacist; Nurse; Cemetery / funeral home worker; Real estate agent.

WHAT ABOUT STARTING YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Some people find it more fulfilling to be their own boss. Self-employment can give you more control over the type of work you do, flexibility to make your own decisions, and greater responsibility.

Think about your skills, interests, and previous work experience or vocational training. If you think that self-employment may be a good option for you, read the section on “Alternatives to Traditional Employment,” starting on PG. 606 for more information and helpful resources on starting your own business.

IMPORTANT: Most jobs do NOT have legal restrictions. The information here isn’t intended to discourage you, but to help you understand your options and find the job that’s right for you. Also, even if an employer cannot hire you for one type of job based on your record, they may have other types of jobs available that may be a better fit.

HELPFUL HINT Consider All Your Job Options

As you're thinking about jobs or looking for work, it can be helpful to think about other work options—alternatives to traditional employment—like starting your own business, joining a worker-run cooperative business, or going through a temp agency. You may decide that one of these alternatives is more exciting, more convenient for your schedule and needs, or just a good way to get your foot in the door with an employer.

Here are some other ways of working and earning an income that are different from traditional employment:

- Consider self-employment or become an independent contractor
- Start your own business
- Join a worker-run cooperative business
- Apply through a temp agency
- Take short-term jobs or temporary positions to get your foot in the door.

For more information on each of these options, read section on Alternatives to Traditional Employment, starting on PG. 606 below.

ACE THE JOB APPLICATION

HOW CAN I HAVE A SUCCESSFUL JOB APPLICATION?

In the past, applying for a job meant filling out a paper application and handing or mailing it to the employer. Now, any information that you give about yourself may become part of your job application that the employer considers. This includes information you share with the employer or other employees at the company, with a temp agency, at a job fair, at a workforce development center, or with other people or organizations that are involved in your job search process. It can include paperwork you fill out or sign, a questionnaire you complete, information you type in online, documents you hand in, or answers/information that you say in person.

A NOTE ABOUT BAD REFERENCES

Under state law, former employers and other references ARE allowed to say negative things about you as part of a job reference. So you should always ask your reference if they are willing to be listed, and you can ask what they will say about you before you list them.

HELPFUL HINTS

1. Listing Previous Work Experience

If an application asks about your previous work experience, MAKE SURE you accurately write the dates of your previous employment and how much you were paid! The new employer will probably contact your former employers to check your references and ask about this information.

If you list incorrect information about the dates you were employed or your wages at your past job (even by mistake!), the new employer may think you're intentionally lying and may reject your application for that reason. If you can't remember the exact dates you worked or your wages, write down that you are guessing or estimating this information, and that you are NOT certain. This will show the employer that you're trying to be honest and are not intentionally giving wrong information.

2. Listing personal and professional references

When you apply for a job, you will probably have to give a list of references—people who know you and can talk about whether you're a good worker. Most likely this will be an old employer, but it could also be a teacher from a vocational training or certification program, or even someone from your church or other community organization that you're involved in. The new employer will contact these people to ask about your previous work history, personality, whether you were a good employee, and other information to help decide if they should hire you.

Be careful about whom you list as a reference and what they will say about you! BEFORE you list someone as a reference, it is best to call the person (or have a trusted person call for you) to ask what they will say about you. If it turns out they say something negative, you'll know not to list them after all.

Keep in mind that even if you don't list someone as a reference, an employer or background check company may still contact them as part of their own background check process.

3. Ask your trusted person!

If you're filling out a paper or online application, ask your trusted person, or someone from a local reentry or workforce development program, to look over your completed application before you send it to the employer.

INTERVIEW WELL

HOW CAN I SUCCEED IN AN INTERVIEW?

Here is a list of the essential steps to prepare for and succeed in an interview with a potential employer. For more detailed information about each of these steps, please see the Appendix D, PG. 622.

STEP 1: Thoughtfully answer each interview question.

STEP 2: Ask your own questions.

STEP 3: Practice beforehand!

If possible, you should try to do a practice (“mock”) interview before the real thing with your case manager, social worker, counselor, or even family or friends. Remember, even if you have your answers prepared on paper or in your head, things will sound different when you try to say them out loud!

STEP 4: Be polite and confident during the interview.

STEP 5: Follow-up after the interview.

ADDITIONAL JOB INTERVIEW RESOURCES:

Here are some resources that can help you prepare for a job interview:

- Connect with a workforce development program that can help counsel and coach you through the job application and interview process. For a list of these workforce development programs, see Appendix B, PG. 619 on PG. 619. You can also ask a case manager, local reentry program counselor, or workforce development staff person for other suggestions in your area, or call 2-1-1 to ask about other programs in your area.

➤ UNDERSTAND & EXPLAIN THE BENEFITS OF HIRING PEOPLE WITH RECORDS TO THE POTENTIAL EMPLOYER

Learn here about two government programs that are meant to encourage employers to hire people with criminal records: (1) the Federal Bonding Program and (2) the Work Opportunity Tax Credit (WOTC).

BONDING INSURANCE: WHAT IS IT & HOW CAN IT ENCOURAGE EMPLOYERS TO HIRE ME?

Some employers require their employees to be covered under fidelity bonding insurance, which is a special type of insurance that protects the employer from money or property loss caused by employee dishonesty. If your employer requires fidelity bonding insurance, there are two options: (1) private fidelity bonding insurance, and (2) the Federal Bonding Program.

(1) Private Bonding Insurance—Many private insurance companies sell fidelity bonding insurance that employers can buy. The insurance will reimburse employers for losses due to things like forgery, theft of money or valuables, or fraud by a company employee. An employer can buy insurance coverage for ALL employees, or for only a few, specific employees.<sup>1852</sup> However, if you already have a criminal conviction record, your employer may not be able to get private bonding insurance for you.<sup>1853</sup> In this case, the employer may be able to get bonding insurance through a special federal government program (see immediately below).

(2) Federal Bonding Program—If you already have a criminal conviction record, your employer may not be able to get private bonding insurance for you. If you are applying for a job with an employer who requires

<sup>1852</sup> Here are some insurance companies that offer private fidelity bonding insurance for employers:

Cal-Nevada Insurance Agency—<http://www.cal-nevada.com/business-insurance/fidelity-bonds/>

State Farm Insurance—<https://www.statefarm.com/small-business-solutions/insurance/surety-fidelity-bonds>

Nationwide Insurance—<http://www.nationwide.com/crime-insurance.jsp>

employees to be covered by fidelity bonding insurance, the federal government has a special program to provide FREE fidelity bonding insurance for 6 months to cover individuals who are eligible for the program.<sup>1854</sup> In California, the California Employment Development Department (EDD)—the same state agency that runs America’s Job Centers of California—runs the Federal Bonding Program. For more information and instructions on how to apply for the Federal Bonding Program, see Appendix E, PG. 624.

Am I eligible for the Federal Bonding Program?

If you meet the following requirements, you may be eligible for the Federal Bonding Program:

- You have a firm job offer (or are already employed) at a job that is likely to be long-term or permanent.
- The job requires you to be bonded, and you cannot get private bonding insurance due to your arrest or conviction record, history of drug or alcohol abuse, poor credit or employment history, dishonorable discharge from the military, or other “risk” factors.
- The employer is ready to hire you (or keep you on the job) once you have insurance, so the only thing stopping you from working there is the lack of insurance.
- You are 18 or older and legally eligible to work in the U.S.

For a complete list of eligibility requirements, see Appendix E, PG. 624.

IMPORTANT: Your employer can only get free insurance coverage for the first 6 months that you work there; after that they will have to purchase insurance directly. If you switch to another job that also requires bonding, you will have to reapply to the EDD, and they will decide on a case-by-case basis whether you can get new insurance coverage at the new employer. If you left your previous job on good terms, you will have a better chance of getting bonding insurance for your next job, but it is not guaranteed.<sup>1855</sup> For this reason, it’s recommended that you only use the bonding program for jobs that are likely to be long-term or permanent—NOT for temporary positions.<sup>1856</sup>

WORK OPPORTUNITY TAX CREDITS: WHAT ARE THEY & HOW CAN THEY ENCOURAGE EMPLOYERS TO HIRE ME?

Suggest that your employer look into the federal Work Opportunity Tax Credit (WOTC). The WOTC is a federal tax credit historically available to employers for hiring job applicants who face significant barriers to employment, including people with felony convictions who are hired within 1 year after their conviction or release from prison, veterans, and recipients of certain public benefits.<sup>1857</sup> (For this reason, be sure to answer truthfully if an employer or job application asks whether you receive public benefits!) The WOTC ranges from $1,200 to $9,600, depending on your hours and pay during your first year as an employee, and on the maximum allowed credit.<sup>1858</sup> For more information about the WOTC in California, contact the WOTC Coordinator at (916) 227-5163, or visit the Employment Development Department’s (EDD) website about the WOTC at: http://www.edd.ca.gov/jobs\_and\_training/Work\_Opportunity\_Tax\_Credit.htm.

IMPORTANT: Although the legal authority for the WOTC expired on December 31, 2013, tell your employer that he/she should continue to submit WOTC applications to the EDD. In the past, when the WOTC expired, Congress eventually reauthorized the tax credit and applied it retroactively; so it’s recommended that employers continue to submit applications while reauthorization is pending.<sup>1859</sup>

<sup>1855</sup> Telephone call with Gil Barkley, State Bonding Coordinator, California Employment Development Department (Feb. 17, 2015). The EDD will also want to make sure that the employer is not simply exploiting you for free insurance coverage and then getting rid of you after the first 6 months of free coverage is over.

KEY TERMS IN THE EMPLOYMENT CHAPTER

Before we discuss the laws that will affect you as you reenter the job market, let's review a few key terms. (For more detailed definitions and explanations of these terms, see UNDERSTANDING & CLEANING UP YOUR RECORD CHAPTER, PG. 931).

Criminal Record: This is the general term we use for all of the information about your criminal history. Your “criminal record” includes arrests, charges against you, convictions, pleas, acquittals, dismissals, sentences, and any other time your contact with law enforcement was documented.

RAP Sheet: A RAP sheet (Record of Arrest and Prosecution) is the government's official version of your criminal record. It lists every contact you've had with the criminal justice system, including arrests, convictions, acquittals, dismissals, and sentences.<sup>1860</sup> If you've been arrested or convicted of a crime in California, you could have 3 different RAP sheets:

- County RAP sheet—all of your criminal justice contact in a single county (so if you have arrests or convictions in more than one county, you will have a separate RAP sheet for each county);
- California DOJ RAP sheet—all of your contact with the criminal justice system across the state of California;<sup>1861</sup>
- FBI RAP sheet—all of your contact with the criminal justice system from anywhere in the U.S. (so if you have arrests or convictions in more than one state, all of these should show up on your FBI RAP sheet).<sup>1862</sup>

Background Check: This is the process of looking up information about someone's past activities—their criminal records, finances and credit, or other personal information—through public records, Internet searches, or interviewing people you know. When you apply for a job, the employer is allowed to pay an outside company to run a background check on you — but only AFTER they have extended a conditional offer of employment.<sup>1863</sup>

IMPORTANT: You have legal rights when someone runs a background check on you! The law limits what information can be included in your background check, what information employers, landlords, and others can use, and when employers can use this information. You are allowed to challenge mistakes and violations related to your background check.

Consumer Report—This is the technical, legal name of the document that that is produced when an employer (or anyone else) runs a background check on you (produced by private companies called “Consumer Reporting Agencies”—see next definition). Since “consumer report” is the technical term, but not used by most, this Chapter uses the layperson term “background check reports.”

Reporting Agency—This is a company that investigates and produces background check reports.<sup>1864</sup> They're also called Consumer Reporting Agencies (federal law) and Investigative Consumer Reporting Agencies (state law), but this Chapter uses the layperson term “background check companies.”

GET A COPY OF YOUR RAP SHEET

You can request a copy of your RAP sheet from the California Department of Justice (DOJ) by filling out an application, getting fingerprinted, and sending everything to the DOJ. It can take a couple weeks for the DOJ to process your request and send you an official RAP sheet. For more information on getting a copy of your RAP sheet, see the UNDERSTANDING & CLEANING UP YOUR RECORD CHAPTER, PG. 931.

If you don't want to wait for your RAP sheet, you can also get a copy of your court records directly from the courthouse where you were convicted. If you go to the court in person, you can often get a copy of your records the very same day. Some courts will also let you request your records online, without having to go in person (although you will have to wait longer for the court to mail you the paper copies). To get your court records, you will need to have (or look up) your case number, and you will probably have to pay a fee for photocopying (usually around 50 cents/page).

II. KNOW YOUR RIGHTS ON EMPLOYMENT BACKGROUND CHECKS

WHAT WILL I LEARN?

- The 3 ways employers can learn about your past, and what kinds of information employers CAN and CAN'T consider about you at different points in the hiring process
- All about the Fair Chance Act, an important new law that restricts when most employers can learn about your criminal record
- What kinds of information employers CAN directly ask you about your criminal record
- What information employers CAN'T ask you about your criminal record
- What your rights are if an employer runs a background check on you through a private background check company
- What your rights are if an employer decides not to hire you based on the results of a private background check
- What your rights are if an employer runs an "in-house" background check on you
- How to correct errors in your "in-house" background check

This section explains the laws and your rights when an employer runs a background check on you for a job. It will explain what information an employer CAN and CANNOT see, ask about, and consider about your criminal record; and what information background check companies CAN and CANNOT report about you. It also explains how to correct background check errors, and what you can do if an employer or background check company violates the law.

IMPORTANT NEW LAW IN 2018: On January 1, 2018, the Fair Chance Act (also called "Ban the Box") became the law statewide in California. It greatly restricts the ways in which most public and private employers can consider your criminal record when you apply for a job. Read on to learn more!

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS OVERVIEW

Your rights against employers with five or more employees

- PUBLIC and PRIVATE employers CAN run a background check on you and CAN consider certain parts of your criminal history when deciding whether to hire you – but most can only do this AFTER they have given you a conditional offer of employment.
- Most PUBLIC and PRIVATE employers CANNOT at any time ask about: arrests that did not lead to conviction; convictions that have been dismissed/expunged/sealed; participation in court diversion programs; and certain minor marijuana convictions; your RAP sheet; your credit report.
- Employers MUST notify you if your conviction history has caused them to withdraw (or "rescind") their conditional offer of employment; in this notice, they MUST provide you with a copy of the background check report or any public records used to disqualify you from the position.
- Employers MUST give you the right to respond to their withdrawal of your job offer due to your criminal record.

Your rights against background check companies

- Background check companies CAN report information about convictions; lawsuits and civil (money) judgments against you; evictions; DMV driving records; and other personal information from within the past 7 years.
- Background check companies CANNOT report information about convictions; lawsuits; unpaid judgments; tax liens; or any other negative information that is more than 7 years old.
- Background check companies MUST check that information from public records is accurate and up-to-date.

YOUR RIGHTS AGAINST EMPLOYERS RELATED TO CRIMINAL BACKGROUND CHECKS

This section will explain your rights when an employer runs a background check on you or asks you about your criminal record, and what you can do if the employer violates your rights.

The next section will explain your rights when a background check company produces a report on you, and what you can do if the background check company violates your rights (see PG. 584).

HOW CAN EMPLOYERS LEARN ABOUT MY CRIMINAL RECORD?

There are three main ways an employer can access information about your criminal history:

1. The employer can ask you about it after they have extended a conditional offer of employment. Some employers will ask you directly if you have a criminal record. For this reason, it is important that you know your rights about what can be asked and what you have to answer. See PG. Error! Bookmark not defined. to learn more.
2. The employer can pay a private background check company to run a background check report on you. Background check companies are private companies that create background check reports for employers. This is the most common way for an employer to find out information about your past because it is easy, fast, and usually done online. See PG. 584 to learn more.
3. The employer can conduct an “in house” background check. Some employers will do their own background check and look up your public records, research you online, and call your friends, family members, and former employers to ask about you.<sup>1865</sup> See PG. 579 to learn more.

WHEN CAN (AND CAN'T) EMPLOYERS ASK ABOUT MY CRIMINAL RECORD UNDER THE NEW FAIR CHANCE ACT (AB 1008)?

With the passage of AB 1008 (The Fair Chance Act), which went into effect on January 1, 2018, almost ANY employer with five or more employees, whether public or private, has to wait to ask about your criminal record until AFTER they have given you a conditional offer of employment — meaning an offer they can still withdraw.<sup>1866</sup> This means that they CANNOT ask about your record on the job application or during the initial interview(s). They must also wait to run a background check. If an employer asks about your criminal record prior to offering you a conditional position, they are not complying with California law. If you believe your rights have been violated, you can file a complaint with the California Department of Fair Employment and Housing. You can learn more and file a complaint online at dfeh.ca.gov/complaint-process/file-a-complaint.

Exceptions: California law recognizes that a job applicant's criminal history is relevant to certain positions. As a result, a small number of employers are required to ask about your criminal history up front, such as law enforcement agencies and health facilities.<sup>1867</sup>

MY CITY OR COUNTY ALREADY HAS A BAN THE BOX POLICY. WILL THE FAIR CHANCE ACT REPLACE THAT POLICY?

Several cities and counties in California have spearheaded fair hiring initiatives (see Appendix F on PG. 626, Appendix G on PG. 627, and Appendix H on PG. 630). If you live in a city or county with a local ordinance that provides additional legal protections for job applicants with conviction histories, these additional rights are still in effect. For instance, the Los Angeles City ordinance requires that employers make a written record of their individualized assessment about an applicant's conviction history in writing.<sup>1868</sup>

IS THERE ANYTHING AN EMPLOYER CAN'T ASK ABOUT MY CRIMINAL RECORD?

Yes! There are certain parts of your criminal record that employers CANNOT legally ask you about at any time. Under state law, an employer (including ones with fewer than 5 employees) cannot ask you about:

1. Convictions that have been sealed, dismissed, expunged, or statutorily eradicated.<sup>1869</sup> An employer cannot ask a question like, “Have you ever been convicted of any crimes that were dismissed?” If they do ask about these convictions, you don't have to report ones that were expunged/dismissed.
2. Arrests that did not lead to a conviction. An employer with five or more employees CANNOT ask about past arrests where you were not convicted of the alleged crime. This includes arrests where the charges against you were never brought, charges were dismissed, and cases where you were found not guilty.

THERE ARE 3 EXCEPTIONS TO THIS RULE YOU SHOULD KNOW:<sup>1870</sup>

- First, private and public employers can still ask about recent arrests that are pending or unresolved but ONLY after they have extended a conditional offer of employment.<sup>1871</sup> For example, if you were

HOW COMMON ARE BACKGROUND CHECKS?

About 69% of employers run criminal history background checks on all job applicants. About 86% of employers conduct background checks on at least some applicants. Larger companies tend to run routine background on everyone as part of their regular job application process, while smaller companies might not.

- arrested, posted bail money, and are awaiting trial, the arrest is still considered pending, and employers can learn and ask about those once they have conditionally offered you a job.
- Second, law enforcement employers can ask about and consider all arrests.
  - Third, health care facilities and pharmacy employers can ask about and consider CERTAIN arrests (for drug and/or sexual offenses) if you are applying for a job with regular access to drugs or medications (for drug arrests), or to patients (for sexual offense arrests).
3. Arrests that led to the completion of a court diversion program. A court diversion program (such as a drug rehabilitation program) helps a person charged with certain crimes avoid criminal charges—and therefore avoid a criminal record. By law, employers are NOT allowed to ask for any information about your participation in a court diversion program.<sup>1872</sup>

REMEMBER: In general, if an employer asks you if you were ever arrested, you SHOULD NOT answer that question, and you DO NOT have to. Politely remind the employer that this question does not comply with current California law.

IF THE EMPLOYER USES A PRIVATE COMPANY TO RUN A BACKGROUND CHECK ON YOU

ARE EMPLOYERS LEGALLY ALLOWED TO RUN A BACKGROUND CHECK ON ME?

Yes, although they are restricted in doing so in the hiring process. Employers are allowed to use background checks when deciding whether to finalize an offer of employment, promote, reassign, or keep you on as an employee. Private background check companies are allowed to provide background checks (also called consumer reports) to anyone the agency reasonably believes will use the information “for employment purposes.”<sup>1873</sup>

CAN AN EMPLOYER CONSIDER MY CREDIT HISTORY?

Generally, no. Employers CANNOT look at your credit report unless you are applying for certain high level or sensitive job positions, such as a manager or supervisor within a company, a law enforcement officer, or a position with access to large amounts of cash and/or sensitive financial information.<sup>1874</sup> If you have further questions about your credit history, contact a local legal service organization or call 2-1-1.

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS

Your Rights If An Employer Runs A Background Check

- Most employers with five or more employees MUST wait to run a background check until they have extended a conditional offer of employment.
- Employers MUST NOTIFY you and get your PERMISSION BEFORE running a background check on you through a private background check company.
- Employers MUST offer you a copy of the background check report. ALWAYS request a copy of the background check report.
- Employers CAN see: convictions and pending (unresolved) arrests, charges, or cases; other personal information about you. But they CANNOT see convictions and other negative information that is more than 7 years old.
- In general, employers CANNOT see: arrests that did not lead to conviction; convictions that have been dismissed/expunged/sealed; participation in court diversion programs; and certain minor marijuana convictions; your RAP sheet; your credit report.
- If an employer decides not to hire you because of information in your background check report, the employer MUST NOTIFY you beforehand; give you a COPY of the background check report; and give you a chance to CORRECT any errors in your background check report and/or OFFER proof of rehabilitation or other relevant evidence.

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS:

CONVICTIONS MORE THAN 7 YEARS OLD

There is a weird gap in the law that you should know about. While employers CAN ask about and consider convictions older than 7 years old (but only after they have extended a conditional offer of employment), private background check companies CANNOT report information about convictions more than 7 years old on your background check report. This CANNOT come up in a background check.

ARE EMPLOYERS LEGALLY REQUIRED TO CONDUCT CRIMINAL BACKGROUND CHECKS?

Generally, no. Most of the time, the employer is not legally required to run a background check, though many choose to.<sup>1875</sup> The only exception to this rule is if the job involves unsupervised access to sensitive populations or the handling of sensitive information (like law enforcement officers,<sup>1876</sup> airport security screeners,<sup>1877</sup> security guard positions,<sup>1878</sup> bank employees,<sup>1879</sup> port workers,<sup>1880</sup> childcare workers in federal facilities or agencies,<sup>1881</sup> certain insurance personnel,<sup>1882</sup> any personnel involved in administration of an employee benefits plan,<sup>1883</sup> defense contractors,<sup>1884</sup> and prisoner transportation personnel).<sup>1885</sup> For these specialized jobs, a background check is mandatory.

SINCE EMPLOYERS ARE ALLOWED TO RUN BACKGROUND CHECKS ON ME, DO I HAVE ANY LEGAL RIGHTS IN THE PROCESS?

Yes—you have a number of important legal rights THROUGHOUT the hiring process in how the employer can run and use a background check. See PG. 572 for information on when in the application process an employer can run a background check. The following rules protect your rights when you are applying for a job and the employer runs a background check on you through a private background check company. (Note: There are different rules if the employer runs a background check on a current employee because it suspects the person of misconduct or wrongdoing.)<sup>1886</sup>

Before an employer runs a background check on you using a private background check company, the employer must do ALL of the following: give you notice, get your written permission (consent) to run the check, inform you of your rights, and offer you a copy of the report, once it is done.<sup>1887</sup> Here are the 4 steps below in more detail:

STEP 1: Give you ADVANCED, WRITTEN NOTICE

An employer must provide you with written notice if it intends to hire a background check company and use information in your background check to make decisions related to your employment. This notice must be in a separate document from other information from the employer—it can't just be mentioned on the job application or buried among other papers—SO that it is clear that the employer is running a background check done on you.<sup>1888</sup>

The NOTICE must include the following INFORMATION:<sup>1889</sup>

- Explain the purpose of the background check.
- Explain that the background check may include information on your “character, general reputation, personal characteristics, and mode of living”—meaning certain personal information about you and your past.<sup>1890</sup>
- Give the name, address, phone number, and website of the private background check company that will conduct the background check. There are many background check companies out there, and you are entitled to know exactly which one is providing a report on you.
- Explain your right to review the background check company's files along with all the information the agency used when conducting your background check and preparing your background check report for the employer.<sup>1891</sup> If the report will include information from interviews with your neighbors, friends, or associates, you must be given special notice.<sup>1892</sup>

<sup>1889</sup> CAL. CIV. CODE § 1786.16(a)(2)(b). The Background check company's website must explain its policy about transferring personal information transferred to third parties outside the United States, and must give you a way to contact an agency representative with further questions. If the agency doesn't have a website, you may request that a copy of the privacy policy be mailed to you.

<sup>1890</sup> There are strict limits on what information can be included in your background check report. For example, the Background check company generally CANNOT include information about arrests or convictions that are more than 7 years old, bankruptcies that took place more than 10 years ago, or debts that are more than 7 years old. CAL. CIV. CODE § 1786.18.

STEP 2: Get WRITTEN PERMISSION from YOU before they run the check:

After the employer gives you notice, the employer must ask and get your permission in writing—before conducting a background check.<sup>1893</sup> Usually, there will be a box to check on the job application, asking you for your permission for the employer to do a background check.

IMPORTANT: If AN EMPLOYER WANTS TO RUN AN ADDITIONAL BACKGROUND CHECK LATER ON: Employers must give you NOTICE and get your PERMISSION EVERY TIME they run a background check. If the employer wants to do another background check later, or wants to get continuous, updated background checks on you during your employment, they must give you a NEW NOTICE AND get NEW written PERMISSION from you each and every time they do a background check (except in cases of suspected misconduct).<sup>1894</sup>

STEP 3: Inform you of YOUR RIGHT TO SEE THE INFORMATION in your background check:

The employer must inform you of your right to see the information used by the Background check company when conducting your background check.<sup>1895</sup>

STEP 4: Offer you a COPY of your background check report:

The employer must give you a chance to request a copy of the background check report they got. There should be a box you can check to request copy of your report—usually it will be on the same form you sign to give permission for the background check.<sup>1896</sup> Always check YES to get a copy of the report so you can see what the employer sees! If you check the box to request a copy of your background check report, the employer must send you a copy of the report within 3 business days from the time when the employer receives it.<sup>1897</sup>

IMPORTANT: ALWAYS request a copy of the background check report

You have a legal right to receive a copy of the background check report used by the employer, and it is recommended that you always request a copy of the report. Always check the box to request a copy of the background check report. WHAT TO LOOK FOR:

- The box to request a copy of the background check report will probably say something like this:
- “Check this box if you would like to receive a free copy of any consumer report or investigative consumer report obtained on you,” or
- “I am a California resident and I would like a free copy of my background check report.”<sup>1898</sup>
- Make sure you CHECK THIS BOX to request a copy of your background check report.

CAN AN EMPLOYER DECIDE NOT TO HIRE ME BASED ON MY RECORD?

Yes, BUT ONLY if they follow the law. The law sets certain rules that the employer must follow in the hiring process and in deciding whether to hire someone with a record. The employer must follow additional legal rules both before AND after taking any adverse action against you.<sup>1899</sup>

WHAT RULES MUST AN EMPLOYER FOLLOW IF THEY DECIDE NOT TO HIRE ME BASED ON MY RECORD?

Under, federal law (FCRA) the employer must notify you both before AND after taking any adverse (negative) action against you based on the results of your background check.<sup>1900</sup>

BEFORE ADVERSE ACTION:

<sup>1897</sup> CAL. CIV. CODE § 1786.16(b)(1). You may receive a copy of the report from the employer or from the screening company. The report’s cover page must (1) include a notice in at least 12-point boldface type saying that the report does not guarantee the accuracy or truthfulness of the information, but was simply copied from public records; (2) include a warning that negative information could be the result of identity theft; and (3) give notice in English and Spanish of your rights. Business days” only include weekdays (Mon-Fri). CAL. CIV. CODE § 1786.29.

Before an employer takes any adverse action against you based on the results of your background check, the employer must give you a “Pre-Adverse Action” letter to notify you that it is planning to take the adverse action.<sup>1901</sup>

Under federal law, the Pre-Adverse Action letter must:

1. NOTIFY you that the employer plans to take adverse action against you based on information from your background check report;
2. Include a COPY of your background check report that the employer used to make its decision,<sup>1902</sup> and
3. Include the DOCUMENT, “A Summary of Your Rights Under FCRA”<sup>1903</sup> (see Appendix I, PG. 632)

After you receive this letter, you must be given a reasonable opportunity (about 5 days)<sup>1904</sup> to review your report, respond to it, and correct any errors.

IMPORTANT: If you receive a “Pre-Adverse Action” letter, it is recommended that you:

- Review your background check report immediately to make sure it does not contain any incomplete, inaccurate or outdated information—such as convictions that are more than 7 years old; convictions that were dismissed/expunged/sealed; and/or arrests that did not lead to a conviction (as long as the charges are not still pending);
- Tell the employer immediately if there is any incomplete, inaccurate, or outdated information in the report;
- Offer proof of errors in your background check report, such as court records showing the final disposition (outcome) of the case;
- Offer proof of your rehabilitation efforts, including certifications or documents that show completion of programs, school transcripts, letters of support from past employer or other community members (not family or friends).

If the employer does not give you enough time to review the report and correct any errors—for example, if the employer gives you the “Pre-Adverse Action” letter and then rejects your job application on the same day—you may have a legal claim against the employer for violating your right to receive notice before the adverse action.<sup>1905</sup>

Although the purpose of the Pre-Adverse Action law is to allow you to correct errors in your background check report, the law is NOT clear about whether the employer is required to reconsider your application if you correct the error and provide proof. If this happens to you, you should talk to an attorney about whether the employer may have violated your rights.<sup>1906</sup>

AFTER ADVERSE ACTION

After an employer takes any adverse action against you, such as rejecting your job application or firing you, the employer must give you an “Adverse Action Notice” to notify you that an adverse action was taken against you based on information from your background check. The employer can give you this notice orally, in writing, or electronically, but it must be within 3 business days of the employer’s final decision.

Under federal law, the Adverse Action Notice must include:

1. The name, address, and phone number of the background check company that supplied the report to the employer;
2. A statement that the background check company that supplied the report is not responsible for the adverse action and cannot explain the specific reasons for the action; and

<sup>1901</sup> 15 U.S.C. § 1681b(b)(3)(A); see also Russ Dempsey, Adverse Action in Employment, <http://www.backgroundbureau.com/web/Articles/FCRA.shtml>.

<sup>1904</sup> Although the law does not provide exactly how much time an employer must wait after sending a “Pre-Adverse Action” letter to take the adverse action, guidance from Congress suggests that 5 business days is a reasonable amount of time. See H.R. Rep. No. 103-486, at 30 (1994).

<sup>1905</sup> See, e.g., Beverly v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., No. CIV. A. 3:07CV469, 2008 WL 149032, at *3 (2008); Williams v. Telespectrum, Inc., No. 3:05CV853, 2006 WL 7067107, at *4 (2006) (unreported); but see Johnson v. ADP Screening & Selection Svcs., Inc., 768 F. Supp. 2d 979, 983-84 (2011) (FRCA does not impose waiting period on employer nor require employer to hold position open for applicant during period between Pre-Adverse Action letter and adverse action).

<sup>1906</sup> Compare, e.g., Beverly v. Wal-Mart Stores, Inc., No. CIV.A. 3:07CV469, 2008 WL 149032, at *3 (2008) (“The statutory purpose is to enable employee or applicant to correct any of inaccurate information in background report before any adverse decision or action is taken.”); with Johnson v. ADP Screening & Selection Svcs., Inc., 768 F. Supp. 2d 979, 984 (2011) (“Nothing in the FCRA requires an employer to consider any correction that a Background check company might make.”)

3. A statement of your rights to:
4. Dispute (challenge) the accuracy or completeness of any information the background check company provided; and
5. Get an additional free report from the company within 60 days, if you ask for one.<sup>1907</sup>

The Adverse Action Notice is important so that you know why the employer made the adverse decision against you and what information the employer considered. This way you can challenge or correct any information that is incorrect, incomplete, or illegal. And if the employer or background check company has NOT followed any of the laws described here—or if the employer does NOT give you an Adverse Action Notice—you may have a legal claim against them.

IMPORTANT INFORMATION ABOUT ADVERSE ACTION NOTICES: If an employer takes an adverse action against you (such as not hiring you) based on information in your background check report, they must give you BOTH a Pre-Adverse Action AND Adverse Action Notice.

If the employer does not give you these documents, you may have a legal claim against them for violating your rights under background check laws. However, you will need to show that they employer's decision was actually based on information in your background check report (such as your criminal record) and NOT for other reasons. See the text box on PG. 577 for how to do this.

For more information on what you can do if an employer does NOT give you an Adverse Action Notice or does NOT follow any of the other laws described here, see PG. 576.

For more information on how to challenge or correct information in your background check report, see information below, or see the UNDERSTANDING & CLEANING UP YOUR RECORD CHAPTER, PG. 931.

HELPFUL HINT

If I did not receive a Pre-Adverse Action or Adverse Action Notice, how can I show that the employer rejected me based on my background check and NOT other reasons?

Here are 2 strategies that have been used for showing that the employer may have rejected you based on your background check, even if they did NOT give you a Pre-Adverse Action or Adverse Action Notice:

1. Did the employer give you a Notice saying they would run a background check, or have you sign a document giving them permission to run a background check? Did the employer give you a Pre-Adverse Action Notice but NOT Adverse Action Notice (or the opposite—an Adverse Action Notice but NOT Pre-Adverse Action Notice)? Did the employer say anything about your record, or about (not) hiring people with criminal records? Is the information in your criminal record completely unrelated to the duties of the position? Any of these can help show the employer may have illegally rejected your application based on information in your background check.
2. If you feel comfortable, you can try talking to the employer directly. You can explain that you are trying to improve your application for the future, and then ask why the employer did not select your application and what you can do to improve your chances in the future.
  - In some cases, the employer may say something that reveals he/she made a decision based on your record or other information in your background check—for example, a negative comment about your being trustworthy, creating a risk to others, or about people with criminal records, in general. If this happens, make sure that you write down afterward exactly what the employer said!
  - In other cases, the employer may actually give you a helpful explanation that really can help you to improve your job applications in the future. This may show that the employer really did have some other reason for not hiring you, or at the very least can give you help you to be more successful for future jobs.
  - Finally, the employer may not give you any explanation for their decision, or may simply say that other people were more qualified or applied before you. In this case, it may be difficult to show that the employer actually rejected you based on your background check report.

WHAT CAN I DO IF THERE IS INACCURATE, INCOMPLETE, OR ILLEGAL INFORMATION IN MY BACKGROUND CHECK REPORT?

You have the right to dispute (challenge) any inaccurate, incomplete, or illegally included information in your background check report.

If there is inaccurate, incomplete, or illegal information in your background check report, you have the right to dispute (challenge) this information with the background check company that prepared the report. The background check company must investigate the error, delete or correct any improper information, and send a notice and a statement of correction to ANY employer who received a copy of your background check in the past 2 years (or anyone else who received a copy of your background check in the past year) if you ask.<sup>1908</sup>

For more information on how to dispute inaccurate, incomplete, or illegally included information in your background check report, see information below, or see the UNDERSTANDING & CLEANING UP YOUR RECORD CHAPTER, PG. 931.

IF I AM HIRED, CAN MY EMPLOYER RUN BACKGROUND CHECKS ON ME IN THE FUTURE WITHOUT MY PERMISSION?

No. Under California state law, an employer must follow the legal procedure of giving you notice, getting permission, etc., every time it wants to run a background check on you.<sup>1909</sup> In addition, an employer CANNOT ask you to waive (give up) your right to receive notice, give permission, etc., before running a background check.<sup>1910</sup>

EXCEPTION: If an employer suspects you of wrongdoing or misconduct, it can run a background check without giving you notice or asking for your permission. This exception applies if the employer is conducting a background check because they suspect you of misconduct on the job, including violating any written policies of the employer, or violating any federal, state, or local laws or regulations.<sup>1911</sup>

WHAT CAN I DO IF THE EMPLOYER HAS ALREADY RECEIVED INFORMATION FROM A BACKGROUND CHECK REPORT THAT IT SHOULDN'T HAVE RECEIVED BY LAW?

Unfortunately, employers sometimes get information that should NOT have been included in your background check report. Here are some suggested steps if this happens to you:

STEP 1: The first recommended step is that you get a copy of the background check report, so that you know what information the employer is seeing. For this reason, it's important to always check the box to request a copy of the report when you give permission to an employer to run a background check on you.

If you didn't check the box before, you can still get a copy of the report in 2 ways:

1. If the employer decides take an adverse (negative) action against you—such as rejecting your job application—they must give you a copy of the background check report before taking the action.<sup>1912</sup>
2. The background check company is required to give you a copy of the same report sent to the employer, if you ask for it within (at least) 2 years.<sup>1913</sup>

STEP 2: If there are errors or inaccurate information on the background check report, it's recommended that you point this out to the employer right away. If possible, you may also want to show the employer any proof of the correct information—for example, court papers showing that your conviction has been expunged, or that charges against you were dismissed.

You also have the right to make the background check company correct the information, and send the employer a notice and statement of the correction. For more information on correcting information with the background check company and notifying the employer of the correction, see PG. 582 below.

STEP 3: If the employer asks you about things that should NOT have been in your background check report—such as convictions that are more than 7 years old—it's recommended you answer the question directly and honestly, but briefly:

- You can take responsibility for your actions. State the facts, but express regret for what happened. Don't get defensive. Be honest, but don't go into details.
- You don't need to go into details. Keep your answer short. Be honest, but only talk about necessary information based on the questions you are asked.
- You can tell the employer how you have changed. Emphasize that the incident happened long ago and that you are a different person now. Explain what you learned while you were in prison/jail, and what you are doing differently now. Paint a picture of the person you are now.
- You can emphasize your qualifications. Describe the things that will make you a good employee—such as previous work experience, job training programs, or classes that you've done—and any letters of

recommendation that you have. Show the employer why you are qualified for the position and will be a benefit to the company.

- You can describe your hopes and dreams. Show the employer that you are in control of your life and have short-term and long-term goals. Highlight any services that you're getting to help you move on and achieve your goals. Emphasize that you would be very appreciative of the opportunity to work for them, and you will be the hardest worker they will ever have.<sup>1914</sup>

STEP 4: If the employer asks you (or makes comments) about incorrect or improper information in your background check report, you may want to write down anything the employer says and anything you say to the employer, so that you have a record to protect your rights later.

IF THE EMPLOYER CONDUCTS AN “IN-HOUSE” BACKGROUND CHECK

➤ WHAT AN EMPLOYER CAN FIND OUT AND CONSIDER THROUGH THEIR OWN BACKGROUND CHECK INVESTIGATION...AND THE RULES THAT LIMIT THESE SEARCHES.

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS

General Overview of the Law & your Rights

- Instead of hiring a background check company, employers can also directly access your criminal record and other public records by conducting their own “in-house” background check on you.
- Employers are NOT required to get your permission before running an in-house background check.
- You have the RIGHT to receive a COPY of any public information an employer is viewing. It is recommended that you NEVER give up this right!
- Your RAP sheet is generally confidential and NOT accessible by employers.
- Your RAP sheet is not the only place to find your criminal records, because most criminal records are public records.
- If an employer decides not to hire you based on information in a public record (including criminal court records), the employer MUST give you a COPY of the public records.
- An employer is NOT required to give you copies of any NON-public information used (such as information from talking to people who know you).

Most employers hire an outside private background check company to gather public record information on job applicants and produce a background check report (this method of running a background check is covered in the previous section, starting on PG. 564).

However, instead of hiring an outside background check company, an employer can conduct its own “in-house” (internal) background check on you. The employer can look at your public records directly, as well as interview your friends, family members, and former employers or co-workers. This “in-house” type of background check is a less common practice, but it is important for you to understand that if an employer chooses this route, there are different legal protections than when a private company runs the background check.

HOW DOES AN IN-HOUSE BACKGROUND CHECK WORK?

An in-house background check is very similar to a third-party background check by an outside background check company, except the employer alone is responsible for conducting the research, without any outside assistance.

Any employer may conduct an in-house background search in the following ways:<sup>1915</sup>

- Looking at public records, such as criminal convictions and civil judgments. You have a right to see any public records that the employer looked at; see PG. 579 below for more information.
- Talking to friends, neighbors, former employers, or colleagues about your character, reputation, or living situation. The questions should be related to job skills, ability to work with others, attendance, attitude, and ability to follow instructions and receive criticism.
- Verifying school records—your attendance and any degrees you earned. However, employers cannot see your transcripts (courses and grades) or other school records (e.g., disciplinary records) unless you give written consent.<sup>1916</sup>

<sup>1915</sup> See Law Office of Melissa C. Marsh, How To Perform Employee Background Check In California, <http://www.yourlegalcorner.com/articles.asp?id=51&cat=emp>.

- Online searches—like searching for your name on Google, looking at your Facebook page, checking other social networking sites (Twitter, MySpace, etc.), and checking websites that post mug shots.<sup>1917</sup> Note: An employer cannot ask you for your social networking username or password or make you show them your online profile.<sup>1918</sup>

WHAT RULES GOVERN CALIFORNIA EMPLOYERS WHO RUN IN-HOUSE CHECKS?

As of January 1, 2018, most employers are not supposed to run any kind of background check until after they have extended a conditional offer of employment. However, once they do, the law is more relaxed about in-house background checks than it is about using background check companies. This means you have fewer rights when it comes to being notified, giving permission, and challenging the results of in-house background checks. However, if an employer is running his/her own in-house background check on you, they still must follow certain rules. Here is what the employer is and isn't legally required to do:

- The employer may request your permission, but it's not required. Look carefully at the job application form—the employer might ask to run an in-house background check right on the application form itself.
- The employer must give you a copy of public records used in the report—unless you check the box to waive (give up) this right. Be careful—the job application or other forms MAY have a box that you can check to give up your right to see the public records, and it's recommended that you do not check that box!<sup>1919</sup>

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS: You have a legal right to get a copy of the public records used by the employer—don't give it up! It's recommended that you always indicate that you DO want to see the public records report, and make sure you DON'T check a box waiving (giving up) your right on the application. What to look out for:

- The box to waive your rights will probably say something like this: "I further understand that the Company may obtain Public Records about me as part of an internal background investigation and that I may waive my right to receive a copy of such Public Records by checking the box to the right."<sup>1920</sup> It's recommended that you DON'T CHECK THIS BOX!
- This can be confusing because it is the opposite of what happens when the employer hires a private company to do the background check (in which case it is recommended that you check the box to request a copy of the background check report).<sup>1921</sup>
- If you don't waive your right to view the public records gathered about you, the employer must give you a copy of the public records within 7 days after it receives them.<sup>1922</sup>
  - EXCEPTION: In California, if your existing or future employer wants to run an in-house background check because it suspects you of misconduct or wrongdoing, the employer is not required to reveal its findings until after the investigation is over. However, upon completion of the investigation, the employer must give you a copy of the public records unless you waived (gave up) your rights (so again, its recommended that you don't give up your right to a copy of those public records!).<sup>1923</sup>
- If the employer takes any adverse (negative) action against you—such as deciding not to hire you—because of information in the public records, the employer must give you a copy of the public records even if you checked the box that waived your right to see the records.<sup>1924</sup>
The employer is not required to give you information it gets from non-public sources, such as checking your references with past employers, verifying your education records, or talking to people who know you.<sup>1925</sup>

<sup>1917</sup> California law prohibits regular employers from using information taken from Megan's Law websites (which list people required to register under Penal Code 290) when deciding whether to hire you or when making any other employment decisions. CAL. PENAL CODE § 290.46(l). However, employers can use the same information if taken directly from public records (like court records), rather than from online websites. (In general, the only employers who can use Megan's Law website are the same employers who can see your RAP sheet.)

Important things to know about listing references and previous jobs

When you apply for a job, the new employer will often contact your former employers and other people you list as references, in order to find out if you were a good employee and to decide if they should hire you. Keep in mind that a former employer CAN say negative things about you as part of a job reference even suspected criminal activity, regardless of whether you were convicted of anything—so long as they reasonably believe the information is true and they are not simply acting out of meanness towards you.

Also, the new employer is NOT required to tell you what these people said about you, and they can say positive or negative things. It's recommended that you check in with your references BEFORE listing them, so that you know what they will say about you. (You can also ask someone you trust—a case manager, social worker, legal aid attorney, or friend—to call for you.)

Finally, the new employer will also check the dates when you worked at your previous jobs and how much you earned—so make sure you know the EXACT dates and amount you earned, or it could seem like you are being dishonest in a new job application. For more information about listing references and previous jobs on a job application, see PG. 567.

ERRORS IN EMPLOYERS' IN-HOUSE BACKGROUND CHECKS:

HOW CAN I FIND OUT IF AN EMPLOYER RELIED ON INCORRECT PUBLIC RECORDS ABOUT ME?

As noted above, if an employer runs its own background check—instead of hiring an agency to do a consumer report—it must disclose to you any public records it relies on. Specifically, the employer is required to ask you whether you want copies of these public records. If you checked “yes” when asked whether you want a copy (which it is recommended that you do), by law the employer must send you the public records in the mail and give you the opportunity to examine them thoroughly. If you find incorrect or misleading information, you can inform your employer about the false information, so he or she does not rely on it as accurate. Then you can attempt to get the errors fixed.

IF AN EMPLOYER RELIED ON INACCURATE PUBLIC RECORDS, WHAT CAN I DO?

If an employer ran his/her own background check and relied on inaccurate public records, you can:

1. Contact your employer as soon as possible, to prevent any confusion.
2. Send a written letter or e-mail (“written notice”) to the employer, pointing out the incorrect or incomplete records, and request that the employer re-investigate the records.
3. Provide the employer with proof, including copies of any official documents to show why the information is incorrect, outdated, or incomplete. (For example: you could give the employer court papers showing that your convictions have been dismissed or “expunged” in some way.)<sup>1926</sup>
4. You can fix the errors in your public records by contacting the agency that produced the incorrect record. For example, if you need to fix incorrect information about a tax lien, contact the IRS; if you need to fix the record of a legal matter (civil or criminal case), contact the clerk at the courthouse that processed your legal case.

It is important to remember that you only have the legal right to know about public records that an employer uses. If an employer chooses to investigate your past on its own, they do NOT need to disclose any information learned through in-person interviews with your former bosses or family and friends.<sup>1927</sup>

CAN AN EMPLOYER ASK ME FOR OR CONSIDER MY RAP SHEET?

Usually, no. Most employers are not allowed to see or ask for your RAP sheet. Your RAP sheet is the government's official record of all your arrests, convictions, and other criminal justice contact. (Your RAP sheet is a confidential document, meaning most people and most employers are not allowed to see it or ask about it! Still, there are many other ways for employers to see your criminal record without ever looking at your official government RAP sheet—such as checking court and public records (see PG. 579) or hiring a private Background check company to do a background check (see PG. 584).

WHICH EMPLOYERS CAN SEE MY RAP SHEET?

Under California law, only certain people are allowed to see your RAP sheet for employment purposes:<sup>1928</sup>

<sup>1928</sup> CAL. PENAL CODE § 11105 et seq. In addition, federal law requires background checks for the following jobs, which mean that these employers will be able to see your RAP sheet: Airport security screeners; federal law enforcement officers; defense contractor; prisoner

- Most public employers can see your RAP sheet. These include all federal, state and local government agencies—including police and fire departments, the California Department of Corrections (CDCR), local Boards of Education, and the U.S. Postal Service.<sup>1929</sup>
- Certain private employers can see your RAP sheet if you are applying for a job that involves access to sensitive information (e.g., nuclear power plants, public utilities, private security companies, and financial institutions like banks) OR you will be working with children, elderly, disabled, or other vulnerable people.<sup>1930</sup>
- State occupational licensing agencies<sup>1931</sup> can see your RAP sheet if you apply for a professional license. For more information on licensing restrictions based on a criminal record, see PG. 600.
- Law enforcement & criminal justice agencies<sup>1932</sup> have full access to your RAP sheet, including juvenile cases, expunged/dismissed cases, and sometimes even sealed records!

In order to get a copy of your RAP sheet, these employers are allowed to ask for your fingerprints, including making you do Live Scan (electronic) fingerprinting.<sup>1933</sup>

It is illegal for a regular employer (i.e., NOT an employer listed above) to do any of the following:

- Ask you for a copy of your RAP sheet;
- Get a copy of your RAP sheet through any other means; or
- Make you prove that you do NOT have a record—for example, by requiring you to get fingerprinted, or asking you for a “notice of no record”.<sup>1934</sup>

CAN I SEE MY OWN RAP SHEET?

Yes. You have the right to get a copy of your own RAP sheet, and to correct any errors or inaccurate information in it.<sup>1935</sup> To request a copy of your RAP sheet, you will need to fill out an application from the California Department of Justice (DOJ) and get fingerprinted, and then send your application and fingerprints to DOJ.<sup>1936</sup> You will also have to pay a fee of no more than $25.<sup>1937</sup> For information on how to request a copy of your RAP sheet, see the Key Terms section on PG. 570.

To correct an error in your RAP sheet, you will need to send a written letter to the DOJ to explain what the error is, and where to find evidence or proof of the correct information.<sup>1938</sup> For example, if your RAP sheet says that you were charged with a certain crime, but you actually plead guilty to a lesser offense, you can tell the DOJ to contact the court clerk to prove the final disposition (outcome) of your case.

Important: Even though you are allowed to get a copy of your own RAP sheet, it is illegal for you to give a copy of your RAP sheet to an employer (unless it’s an employer who is already allowed to see your RAP sheet, as listed on PG. 581 above).<sup>1939</sup>

WHAT CAN I DO IF THE EMPLOYER DOES NOT FOLLOW ANY OF THESE RULES ON BACKGROUND CHECKS?

Employers that do not follow federal and state laws for conducting background checks on you may be liable to you and to the government for their illegal actions.

However, private employers must still get authorization from the DOJ in order to view RAP sheets.

<sup>1931</sup> Occupational licenses are required for: accounting, acupuncture, architects, automotive repairs, barbering and cosmetology, cemetery and funeral services, contractors, court reporters, dental services, electronic and appliance repair, occupational therapy, physical therapy, real estate, security and investigative positions, structural pest control, vocational and registered nursing. ## KNOW YOUR RIGHTS

Some ways an employer can violate background check laws:

- Ordering a background check without your permission;
- Failing to inform you of your rights in a timely way;
- Not giving you notice of an adverse action (i.e. deciding not to hire you) BEFORE taking the action against you
- Not providing you with a copy of your background check report:
  - if you requested a copy of the report when giving permission to run the background check, and/or
  - if before taking any adverse action against you.
- Asking you for a copy of your RAP sheet OR making you get fingerprinted (including Live Scan)—except in a few limited situations (e.g., public employers; occupational licensing agencies; and certain private employers if the job involves working with children, elderly, or disabled, or gives you access to sensitive information). To learn which employers can access your RAP sheet or fingerprints, see PG. 581.
- Making YOU prove that you do NOT have a record.

WHAT ARE MY OPTIONS IF I BELIEVE AN EMPLOYER HAS VIOLATED ONE OR MORE LAWS?

If you believe that an employer has violated the law for any reason, you may want to take the following steps, if possible:

- Talk to the employer. The first thing you can do is try to talk to the employer directly. Simply bringing the matter to the employer’s attention may be all that it takes to solve the problem, especially if the employer just didn’t know it was violating the law.<sup>1940</sup> Explain the law and give the employer the chance to change his/her behavior.
- Report the employer to the Attorney General. If talking to the employer directly does not work, you can report the employer to the California Attorney General. The Attorney General will then investigate your claim and try to resolve it. You can report your claim by calling the Attorney General’s Office of Public Inquiry Unit at (916) 322-3360 or toll free at 1-800-952-5225. You can also send a written complaint to:

Attorney General's Office
California Department of Justice
Attn: Public Inquiry Unit
P.O. Box 944255
Sacramento, CA 94244-2550

- Report violations of the new Fair Chance Act to DFEH and the EEOC. If you believe an employer has violated California’s new Fair Chance Act, you can file a complaint with the California Department of Fair Employment and Housing (DFEH) at their website: dfeh.ca.gov. You may also file a complaint with the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) at their website: <https://www.eeoc.gov/employees/charge.cfm>.
- Report the employer to the FTC. If the employer has violated federal background check laws, you can report the employer directly to the Federal Trade Commission (FTC). The FTC has the authority to force employers to comply with background check laws<sup>1941</sup> by requesting a court order to stop the employer from violating the law, or by filing a lawsuit against the employer. To file a complaint with the FTC, call the agency directly at 1-877-382-4357.<sup>1942</sup>
- Sue the employer in state or federal court. You can file a lawsuit against an employer in either state or federal court for violating background check laws. You may be able to get a court to order the employer to stop violating the law and/or pay you money. For more information about suing the employer, talk to a lawyer first!

HELPFUL HINT:

If you want to sue the employer—BEWARE!

(1) It’s expensive. Suing an employer will likely cost a LOT of time and money, and your recovery options are limited.

(2) No frivolous lawsuits are allowed. The Federal Credit Reporting Act (FCRA) includes a penalty for filing a lawsuit or related court papers that are filed in “bad faith or for purposes of harassment.” You may have to pay the other side’s attorney’s fees, along with your own, if you file a lawsuit to harass an employer and lose.

III. YOUR RIGHTS AGAINST BACKGROUND CHECK COMPANIES

WHAT WILL I LEARN?

- How private background check companies learn information about you
- What information private background check companies CAN report about you
- What information private background check companies CAN'T report about you
- What you can do if your background check report has incorrect or incomplete information
- What you can do if a private background check company violates your legal rights

This section will explain your rights against private background check companies that conduct background checks for employers and report information about you to them. For information on how to get a FREE copy of your background check report, see the UNDERSTANDING & CLEANING UP YOUR RECORD CHAPTER, PG. 931.

BACKGROUND CHECK COMPANIES' ACCESS TO YOUR CRIMINAL RECORDS

HOW DO BACKGROUND CHECK COMPANIES GET INFORMATION ON ME FOR THEIR BACKGROUND CHECK REPORTS?

Background check companies will use any available source to dig up information on you.<sup>1943</sup> They may look at:

- Court records (any criminal or civil case you've been involved with);
- Police, correctional facility, and CDCR records (including mug shots);<sup>1944</sup>
- DMV driving records;
- Other public records (eviction records; tax records; property records; birth certificates; marriage and divorce records; etc.);
- Internet searches, including on Google and social networking sites (Facebook, MySpace, Twitter, etc.); other websites (including websites that post mug shot photos),<sup>1945</sup>
- Your previous school and work history, AND
- Talk with people who know you or have information about you (friends, neighbors, co-workers, landlords, etc.)<sup>1946</sup>

If the background check includes any information from public records (such as court records), the background check company must state in the background check report:

1. Where it got the information (including which court), AND
2. When the information was reported (i.e., made public).<sup>1947</sup>

See PG. 581 about the rules around accessing RAP sheets, which are confidential to most (not all) employers.

WHAT CAN A BACKGROUND CHECK COMPANY REPORT ABOUT ME TO AN EMPLOYER?

Unless a legal exception exists, the only information about your criminal history that background check companies are allowed to include in a background check is

- Information on convictions that are less than 7 years old, and

<sup>1943</sup> There are also rules that Background check companies must follow to verify the information reported to an employer in a background check report. See 15 U.S.C. §§ 1681d, 1681g.

<sup>1944</sup> Police records—such as arrests and logs—are considered public records, subject to certain exemptions. See CAL. GOV'T CODE §§ 6250 et seq., 6254(f). Law enforcement agencies are permitted to provide copies of mug shots to the general public. See 86 Cal. Op. Att'y Gen. 132 (2003).

<sup>1945</sup> California law prohibits most employers from using information taken from Megan's Law websites (which list people required to register under Penal Code 290) when deciding whether to hire you or making other employment decisions. CAL. PENAL CODE § 290.46(l). However, private Background check companies ARE allowed to publish information from Megan's Law websites in your background check report. Mendoza v. ADP Screening & Selection Svcs., Inc., 182 Cal. App. 4th 1644, 1650-59 (2010) (holding that private Background check company did not violate statute by publishing information from Megan's Law website, because Background check company did not "use" information for employment purposes, but rather compiled and republished information for employer to "use" in employment decisions). In addition, employers can use the same information if taken directly from public records (like court records), rather than from online websites.

- Arrests and formal charges filed against you if a judgment is still pending.<sup>1948</sup>

For further information on what can be included in your background check, see the UNDERSTANDING & CLEANING UP YOUR CRIMINAL RECORD CHAPTER, PG. 931.

WHAT CAN A BACKGROUND CHECK COMPANY NOT REPORT ABOUT ME TO AN EMPLOYER?

Although some background check companies brag that they can “find out anything about anyone,” both federal and California laws impose restrictions on what information they are allowed to put in your background check, especially when it relates to your criminal history.

For example, Background check companies are NOT allowed to include information about criminal convictions that are more than seven years old,<sup>1949</sup> convictions that were pardoned, dismissed or sealed, arrest records, or referrals to diversion programs.

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS: Background check companies MUST verify certain information to make sure it is accurate! If a Background check company includes information that is a matter of public record in your background check (such as information about your convictions), it must have verified the information within the previous 30 days before issuing its report. Additionally, a Background check company cannot include negative information about you that it got from talking to a person who knows you (for example, a former employer or a neighbor) UNLESS it has tried to confirm that information from another source, or has determined that that person is the best (or only) source of the information.<sup>1950</sup>

WHAT CAN I DO IF I THINK MY BACKGROUND CHECK REPORT IS INCOMPLETE OR INCORRECT?

You can challenge it! If you dispute Information in your background check, a background check company must investigate your claim.

If you notify a background check company in writing that information contained in your background check is incomplete, incorrect, or illegally included, the agency must investigate your claim.<sup>1951</sup> The agency has 30 days from the day it receives your challenge to begin its investigation. Once the investigation is complete, the agency must notify you of the results within 5 days.

If the agency finds that the original information was inaccurate, incomplete, or illegally included, it MUST delete or correct the information AND notify you of the correction.<sup>1952</sup>

IMPORTANT: The background check company MUST send the employer a NOTICE OF the CORRECTION if you ask. If there was inaccurate, incomplete, or illegal information in your background check report, you have the right to make the background check company send a notice and statement of correction to ANY employer who received a copy of your background check in the past 2 years (or anyone else who received a copy of your background check in the past year).

For more information and instructions on how to dispute or correct information in your background check, go to the UNDERSTANDING & CLEANING UP YOUR CRIMINAL RECORD CHAPTER, beginning on PG. 931.

WHEN HAS A BACKGROUND CHECK COMPANY VIOLATED THE LAW?

If a private background check company does any of the following actions, it has broken the law and violated your legal rights:

- Reporting information that is not legally allowed to show up in your background check report;<sup>1953</sup>
- Reporting inaccurate or out-of-date information, without first verifying that the information is correct and up-to-date beforehand;<sup>1954</sup>
- Failing to report the final disposition of arrests or charges that did not result in a conviction (e.g., you were never charged, or the charges were dismissed); convictions that have been dismissed under Cal. Penal Code § 1203.4; or charges where you plead guilty to a lesser

HELPFUL HINT:

If you believe that a background check company violated your rights, talk to a trusted person or lawyer who can help you protect your rights! Here are some good people to ask and/or good places to start:

- A case manager at a local reentry program;
- A counselor or case manager at a local workforce development center;
- A social worker;
- A case manager or counselor at your transitional housing program;
- A legal aid attorney (to find a local legal aid attorney, you can call 2-1-1, contact the local bar association, or look on the State Bar website at <http://lawhelpca.org/find-legal-help>); or
- Your probation officer or parole agent (if you have a good relationship).

- offense;<sup>1955</sup>
- Giving a copy of your background check report to someone who is not authorized to receive a copy—including an employer who has not promised to comply with legal requirements of notice and permission;<sup>1956</sup>
- Refusing to investigate or correct mistakes in your background check;<sup>1957</sup>
- Refusing to give you a copy of the report provided to your employer;<sup>1958</sup>
- Refusing to let you see the information that the Background check company used to conduct your background check; report;<sup>1959</sup>
- Reporting information on someone who has a similar name.<sup>1960</sup>

WHAT CAN I DO IF A BACKGROUND CHECK COMPANY HAS BROKEN THE LAW?

Generally, if you believe that a background check company has violated the law in conducting a background check on you, you can take the following actions:

Contact the background check company<sup>1961</sup>—First, you can contact the background check company directly to demand that it complies with the law. This is especially important because most violations by background check companies involve the nature of the information that the agency has provided. Contacting the agency directly is the quickest and most efficient way to clear harmful information from your background check.

Report the background check company to the Attorney General—If contacting the background check company directly does not solve the problem, you can report the agency to the California Attorney General. The Attorney General will investigate your claim and try to resolve it. You can report your claim by calling the Attorney General’s Office of Public Inquiry Unit at (916) 322-3360 or toll free at 1-800-952-5225. You can also send a written complaint to: Attorney General’s Office, California Department of Justice, Attn: Public Inquiry Unit, P.O. Box 944255, Sacramento, CA 94244-2550

Report the background check company to the FTC—If the background check company has violated federal background check laws, you can report the background check company directly to the Federal Trade Commission (FTC). The FTC has the authority to force background check companies to comply with background check laws<sup>1962</sup> by requesting a court order to stop the agency from violating the law, or by filing a lawsuit against the agency. To file a complaint with the FTC, call the agency directly at 1-877-382-4357.<sup>1963</sup>

Sue the background check company in state or federal court<sup>1964</sup>—You can file a lawsuit against the background check company in either state or federal court for violating background check laws. You may be able to get a court to order the background check company to stop violating the law and/or pay you money.

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS

Summary of your rights against private background check companies

- Background check companies CAN report information about convictions; pending arrests or criminal charges; lawsuits and civil (money) judgments against you; evictions; DMV driving records; and other personal information from within the past 7 years.
- Background check companies CANNOT report information about convictions; lawsuits; unpaid judgments; tax liens; or any other negative information that is more than 7 years old.
- Background check companies MUST check that information from public records is accurate and up-to-date.
- Background check companies MUST check that information they get from other people is accurate or from the best possible source.
- Background check companies MUST allow you to see the information they collect about you when conducting your background check.

IV. HOW EMPLOYERS CAN (& CAN'T) USE YOUR CRIMINAL HISTORY

WHAT WILL I LEARN?

- How employers CAN and CAN'T discriminate against you based on your criminal record
- What employers CAN, CAN'T, and SHOULD consider about your criminal record
- What laws protect people with criminal records against discrimination
- Different types of illegal discrimination related to your criminal record
- What you can do if an employer illegally discriminates against you, and how to file a discrimination complaint
- The different government civil rights agencies that protect your rights against illegal discrimination
- What kind of remedies you may be able to get if an employer illegally discriminates against you
- How to locate an attorney, government civil agency, or non-profit organization to help you if you think an employer illegally discriminated against you

This section will explain the laws on how employers can (and can't) use your criminal history to make employment decisions, and what you can do if you think an employer has illegally discriminated against you.

In general, the law says that employers should only consider your criminal history if it directly relates to your ability to do the job, and cannot use your criminal record to discriminate based on your race, color, religion, sex, or national origin. However, there is often a gap between what the law says on paper—about your rights as a job applicant or employee, and about the employer's duties to treat you fairly—and how employers act in real life. It can also be difficult to prove that an employer has illegally discriminated against you, which can make it difficult to enforce your rights. But it is IMPORTANT for you to know what your rights are on paper, and know how to spot illegal discrimination and protect yourself from illegal practices as much as possible.

LEGAL AND ILLEGAL EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS:

General overview of the law & your rights against illegal discrimination.

- An employer CAN run a background check on you.
- An employer CAN consider some parts of your criminal history and use it to deny you a job—so long as the denial would be allowed under the law.
- An employer CANNOT weigh your conviction history more heavily than another candidate's similar conviction history because of your race, color, religion, sex, or national origin.
- An employer CANNOT deny employment to everyone with a criminal history.
- An employer, however, CAN justify a hiring policy against people with criminal histories if it shows the policy is “job related” and “consistent with business necessity.”<sup>1965</sup>
- An employer SHOULD evaluate your individual circumstances and consider:
  - Facts and circumstances surrounding your offense;
  - The number of convictions in your history;
  - Your age at the time of conviction / release;
  - If you have held the same type of job, post-conviction, without incidents;
  - Your employment history before and after conviction;
  - Your rehabilitation efforts;
  - Employment or character references and any other information pointing to your fitness for the position; and
  - Whether you are bonded.<sup>1966</sup>

<sup>1965</sup> Hiring policies excluding people based on criminal history must consider at least three factors in order to be “job related” and “consistent with business necessity:” (1) the nature and gravity of the offense; (2) how much time has passed; and (3) the nature of the job sought. See Green v. Missouri Pac. R.R., 549 F.2d 1158 (8th Cir. 1977).

<sup>1966</sup> 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq. See also EEOC, Enforcement Guidance on the Consideration of Arrest and Conviction Records in Employment Decisions Under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 No. 915.002 (Apr. 25, 2012) (herein EEOC Enforcement Guidance).

- An employer SHOULD give you notice that you were denied employment because of your criminal history, and also give you a chance to show that it should make an exception for you based on your individual circumstances.

CAN EMPLOYERS LEGALLY DISCRIMINATE AGAINST ME (SUCH AS NOT HIRING OR FIRING ME) JUST BECAUSE OF MY CRIMINAL RECORD?

In a few situations, yes, but usually, NO. There are some laws that protect applicants from this type of employment discrimination. While employers can legally consider convictions that might impact your ability to do the duties of the job safely and adequately, there are civil rights laws that make it illegal for employers to treat you differently from other applicants or employees based on your race, sex, religion, national origin, and other protected characteristics (called “protected classes”).

While it is sometimes legal for an employer to not hire or fire you because of your criminal record, an employer’s hiring policy is more likely to be illegal if they have a complete ban (called a “blanket ban”) on job applicants with records. By law, the correct and legal practice is for the employer to consider the individual circumstances of the person applying for the job and the job itself.<sup>1967</sup>

In most cases, it is illegal for an employer to have a complete or “blanket” ban on applicants with criminal records because these kinds of bans cause greater harm to Black and Latino applicants (“protected classes”) under a federal civil rights law known as “Title VII” (this law is explained in more detail in Appendix J, PG. 635)<sup>1968</sup> Because Blacks and Latinos are incarcerated at dramatically higher rates than people of other races in the United States,<sup>1969</sup> excluding applicants with criminal records is likely to have a greater impact on these protected classes. By law then, a “blanket ban” is only legal if the employer can show that the ban is “job related” and “consistent with business necessity”—meaning that your conviction affects your ability to do specific duties of the job, and the ban is necessary for the good of the business.<sup>1970</sup>

If an employer chooses not to hire individuals based solely on their records, the employer must be able to show that that this is necessary to ensure safe and efficient job performance for the position in question.<sup>1971</sup> In doing so, an employer must show that they evaluated the applicant’s ability to perform the duties of the job and whether any past conviction(s) would pose an unreasonable risk of harm, based on the specific requirements and responsibilities of the position.<sup>1972</sup> Of course, these laws still give the employer a lot of discretion and room to discriminate, but they require the employer to do individualized analysis of each job applicant.

What does a complete ban look like?

Sometimes the employer’s job posting, employment application, written policy, or some other part of the application process will show that the employer does not hire or employ people with criminal records. The policy may apply to all convictions, certain types of convictions (e.g., all felonies, or all theft offenses), and/or for convictions that occurred during a certain period of time (e.g., within the past 7 years). Or the policy may not be written down anywhere, but the employer says that they do not hire people with (certain) criminal records, or the employer’s hiring practices over time show that they always reject applicants with (certain) conviction records. These are all examples of complete bans—and are likely illegal because of their effect on minority, protected groups.

<sup>1967</sup> EEOC Enforcement Guidance at § V(B)(9). Note: Employers are not necessarily required to give individualized consideration in all circumstances, but doing so will allow them to consider more complete information about the applicant, and will help them to show that the hiring policy—including the rejections of specific job applicants—is “job related and consistent with business necessity.”

IMPORTANT: IF YOU SEE SOMETHING, YOU CAN SAY SOMETHING!

This section explains the civil rights laws that protect people with criminal records against discrimination by employers. However, there is often a gap between what the law says employers SHOULD do, and what employers ACTUALLY do. The courts are still figuring out how civil rights laws protect people with criminal records in different situations, because many of the cases on this subject are new. For this reason, it's important that you talk to a lawyer and/or contact the appropriate government-run civil rights protection agency if you think an employer has violated your rights. You won't just be protecting your own rights—you'll be standing up for the rights of all people with criminal records to be free from employment discrimination!

WHAT LAWS PROTECT APPLICANTS FROM DISCRIMINATION BASED ON THEIR CRIMINAL RECORD?

The laws that give applicants with records some protection are (1) the federal civil rights law called "Title VII," (2) the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission's (EEOC) Enforcement Guidance on Title VII,<sup>1973</sup> and (3) California state laws that are very similar to these federal laws.<sup>1974</sup> Learn more about these laws in the Appendix J, PG. 635 and Appendix K, PG. 636.

Under these civil rights laws, an employer CANNOT have a "blanket ban" policy that permanently excludes anyone and everyone with a criminal record. Instead, the employer's hiring policy should only exclude convictions that are "job related for the position" and "consistent with business necessity." This means that the employer should look at a number of factors when considering the convictions, such as:

- 1. The nature and seriousness of the conviction, AND
- 2. How much time has passed since the conviction, conduct, or completion of the sentence, AND
- 3. The nature of the job you're seeking—including the specific duties and responsibilities of the job.<sup>1975</sup>

For a more detailed description of how employers should look at these factors, keep reading the rules on the next page.

<sup>1975</sup> EEOC Enforcement Guidance at § V(B)(6)-(8). The employer should develop a targeted screening process that considers at least the following 3 factors: the nature and seriousness of the crime; time elapsed since the crime; and the nature of the job sought (nature of the duties and essential functions, circumstances under which the job is performed such as level of supervision and amount of authority, and the environment in which the job is performed considering location and context).

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS: What is a protected class?

“Protected classes” are groups of people that have historically experienced discrimination, and therefore are specifically protected by civil rights and anti-discrimination laws—for example, African Americans, women, immigrants, LGBTQI individuals, and people with disabilities. The specific characteristic that makes someone part of a protected class—for example, their race, sex, national origin, sexual orientation or gender identity, and/or disability status.

Under the law, it is illegal to discriminate against someone based on a protected characteristic. However, it is generally NOT illegal to discriminate against someone for some other reason that is NOT protected (for example, the color of their shirt).

IMPORTANT: Having a criminal record is NOT considered a protected class under the law. However, discriminating against people with criminal records can still be illegal in many situations because it has a much greater effect on Blacks and Latinos. Also, it is illegal for an employer to treat people with similar records in a different manner, based on any protected characteristics. For more information about different kinds of discrimination based on criminal record, see PG. 592 below.

What groups are “protected classes” under the law? Under federal law, it is illegal to discriminate against someone for any of the following reasons:

- Race
- Color
- National origin
- Religion
- Age (40 and over)
- Sex
- Pregnancy
- Disability
- Genetic information

Under California law, it is illegal to discriminate against someone for any of the following reasons:

- Race
- Color
- National origin or ancestry*
- Religion
- Sex
- Pregnancy
- Family or marital status*
- Sexual orientation*
- Gender identity*
- Disability or medical condition*
- Genetic information
- Military or veteran status*
- Age (40 and over)

In other words, California law protects all of the same characteristics as federal law, plus additional characteristics (marked with a *star*) that are NOT protected by federal law.

CAN AN EMPLOYER HAVE A POLICY THAT EXCLUDES APPLICANTS WHO COMMITTED CERTAIN SPECIFIC CRIMES?

Maybe. If an employment policy excludes ALL applicants who committed a certain crime (for example, theft), the employer must show that anyone who committed that crime can’t do the job properly or creates too much risk of harm in the position.<sup>1976</sup>

WHAT CAN AN EMPLOYER CONSIDER ABOUT MY CRIMINAL HISTORY?

Under the law, an employer SHOULD evaluate you as an individual, and should consider the circumstances of your criminal history, as well as any progress that you have made since the offense.

To conduct an individual assessment of you as a job applicant/ employee, the employer should abide by these rules:<sup>1977</sup>

1. Never make a permanent exclusion or “blanket ban” of people with criminal records. See PG. 589 above for more information on blanket bans.

<sup>1976</sup> The employer should validate the exclusion for the position in light of the Uniform Guidelines on Employee Selection Procedures. In other words, it should show data or analysis about criminal conduct as related to subsequent work performance or behaviors that supports the exclusion. EEOC Enforcement Guidance at § V(B)(5); see also El v. Se. Penn. Transp. Auth. (SEPTA), 479 F.3d 232, 244-48 (3d Cir. 2007) (stating that employer’s hiring policy for applicants with criminal convictions must “accurately distinguish between applicants that pose an unacceptable level of risk and those that do not”).

<sup>1977</sup> 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-2; EEOC Guidance at 15; see also Green v. Missouri Pac. R.R., 549 F.2d 1158 (8th Cir. 1975). The employer should develop a targeted screening process that considers at least the following 3 factors: the nature and seriousness of the crime; time elapsed since the crime; and the nature of the job sought (nature of the duties and essential functions, circumstances under which the job is performed such as level of supervision and amount of authority, and the environment in which the job is performed considering location and context).

2. Consider the following 3 factors to determine whether a specific conviction may be relevant to the job:
  - The nature and seriousness of the conviction.
    - The “nature” of the crime includes things like: the harm caused by the crime, and the legal elements of a crime—such as violence, theft, or fraud. The “seriousness” of the crime would include, for example, consideration that misdemeanors may be less severe than felonies.
  - How much time has passed since the conviction, conduct, or completion of the sentence.
    - Again, there should be no permanent exclusions of people with criminal records.
    - The employer should understand that the risk of recidivism decreases over time.
  - The nature of the job that you are seeking—including the specific duties and responsibilities of the job.
    - The job title and nature of duties (e.g., data entry, lifting boxes);
    - The job’s essential or most important functions;
    - The circumstances under which the job is performed (e.g., the level of supervision, oversight, and the amount of agency the employee has);
    - The environment in which the job’s duties are performed (e.g., outside, in a warehouse, or in a private home).
3. Look at individual factors like:
  - The total number of convictions on your record;
  - Your age at the time of conviction or release from prison;
  - Evidence that you did the same type of work after your conviction (with the same or a different employer) with no known incidents of criminal conduct;
  - The length and consistency of your employment history before and after the offense or conduct;
  - Evidence of your rehabilitation and efforts to change—for example, education/training;
  - Mistakes in your criminal record;
  - Mitigating facts or circumstances surrounding the offense or conduct (mitigating facts are things that show your crime should be considered in a less harsh light; for example, if you were the victim of abuse or coercion at the time of the offense);
  - Personal and professional references who can talk about your employment record and character, and any other information regarding your fitness for a particular job; and
  - Whether you are bonded under a federal, state, or local bonding program.<sup>1978</sup>

HOW CAN I IMPROVE MY CHANCES OF GETTING HIRED IF THE EMPLOYER SEES MY CRIMINAL RECORD?

When applying for jobs, keep these individual factors in mind. Highlight the positive elements in your application and history so that employers are more likely to consider and weigh them favorably. Don’t lie about your background, but you can explain how it has made you a better person and worker. For more information about how to talk about your record, see Appendix D, PG. 622, “How to Present your Best Self: Tips for Success in Job Interview.”

WHAT CAN I DO IF I BELIEVE THAT AN EMPLOYER HAS A COMPLETE BAN ON HIRING PEOPLE WITH RECORDS?

If you believe that there is an illegal ban in place, it is important for you to gather all of your job application materials and other (detailed) evidence that supports your claim. You can also contact an employment attorney or agency that protects employees from discrimination. See the “Helpful Hint” box on PG. 599 above for how to contact one. The following evidence can help you to show that the employer has a policy of rejecting applicants with (certain) criminal records:

- A job posting that says the employer will not hire people with (certain) criminal records;
- A copy of the job application that says the employer will not hire people with (certain) criminal records;
- A copy of the employer’s written policy, employee handbook, or other document saying the employer will not hire people with (certain) criminal records;
- Information about other applicants whom the employer has hired or rejected for having a criminal record;
- If the employer has a reputation in the community for not hiring people with (certain) criminal records; and/or

- Comments or statements by the employer at any time about not hiring people with (certain) criminal records—make sure you write those down! Try to write down exactly what the employer said, when, to whom the employer was speaking to, what the circumstances were, and who else was there.<sup>1979</sup>

REAL-LIFE SITUATIONS—EXAMPLES OF DISCRIMINATION BECAUSE OF CRIMINAL RECORD & RACE (OR OTHER PROTECTED CHARACTERISTIC)

IMPORTANT: In real life, discrimination based on your criminal record doesn't always happen alone—it may also happen in combination with racial discrimination or other illegal discrimination based on your protected class. For example, if an employer decides not to hire you due to your criminal record AND your race, this would be ILLEGAL racial discrimination.

CAN AN EMPLOYER DISCRIMINATE AGAINST ME BECAUSE OF MY RACE, COLOR, RELIGION, SEX, SEXUAL ORIENTATION, OR NATIONAL ORIGIN?

No. Sometimes there is racism (or other discrimination against a protected class) in addition to discrimination based on criminal history. This happens when an employer weighs your criminal history more heavily or negatively because of your race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, national origin, or other protected class. This is absolutely illegal, but needs to be proven. The next question will explain what to do and how you may be able to prove that an employer used your criminal record to discriminate against you based on your race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, national origin, or other protected class.

Remember: Race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, and national origin are all protected classes—meaning they are illegal reasons to discriminate against someone. For more information, and a complete list of all protected classes, see PG. 590 above.

WHAT CAN I DO IF I THINK AN EMPLOYER HAS TREATED MY CRIMINAL HISTORY MORE HARSHLY THAN OTHER JOB APPLICANTS BECAUSE OF MY RACE, COLOR, RELIGION, SEX, SEXUAL ORIENTATION, OR NATIONAL ORIGIN?

If you believe that your criminal history was treated more harshly than someone else's similar criminal history because of your race, color, religion, sex, sexual orientation, nation origin, etc., it is important for you to gather all the evidence that supports your claim, especially any information showing that the employer treated you differently than someone else with a similar record.

You can also contact an employment attorney or organization that specializes in protecting employees from discrimination. See PG. 599 for how to contact someone.

The following evidence helps show an employer discriminated against you by treating your criminal record differently because of your race, sex, religion, national origin, or other protected characteristic:

- The employer hired other job applicants or employees with similar criminal records and similar job qualifications;
- The employer did not require background checks for other job applicants for the same position;
- The employer gave other job applicants a chance to explain their criminal record;
- The employer made comments showing bias or stereotypes about you, based on your race, sex, religion, or national origin, including group stereotypes about crime; or
- The only major difference between you and other applicants or employees who were treated more favorably than you (such as job applicants chosen over you, former employees, and employees in positions similar to the position you applied for), is your race, sex, religion, national origin, or other protected characteristic;
- Information about the employer's overall workforce (i.e., other employees), job applicants, application procedures, and background check data, shows that the employer treated your criminal history more negatively than other applicants/employees of other races, sex, religions, or national origin; and/or
- Any other information showing that the employer treated you differently than other job applicants with similar qualifications and a similar record, because of your race, sex, religion, or national origin.<sup>1980</sup>

I WAS FIRED OR DENIED EMPLOYMENT BECAUSE OF MY VISIBLE TATTOOS. DO I HAVE ANY LEGAL PROTECTIONS AGAINST DISCRIMINATION?

Most likely, no. There are no legal protections from employment discrimination based on an employee's visible tattoos. Both California state and federal employment discrimination laws specify certain "protected classes" such as gender, religion, race, and sexual orientation. Neither California nor federal law, however, protect against discrimination based on an applicant's visible tattoos. Therefore, employers can legally deny you employment based on your tattoos.

HOWEVER, there have been cases of people bringing employment discrimination claims involving tattoos, when they are protected by one of the specified classes. For example, courts have found protections for religious tattoos, as "religion" is a protected class.<sup>1981</sup> Plaintiffs have also been successful bringing claims based on gender discrimination, when employers take adverse action against men with tattoos, but not women.<sup>1982</sup>

A SUMMARY OF YOUR RIGHTS

- An employer CANNOT discriminate against you based on your race, color, religion, sex, national origin, or any other protected characteristic.
- An employer CANNOT weigh your criminal history more heavily than another applicant's similar criminal history because of your race, color, religion, sex, national origin, or any other protected characteristic.
- An employer CANNOT deny employment to everyone with a criminal history.
- An employer, however, CAN justify a hiring policy against people with criminal histories if it shows the policy is "job related" and "consistent with business necessity."<sup>1983</sup>
- An employer SHOULD evaluate your individual circumstances and consider:
  - Facts and circumstances surrounding your offense;
  - The number of convictions in your history;
  - Your age at the time of conviction / release;
  - If you have held the same type of job, post-conviction, without incidents;
  - Your employment history before and after conviction;
  - Your rehabilitation efforts;
  - Employment or character references; and
  - Whether you are bonded.<sup>1984</sup>
- An employer SHOULD give you notice that you were denied employment because of your criminal history, and give you a chance to show that it should make an exception for you based on your individual circumstances.

WHAT CAN I DO IF I FEEL I WAS ILLEGALLY DISCRIMINATED AGAINST BY AN EMPLOYER?

If you think that an employer has illegally discriminated against you either because of a complete ban against people with criminal records or by treating your record negatively because of your race, sex, religion, or national origin, etc., you can report the employer to the EEOC or DFEH. (The EEOC and DFEH are the government agencies responsible for enforcing certain civil rights and anti-discrimination laws.)

You may want to talk to a legal aid lawyer or plaintiff's-side employment lawyer about your situation. You have to file a complaint with the EEOC or DFEH before you are allowed to file a lawsuit in court against the employer, and a lawyer can help you with this process. It is recommended you contact the EEOC or DFEH immediately, and reach out to lawyers who can advise you. For more information about finding a lawyer, see PG. 599. For more information about filing a lawsuit, see PG. 594.

HOW MUCH TIME DO I HAVE TO FILE A DISCRIMINATION COMPLAINT AGAINST AN EMPLOYER?

In California, you only have 300 days (10 months) to report employment discrimination to the EEOC, or 1 year to report discrimination to the DFEH.<sup>1985</sup>

<sup>1983</sup> Hiring policies excluding people based on criminal history must consider at least three factors in order to be "job related" and "consistent with business necessity:" (1) the nature and gravity of the offense; (2) how much time has passed; and (3) the nature of the job sought. Green v. Missouri Pac. R.R., 549 F.2d 1158 (8th Cir. 1977).

<sup>1984</sup> 42 U.S.C. § 2000e et seq; see also EEOC, Enforcement Guidance on the Consideration of Arrest and Conviction Records in Employment Decisions Under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 No. 915.002 (Apr. 25, 2012) (herein EEOC Enforcement Guidance).

<sup>1985</sup> The EEOC usually requires discrimination complaints to be filed within 180 days from when the discrimination occurred. However, in California, you may have up to 300 days to file an EEOC complaint, because California law also covers the same types of discrimination. 42 U.S.C. § 2000e-5 (general time limits on filing), 2000e-5(e) (time limits on filing where complainant has initially instituted proceedings with authorized state or local agency); see also Green v. Los Angeles Cnty. Superintendent of Sch., 883 F.2d 1472, 1473 (9th Cir. 1989); Saulsbury v. Wismer & Becker, Inc., 644 F.2d 1251 (9th Cir. 1980). You must file a DFEH complaint within 1 year from when the discrimination occurred. CAL. GOV'T CODE § 12960.

How to File a Complaint with the federal EEOC:

If you decide to file a claim, you can contact the EEOC in person or by mail to report the employment discrimination and file a complaint.

- In person: The EEOC has local offices in the following California cities: Los Angeles, Fresno, San Diego, San Francisco, Oakland, and San Jose. Contact the local EEOC office near you to report discrimination and file a complaint. (See Appendix L, PG. 637 for local EEOC office addresses and phone numbers.) You can also call 1-800-669-4000 to give basic information about your situation, and then a local office will follow up with you about filing a complaint. (Important: You cannot actually file an EEOC complaint by phone, but you can get the process started.)
- By Mail: You can mail a written complaint to any local EEOC office. For instructions on how to write a complaint, see PG. 594, below. For a list of local EEOC offices and addresses, see Appendix L, PG. 637.

How to File a Complaint with the California DFEH:

You can contact the DFEH by mail, by phone, or online to report the discrimination and file a “Pre-Complaint Inquiry”:

- By Mail: Fill out the Pre-Complaint Inquiry form and mail it to any local DFEH office. For a list of local DFEH offices and addresses, see Appendix M, PG. 638. To learn how to obtain the Pre-Complaint Inquiry form, see Appendix N, PG. 639.<sup>1986</sup>
- By Phone: Call the DFEH Communication Center at (800) 884-1684. If you have a hearing impairment, please call 800-884-1684 or TTY at (800) 700-2320 for service.
- Online: Use the DFEH’s online system, available at <http://esq5.houdiniesq.com/dfeh/intake/>, or email the Pre-Complaint Inquiry form to contact.center@dfeh.ca.gov.

Once you file a complaint with the EEOC and/or the DFEH, you have two options:

1. You can ask the EEOC or DFEH to investigate and resolve the discrimination claim, including filing a lawsuit in court on your behalf; OR
2. You can file a lawsuit directly in court on your own, but you must ask the EEOC or DFEH to give you a “Right to Sue” letter. (Note: You cannot go directly to court—the law requires you to go through the DFEH or EEOC first.)<sup>1987</sup>

For more information on how to file a complaint with the EEOC or the DFEH and a summary of the complaint process, see PG. 594 below. For a complete description of the EEOC and DFEH complaint processes, see Appendix O, PG. 640 (EEOC Complaint Process), and Appendix P, PG. 642 (DFEH Complaint Process). For more information about the process of filing a lawsuit in court, see PG. 598.

WHAT RELIEF COULD I GET IF AN EMPLOYER ILLEGALLY DISCRIMINATED AGAINST ME?

The types of remedies that might be available to you will depend upon what the employer did (the “discriminatory action”) and how it affected you. For example, if an employer refused to hire you for an illegally discriminatory reason, the remedy may include hiring you for the job or giving you any back pay or benefits that you would have received if you had been hired. If you filed a lawsuit in court, you may also get back any money you spent on attorney’s fees, expert witness fees, and court costs.<sup>1988</sup>

You also may be awarded “compensatory” or “punitive damages.” For intentional cases of discrimination based on a person’s race, color, national origin, sex (including pregnancy), religion, disability, or genetic information, compensatory and punitive damages may be awarded. Note: punitive and compensatory damages are rare, and should never be expected.

- Compensatory damages repay victims for out-of-pocket expenses caused by the discrimination (such as costs of continuing with a job search) and compensate them for any emotional harm suffered because of the discrimination.
- Punitive damages may be awarded to punish an employer who has committed an especially hateful or careless act of discrimination.

In addition, the employer may be required to stop any discriminatory practices immediately and take steps to make sure not to discriminate again in the future. For

LIMITS ON COMPENSATORY & PUNITIVE DAMAGES:

There are limits on the amount of compensatory and punitive damages a person can recover. These limits depend on the size of the employer:

- For employers with 15-100 employees, the limit is $50,000.
- For employers with 101-200 employees, the limit is $100,000.
- For employers with 201-500 employees, the limit is $200,000.
- For employers with more than 500 employees, the limit is $300,000.

example, if the employer had a blanket ban on hiring people with criminal records, they would have to change this policy and remove any language on the job application that says people with convictions will not be hired.

WHAT IS THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN FILING AN EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION COMPLAINT WITH THE EEOC AND DFEH?

The EEOC is the federal civil rights agency that enforces federal civil rights law. The DFEH is the state civil rights agency that enforces California civil rights law.

Federal and state civil rights laws are very similar. This means that in most cases, you can file a discrimination complaint with either the EEOC or the DFEH. Once you file a complaint with one agency, that agency will investigate your complaint and will ALSO send a copy of your complaint to the other agency.<sup>1989</sup>

This is called “dual filing,” but it is NOT something that you need to worry or about. Once you file a complaint with either the EEOC or DFEH, the agencies will take care of filing it with the other agency on its own, and you will not need to do anything else. However, there are certain situations where it is better to file with one agency than the other.

SITUATION	EXPLANATION	BETTER AGENCY
How many employees work for the employer?	EEOC only accepts complaints if the employer has 15 or more employees. <sup>1991</sup> DFEH accepts complaints if the employer has 5 or more employees. <sup>1992</sup>	If the employer has 15 or more employees, you can file with either EEOC or DFEH. If employer has fewer than 15 (but at least 5) employees, you should file with the DFEH.
How long ago did the discrimination occur?	You have 300 days (approximately 10 months) to file a complaint with EEOC. <sup>1993</sup> You have 1 year to file a complaint with DFEH. <sup>1994</sup>	If it has been less than 300 days since the discrimination occurred, you can file with either EEOC or DFEH. If it has been more than 300 days (but less than 1 year) since the discrimination occurred, you should file with the DFEH.
What type of discrimination occurred?	In most cases, EEOC and DFEH cover the same types of discrimination. However, in a few cases, DFEH covers more types of discrimination—such as sexual orientation or gender identity, marital status, medical condition, military/veteran status, victims of domestic violence, political affiliation, etc. <sup>1995</sup>	If the type of discrimination you suffered is covered by both agencies, you can file with either. However, if you were discriminated against based on a characteristic only covered by DFEH, then you should file with DFEH.
What kinds of remedies can I get?	In general, the remedies are similar between the EEOC and DFEH. <sup>1996</sup>	In general, you can get the same types of remedies whether you file with EEOC or DFEH.  In some cases, the amount of damages you can get, or what you have to prove, may be slightly different. However, this is very complicated, so you should talk to a lawyer or a representative from the EEOC or DFEH if you are concerned about these differences.

HOW DO I FILE A DISCRIMINATION COMPLAINT WITH THE EEOC?

In Person:

Contact the local EEOC office near you to report the discrimination and make an appointment. Some EEOC offices may also have walk-in times when you can file a complaint without an appointment. Check with the local office to find out if this is available. (For a list of local EEOC offices and contact information, see Appendix L, PG. 637.)

When you go to the EEOC office, bring any information or papers that are related to your situation. For example, you might bring a copy of the job posting or application, any letters or documents you received from the employer, notes that you took about discriminatory statements made by the employer, or a list of other people who know about what happened. You can also bring anyone you want to come with you, such as a friend, translator, or anyone else to provide assistance or support.

At the EEOC office, you will meet with an EEOC representative and complete a questionnaire to provide information about the job discrimination you experienced. The representative will ask you for details about your experience, the employer, and when and where the discrimination occurred, and will decide whether Title VII

WHAT IF THE EEOC DISMISSES MY COMPLAINT RIGHT AWAY?

If your complaint was not filed within the time limit, or if the EEOC decides that your situation is not covered by Title VII, the EEOC will dismiss your complaint (close your case) right away. The EEOC may also dismiss your complaint right away if it decides that it probably will not be able to prove discrimination. If your charge is dismissed, you will be notified.

Important: Even if the EEOC dismisses your complaint, you may still be able to file a complaint with the DFEH for the same discrimination.

covers your situation. If so, the EEOC representative will explain the process for filing a formal complaint, called a "Charge of Discrimination," and will help you to write up and file the complaint if you want to go forward. (If Title VII does not cover your situation, the EEOC will give you information about where you can go for help, but you will not be able to file an EEOC complaint.)<sup>1997</sup>

By Mail:

You can file a complaint by writing a letter to the EEOC that includes the following information:

- Your name, address, and telephone number;
- The name, address and telephone number of the employer whom you want to file your charge against;
- How many employees work there (if you know this information);
- A description of the actions that you believe were discriminatory (for example, you were fired, demoted, harassed, or not hired);
- Why you believe you were discriminated against (for example, the employer hired other people with a similar criminal history, or did not require background checks for other applicants, or gave other applicants a chance to explain their conviction record; or the employer made biased comments);
- When the events took place; and
- Your signature (Important: The EEOC cannot investigate your complaint unless you sign the letter!).<sup>1998</sup>
- You can also include additional information or documents, such as copies of the job posting or application or names and contact information of other people who know what happened or have information.<sup>1999</sup>
(Important: If you are sending documents, make sure you make a copy first—keep the original for yourself and send the copy to the EEOC.)

You can mail your letter or deliver it in person to the nearest EEOC office. The EEOC will contact you if they need more information about your situation and may send you a questionnaire to fill out and return. Afterward, they will put all your information into an official EEOC complaint ("charge") form, and will contact you so that you can sign the form.<sup>2000</sup>

Note: You can also call the EEOC at 1-800-669-4000 to start the process, but you will still have to go through the steps above to file a formal written complaint.<sup>2001</sup>

WHAT HAPPENS AFTER I FILE A COMPLAINT WITH THE EEOC?

This is a brief summary of what happens after you file a complaint. For a complete description of each step, see Appendix O, PG. 640.

HOW DOES THE INVESTIGATION PROCESS WORK?

STEP 1: Filing a Complaint (see above).

STEP 2: Notifying the Employer.

Within 10 days, the EEOC will send a notice and a copy of the charge to the employer. The EEOC may ask both you and the employer to agree to participate in mediation, which is an informal way of trying to resolve the problem instead of filing a lawsuit.

STEP 3: Employer's Response.

If your case is not sent to mediation, or if mediation doesn't resolve the problem, the EEOC will ask the employer to respond (submit a written answer) to the charges, and answer any questions that the EEOC has about your complaint. Then your complaint will be given to an EEOC investigator for investigation.<sup>2002</sup>

STEP 4: Investigation.

How the EEOC investigates a complaint depends on the specific facts of your case and the kinds of information that will be helpful. In some cases, an EEOC representative may visit the employer, interview other employees or witnesses, and gather documents. The EEOC may also interview you again, or ask you for more documents or information. It's very important to cooperate and keep in touch with the EEOC!

STEP 5: Decision.

After the investigation is completed, the EEOC will issue a decision to let you and the employer know the results. The decision will say either:

- NO CAUSE—meaning the EEOC did NOT find any evidence that the employer illegally discriminated against you; or
- REASONABLE CAUSE—meaning the EEOC thinks the employer DID illegally discriminate against you.

STEP 6: Your Options After the EEOC Decision.

Depending on what the EEOC decision says, these are your options:

- If “NO CAUSE” found—The EEOC will send you a Right-to-Sue notice, which allows you to file a lawsuit in court against the employer on your own. You must file a lawsuit within 90 days (approximately 3 months) after receiving the Right-to-Sue Notice; otherwise it will be too late.
- If “REASONABLE CAUSE” found—The EEOC will try to reach a voluntary settlement (called “conciliation”) with the employer. Conciliation is usually a request for the employer to pay you to cover harm caused by the discrimination.
- If the EEOC can’t reach a settlement with the employer, the EEOC may decide to file a lawsuit against the employer on your behalf.
- If the EEOC decides not to file a lawsuit, it will give you a Right-to-Sue notice, which allows you to file a lawsuit against the employer on your own. You must file a lawsuit within 90 days (approximately 3 months) of receiving the Right-to-Sue Notice; otherwise it will be too late.<sup>2003</sup>

For more information about each of these steps, see Appendix O, PG. 640.

HOW DO I FILE A COMPLAINT WITH THE DFEH?

The process for filing a complaint with the DFEH is almost the same as filing a complaint with the EEOC. For a complete description of how to file a complaint with the DFEH, and what happens after you do, see Appendix P, PG. 642.

WHAT IF I WANT TO GO STRAIGHT TO COURT AND FILE A LAWSUIT ON MY OWN?

Federal and state law both require you to file an employment discrimination complaint with the EEOC or DFEH first. This is called “exhausting your administrative remedies.” However, once you file your complaint, you can choose to file a lawsuit against the employer instead of asking the EEOC (or DFEH) to investigate and resolve your complaint.<sup>2004</sup>

If you want to file a lawsuit right away, you must ask the EEOC for a Right-to-Sue notice, which is a legal document that allows you to file a lawsuit in court on your own. However, you generally have to give the EEOC 180 days to investigate your complaint first.

- If it has been more than 180 days (6 months) since you filed your complaint, the EEOC is required to give you a Right-to-Sue notice.
- If it has been less than 180 days, the EEOC will give you a Right-to-Sue notice only if its own investigation will take longer than 6 months.<sup>2005</sup>

To request a Right-to-Sue notice, send a written letter to the local EEOC office that is handling your complaint. Once you get the Right-to-Sue notice, you only have 90 days to file your lawsuit in court.

IMPORTANT: Once you get the Right-to-Sue notice, the EEOC will dismiss your complaint and will not do anything more to investigate or resolve your case. So if you want the EEOC to continue to help with your case, DON’T request a Right-to-Sue notice.<sup>2006</sup>

The process for requesting a DFEH Right-to-Sue notice is very similar. For more information on how to request a Right-to-Sue from the DFEH, see

WHO CAN REPRESENT ME IF I BELIEVE I HAVE BEEN ILLEGALLY DISCRIMINATED AGAINST FOR A JOB BECAUSE OF MY RECORD?

In July 2017, California issued a regulation acknowledging that, since some communities are disproportionately represented in the criminal justice system, basing important employment decisions on a person’s record may violate the federal Civil Rights Act, which protects people of color and other marginalized groups.<sup>2007</sup> If you believe you have been illegally discriminated against in an employment or hiring decision due to your criminal record (or

HELPFUL HINT:

Even though you can’t go straight to court, you can still talk to a legal aid or employment attorney, or non-profit employment advocacy organization to get advice about your situation. When doing so, you should ALSO contact the EEOC or DFEH right away, so that you can get your complaint filed on time (and then request a Right-to-Sue if you still want to go to court).

HELPFUL HINT:

Find an attorney or government civil rights agency to help you!

If you think an employer has illegally discriminated against you the law, you may want to contact an attorney who can help you decide what to do next. There are 3 types of people who may be able help you:

1. Legal aid or employment attorney

Legal aid attorneys provide FREE legal assistance to people who cannot afford to hire a lawyer (like a public defender, but for lawsuits and other civil legal cases). Many private employment attorneys only charge fees if you win or settle a case, so you may not have to pay anything out-of-pocket UNLESS you win money from the employer. To find a local legal aid attorney or employment attorney in your area:

- Call 211;
- Contact the local county bar association, or look on the State Bar website at <http://lawhelpca.org/find-legal-help>; or
- To find a list of employment attorneys in your area, visit the California Employment Lawyers Association website at <http://www.cela.org/?page=4>;
- For a list of legal aid offices throughout California, see PG. 1127 at the back of this guide.

2. Government civil rights agencies

There are 2 government agencies responsible for enforcing your rights against illegal discrimination by employers. Because federal and state law are very similar, you can generally ask either agency to enforce your rights if you think an employer has illegally discriminated against you. For more information about how to report discrimination and file a complaint with the EEOC and DFEH, read the next section, starting on PG. 599.

- The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) is the federal agency that enforces federal civil rights laws; and
- The Department of Fair Employment & Housing (DFEH) is the California state agency that enforces your rights under state law.

3. Non-profit organizations

You can also contact a non-profit organization that helps people who have been discriminated against by employers based on their criminal record:

V. JOBS & PROFESSIONS YOUR RECORD MIGHT EXCLUDE YOU FROM

WHAT WILL I LEARN?

- What types of jobs you may be disqualified from getting, based on your criminal record
- When and how you may become eligible for these jobs in the future

LEGAL RESTRICTIONS ON CERTAIN JOBS

ARE THERE CERTAIN TYPES OF JOBS I CAN'T HAVE BECAUSE OF MY CRIMINAL RECORD?

Sometimes. There are certain situations when having certain types of convictions on your record could or will disqualify you from getting certain types of jobs. It is important that you know about these situations beforehand, so that you can realistically set your sights on jobs that you can have.

Although this list is incomplete, below are some examples of jobs that have legal restrictions for people with certain convictions. In general, these are jobs where you would have access to private or sensitive information (like financial records); vulnerable people (like children or the elderly), or high-security places, where there might be a greater risk of harm to the public.

- Airport security screeners (or anyone with unsupervised access to secure airport areas);<sup>2008</sup>
- Federal law enforcement officers;<sup>2009</sup>
- Defense contractors;<sup>2010</sup>
- Prisoner transportation personnel;<sup>2011</sup>
- Port workers;<sup>2012</sup>
- Bank employees;<sup>2013</sup>
- Insurance personnel;<sup>2014</sup>
- Jobs that administer employee benefits plan;<sup>2015</sup>
- Childcare workers in federal facilities or agencies;<sup>2016</sup>
- Working for a school district in a position that requires certification or a supervisory capacity (if you have been convicted of a felony defined as serious or violent);<sup>2017</sup>

NOTE: Most of the time, if an employer cannot hire a person with a record for certain types of job positions, the employer may still be able to hire that person for other positions. If an employer says that they cannot hire you for a job based on your criminal record, you should ask whether there are any other positions available that you could take instead.

CAN I EVER BECOME ELIGIBLE AGAIN TO GET THESE JOBS?

It depends. Each of these jobs has very specific rules about what convictions will disqualify you, and whether and how you can become eligible for them again. It will depend on the specific laws, regulations, and other rules that apply to that type of work.<sup>2018</sup> It is recommended that you ask a lawyer to review your RAP sheet and explain how your convictions may affect your ability to get the job you want. See PG. 599 for information on how to contact a lawyer.

- For some jobs, you are only disqualified for a certain period of time, and then you will become eligible after that time has passed.
- For many jobs, you can become eligible if your conviction is expunged, or if you get a Certificate of Rehabilitation or a pardon for the conviction.
- For some jobs, you can request a waiver or exemption for your conviction, which means asking the government to make an exception to the law based on your individual circumstances. You may need to present evidence of rehabilitation and other factors showing that your conviction does not pose a risk of harm and therefore you should not be disqualified because of it.

- If you think you were disqualified based on incorrect information in your record, you may be able to appeal the disqualification and show that you should NOT be disqualified according to the law. For example, if you were not actually convicted of the offense that caused you to be disqualified for the job (e.g., the charges were dismissed, or you pleaded guilty to a lesser offense that does NOT disqualify you), you can appeal and present court records showing that you were not convicted of that offense.

LEGAL RESTRICTIONS ON PROFESSIONAL LICENSES

WHAT WILL I LEARN?

- What professional and occupational licenses are and what they require
- How your criminal record may affect your ability to get a professional or occupational license
- What information a licensing board can consider about your criminal record
- When a licensing board can deny you a license based on your criminal record
- What to do if a licensing board denies your application for a license because of your criminal record
- What to do if you used to have a professional or occupational license, but lost it due to a criminal conviction
- Other groups you can contact for assistance or additional information about professional and occupational licenses

Many people with criminal records CAN and DO get professional and occupational licenses to work in the jobs of their choice. If you want to work in a job that requires a license, don't be discouraged! Although it can be harder to get a license with a criminal record, this section will help you to understand your rights and how to increase your chances of getting the license you want!

WHAT ARE PROFESSIONAL AND OCCUPATIONAL LICENSES AND WHAT DO THEY REQUIRE?

In California, people who work in certain jobs are required to get a license from the state to do so. There are over 200 professions in California that require a professional or occupational license—ranging from barbers and cosmetologists, to security guards, contractors, teachers, nurses, doctors and lawyers. Professional and occupational licenses are granted and regulated by different licensing boards, agencies, and bureaus (over 40 in total, each for a different industry), all under the control of the California Department of Consumer Affairs (DCA).<sup>2019</sup>

Applying for a professional or occupational license generally requires submitting fingerprints, paying application fees, and proving that you meet certain educational and/or work experience requirements, which are set by the particular licensing board to which you're applying.<sup>2020</sup>

WHAT KINDS OF JOBS REQUIRE A PROFESSIONAL OR OCCUPATIONAL LICENSE?

There are over 200 kinds of jobs in California that require a professional or occupational license. Here is a list of just a few of the most common ones:

- Barber
- Cosmetologist
- Security guard
- Teacher
- Contractor
- Real estate agent
- Child care worker or Family child care home provider
- Nurse or Certified Nursing Assistant (CNA)
- Home Health Aide (HHA) or Personal Care Aide (PCA)
- Dentist, Dental assistant, or Registered dental hygienist
- Physical therapist or Physical therapist assistant
- Emergency Medical Technician (EMT) or Paramedic
- Pharmacist or Pharmacy technician

To find out whether the specific job you want requires a professional or occupational license, contact the Department of Consumer Affairs (DCA) at (800) 952-5210. You can also ask the DCA for information on how to contact the specific licensing board that oversees that profession. To learn more about specific licensing requirements for the job you want, you will need to contact the licensing board that oversees that profession.

HELPFUL HINT FOR OCCUPATIONAL LICENSES:

If you are thinking of applying for a professional/occupational license, you should talk to an attorney or reentry program counselor for advice and assistance. They can help you to better understand the specific barriers and opportunities you may have, depending on your record and the type of license you want.

- For a list of licensing boards and their contact information, go to http://www.dca.ca.gov/publications/dca\_booklet.pdf.
- For links to each of the licensing boards, go to http://www.dca.ca.gov/about\_dca/entities.shtml.

CAN I GET A PROFESSIONAL OR OCCUPATIONAL LICENSE WITH A RECORD?

It depends on what type of license you are trying to get, what conviction(s) you have on your record, and what rehabilitation efforts you have participated in.

Some professional/occupational licenses have extremely strict rules about criminal records, while other types of licenses are more lenient. It is best to check with the licensing board for the profession you want to enter to find out its current criteria.

HELPFUL HINT: YOU CAN APPEAL A LICENSE DENIAL

Professional and occupational licenses are often denied due to past convictions, but don't be discouraged! You can appeal a denial and advocate for yourself on appeal. There are also legal aid and reentry attorneys who may be able to help you appeal!

WHAT CRIMINAL HISTORY INFORMATION CAN A LICENSING BOARD CONSIDER ABOUT ME?

When you apply for a professional license, the licensing board can see your entire record—including convictions that have been “expunged.” (Note: Regular employers generally CANNOT see expunged convictions—but licensing boards are different.) However, the board cannot deny your licenses based ONLY on the fact that you have a conviction.<sup>2021</sup>

Beyond criminal history information, licensing boards MUST also consider mitigating and rehabilitative evidence. Mitigating evidence is information that would make the board judge a conviction less harshly, and could be information like youth, drug addiction, duress, or other factors that were going on at the time of the offense. Rehabilitative evidence is proof of your efforts to change and improve yourself, demonstrating that you are no longer at risk of the conduct or circumstances that led to your past system involvement. You can submit this evidence at the time of your application, and on appeal.

CAN A LICENSING BOARD DENY ME A LICENSE BASED ON MY RECORD?

The licensing board can deny your application for a license based on a criminal conviction, but ONLY if your conviction is “substantially related to the qualifications, functions, or duties of the business or profession.”<sup>2022</sup> This legal standard means that the type of conduct you were convicted for—for example, theft, selling drugs, violence, or fraud—creates a high risk of harm, or otherwise prevents you from safely completing the specific tasks and responsibilities of the job that you want a license for. For example, a conviction for drug distribution might be considered “substantially related” to a pharmacist license, since pharmacists have access to lots of drugs and are responsible for safely providing drugs to other people.<sup>2023</sup>

PLEASE NOTE: Some crimes, such as those involving physical violence or fraud, dishonesty and deceit, are presumed to be “substantially related” to any profession regulated by the California Business & Profession Code (including medical, law, construction, and real estate licenses).<sup>2024</sup>

In addition to actual convictions, a licensing board is also allowed to consider “any act involving dishonesty, fraud, or deceit” that you have done “with the intent to substantially benefit” yourself or someone else, or “substantially injure another.” However, as with convictions, the act must also be “substantially related” to the qualifications, functions, or duties of the job.<sup>2025</sup>

HELPFUL HINT:

Submit a Pre-Approval Application When Possible

The Board of Barbering & Cosmetology has a special early application process for people with criminal convictions who want to apply for a license. You can submit an initial application and find out ahead of time whether you will be able to get a license, before you go through any training or pay any fees.

Note: You will still have to complete all of the training and examination requirements, in order to get your actual license.

<sup>2022</sup> CAL. BUS. & PROF. CODE § 480; see also Hughes v. Bd. of Architectural Examiners, 17 Cal.4th 763, 788 (1998) (“It is axiomatic that the right of an individual to engage in any of the common occupations of life is among the several fundamental liberties protected by the due process and equal protection clauses of the Fourteenth Amendment. Therefore, for example, a statute constitutionally can prohibit an individual from practicing a lawful profession only for reasons related to his or her fitness or competence to practice that profession.”).

➤ MITIGATING & REHABILITATIVE EVIDENCE FOR LICENSING BOARDS:

Even if the licensing board determines that your conviction is “substantially related” to the qualifications of your chosen profession, California law requires that the board also consider any evidence of rehabilitation or other positive factors that you present. Each licensing board must create its own criteria to evaluate your rehabilitation efforts.<sup>2026</sup>

Although each board is different, most focus on the following rehabilitative factors: the amount of time that has passed since your conviction; whether you successfully completed parole or probation; whether you have shown remorse; your change in attitude; alcohol or drug counseling; your pursuit of education or vocational training; the stability of your family life; and your community involvement.<sup>2027</sup>

In addition:

- If the state of California has given you a Certificate of Rehabilitation (see more on PG. 980), then a licensing board CANNOT deny you a professional license based solely on your conviction.
- For professions governed by the California Business & Professions Code, a licensing board also CANNOT deny you for (1) having a misdemeanor if you have met all of the board’s rehabilitative criteria, or (2) for a felony that has been dismissed (“expunged”).<sup>2028</sup> (Many of the individual board’s rehabilitative criteria can be found in the California Code of Regulations.)

If you prepared for your license while incarcerated...

Many people are able to learn new job skills or complete professional license requirements while incarcerated. In the past, licensing boards were allowed to delay or deny your license application just because you had completed the licensing requirements while incarcerated. But now, a new California law makes it illegal for a licensing board to delay or deny your license based solely on the fact that you completed some or all of the licensure requirements while incarcerated.<sup>2029</sup> If you otherwise qualify for the license, it no longer matters that you were incarcerated when you prepared for it.

IMPORTANT: The new law does NOT change any other rules about whether you can get a license. A licensing board CAN still deny you a license based on your conviction, if they determine that the conviction is “substantially related” to the qualifications and duties of the job. Also, the law does NOT change any rules about when you can apply and whether you can apply while you’re still incarcerated.

CAN I APPLY FOR A LICENSE WHILE I’M STILL INCARCERATED?

It depends. Each licensing board has different rules. Some require you to wait a certain amount of time after your conviction or release before you can be eligible.<sup>2030</sup> Most boards will also consider the amount of time that has passed since your conviction, and may give more weight to time after you were released or once you were off supervision.<sup>2031</sup> For this reason, even if you are not required to wait, you may be more successful after release.’

HELPFUL HINT

Special program for getting your cosmetology license while incarcerated

If you are incarcerated at Valley State Prison, California Women’s Institute, or Central California Women’s Facility (Chowchilla), there is a special program that can help you to get your cosmetology license while you’re incarcerated. You can complete your training school AND take the licensing examination in these facilities—meaning it is possible to already have your license in hand by the time you’re released.

IMPORTANT: This program does NOT stop the licensing board from considering your criminal conviction, and does NOT change any of the other qualifications to get your license. In other words, the licensing board can still deny you a license if the board decides that your conviction is substantially related to the duties and responsibilities of a cosmetologist.

<sup>2030</sup> See, e.g., 10 CAL. CODE REGS. § 2911(a) (Department of Real Estate rehabilitation criteria requires “[t]he passage of not less than two years since the most recent criminal conviction or act of the applicant that is a basis to deny the departmental action sought. (A longer period will be required if there is a history of acts or conduct substantially related to the qualifications, functions or duties of a licensee of the department.).

<sup>2031</sup> See Donley v. Davis, 180 Cal. App. 4th 447, 467, 469 (2009) (upholding licensing board determination that there was “not sufficient evidence of rehabilitation” where the applicant’s conviction was “relatively recent and he [had] just finished probation”).

CAN I APPLY FOR A PROBATIONARY LICENSE BEFORE I GET A FULL LICENSE?

Possibly—it depends on which licensing board you apply to. Some boards are allowed to issue “probationary licenses”—which are licenses with certain restrictions or conditions—to people with criminal records who might not be approved for a full license.<sup>2032</sup>

WHAT CAN I DO IF THE BOARD DENIES MY APPLICATION FOR A LICENSE?

You can appeal your denial! Many applications are denied because of past convictions, but are successful on appeal. There are also some legal aid attorneys and clinics that may be able to help you appeal (see a list of legal aid organizations on PG. 1127). Generally, you have the right to appeal the board’s denial and have an administrative hearing before a neutral administrative law judge.<sup>2033</sup> At the hearing, you have the right to present evidence of your rehabilitation and argue your case for why you deserve a license.<sup>2034</sup> For a general overview of what the appeals process is like, see Appendix Q, PG. 644.

WHAT CAN I DO IF I USED TO HAVE A LICENSE, BUT LOST IT DUE TO A CRIMINAL CONVICTION?

If you previously had a professional license, your license may have been revoked (permanently taken away) or suspended (temporarily taken away) because of your criminal conviction.<sup>2035</sup> In this case, you generally have the right to ask the licensing board to reinstate (re-issue) your license to you, or to reduce your penalty and return your license sooner.<sup>2036</sup> To do this, you must first wait at least 1 year from the date your license was taken away, and then submit special forms (a petition) and other documents to the licensing board.<sup>2037</sup> Each licensing board may also have different or additional requirements, such as completing your term of probation or parole first, before you can ask for your license to be returned.<sup>2038</sup> (Note: Although you can apply to have your license reinstated while you are still incarcerated, you are unlikely to be successful if you apply while you’re still inside.)<sup>2039</sup>

The licensing board will give you a chance to present your reasons for why your license should be returned or reissued. This may be during a hearing, or by sending in a written statement. The Attorney General will also have a chance to argue for why your license should not be returned.<sup>2040</sup>

In order to get your license back, you will generally need to prove that you have been rehabilitated since your offense<sup>2041</sup>—particularly since you were released from prison or jail.<sup>2042</sup> This means showing that you have changed your life for the better, taken steps to improve yourself and correct previous bad habits, and successfully completed the requirements of your sentence. The board may also consider the nature and severity of the offense, how much time has passed since the conviction, whether the conviction has been dismissed, any other convictions on your record, and letters of recommendation or good character from people who know you.<sup>2043</sup>

WHO CAN HELP ME IF MY LICENSE HAS BEEN DENIED OR TAKEN AWAY DUE TO A CRIMINAL CONVICTION?

There are some non-profit organizations that may be able to help if your license has been denied or taken away due to a criminal conviction. These are just a few examples of organizations that can help, but there may be others in your area:

VI. ALTERNATIVES TO TRADITIONAL EMPLOYMENT

WHAT WILL I LEARN?

- Other ways of working and earning an income that are different from traditional employment, including:
  - Self-employment or starting your own business
  - What an independent contractor is and how to become one
  - Joining a worker-run cooperative business
  - Applying through a temp agency
  - Taking short-term or temporary positions to get your foot in the door
- Where to look for more information about each of these options

Throughout your job search, keep in mind that traditional employment is NOT your only option. There are many other ways of working and earning legitimate income—like starting your own business, joining a worker-run cooperative business, or going through a temp agency—and you may decide that one of these is better for you.

This section will explain some of the alternatives to traditional employment that you may want to consider:

- Self-employment
- Starting your own business
- Becoming an independent contractor
- Joining a worker-run cooperative
- Applying through a temp agency
- Taking short-term jobs or temporary positions to get your foot in the door

HELPFUL HINT:

Talk to a trusted person, or someone from a local reentry or workforce development program, for other ideas about alternative work opportunities that may be available.

CONSIDER SELF-EMPLOYMENT OR START YOUR OWN BUSINESS

Some people find it more fulfilling and empowering to be their own boss. Self-employment can give you more control over the type of work you do, freedom and flexibility to make your own decisions, and greater responsibility within the workplace. It also gives you more legal and business responsibilities, such as managing money and product, paying taxes, marketing your business and supervising employees.

There are many resources available for people who want to start a business—good places to start are your local library, the Internet, or classes at a local community college or adult school. Also, many non-profit organizations and government agencies now offer this support. If you think that self-employment may be a good option for you, you can find a list of organizations and resources for starting your own business in Appendix R, PG. 646. IMPORTANT NOTE: if you are currently incarcerated, you need permission from the warden to operate a business.<sup>2044</sup>

BECOME AN INDEPENDENT CONTRACTOR

Being an independent contractor is a form of self-employment somewhere between being an employee and running your own business. Employers usually hire independent contractors to do specific tasks or short-term jobs—like painting a house, installing plumbing, or doing landscaping work. The job usually ends automatically once the task is finished, although the employer can always hire the independent contractor again for another task.

The BIG difference between independent contractors and employees is that, under the law, independent contractors are considered to be self-employed. This means that independent contractors have more control over the work they choose to do. They also have legal responsibilities—like filing self-employment taxes and reporting certain business information to the government—and fewer legal rights in the workplace. On the other hand, employees have more legal rights and protections in the workplace, but the employer gets to control the work they do.

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS: *Am I an independent contractor or employee?

In some cases, an employer may call you an independent contractor, even though you are ACTUALLY an employee. The difference between an employee and an independent contractor is important, because you have more rights (and the employer has more responsibilities) if you are an employee; and you have fewer rights (and the employer has fewer responsibilities) if you are an independent contractor.

Sometimes an employer will get this wrong by accident, but other times an employer may misclassify you on purpose in order to avoid fulfilling their legal duties. According to the law, whether you are an employee or an independent contractor depends on the specific details of your work situation—NOT on what the employer calls you. For this reason, it's important that you know the difference so that you don't get taken advantage of! For more information on the difference between independent contractors and employees, and your rights and responsibilities in each situation, see the Appendix S, PG. 647.

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS

What can I do if I think an employer has wrongly classified me as an independent contractor OR violated my rights as an employee?

The California Division of Labor Standards Enforcement (DLSE) is the state agency responsible for enforcing your rights in the workplace. If you think an employer has violated your rights as an employee, wrongly classified you as an independent contractor, and/or for more information, you can contact your local DLSE office and speak with Deputy Labor Commissioner. To find a local DLSE office near you, go to <http://www.dir.ca.gov/dlse/DistrictOffices.htm> or call 1-844-LABOR-DIR (1-844-522-6734) for assistance.

For more information about your rights in the workplace, contact The Legal Aid Society—Employment Law Center's Workers Rights Clinic at 415-864-8208 (San Francisco Bay Area) or 866-864-8208 (toll free in CA). Or contact a local legal aid attorney in your area.

JOIN A WORKER-RUN COOPERATIVE BUSINESS

A worker cooperative is a business that is owned and controlled by its workers. In other words, the workers are both the employees AND the employer. Usually, workers run the day-to-day operations of the business—such as making business decisions, assigning tasks to each person, etc., as well as the business's finances. Although each person has a different level of responsibility, all workers are considered to be equal members and have equal power within the business.

Any business can be a worker-owned and controlled cooperative. Worker co-ops have been successful in many different industries. Some examples are:

- Service—housecleaning, day labor, restaurants, taxis, childcare
- Farming and food production—urban or community farms, community-supported agriculture programs, bakeries, restaurants
- Retail—grocery stores, bookstores, bike shops
- Health care—nursing, home health care, clinics, bodywork
- Skilled trades—printing, plumbing, woodworking, contracting
- Manufacturing and engineering—machine parts, fabricating
- Technology—web hosting, networking, voice and data systems
- Education—charter schools, teacher/student/parent-run schools
- Media and the arts—designers, galleries, performers, publishers

APPLY TO WORK THROUGH A TEMP AGENCY

Temp agencies (also called staffing agencies) help match people who are looking for work with employers who want to hire them. Temp agencies can often help you to find a short-term job or part-time job quickly, which, in some cases, can get your foot in the door for a permanent position in the future. In addition, some temp agencies specifically focus on helping people with criminal records get jobs, and they work with employers who are open to hiring applicants with criminal records.

Another benefit of going through to a temp agency is that once you apply to the agency, they can place you in jobs with many different employers who want to hire. Applying to a temp agency is similar to applying for a job directly with the employer—it will likely include an interview, checking your references, and possibly even doing a background check. The temp agency may also have you take an assessment test to evaluate your work strengths and skills. It still can be easier to apply through a temp agency rather than an employer, because most agencies always want to increase their pool of employees to choose from, and employers often prefer to hire temp workers because it's cheaper.

If you're interested in applying to a temp agency, here are some things to keep in mind:

- Not all temp agencies are the same! Just like employers, some temp agencies are better to work for than others. Ask around to find a temp agency that treats employees well and has a good record of placing people in jobs. Some things to ask about are: how long people usually have to wait before getting placed with an employer; how long most jobs last; what employers the temp agency works with; whether the agency places many people with criminal records; and how the agency treats people.
- Different temp agencies may focus on different types of jobs or different industries. Each temp agency is different, so the application requirements and process may be different from one agency to another. If there are several different temp agencies available in your area, do your homework to find out which one is right for you.
- When you apply through a temp agency, you will have to sign a contract with the agency that makes you an employee. Any offers of work that you get, either temporary or permanent, must go through the agency. The contract may even prohibit you from looking for work on the side, outside of the agency. If you want to look for other work on your own, you may need to ask the agency to release you from your contract. Before you sign up with a temp agency, it is recommended that you read all the fine print and ask questions about anything you don't fully understand!
- The temp agency is responsible for paying the employees who they send to work for an employer. The employer will pay the temp agency—NOT the employee—for the work, and then the agency takes a cut of the money and gives the rest to the employee. For example, if the employer pays the temp agency $20/hour for each employee, the agency may keep $5/hour of pay and then pay the employee $15/hour.
- Beware of any temp agency that charges you a fee for job placement! Most agencies collect their fees from the employer—NOT from the job applicant or employee.

GET YOUR FOOT IN THE DOOR THROUGH TEMPORARY POSITIONS

Some employers will give you the opportunity to prove yourself by starting work in a short-term, part-time, or temporary position, or for a test period. This gives you a chance to show the employer that you are a hard worker, and that you can work safely and responsibly. It may help get your foot in the door for a more permanent job afterward. If you do well during the testing period, you can ask the employer to consider hiring you for a permanent or full-time job, or to keep you in mind if a permanent job opens up in the future.

If you're participating in a workforce development program or have enrolled at an America's Job Center, you can also ask whether they have any special programs that let you get paid for doing on-the-job training or getting work experience with an employer. These programs are great because they help you to develop your job skills, get training, and practice working for an employer—and get paid at the same time! In addition, these programs can sometimes turn into longer-term employment afterward, because an employer may be more willing to hire you once you prove yourself in training.<sup>2045</sup>

HELPFUL HINT:

VII. HOW TO PROTECT YOUR RIGHTS IF YOU HAVE A DISABILITY

WHAT WILL I LEARN?

- What is considered a disability under the law
- How your disability might affect your job search
- What a “reasonable accommodation” is, and what kinds of accommodations you can request
- How to request a “reasonable accommodation,” and what you will need to show
- When an employer is NOT required to provide a “reasonable accommodation” for your disability
- What to do if an employer refuses to provide a “reasonable accommodation”
- How to learn more about your employment rights and your disability

DISABILITY & REASONABLE ACCOMMODATIONS IN EMPLOYMENT

FOR INDIVIDUALS WITH DISABILITIES: KNOW YOUR RIGHTS

- Under state and federal law, past drug addiction, alcoholism, and mental illness are considered disabilities.
- Current drug use OR using drugs or alcohol at work are NOT considered disabilities.
- An employer CANNOT discriminate against you based on a disability.
- An employer MUST provide you with “reasonable accommodations” for your disability (with 3 exceptions).
- If your conviction was CAUSED by your disability, an employer MUST make a “reasonable accommodation” for your criminal record (with 3 exceptions).
- The federal EEOC and state DFEH are the government civil rights agencies that enforce your rights against discrimination based on your disability

This section will explain the laws that protect workers (including job applicants and employees) with disabilities against employment discrimination. It will explain what types of disabilities are protected against discrimination, what your rights are if you have a disability, and what you can do if an employer violates your rights or discriminates against you based on your disability.

EMPLOYMENT DISCRIMINATION RESOURCES

Find an attorney or civil rights agency to help you

If you think an employer has illegally discriminated against you based on your disability, a lawyer could help you decide what your legal options are. There are 3 types of resources that may be able help you:

(1) Legal aid or employment attorney:

Legal aid attorneys provide FREE legal assistance to people who cannot afford to hire a lawyer (like a public defender, but for lawsuits and other civil legal cases). Many private employment attorneys only charge fees if you win or settle a case, so you may not have to pay anything out-of-pocket UNLESS you win money from the employer. To find a local legal aid attorney or employment attorney in your area:

- Call 211;
- Contact the local county bar association, or look on the State Bar website at <http://lawhelpca.org/find-legal-help>; or
- Visit the California Employment Lawyers Association website at <http://www.cela.org/?page=4>;
- For a list of legal aid offices throughout California, see PG. 1127.

You can also contact a non-profit organization that helps people who have been discriminated against by employers based on their disability:

1. Disability Rights California—Website: <http://www.disabilityrightscalifornia.org/>. Offices in Oakland, Fresno, Los Angeles, Sacramento, San Diego—see PG. 1127 for local office contact information.
2. Disability Rights Legal Center—Website: <http://www.disabilityrightslegalcenter.org/>. Phone: (213) 736-1334 or (866) 999-DRLC (3752).
3. Disability Rights Education & Defense Fund— Website: <http://dredf.org/>. Phone: (510) 644-2555.
4. Legal Aid at Work—Website: legalaidthatwork.org. Find your local clinics and helplines here: <http://legalaidthatwork.org/clinics-and-helplines/>
5. For other local organizations or clinics in your area—see PG. 1127.

(2) Government civil rights agencies

There are 2 government agencies responsible for enforcing your rights against illegal discrimination by employers. Because federal and state law are very similar, you can generally ask either agency to enforce your rights if you think an employer has illegally discriminated against you. For more information about how to report discrimination and file a complaint with the EEOC and DFEH, see PG. 612.

1. The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) is the federal agency that enforces federal civil rights laws; and
2. The Department of Fair Employment & Housing (DFEH) is the California state agency that enforces your rights under state law.
3. Non-profit organizations

WHAT IS A DISABILITY UNDER THE LAW?

California law defines a disability as any physical or mental impairment that limits one or more of your major life activities (such as walking, talking, working, or taking care of yourself).<sup>2046</sup>

What counts as a physical disability in California?

A physical impairment is any disease, physical disorder, physical condition, or disfigurement that:

- Affects one or more of your body systems (i.e. your heart, your eyes) or functions (i.e. breathing, speaking); AND
- Limits a major life activity.<sup>2047</sup>

What counts as a mental impairment?

A mental impairment is any mental or psychological condition that limits a major life activity. Examples of mental impairments are:

- Intellectual disabilities
- Brain disease
- Emotional or mental illnesses (such as schizophrenia, bipolar disorder, or clinical depression)
- Learning disabilities
- Any other mental or psychological condition that requires special attention or services (such as autism, obsessive compulsive disorder, or PTSD).<sup>2048</sup>

WHAT IS A MAJOR LIFE ACTIVITY

Under-California law, “major life activity” means those activities that are of central importance to daily life. Under California law, major life activities include any physical, mental, and social activities, and working. Examples of these activities include taking care of yourself, performing manual tasks, seeing, hearing, walking, learning, and working.

EXAMPLES OF PHYSICAL DISABILITIES:

- Deafness, blindness, missing limbs (leg, arm, finger, foot, etc.), using a wheelchair, and any bodily condition that limits your ability to see, hear, walk, talk, move around, work, or take care of yourself.
- Diseases like HIV/AIDS, epilepsy, diabetes, heart disease, cancer, or other medical conditions that limit your ability to see, hear, walk, talk, move around, work, or take care of yourself.

IMPORTANT: Disabilities based on substance abuse

Under state and federal law, the following conditions are considered disabilities that are protected against discrimination:

- PAST drug addiction (NOT current drug use)<sup>2049</sup>
- Alcoholism (past or present)<sup>2050</sup>

If you were or currently are affected by either of these conditions, you are protected against discrimination based on your condition, and employers are required to make “reasonable accommodations” for your condition.

- BUT it will NOT count as a protected disability IF:
- You are currently using illegal drugs; OR
- You use drugs or alcohol at work in violation of the employer’s rules or policies.<sup>2051</sup>

IF I HAVE A DISABILITY, HOW MIGHT THIS AFFECT MY JOB SEARCH?

State and federal laws provide special protections for job applicants and employees with disabilities. These laws require employers to make “reasonable accommodations” that allow someone with a disability to apply for and work in a job just like anyone else.

And remember, physical disabilities are not the only disabilities that are recognized. California employers are required to make “reasonable accommodations” for you if you have any of the following recognized disabilities: past drug addiction (NOT current drug use);<sup>2052</sup> alcoholism (past or present),<sup>2053</sup> or mental illness.

WHAT DO I NEED TO KNOW ABOUT THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN MY DISABILITIES AND MY CRIMINAL RECORD?

If you can show that your disability caused your conviction, you may be able to ask an employer to make “reasonable accommodations” for your situation—for example, by making an exception to a policy against hiring people with your type of conviction, or by considering your criminal record under an easier standard. At least 2 federal courts have agreed that employers can be required to provide reasonable accommodations for employees whose workplace violations were caused by prior substance abuse, after the employees had later completed rehab programs. See more examples of reasonable accommodations during the job search, and when you apply, on PG. 611.

If you have suffered from one of the conditions listed above, it is possible that your criminal conviction(s) may have been the result of your disability—in other words, you committed the offense because of your mental illness or past drug or alcohol addiction.

WHAT KINDS OF ACCOMMODATIONS CAN I REQUEST?

You can request any accommodation that is reasonable and necessary so that you can be considered for the job like any other applicant or perform the job like any other employee. Each situation is different, so the type of accommodation you request will depend on your particular circumstances and the type of work or employer involved. These are just a few examples of accommodations you may request:

- Making an exception to a hiring or employment policy that restricts applicants/employees with certain types of convictions;
- Disregarding a conviction caused by your disability;
- Considering your conviction under an easier standard;
- Giving you an opportunity to explain your conviction and provide additional (medical) evidence of your disability and rehabilitation;
- Giving you time off to attend treatment programs;
- Disregarding workplace violations caused by your disability.

The employer is not necessarily required to provide the exact accommodation that you ask for—but MUST provide an accommodation that has the same effect.<sup>2054</sup> For example, the employer might be allowed to rearrange your work schedule—rather than give you time off—so that you can attend treatment programs.

HELPFUL HINT:

You can also have someone else talk to the employer for you, to ask for the accommodation you need. In this case, you may want to ask your case manager, social worker, legal aid attorney, or another trusted person who is helping you with your job search, to speak with the employer on your behalf.

EXCEPTIONS: There are 3 situations where an employer is NOT required to provide a reasonable accommodation for your disability: 1) where the accommodation will cause the employer “Undue Hardship,” 2) where the reasonable accommodation would present a “Direct Threat” to the safety of others or property, or 3) where the employer shows that you CANNOT safely perform essential job functions. For more information about these exceptions, see Appendix U, PG. 651

After you request a reasonable accommodation, the employer has to genuinely consider your request, and talk to you about what types of accommodations could help your situation. The employer can also ask you for more information about your disability to help with the decision. An employer CANNOT simply ignore your request OR wait an unreasonable amount of time to respond, hoping that you give up.<sup>2055</sup>

If an employer decides NOT to hire you based on your disability, the employer MUST give you a chance to get a medical opinion about your condition from an independent doctor. If the employer refuses to let you get an independent opinion, it may be violating the law.<sup>2056</sup>

WHAT WILL I NEED TO SHOW TO GET A REASONABLE ACCOMMODATION?

To get a reasonable accommodation for your conviction, you must show two things:

1. Your conviction was caused by your disability. This means
  - a. Explaining to the employer that you have a disability and what the disability is; AND
  - b. Providing any documents you have regarding your disability and treatment, including:
    - o Letters from doctors or service providers (a) saying that you experienced drug or alcohol addiction, mental illness, and/or some other disability at the time of the offense, and (b) describing how your disability affected you;
    - o Letters from doctors or service providers showing that you successfully completed a rehabilitation program or are participating in effective ongoing treatment of your mental illness or other disability;
    - o Letters from doctors or service providers that show you are no longer using substances and/or you are receiving appropriate treatment to control the symptoms of your mental illness or other disability.

REMEMBER: It may be difficult to prove that your criminal conviction was caused by your drug or alcohol addiction, mental illness, or other disability. It is important that you submit as much evidence as possible! It's best if you can have a doctor submit a letter confirming that you have a disability and how it affects you.

2. The accommodation that you're asking for is "reasonable" and "necessary." This means showing that—
  - a. The change is necessary for you to apply for or work at the job on an equal basis with other applicants or employees—for example, if the employer does not make an accommodation, your application would be rejected due to your conviction history;
  - b. It's not too expensive or burdensome for the employer to make the change;
  - c. It doesn't fundamentally change the employer's business operations; AND
  - d. There is a relationship between your disability and the change you are requesting—in other words, you are only asking for an exception for the specific convictions that were caused by your disability, NOT other, unrelated convictions that you might have.<sup>2057</sup>

For more information about requesting a reasonable accommodation, see Appendix U, PG. 651. To see a sample letter requesting a reasonable accommodation, see Appendix V, PG. 652.

BUT REMEMBER: Just because you committed a criminal offense when you were suffering from a mental illness or a past drug addiction does not mean you automatically have the right to a reasonable accommodation on your job application today. It can be very difficult to prove that your disability caused your criminal offense, AND that the disability is the type that qualifies you for a reasonable accommodation. Although these reasonable accommodation requests can be difficult, it can be worth asking for them!

Remember, just like with other discrimination complaints, you only have 300 days to file a complaint with the EEOC, or 1 year to file a complaint with the DFEH! For more information about finding a legal aid or employment attorney or non-profit organization, see PG. 599 above. For more information about filing a lawsuit, see PG. 613 below.

WHAT CAN I DO IF THE EMPLOYER REFUSES TO MAKE A REASONABLE ACCOMMODATION FOR ME? HOW CAN I CHALLENGE THE DECISION?

If you believe that an employer denied your request for a reasonable accommodation due to your disability and/or your past drug use, you can file a complaint with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (federal employment protection agency) or with California's Department of Fair Employment and Housing (the state employment protection agency).<sup>2058</sup>

The complaint process is the SAME for disability discrimination (an employer's refusal to provide reasonable accommodations) as for other types of illegal discrimination based on your criminal record (e.g., discrimination based on your race, religion, sex, national origin, etc.). See PG. 594 for more information on filing a discrimination complaint with the EEOC or the DFEH and what to expect.

Even if you want to file a lawsuit against the employer, you will still have to file a complaint with the EEOC or DFEH first. (This is just like suing an employer for discrimination based on your criminal record—see PG. 598 above for more information.)

HELPFUL HINT: Should I also talk to a lawyer?

You may also want to talk to a legal aid or plaintiff's side employment lawyer to get advice about your situation. You will still have to file a complaint with the EEOC or DFEH first, before you are allowed to file a lawsuit in court against the employer. For this reason, it's important that you contact the EEOC or DFEH immediately, and then you can also talk to a lawyer to help you.

IF I TRY TO SUE THE EMPLOYER IN COURT, WHAT MUST I PROVE?

To sue an employer under the federal ADA (FHA), California's Fair Housing and Employment Act (FEHA), or other state anti-discrimination laws (such as California's Unruh Civil Rights Act),<sup>2059</sup> you must show that your status as an individual with a disability was a motivating factor in the employer's decision to deny your reasonable accommodation request.<sup>2060</sup> You must also provide evidence that your disability substantially limited your ability to live a normal life,<sup>2061</sup> that the requested accommodation is reasonable and necessary, and (for a disability related to substance abuse) that you are not currently using illegal drugs.<sup>2062</sup>

Remember, you CANNOT sue an employer in court until AFTER you've filed a complaint with the EEOC or DFEH and received a Right-to-Sue notice.

BE PREPARED: You should be prepared for the employer to argue that you do NOT have a protected disability because you are a "current user" of illegal drugs, or that you are not being treated for your mental illness.<sup>2063</sup> You can support your request by providing treatment records showing that you have not used drugs for a significant period of time, or that you are receiving treatment for your mental illness.<sup>2064</sup> You should also provide evidence of your participation in or completion of a drug abuse treatment program, or proof that you receive treatment for your mental illness.

There are many ways to prove that alcohol/drug addiction substantially limited one or more major life activities. For example, you could testify (speak in court) or write an affidavit (legal letter) about how your own addiction, at one time, made you unable to care for yourself or your family, or substantially limited one or more major body functions. You could also provide affidavits or testimony of family members or others. It is not necessary to provide evidence from a treatment program, though that certainly can be helpful.

How to Present Your Best Self: Proof of Rehabilitation

EXPUNGEMENTS, PARDONS, AND CERTIFICATES OF REHABILITATION***

If you have had your conviction expunged or pardoned, or you received a Certificate of Rehabilitation, give the employer a copy! Give them to the employer along with your completed job application or during your interview. (Important: Make sure you only give the employer a photocopy and keep the original documents for yourself.)

OTHER REHABILITATION DOCUMENTS

These include any certificates, diplomas, letters of recommendation, or other documents that show your accomplishments since your conviction, and that you have turned your life around for the better. Here are just some examples of things you can bring:

- Certificates or diplomas for any programs that you completed while inside or after your release—e.g., vocational training and job skills, anger management, substance abuse, GED classes, etc.;
- Letters of support from people who know you and can speak to your good character or work ethic—e.g., a former employer, pastor at your church, case manager or social worker, volunteer coordinator, or personal friend.
- Certificates from any professional training or school courses you've completed;
- Proof of other jobs or volunteer work that you've done since your conviction; and/or
- Discharge papers from a rehabilitation facility.
- For more suggestions about how to get evidence of rehabilitation, this guide can help you: How to Gather Evidence of Rehabilitation (Legal Action Center), available online at: http://lac.org/wp-content/uploads/2014/12/How\_to\_Gather\_Evidence\_of\_Rehabilitation\_2013.pdf

APPENDIX D

How to Present Your Best Self: Tips for Success in Job Interviews

These tips can help you succeed in job interviews, especially if you have to answer any difficult questions about your criminal record. Here are some suggested steps and tips:

STEP 1: Thoughtfully answer each interview question.

Here are some tips for addressing your criminal record and answering other tough questions during a job interview:

- Own it! Take responsibility for your actions. State the facts, but express regret for what happened. Don't get defensive.
- Don't go into details. Keep your answers short. Be honest, but only talk about necessary information based on the questions you are asked.
- Tell the employer how you have changed. Emphasize that the incident happened long ago and that you are a different person now. Explain what you learned while you were in prison/jail, and what you are doing differently now. Highlight any services that you're getting to help you move on. Paint a picture of the person you are now.
- Emphasize your qualifications. Describe the things that will make you a good employee—such as previous work experience, job training programs, or classes that you've taken. Show the employer why you are qualified for the position and will be a benefit to the company.
- Describe your hopes and dreams. Show the employer that you are in control of your life and have short-term and long-term goals. Highlight any programs or services that you're participating in to help you move on and achieve your goals. Emphasize that you would be very appreciative of the opportunity to work for them, and you will be the hardest worker they will ever have.<sup>2065</sup>
- DON'T LIE! If the employer finds out the truth (though a background check, or later on after you've been hired), they can reject or fire you for lying—regardless of your record and qualifications for the job!

The most important question of all is “Why Should I Hire You?” Remember, the most important thing to show is that you are qualified for the position and that you will benefit the employer's company if they hire you. You should also be ready to explain why you are interested in the job. Be sure you have all of these answers prepared and practice them beforehand.

IMPORTANT: What if the employer asks an illegal question or asks about something that should not have been included in your background check? See PG. Error! Bookmark not defined. for more information about what you can do in this situation.

STEP 2: Ask your own questions.

Often, employers will give you a chance to ask them questions at the end of an interview, so it's best to have several questions prepared beforehand. Here are some sample questions you can ask that demonstrate your interest in the position and the company—the answers will make you look better!

- What is most important for you (my boss) to be happy with me if I get this job?
- What would you like me to accomplish in the first couple of weeks on the job?
- Why did the person who had this job before leave?<sup>2066</sup>
- Any other questions showing that you've done your homework to research and learn about the company.
- DON'T just ask about wages, hours, or benefits!

STEP 3: Practice beforehand!

If possible, you should try to do a practice (“mock”) interview before the real thing with your case manager, social worker, counselor, or family or friends. Have the other person pretend they're the employer and ask you interview questions, so that you can practice giving your answers. Remember, even if you have your answers prepared on paper or in your head, things will sound different when you try to say them out loud!

STEP 4: Be polite and confident during the interview.

Here are some things to keep in mind when it's time for the interview:

- Dress up! Show the employer that you take yourself—and the job—seriously by presenting your most professional self. Dress like you were going to court, to church, or to some other important event.

<sup>2066</sup> Jails to Jobs, Interview Tips, http://jailstojobs.org/html/interview\_tips.html.

- Be polite! Make sure to thank the employer for giving you the chance to interview for the job, and shake the interviewer's hand. Do this BEFORE and AFTER the interview.
- Be positive and confident! Smile, make eye contact with the interviewer, and show that you are confident in your abilities to be a good employee. Go in with the mindset that you are the best applicant for the job and you will get hired.
- Take notes! Bring a pencil and paper so that you can write down any important information or questions during the interview. Always start by writing down the interviewer's name so that you can follow up afterward!

STEP 5: Follow-up after the interview.

After the interview, it's important to follow up—this will help to make sure the employer doesn't forget about you and shows you're still interested in the job.

- Send a thank you note. A thank-you note will help you stand out from other job applicants. It shows how professional and polite you are, and it gives you another opportunity to sell yourself or re-answer a question that you didn't handle very well during the interview. Address the note to the person who interviewed you (this is why it's important to write down their name during the interview).
- If you don't get the job, you might consider calling the hiring manager to ask for feedback. You could say something along the lines of: "I know you decided to hire someone else, but I just wanted to find out why I didn't get the job. I'd appreciate knowing the reason, because your feedback will help me in my job search." You may get feedback that could actually influence the employer to reconsider your application. If not, you'll at least receive some useful information that will help with future interviews.<sup>2067</sup>

Benefits for Employers: Federal Bonding Program

This section explains all the eligibility requirements of the Federal Bonding Program and how to apply for the program.

WHO IS ELIGIBLE FOR THE FEDERAL BONDING PROGRAM?

In order to be eligible for the federal bonding program, you must meet the following requirements:

1. Have a firm job offer (or be already employed) at a job that is likely to be long-term or permanent. The EDD staff will need to verify that the employer is ready to hire you (or keep you on the job) once you have bonding insurance.
2. Be qualified for the job position being offered. In other words, the only thing preventing you from getting the job is the lack of insurance.
3. The position that you are being hired for requires you to be bonded, or you are required to be bonded to remain on the job.
4. You are not commercially bondable, or could be denied commercial bonding coverage because of an arrest record or imprisonment, history of drug or alcohol abuse, poor credit history, lack of employment history, dishonorable discharge from the military, or other “risk” factors.
5. You are 18 or older and legally eligible to work in the U.S. You will have to provide proof of your legal status or documentation for authorization to work in the United States.
6. Are not self-employed or an owner/operator.<sup>2068</sup>

HOW DO I APPLY FOR THE FEDERAL BONDING PROGRAM?

STEP 1: Visit your local EDD Workforce Services location or America’s Job Center of California (formerly One-Stop Career Center). The only document you need to bring is proof of legal status or eligibility to work in the U.S. (see list of employment verification documents, Appendix A, PG. 615)<sup>2069</sup>—you do NOT need to bring any other paperwork. The EDD staff will contact the employer and/or do other research to make sure that you meet all the other eligibility requirements;

STEP 2: The EDD staff person certifies (approves) the bond; and

STEP 3: Your insurance coverage will begin as soon as you begin work.<sup>2070</sup>

Two important things about bonding:

- Your employer can only get free insurance coverage for the first 6 months that you work there; after that they will have to purchase insurance directly. If you lose your job after 6 months and you suspect that your employer dumped you so that it would not have to pay insurance, you may want to contact the EDD.
- If you switch to another job that also requires bonding, there is no guarantee that you will be able to get insurance with the new employer. The EDD will decide on a case-by-case basis whether or not to issue you another round of bonding.<sup>2071</sup> For this reason, we recommend that you only use the bonding program for jobs that are likely to be long-term or permanent—NOT for temporary positions.<sup>2072</sup>

<sup>2071</sup> Telephone call with Gil Barkley, (backup) State Bonding Coordinator, EDD, Feb. 17, 2015. The EDD will also want to make sure that the employer is not simply exploiting you for free insurance coverage and then getting rid of you after the first 6 months of free coverage is over.

The EDD is here to help you! The EDD wants to make sure that all bonding program participants are successful in their work and are treated equally by employers. If you have any questions or problems about getting bonded, contact the EDD State Bonding Coordinator at 916-654-9309.<sup>2073</sup>

LA Fair Chance Initiative for Hiring

If you are applying to a job with a company located or doing business in the City of Los Angeles, or with a company that contracts with the City of Los Angeles, read this section!

WHAT IS THE LA FAIR CHANCE INITIATIVE?

It is a new “Ban the Box” law that passed in Los Angeles in December 2016.<sup>2075</sup>

WHAT DOES THE ORDINANCE REQUIRE/PROHIBIT?

Starting January 22, 2017, most private sector employers that are doing business in the City of Los Angeles and that employ 10 or more people cannot ask about an applicant’s criminal history until they have already made a conditional offer of employment.<sup>2076</sup> Los Angeles also has separate regulations that apply to private contractors and subcontractors doing business with the City of Los Angeles.<sup>2077</sup> The new rules for contractors and subcontractors are generally the same as the ones for private employers.

SO AN EMPLOYER IN LOS ANGELES CAN NEVER ASK ABOUT MY CONVICTION HISTORY AT THE BEGINNING OF THE JOB APPLICATION PROCESS?

Although that is generally true, there are few exceptions. An employer is allowed to ask about your conviction history at the start of the application process in the following circumstances:

1. when the employer is required by law to obtain information regarding an applicant’s criminal convictions;
2. when the applicant will be required to possess or use a firearm in the course of his/her employment;
3. when the applicant is prohibited by law from holding the position sought due to a conviction, regardless of whether the conviction has been expunged, sealed, eradicated, or dismissed; or
4. when the employer is prohibited by law from hiring an applicant who has been convicted of a crime.<sup>2078</sup>

WHEN CAN AN EMPLOYER ASK ABOUT MY CONVICTION HISTORY?

Unless one of the above exceptions applies, the employer can only conduct a background check after deciding you are otherwise qualified for the position AND after extending a conditional offer of employment to you.

HOW CAN AN EMPLOYER CONSIDER MY CONVICTION HISTORY?

An employer can only consider convictions that are “substantially job-related,” and must conduct an individualized assessment, considering: the amount of time that has elapsed since the conviction; and any evidence of rehabilitation or other mitigating circumstances.

WHAT IF THE EMPLOYER DENIES ME A JOB BECAUSE OF MY CONVICTION HISTORY?

If an employer denies you the job, they must: give you a written notice of rejection that includes an individualized assessment of how the conviction is related to the job and give you copies of any documentation they used in making the decision. You then have the right to a “Fair Chance Process.” The employer must hold the job open for at least five days from the date they rescinded the offer to give you a chance to submit documentation regarding the accuracy of your criminal history and any evidence of mitigating factors. The employer is required to review any documentation you provide and reassess their decision.<sup>2079</sup>

WHAT CAN I DO IF AN EMPLOYER HAS VIOLATED THE LOS ANGELES FAIR CHANCE INITIATIVE?

You can submit a complaint form to the LA Office of Wage Standards (OWS) to start an investigation.<sup>2080</sup>

WHAT HAPPENS TO AN EMPLOYER WHO VIOLATES THE FAIR CHANCE INITIATIVE?

Prior to July 1, 2017, employers who violate the Fair Chance Initiative will receive a written warning. Starting July 1, 2017, the employers can be assessed fines that start at $500 for the first offense, up to $2000 for the third and subsequent violations.<sup>2081</sup> The Fair Chance Initiative also allows applicants/employees to bring civil actions against employers.<sup>2082</sup>

APPENDIX G

San Francisco Fair Chance Ordinance

If you are applying for a job with a company located in or doing business in the City or County of San Francisco, read this Appendix!

WHAT IS SAN FRANCISCO'S LOCAL "BAN THE BOX" LAW CALLED?

It is called San Francisco's Fair Chance Ordinance (SFFCO). It went into effect on August 13, 2014.<sup>2083</sup>

WHO DOES SFFCO APPLY TO?

SFFCO applies to private employers with 20 or more employees<sup>2084</sup> and city contractors and subcontractors<sup>2085</sup> located or doing business in the City and County of San Francisco. It does not matter where the employees are physically located, as long as the employer is located in or doing business in San Francisco.

CAN PRIVATE EMPLOYERS IN SAN FRANCISCO HAVE "BLANKET BANS" AGAINST CRIMINAL RECORDS IN A JOB AD OR SOLICITATION?

No. Employers cannot put "blanket bans" (like "no felons" or "no convictions") in any job ad or solicitation. Ads cannot directly or indirectly express that individuals with a conviction history will not be considered for employment or cannot apply for a position with that employer. The employer MUST:

- State in any job ads or solicitations that it will consider applicants with criminal histories;
- Post in any workplace a notice of your rights as a job applicant or employee under the SFFCO. (This notice must be in the language(s) that the majority of the employees speak.)

WHAT CAN'T A PRIVATE EMPLOYER IN SAN FRANCISCO ASK ME ABOUT MY CRIMINAL RECORD UNDER SFFCO?

A private employer in San Francisco may never ask about or consider:

1. An arrest not leading to a conviction (except arrests that are still pending or unresolved).
2. Participation in a diversion or deferral of judgment program. A diversion program (such as a drug rehabilitation program) helps a person charged with certain crimes avoid criminal charges—and therefore a criminal record.
3. A conviction that has been sealed, dismissed, expunged, or made inoperative.
4. Juvenile records.*
5. A conviction more than 7 years old (based on the date of sentencing).*
6. A criminal offense other than a felony/misdemeanor (for example, an infraction, which is a petty offense that usually comes with a ticket and small fine).<sup>2086</sup> *

NOTE: All records marked with a * indicate additions to the California state law protections described on PG. 564.

WHAT CAN A PRIVATE EMPLOYER IN SAN FRANCISCO ASK ME ABOUT MY CRIMINAL RECORD?

AFTER you are found to be qualified for the job, a live interview has been conducted, or a "conditional offer" of employment has been made, only then can a private employer in San Francisco ask about and consider information from your criminal record—it can only consider the following:

1. Your conviction history from the last 0-7 years (based on date of sentencing)—so long as it is not one of the 6 things a private employer in San Francisco can NEVER ask about (listed above) and is directly related to your ability to do the job.
2. Your pending or unresolved arrests—if directly related to your ability to do the job.<sup>2087</sup>

ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENT: If a private employer in San Francisco decides to ask about and consider your conviction history from 0-7 years ago or any pending/unresolved arrests, then the employer must also consider:

1. Only "directly-related convictions"—those that directly and negatively relate to your ability to perform duties essential to the job. For example: Will the job give you an opportunity to commit the same crime?

Are the factors that led to your crime likely to recur at this particular job? If not, then the employer cannot consider those convictions;

2. The time that has passed since your conviction; AND
3. Any evidence of errors in your record, your rehabilitation efforts, or other helpful information you offer. This would include things like:
  - a) Completion of parole or probation;
  - b) Recommendations from employers;
  - c) Education or vocational training;
  - d) Completion or active participation in rehabilitation programs;
  - e) Letters of recommendation from organizations or individuals who have interacted with you since your conviction.

WHEN CAN A PRIVATE EMPLOYER IN SAN FRANCISCO ASK ABOUT MY CRIMINAL RECORD? WHAT DOES THE PROCESS LOOK LIKE?

PHASE 1: At the beginning of the hiring process, a private employer located or doing business in San Francisco cannot ask about:

1. Your conviction history – meaning the employer cannot ask about your criminal convictions on a job application form, during a job screening, in an informal conversation, or otherwise.
2. Your pending or unresolved arrests, whether in a job application form, during a job screening, in an informal conversation, or otherwise.<sup>2088</sup>

PHASE 2: The employer must decide that you meet the minimum qualifications for the job, conduct a live interview, or make a conditional offer of employment before asking about or considering certain information in your criminal record.

PHASE 3: Before a private employer in San Francisco can ask about your convictions from 0-7 years ago or any unresolved arrests that directly relate to your ability to do the job, it must:

1. Give you notice of the Fair Chance Ordinance; and
2. Give you notice that follows the requirements of California state and U.S. federal laws governing employment background checks.

PHASE 4: Only AFTER a private employer in San Francisco has conducted a live interview or made a conditional offer of employment AND has given you all the required notice under federal law, state law, and the SFFCO law, can the employer use information in a background check report, ask about, and consider:

1. Your conviction history from the last 0-7 years, if it is outside of the 6 things you can never ask about (discussed above) AND if it directly relates to your ability to do the job.
2. Your pending or unresolved arrests, if they directly relate to your ability to do the job.<sup>2089</sup>

PHASE 5: Before a private employer in San Francisco fires, refuses to hire, chooses not to promote, or takes other action that harms you based on a conviction history from 0-7 years ago or an unresolved arrest, the employer must give you an opportunity to present evidence that:

- The information is inaccurate;
- You have been rehabilitated, including letters of support and other evidence that you have:
  - Satisfied and completed the terms of parole/probation;
  - Received education and/or training;
  - Participated in alcohol or drug treatment programs;
  - Letters of recommendation;
  - Been free of criminal behavior for a sufficient time period to have changed, based on your age at the time of the conviction; and
- All other mitigating factors that led to the conviction and explain or reduce the severity of your criminal behavior, including evidence of:
  - Coercion (you were forced or threatened into doing the illegal act);
  - Physical or emotional abuse (you were experiencing physical or emotional violence that led him/her to do the illegal act); and/or
  - Untreated substance abuse/mental illness that contributed to the conviction (you were addicted to drugs or alcohol, or had a serious mental health issue, and had not received specialized health care treatment for one of those issues).<sup>2090</sup>

WHAT IF THE EMPLOYER STILL DECIDES TO NOT HIRE OR PROMOTE ME, FIRES ME, OR TAKES SOME OTHER NEGATIVE EMPLOYMENT ACTION AGAINST ME?

Before the employer makes a final decision about any negative action against you, it must:

1. Give you with a copy of the background check report that it based its decision on;
2. Notify you that it intends to take negative action against you;
3. Tell you why you were denied (what the exact issue was in your conviction history); and
4. Give you 7 days to provide information about any errors in your report or your rehabilitation efforts.

WHAT HAPPENS AFTER THE 7 DAYS?

The employer may take a reasonable amount of time to reconsider your application in light of any additional information you have offered. It is recommended that you use that one-week period to be very proactive in clearing up information in your record, providing evidence of errors or rehabilitation, etc. If the employer still decides not to hire you based on your conviction history and all the information you have provided, it must give you final notice of its decision.

WHAT YOU CAN DO IF AN EMPLOYER VIOLATED THE SAN FRANCISCO FAIR CHANCE ORDINANCE (SFFCO):

WHAT CAN I DO IF I THINK A SAN FRANCISCO EMPLOYER HAS VIOLATED THE SFFCO?

You can report the violation to San Francisco's Office of Labor Standards Enforcement (OSLE), and you have 60 days to do so. Call the OSLE office at (415) 554-5192. You can also email the office at fce@sfgov.org (see the OSLE website at: www.sfgov.org/olse/fco for more information).

CAN THE EMPLOYER RETALIATE AGAINST ME FOR REPORTING A VIOLATION TO THE OSLE?

No. An employer may not retaliate against you for exercising your legal rights or for cooperating with the Office of Labor Standards Enforcement (OSLE).

WHAT HAPPENS WHEN I REPORT A VIOLATION?

First, San Francisco's OLSE will investigate the employer. Second, if the OLSE finds a violation, it may "order any appropriate relief." This usually means that the OLSE will give a warning or fine the employer:

- If it is the employer's first violation, or if it occurs before August 13, 2015 (any time in the first year that the SFFCO law is in effect), the OLSE will issue a warning and give the employer a chance to change its policies.
- If there are additional violations after the first warning, the OLSE will begin fining the employer for each violation.
- If the employer refuses to comply in a timely manner, OLSE may refer the case to the City Attorney to file a civil action against the employer for relief.

CAN OLSE FORCE THE EMPLOYER TO GIVE ME THE JOB?

Probably not. In general, OLSE will NOT force an employer to hire someone, even if the employer violated the law by rejecting you for the job. However, OLSE has been very successful at resolving violations informally, simply by talking with the employer and applicant. For example, OLSE might ask the employer to reconsider your application, give you the opportunity to apply for another job, or let you submit a new application without prejudice.<sup>2091</sup>

NOTE: GOOD FAITH MISTAKES ARE OKAY.

There is no punishment for mistakenly accusing an employer of violating the SFFCO, so long as the mistake was in good faith (meaning you weren't being malicious or trying to abuse or harass the employer).

<sup>2091</sup> Telephone call with Donna Mandel, Compliance Officer, SF Office of Labor Standards (Feb. 20, 2015). In addition, the law has an unfortunate loophole that allows employers to lawfully reject an applicant if the conviction is "directly-related" the position, and OLSE has NO authority to judge or enforce what qualifies as a "directly-related conviction." S.F. POLICE CODE §§ 4904(f), 4909(a)(1) (San Francisco's Fair Chance Ordinance, effective Aug. 13, 2014).

APPENDIX H

City of Richmond, CA: “Ban the Box” Ordinance

If you are applying to a job with a company located or doing business in the City of Richmond, read this!

WHAT IS THE CITY OF RICHMOND’S LOCAL “BAN THE BOX” ORDINANCE?

It is a law (a city ordinance) that prevents certain types of employers—all contractors and subcontractors getting money from the City of Richmond, with at 10 or more full-time employees—from asking about criminal convictions in the initial job application.<sup>2092</sup>

WHAT DOES THE ORDINANCE REQUIRE/PROHIBIT?

The Richmond “Ban the Box” law prohibits these types of employers (city-paid contractors and subcontractors) from asking any questions regarding prior criminal convictions on any printed or online employment application forms. The ordinance prohibits employers from making “any inquiry into an applicant’s conviction history.”<sup>2093</sup>

SO AN EMPLOYER IN RICHMOND CAN NEVER ASK ABOUT MY CONVICTION HISTORY?

Not exactly. There are exceptions:

Exception 1: The Richmond ordinance does not prohibit employers who are required by state or federal law to conduct background checks from looking into your conviction history.<sup>2094</sup>

Exception 2: The ordinance does not prohibit employers looking to fill “Sensitive Positions” from considering your conviction history. A “Sensitive” position is a position that has one or more of the following job characteristics:

- Regular unsupervised handling of large amounts of cash;
- Regular unsupervised handling of other people’s private, personal, and confidential information
- Regular unsupervised contact with children under 16;
- Regular unsupervised contact with the elderly or disabled;
- Regular unsupervised responsibility for operating a bus, taxi, or limousine used to transport the general public;
- Any position in a business that requires regular unsupervised entry into private premises;
- Any position in a business that involves unsupervised handling of hazardous substances.

WHEN CAN AN EMPLOYER ASK ABOUT MY CONVICTION HISTORY?

If the employer falls under one of the exceptions, the employer can only conduct a background check after determining you are otherwise qualified for the position AND after extending a conditional offer of employment to you.

HOW CAN AN EMPLOYER CONSIDER MY CONVICTION HISTORY?

An employer can only consider convictions that are “substantially job-related,” and must conduct an individualized assessment, considering: the amount of time that has elapsed since the conviction; and any evidence of rehabilitation or other mitigating circumstances.

WHAT IF THE EMPLOYER DENIES ME A JOB BECAUSE OF MY CONVICTION HISTORY?

If an employer denies you a job because of a substantially job-related conviction, it must: give you a written notice of rejection, including how the conviction is related to the job; and give you the opportunity to correct any mistakes in your record and offer evidence of rehabilitation or other mitigating circumstances.

WHAT CAN I DO IF AN EMPLOYER HAS VIOLATED THE RICHMOND ORDINANCE?

The most obvious violation of the ordinance is failure to remove all questions regarding criminal history on the initial job application. Although all employers must file a copy of their standard application with the city as part of the formal bidding process, mistakes can happen. If you think a covered employer in Richmond has violated the ordinance, contact the City Manager (Bill Lindsay at the time of publication):

WHAT HAPPENS TO AN EMPLOYER WHO VIOLATES THE RICHMOND ORDINANCE?

Employers have 30 days from receiving the notice of a violation to comply with the ordinance. The Richmond City Manager also has the legal authority to fine employers, to suspend or terminate their lease or contract with the city, to deny future leases or contracts, or to order any other legal remedy available.

A Summary of Your Rights Under the Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA)

Employers must give you this document with the Pre-Adverse Action letter before taking any adverse action against you based on the results of your background check.

A Summary of Your Rights Under the Fair Credit Reporting Act

The federal Fair Credit Reporting Act (FCRA) promotes the accuracy, fairness, and privacy of information in the files of consumer reporting agencies. There are many types of consumer reporting agencies, including credit bureaus and specialty agencies (such as agencies that sell information about check writing histories, medical records, and rental history records). Here is a summary of your major rights under the FCRA. For more information, including information about additional rights, go to www.ftc.gov/credit or write to: Consumer Response Center, Room 130-A, Federal Trade Commission, 600 Pennsylvania Ave. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20580.

- You must be told if information in your file has been used against you. Anyone who uses a credit report or another type of consumer report to deny your application for credit, insurance, or employment – or to take another adverse action against you – must tell you, and must give you the name, address, and phone number of the agency that provided the information.
- You have the right to know what is in your file. You may request and obtain all the information about you in the files of a consumer reporting agency (your “file disclosure”). You will be required to provide proper identification, which may include your Social Security number. In many cases, the disclosure will be free. You are entitled to a free file disclosure if:
  - a person has taken adverse action against you because of information in your credit report;
  - you are the victim of identify theft and place a fraud alert in your file;
  - your file contains inaccurate information as a result of fraud;
  - you are on public assistance;
  - you are unemployed but expect to apply for employment within 60 days.
 In addition, by September 2005 all consumers will be entitled to one free disclosure every 12 months upon request from each nationwide credit bureau and from nationwide specialty consumer reporting agencies. See www.ftc.gov/credit for additional information.
- You have the right to ask for a credit score. Credit scores are numerical summaries of your credit-worthiness based on information from credit bureaus. You may request a credit score from consumer reporting agencies that create scores or distribute scores used in residential real property loans, but you will have to pay for it. In some mortgage transactions, you will receive credit score information for free from the mortgage lender.
- You have the right to dispute incomplete or inaccurate information. If you identify information in your file that is incomplete or inaccurate, and report it to the consumer reporting agency, the agency must investigate unless your dispute is frivolous. See www.ftc.gov/credit for an explanation of dispute procedures.
- Consumer reporting agencies must correct or delete inaccurate, incomplete, or unverifiable information. Inaccurate, incomplete or unverifiable information must be removed or corrected, usually within 30 days. However, a consumer reporting agency may continue to report information it has verified as accurate.

- Consumer reporting agencies may not report outdated negative information. In most cases, a consumer reporting agency may not report negative information that is more than seven years old, or bankruptcies that are more than 10 years old.
- Access to your file is limited. A consumer reporting agency may provide information about you only to people with a valid need -- usually to consider an application with a creditor, insurer, employer, landlord, or other business. The FCRA specifies those with a valid need for access.
- You must give your consent for reports to be provided to employers. A consumer reporting agency may not give out information about you to your employer, or a potential employer, without your written consent given to the employer. Written consent generally is not required in the trucking industry. For more information, go to www.ftc.gov/credit.
- You may limit “prescreened” offers of credit and insurance you get based on information in your credit report. Unsolicited “prescreened” offers for credit and insurance must include a toll-free phone number you can call if you choose to remove your name and address from the lists these offers are based on. You may opt-out with the nationwide credit bureaus at 1-888-5-OPTOUT (1-888-567-8688).
- You may seek damages from violators. If a consumer reporting agency, or, in some cases, a user of consumer reports or a furnisher of information to a consumer reporting agency violates the FCRA, you may be able to sue in state or federal court.
- Identity theft victims and active duty military personnel have additional rights. For more information, visit www.ftc.gov/credit.

States may enforce the FCRA, and many states have their own consumer reporting laws. In some cases, you may have more rights under state law. For more information, contact your state or local consumer protection agency or your state Attorney General. Federal enforcers are:

APPENDIX J

Civil Rights Law that Governs Employers' Hiring Decisions: Title VII

This section will explain Title VII, which is the federal civil rights law that governs employers' hiring and employment decisions related to your criminal record.

WHAT IS TITLE VII?

Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964 is a federal law that prohibits discrimination in employment on the basis of a person's race, color, religion, sex, or national origin.<sup>2095</sup> Title VII protects the rights of employees AND job applicants against discrimination by employers.

WHAT EMPLOYERS HAVE TO FOLLOW TITLE VII RULES?

Title VII applies to all private and public employers with 15 or more employees. This includes federal, state, and local governments; private and public colleges and universities; employment agencies; and labor organizations (unions).<sup>2096</sup>

WHAT IS CONSIDERED A VIOLATION OF TITLE VII?

Title VII violations can occur in two situations: where there is disparate treatment (unequal treatment) OR where there is disparate impact (unequal impact).

Disparate Treatment Discrimination (Unequal Treatment):

An employer might be engaging in disparate treatment discrimination if they treat you and your criminal history differently than they treat other applicants with similar criminal records, because of your race, color, religion, sex, or national origin. For example, if an employer rejects a Black applicant based on his/her criminal record, but then hires a White applicant with similar qualifications and a similar criminal record, the employer is likely violating Title VII by illegally treating one person's criminal history more negatively because of his/her race. Similarly, an employer may be violating Title VII if they only do background checks for Black or Latino applicants, but do not run background checks on White applicants for the same position.

Disparate Impact Discrimination (Unequal Impact):

An employer might be engaging in disparate impact discrimination if they have a policy of not hiring people with certain kinds of criminal histories, and that policy is more harmful to people of a certain race, color, religion, sex, or national origin.<sup>2097</sup> For example, employers who have a "blanket ban" policy that excludes all applicants with criminal records would cause greater harm to Black and Latino applicants, who are incarcerated at dramatically higher rates than people of other races in the United States.<sup>2098</sup> However, an employer may legally exclude certain job applicants based on their criminal history if the employer shows that doing so is necessary for the specific position and business.

APPENDIX K

Civil Rights Law that Governs Employers' Hiring Decisions: EEOC Enforcement Guidance

This section will explain the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) and the EEOC Enforcement Guidance. The EEOC is the federal government agency responsible for enforcing the civil rights of job applicants and employees. The EEOC Enforcement Guidance is a report that explains how and when employers can consider your criminal record when deciding whether to hire or fire you.

WHAT IS THE EQUAL EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITY COMMISSION (EEOC)?

The EEOC is a government agency that enforces Title VII and other civil rights laws that prohibit illegal discrimination against job applicants and employees. These laws protect you against unfair treatment based on your race, color, religion, sex (including pregnancy), national origin, age (40 or older), disability, or genetic information.<sup>2099</sup> California law requires employers to fully follow all federal laws regarding how employers can consider your criminal history when hiring. This means that all employers must follow the EEOC guidelines, or else they have broken both federal and state law.<sup>2100</sup>

WHAT IS EEOC ENFORCEMENT GUIDANCE?

The EEOC investigates claims of discrimination by employers, and also issues special guidelines and “enforcement guidance” reports for employers to help them follow Title VII and other civil rights laws.<sup>2101</sup> The EEOC’s Enforcement Guidance is a report that describes how and when employers can use your criminal record to make employment decisions. The Enforcement Guidance says that—before making any negative decision based on your record, such as rejecting your job application—an employer must consider the nature of your conviction, the type of job you’ve applied for, and how much time has passed since the conviction.<sup>2102</sup> The employer should also consider your individual situation and give you a chance to explain yourself, including the circumstances of your conviction and why you would still be a good employee.<sup>2103</sup> However, the Enforcement Guidance does NOT have the same power as an actual law—it is basically a set of recommended rules for how employers should act and how courts should enforce the law. Courts should consider the Enforcement Guidance and may be persuaded to follow the EEOC’s recommendations, but they are not required to follow these rules.

APPENDIX O

Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC) Complaint Process

This section will explain the process for filing a discrimination complaint with the federal EEOC (Equal Employment Opportunity Commission).

STEP 1: Filing a Complaint.

The process begins when you contact the EEOC and file a formal complaint, called a "Charge of Discrimination," following the steps described in the previous question. When you file your complaint, the EEOC will give you a copy of the complaint, along with your charge number (which is the number used to identify your case).

STEP 2: Notice to the Employer & Mediation.

Within 10 days, the EEOC will also send a notice and a copy of the charge to the employer. The EEOC may ask both you and the employer to agree to participate in mediation, which is an informal way of trying to resolve the problem instead of filing a lawsuit.

What happens in mediation? Mediation is an informal way for people to resolve problems with the help of a neutral person (a mediator) who is trained to help people discuss their differences. If you and the employer agree to mediation, the mediator will try to help you both reach a voluntary resolution (settlement agreement). The mediator does not decide who is right or wrong or make a decision about your complaint. Instead, the mediator helps you and the employer work out your own solution to the problem.

Everything that happens in mediation is confidential and free. Mediation can also be a faster way of resolving the dispute, since it usually takes less than 3 months to settle a complaint through mediation. If you and the employer cannot reach an agreement, the EEOC will continue to investigate your case just like any other.<sup>2104</sup>

STEP 3: Employer's Response.

If your case is not sent to mediation, or if mediation doesn't resolve the problem, the EEOC will ask the employer to respond (submit a written answer) to your complaint, and answer any questions that the EEOC has about your complaint. Then your complaint will be given to an EEOC investigator for investigation.<sup>2105</sup>

STEP 4: Investigation.

How the EEOC investigates a complaint depends on the specific facts of your case and the kinds of information that will be helpful. In some cases, an EEOC representative may visit the employer, interview other employees or witnesses, gather documents, and/or take other steps to find out whether the employer committed illegal discrimination. The EEOC may also interview you again, or ask you for other documents or information—so it's very important to cooperate and keep in touch!

How long will the investigation take? How long the investigation takes depends on a lot of different things, including the amount of information that the EEOC needs to get and evaluate. It may take up to 6 months or longer to investigate a charge.<sup>2106</sup>

What if the employer refuses to cooperate with the investigation? If an employer refuses to cooperate with an EEOC investigation, the EEOC can issue a subpoena (legal order) that requires the employer to turn over documents and information and/or answer legal questions, and allows the EEOC to enter the employer's facilities.

STEP 5: Decision.

After the investigation is completed, the EEOC will issue a decision, and let you and the employer know the results. The decision will say either:

- NO CAUSE—meaning the EEOC did NOT find any evidence that the employer illegally discriminated against you; or
- REASONABLE CAUSE—meaning the EEOC thinks the employer DID illegally discriminate against you.

STEP 6: Your Options After the EEOC Decision.

Depending on what the EEOC decision says, these are your options:

- NO CAUSE decision—If the EEOC does NOT find that the employer illegally discriminated against you, it will send you a Right-to-Sue notice. This notice allows you to file a lawsuit in court against the employer on your own. (However, it may be difficult to win in court without the EEOC's support.) You must file a lawsuit within 90 days (approximately 3 months) of receiving the Right-to-Sue Notice; otherwise it will be too late.

- REASONABLE CAUSE decision—If the EEOC finds that the employer DID illegally discriminate against you, it will first try to reach a voluntary settlement (called “conciliation”) with the employer. Conciliation usually means that the employer agrees to pay you to cover the harm from the discrimination.
- If the EEOC can’t reach a settlement with the employer, the EEOC’s lawyers may decide to file a lawsuit against the employer on your behalf. If the EEOC decides not to file a lawsuit, it will give you a Right-to-Sue notice, which allows you to file a lawsuit against the employer on your own. You must file a lawsuit within 90 days (approximately 3 months) of receiving the Right-to-Sue Notice; otherwise it will be too late.<sup>2107</sup>

THIS CHART SUMMARIZES WHAT HAPPENS AT THE END OF AN EEOC INVESTIGATION:

EEOC Decision	What it means	What happens next	What your options are
No cause	EEOC does NOT think that the employer illegally discriminated against you	EEOC gives you Right-to-Sue notice	You can file a lawsuit against the employer, but you only have 90 days
Reasonable cause	EEOC thinks the employer DID illegally discriminate against you	1) EEOC tries to settle with employer. 2) If they can’t settle: > EEOC files lawsuit against employer; OR > EEOC gives you Right-to-Sue notice	If EEOC does NOT settle and does NOT file a lawsuit, you can file a lawsuit against the employer. You must file the lawsuit within 90 days of receiving the Right-to-Sue notice.

APPENDIX P

California Department of Fair Employment and Housing (DFEH) Complaint Process

This section will explain the process for filing a discrimination complaint with the California DFEH (Department of Fair Employment & Housing).<sup>2108</sup> The DFEH complaint process is very similar to the EEOC process, and can even happen at the same time.

STEP 1: Report Discrimination.

The DFEH process begins when you contact the DFEH to report the discrimination and file a “Pre-Complaint Inquiry.” You can do this by mail, by phone, or online:

- Mail: Fill out a Pre-Complaint Inquiry form and mail it to any local DFEH office. A listing of local DFEH offices can be found in Appendix M, PG. 638.<sup>2109</sup>
- Phone: Call the DFEH Communication Center at (800) 884-1684. If you have a hearing impairment, call 800-884-1684 or TTY at (800) 700-2320 for service.
- Online: Use the DFEH’s online system (available at <http://esq5.houdiniesq.com/dfeh/intake/>), or email the Pre-Complaint Inquiry form to contact.center@dfeh.ca.gov.

STEP 2: Filing an Official Complaint.

Within 10 days, a DFEH investigator will contact you to conduct an intake interview, in order to learn more about your situation and the possible discrimination. The investigator will decide whether state and federal civil rights laws cover your situation.

If the DFEH accepts your complaint, the investigator will type up an official complaint for you to sign. If the DFEH does NOT accept your complaint, it does not mean that you weren’t treated unfairly—only that your situation is not covered by the civil rights laws that the DFEH enforces.

Can I go straight to court and file a lawsuit on my own?

Under California law (just like Title VII), you must first file a complaint with DFEH before you can go to court (this is called “exhausting your administrative remedies”).<sup>2110</sup> However, once you file your complaint, you can ask the DFEH for a Right-to-Sue notice right away, which allows you to file a lawsuit in court on your own. Once you receive a Right-to-Sue notice, you have only 1 year to file your lawsuit in court.<sup>2111</sup>

IMPORTANT: If you request a Right-to-Sue notice, the DFEH will close your case and will NOT investigate further (even if you later decide not to file a lawsuit). Therefore, it is recommended that you only request a Right-to-Sue notice if you have a lawyer to represent you in court.<sup>2112</sup>

STEP 3: Employer’s Response.

The DFEH will give a copy of your complaint to the employer. The employer must respond to the complaint, and has the opportunity to voluntarily resolve the problem now or at any time during the rest of the case. The DFEH will also file a copy of your complaint with the EEOC if it looks like Title VII covers your complaint.<sup>2113</sup>

STEP 4: Investigation.

The DFEH will investigate your complaint. The investigation may include conducting interviews with people and gathering documents or other information. The DFEH must complete its investigation within 1 year from the date when you filed your official complaint. Before the DFEH notifies you of the results of the investigation, it will give you and the employer the chance to voluntarily resolve the problem by reaching an agreement through informal negotiations (“mediation” or “conciliation”).

<sup>2113</sup> In most cases, state and federal civil rights laws are very similar, so any discrimination would violate both California state law and federal Title VII. In these situations, the DFEH will also file your complaint with the EEOC. However, there are some situations where California law provides MORE protection than federal law, so certain behavior by an employer would only violate state law but NOT Title VII. In these situations, the DFEH will investigate your complaint on its own, but will not file a copy of the complaint with the EEOC.

STEP 5: After the Investigation.

Depending on what the DFEH finds during its investigation, this is what will happen next:

- If the investigation shows that the employer DID violate the law, the DFEH will try to resolve the complaint through “conciliation” (voluntary agreement) with the employer (see Step 6).
- If the investigation shows that the employer did NOT violate the law, the DFEH will close your case and give you a Right-to-Sue notice. The Right-to-Sue notice allows you to file a lawsuit in court against the employer on your own.

STEP 6: Conciliation.

During conciliation, the DFEH will attempt to resolve your complaint by reaching a voluntary settlement agreement with the employer. (This is just like what happens in the EEOC complaint process, after the EEOC makes a Reasonable Cause decision.)

STEP 7: Possible Litigation.

If the DFEH cannot reach an agreement with the employer, it may decide to file a lawsuit against the employer on your behalf. If the DFEH does not file a lawsuit against the employer, it will give you a Right-to-Sue notice that allows you to file a lawsuit in court on your own.<sup>2114</sup>

APPENDIX Q

Professional/Occupational Licensing—Appeals Process

This section will give you an overview of the appeals process if the licensing board denies your application for a professional or occupational license.

Note: Each licensing agency is different! This is just a general overview to prepare you for what the process is like, but it will be slightly different in every situation.

STEP 1: Notice.

If a licensing board decides to deny your license, it must notify you in one of the following ways:<sup>2115</sup>

- Statement of Issues: The board files and serves you with a formal written statement of the board’s decision to deny you a license. It must specify any rules or statutes that you are not in compliance with, and the facts that authorize the denial. The statement of issues initiates a formal hearing on the matter;<sup>2116</sup> or
- Informal notice of denial: The board serves you with a written notice of denial, but does not file the notice with the court. The notice must state: the reason for the denial and your right to request a hearing on the denial.<sup>2117</sup>

STEP 2: Notice of Defense or Request for a Hearing

- Notice of Defense: If the board files and serves you with a formal statement of issues, you have 15 days to file what is called a “Notice of Defense” with the board, which means you want a formal hearing on the matter. If you do not file a Notice of Defense (or file it late, past the 15 days allowed), you will give up your right to a hearing (called a “default”). The licensing board can take whatever action it pleases, which is usually the harshest, i.e. denial of your license, and you can’t challenge it. (Note: a licensing board has discretion to allow/honor late notices and to grant a hearing after a default, but chances are slim.) Typically a generic notice of default “postcard” is included with the statement. This is the easiest way to preserve your right. The notice of defense need only contain your address and signature to be sufficient.<sup>2118</sup>
- Written Request for a Hearing: If the board does not file a formal statement of issues, but instead sends you an informal notice of denial, you have 60 days to file a written request for a hearing with the board.

STEP 3: Stipulated Settlement.

In many cases, you can resolve your case before by agreeing to a voluntary settlement (called a “stipulated settlement”) with the licensing board. A stipulated settlement is sort of like a plea bargain—you admit to doing something wrong, and you agree to accept a certain amount of punishment from the board. Often this means that you will get your license on a conditional basis for a certain amount of time (a “probation” period).

You will have to meet certain requirements—such as participating in counseling or other behavioral programs, taking specific classes or exams, having your work monitored by a supervisor, getting drug tested, completing community service, and/or temporary suspension—during the probation period.<sup>2119</sup> If you complete all the requirements, you can get your full license back. If you do NOT complete the requirements, the board can revoke your license.<sup>2120</sup>

A stipulated settlement can be complicated, so it is recommended to have a lawyer represent you. You may be able to negotiate certain parts of the settlement agreement—such as what wrongdoing you will admit to; what conditions you will have to complete during the probation period; and how much you will have to pay in recovery costs to get your license. If you reach this point, you should think about what issues are most important to you—for example, whether you want the shortest possible probation, or to pay the smallest amount, or to avoid admitting certain wrongdoing.<sup>2121</sup>

<sup>2120</sup> You will have the right to notice and a hearing before the board revokes your license.

Ray, The Stipulated Settlement, California License Law Blog, <http://www.californialicenselawblog.com/tags/stipulated-settlement/>.

STEP 4: The Formal Hearing.

If you don't reach a stipulated settlement with the licensing board, you will have a formal administrative hearing. An administrative hearing is somewhat like a trial. There will be a judge and a court reporter. The board will be represented either by in-house counsel (its own attorney) or the California Attorney General (like a prosecutor for the entire state). You are allowed to have an attorney also, but you are not entitled to one, so you will have to pay for your attorney yourself. Both sides will present evidence, put on witnesses (if necessary), and make arguments.<sup>2122</sup>

STEP 5: The Decision.

After the case is presented, the administrative law judge (ALJ) will issue an advisory decision within about 30 days.<sup>2123</sup>

Getting Funding for a Small Business

Some organizations and government agencies provide money to small businesses and people trying to start their own business. Sometimes the funding is through grants—money that you do NOT have to repay, but generally must use in a certain way related to the business. More often, the funding is through loans—money that you DO have to repay (usually with interest) in the future.

Unfortunately, it can be difficult to get loans depending on your conviction record. One place to start is the U.S. Small Business Administration, which is planning to change its policy to allow people on probation or parole to be eligible for microloans of up to $50,000.<sup>2124</sup> However, you may still be denied if you've been convicted of a felony "crime of moral turpitude" (i.e., involving violence or dishonesty).<sup>2125</sup> For this reason, it may be helpful to contact one of the entrepreneurship programs listed to see if they have suggestions or resources to find funding.

Alternatives to Traditional Employment: Becoming an Independent Contractor

If you're considering working as an independent contractor, or if you want to know more about the difference between an independent contractor and a traditional employee, you should read this section to understand your rights and responsibilities!

EMPLOYEES VS. INDEPENDENT CONTRACTORS—WHAT'S THE DIFFERENCE?

In some cases, an employer may claim that they are hiring you as an independent contractor—NOT as a regular employee. Employers like to do this because it means they have fewer responsibilities, and you have fewer rights, if you are an independent contractor—and often they will misclassify you in order to avoid following the law! For this reason, it's important that you know the difference so that you don't get exploited!

In general, you are an employee (NOT an independent contractor) if the following are true:

- The employer decides what tasks and assignments you do and directs your work;
- The employer controls how, where, and when you do your work;
- The employer supervises your work, and you're required to follow their instructions;
- The employer trains you in how to do your work;
- The employer provides you with any necessary equipment, tools, and other materials;
- The work you do is a regular and necessary part of the employer's business—not just a side activity;
- The employer sets your hours and pays you a set wage or salary;
- The employer has the right to fire you—and you have the right to quit—at any time.<sup>2126</sup>

In addition, the law generally presumes that you are an employee—and NOT an independent contractor—unless specific factors show otherwise.<sup>2127</sup>

IMPORTANT: Whether you are an employee or an independent contractor depends on the specific details of your work situation and your relationship with the employer—NOT on what the employer calls you!

WHAT ARE MY RIGHTS AS AN EMPLOYEE (VS. AN INDEPENDENT CONTRACTOR)?

As an employee, you have the right to be paid minimum wage and overtime, receive meal periods and rest breaks, and get reimbursed by the employer for any work-related expenses (such as purchasing a required uniform). You also have the right to receive workers compensation insurance, unemployment insurance, disability insurance, and social security, and the employer is required withhold payroll taxes (which are taken out of your paycheck) and send these payments to the government.

WHAT ARE MY RESPONSIBILITIES AS AN INDEPENDENT CONTRACTOR (VS. AN EMPLOYEE)?

On the other hand, if you are an independent contractor, you are NOT protected by minimum wage, overtime, and other labor laws. In addition, you have certain responsibilities—like filing self-employment taxes and reporting certain business information to the government—that you must follow. For more information about the legal responsibilities of an independent contractor, visit the EDD website on independent contractor reporting at http://www.edd.ca.gov/payroll\_taxes/faq\_-\_california\_independent\_contractor\_reporting.htm#Whohastoreport.

WHAT CAN I DO IF I THINK AN EMPLOYER HAS VIOLATED MY RIGHTS AS AN EMPLOYEE OR WRONGLY CLASSIFIED ME AS AN INDEPENDENT CONTRACTOR?

The California Division of Labor Standards Enforcement (DLSE) is the state agency responsible for enforcing your rights in the workplace. If you think an employer has violated your rights as an employee, wrongly classified you as an independent contractor, and/or for more information, you can contact your local DLSE office and speak with Deputy Labor Commissioner. To find a local DLSE office near you, go to <http://www.dir.ca.gov/dlse/DistrictOffices.htm> or call 1-844-LABOR-DIR (1-844-522-6734) for assistance.

For more information about your rights in the workplace, contact The Legal Aid Society—Employment Law Center's Workers Rights Clinic at 415-864-8208 (San Francisco Bay Area) or 866-864-8208 (toll free in CA). Or contact a local legal aid or employment attorney in your area.

Employment Rights for People with Disabilities: Exceptions Where an Employer Does Not Have to Provide a Reasonable Accommodation to an Employee

There are 3 situations where an employer is NOT required to provide a reasonable accommodation for your disability: the “Undue Hardship” exception, the “Direct Threat” exception, and the exception for when the employer shows you CANNOT safely perform essential job functions. This section explains each exception.

(1) UNDUE HARDSHIP

An employer does NOT have to provide a reasonable accommodation that would cause an “undue hardship” to the employer. There is no single definition of “undue hardship”—it is a case-by-case question that depends on the type of accommodation you’re requesting and the employer’s particular situation—e.g., what type of business it is, how many employees, the employer’s financial situation, etc. In general, however, an undue hardship means that the accommodation you want would be too expensive or difficult for the employer make, or would have a significant impact on the employer’s business, or would be too disruptive to the business or to the work of other employees.

However, an employer CANNOT claim undue hardship based on employees’ (or customers’) fears or prejudices about your disability (e.g., fears or prejudices about people with past addictions or mental health issues). Also, an employer CANNOT claim that other employees would be upset about giving you an accommodation. Finally, an employer CANNOT claim that making an accommodation—for example, hiring someone with a criminal conviction—would cause their insurance premiums to go up.<sup>2128</sup>

Important: Even if an employer can show that the particular accommodation you asked for would cause undue hardship, the employer may still have to provide a different accommodation if there is some other type of accommodation that would also be effective and would NOT cause a hardship.<sup>2129</sup>

(2) DIRECT THREAT

The law does not require that an employer give you reasonable accommodations for your disability if you would pose a significant danger to the health or safety of yourself or others AND there is NO possible reasonable accommodation that would remove or reduce the risk of harm.<sup>2130</sup>

There are some protections for you if an employer is arguing that you would be a direct threat to other employees, customers or property:

- First, an employer must first make an individualized assessment of you and whether you can safely perform the essential functions of the job.<sup>2131</sup>
- Second, an employer can only reject you if you pose a significant risk of harm to others and there is a high likelihood that you will harm someone due to your condition.<sup>2132</sup>
- Third, in deciding whether your conditions creates a significant risk of harm, the employer must consider your individual situation and history of substance/alcohol abuse—for example, whether you have a history of harmful behavior due to your addiction—and CANNOT simply go on assumptions or statistics about people who suffer from substance/alcohol addiction and their likelihood of relapse.<sup>2133</sup>
- Fourth, the employer’s evaluation must rely on the most current medical knowledge and the best available objective evidence—NOT simply stereotypes, fears, or assumptions about people with mental illness, addiction, or other disabilities.<sup>2134</sup>

<sup>2130</sup> 42 U.S.C. § 12111(3). See also Cal. Dep’t of Fair Employment and Housing, Employment Discrimination Based on Disability, <http://www.dfeh.ca.gov/res/docs/Publications/Brochures/2015/DFEH-184.pdf>. The ADA permits employers to require, as a job qualification, that an individual not “pose a direct threat to the health or safety of other individuals in the workplace.” Moreover, an employer may impose such a requirement even if an employer’s reliance on such a qualification might “screen out or tend to screen out or otherwise deny a job or benefit to an individual with a disability.” 42 U.S.C. § 12113(a)-(b).

<sup>2131</sup> 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(r). The employer must consider factors including: the duration of the risk; the nature and severity of the potential harm; the likelihood that the potential harm will occur; and the imminence of the potential harm.

<sup>2132</sup> 29 C.F.R. § 1630.2(r). See also EEOC, EEOC Technical Assistance Manual on the ADA, § 8.7. An employer may not deny employment to someone with a disability “merely because of a slightly increased risk. The risk can only be considered when it poses a significant risk, i.e., high probability of substantial harm; a speculative or remote risk is insufficient.”

(3) CANNOT SAFELY PERFORM ESSENTIAL JOB FUNCTIONS.

Finally, an employer is NOT required to provide reasonable accommodations if they can show that you are unable to safely perform essential job functions—in other words, you are not qualified for the job—even with a reasonable accommodation.<sup>2135</sup> However, an employer can only make this argument based on the specific requirements of the job position you are seeking (not general requirements for other types of jobs), and if there are NO reasonable accommodations that could enable you to do the work.<sup>2136</sup>

APPENDIX U

Employment Rights for People with Disabilities: Requesting a Reasonable Accommodation for Your Disability

If an employer’s hiring/employment policy causes your job application to be rejected (or causes other adverse action against you) based on a conviction that was caused by your disability, you have the right to request a “reasonable accommodation” so that you can be considered for the job just like other applicants.

To request an accommodation, the law only requires you to tell the employer that you need an accommodation for a reason related to a medical condition. You do NOT have to put your request in writing, and you do NOT have to use any special legal language—you can explain your request in normal words. You can request an accommodation at any time during the job application process or after you begin working.<sup>2137</sup>

HOWEVER, because it is generally believed that employers are less likely to be sympathetic and less willing to change policies regarding criminal convictions (even where the conviction was caused by your disability), it is recommended that you give the employer a WRITTEN LETTER requesting the reasonable accommodation. (Be sure to make a photocopy for yourself before sending the letter). This will make it more difficult for the employer to ignore your request, and you will have documentation in case the employer denies it.

It’s recommended that your letter clearly include ALL of the following:

1. Explain that you have a disability, and what that disability is.
2. Include any documentation of your disability and treatment.
3. Clearly state the accommodation you are requesting (for example, that you are asking the employer to make an exception to the hiring policy that would exclude you due to a criminal conviction that was caused by your disability, or you are asking for time off to attend treatment).
4. Explain the reason that you are requesting the accommodation:
  - a. Here, you could say that an exception from criminal history policy is NECESSARY to give you an equal opportunity to participate in the job.
  - b. Explain the connection (meaning the relationship or “nexus”) between the requested accommodation and your disability.
  - c. Explain how your criminal conduct was the result of the mental illness and/or past substance abuse (for example, state that you were convicted of drug possession because you were addicted to drugs, but you have successfully completed rehab).
  - d. It is helpful and more persuasive if you have a doctor or service provider submit a letter explaining why your disability requires a reasonable accommodation.

For a sample letter requesting reasonable accommodation for a disability, see Appendix U, PG. 652.

HELPFUL HINT:

You can also have someone else talk to the employer for you, to ask for the accommodation you need. In this case, you may want to ask your case manager, social worker, legal aid attorney, or another trusted person who is helping you with your job search, to speak with the employer on your behalf.

Employment Rights for People with Disabilities: Sample Letter Requesting Reasonable Accommodation

Here is a sample letter to request a reasonable accommodation for your disability. This particular letter shows an example of how to request a change in policy (for example, asking the employer to make an exception to their hiring policy regarding prior criminal convictions), for a job applicant whose conviction was caused by his/her disability (i.e., prior substance abuse that led to a drug conviction).

For sample letters to request other types of reasonable accommodations (including changes in work schedule, equipment and physical spaces, and time off from work), visit Legal Aid Society Employment Law Center at <https://las-elc.org/sample-letters-and-forms>.

FROM: [Your name]

RE: Request for Reasonable Accommodation

DATE: [Today's date]

Dear [Name]:

This is a request for reasonable accommodation under the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) and the California Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA). If you are not the appropriate person to receive this request, please notify me immediately, and forward this letter on to the person who handles requests for reasonable accommodation.

I am a person with a “disability” under state and federal laws. My condition is: [state the name or a description of your condition using language you feel comfortable with—see below for additional information]. Due to my disability, I am requesting the following modification of workplace policy: [describe what change in workplace policy or rule you want and how it relates to your disability—see examples below].

According to the ADA and the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), modified policies are a form of reasonable accommodation. See 42 U.S.C. § 12111(9)(B) and the section entitled “Modified Workplace Policies” in EEOC Enforcement Guidance on Reasonable Accommodation and Undue Hardship Under the Americans with Disabilities Act, both available at www.eeoc.gov.

Please let me know if you require reasonable medical documentation of my condition, or if you wish to propose alternative accommodations to those I have requested. I am ready and willing to engage in the interactive process with you so that I may continue in my employment.

Thank you.

Sincerely

[Your signature]

[Your name]

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION ABOUT DESCRIBING YOUR DISABILITY:

If your disability is prior substance abuse, you should make clear that you are no longer using illegal drugs, and explain what rehabilitation or treatment you have received for your disability.

EXAMPLES OF CHANGES IN WORKPLACE POLICIES OR RULES, AND HOW THEY MAY RELATE TO A DISABILITY:

- “I am requesting an exception to your policy against hiring people with certain types of criminal convictions. Due to my prior drug addiction, I was convicted of drug possession several years ago. However, I have successfully completed rehabilitation and stayed clean and sober for 3 years.”
- “Due to my rehabilitation treatments, I need to constantly drink water. I would like to carry water on the floor.”
- “I would like to use a stool while working the checkout station because of my knee and ankle injury.”
- “Because of my disability, I have difficulty concentrating and can get startled by noises around me. I would like to listen to music on headphones at work.”
- “Because of my diabetes, I sometimes need to eat immediately. I would like to keep food at my desk.”
- “Because of my disability, I need unscheduled bathroom breaks—I cannot wait for my scheduled break.”
- “I need an extension of leave beyond what is provided in our employee handbook.”

COURT-ORDERED DEBT

The COURT-ORDERED DEBT CHAPTER gives a basic overview of court-ordered debt to help you understand the money you may owe because of your past court involvement. You will learn the different kinds of court-ordered debt, what happens to these debts while you are incarcerated, and how these debts can affect you when you return to the community.

I. INTRODUCTION

Many people coming home from prison or jail are surprised to find that they owe lots of money to various courts, agencies, and people. The money you owe related to your court case (or old cases) can make it very hard to get back on your feet, which can leave you feeling frustrated and discouraged.

While this Chapter includes some bad news about court-ordered debt that can never go away, it also includes some good news about changing laws. Reentry advocates—and even some politicians—realize that much of our justice system’s fines and fees don’t bring in very much money to the government and end up causing more harm to poor and systems-impacted communities.

This Chapter will give you some important information to help you better understand your rights, responsibilities, and opportunities when it comes to managing money that you owe due to your past court involvement (referred to in the rest of the Chapter as “court-ordered debt”). If you have questions, call Root & Rebound’s reentry legal hotline any Friday at (510) 279-4662.

WHAT IS COURT-ORDERED DEBT, AND WHY DO I NEED TO KNOW ABOUT IT?

Court-ordered debt is money that you may owe because of some past involvement you had with the criminal justice system—whether you were convicted, acquitted, your charges were dismissed, or you were only ever arrested. You may owe this money to the court itself, to the county or other government agency, to a victim of your crime, or even to a collection agency.

If you were convicted of a crime, you most likely owe court-related costs, or owed them at one point. But even if you were never convicted of anything, the court can still make you pay other fees, such as jail booking fees, public defender fees, and fees associated with minor offenses called infractions. It is important that you know about and understand any court-ordered debt you owe, because this debt can make it difficult for you to move forward with your life in many different ways.

I HAVE NEVER RECEIVED ANYTHING TELLING ME THAT I OWE MONEY; SO I MUST NOT HAVE ANY COURT-ORDERED DEBT, RIGHT?

Absolutely not! People move; paperwork gets lost in the mail; and addresses get written down incorrectly all the time. Just because you haven’t heard anything, doesn’t mean that you’re in the clear. Remember, if you have had any involvement with the criminal justice system, especially if you have a conviction, you were most likely ordered to pay money of some kind at some point. If you don’t take steps to find out about and take care of your debt, there could be serious consequences.

Even if you are 100% positive that you have paid off your debt entirely, mistakes can be made. Your payments may not have been properly recorded, or your name could be attached to someone else’s debt! It is better to check and be safe than to assume and be sorry.

WHAT ARE THE DIFFERENT TYPES OF COURT-ORDERED DEBT?

There are three main types of court-ordered debt: (1) restitution; (2) fines and penalties; and (3) administrative fees. (You may also have debt from unpaid traffic fines and tickets. These are discussed later in this Chapter, on PG. 666). It can be hard to keep track of the different types of debt; this chart gives an overview of the important information about each one.

TYPES OF COURT-ORDERED DEBT

ADMINISTRATIVE FEES (PG. 660)	TO PAY FOR THE COSTS OF RUNNING THE COURTS AND OTHER CRIMINAL JUSTICE AGENCIES	YES. USUALLY THE FIRST TYPE OF DEBT TO BE FORGIVEN OR REDUCED. SOME ARE BASED ONLY ON YOUR ABILITY TO PAY. TRAFFIC FINES &amp; FEES (PG. 666)	SEE TRAFFIC FINES SECTION ON PG. 666

IMPORTANT NOTE ABOUT THE NAMES & PURPOSES OF COURT-ORDERED DEBTS: The names for different types of court-ordered debt can be confusing. The chart above tries to explain the four basic types of court-ordered debt, but the names you see on your actual court paperwork or “sentencing order” may be different. For example, sometimes the same word (for example, “fee” or “assessment”) is used to mean different things by different courts in different counties. If you have any questions about your court-ordered debts and what they mean, ask your public defender or the lawyer who represented you in your case. Because each type of court-ordered debt has a different purpose, you will probably owe different types of debt (restitution, fines, AND fees)—even if you have only one conviction. If you have more than one conviction, you will likely owe separate sets of court-ordered debt for each conviction.

II. A BASIC OVERVIEW OF COURT-ORDERED DEBT RESTITUTION

RESTITUTION

WHAT IS RESTITUTION?

Restitution is money that you are ordered to pay to victims and to the state if you are convicted of a crime. Restitution is intended to repay the victims for the harm they suffered, and to repay your debt to society. Judges are required to order restitution if you are convicted of a crime, regardless of whether you can afford to pay. Restitution is the most serious type of court-ordered debt and the hardest to get rid of.<sup>2144</sup>

THERE ARE 3 MAIN TYPES OF RESTITUTION:

To make things even more complicated, there are different types of restitution—each with a different purpose. The three main types of restitution are:

(1) VICTIM RESTITUTION (also called Direct Orders of Restitution): Victim restitution goes to the victim(s) of your crime to repay any harm caused or losses suffered because of your actions. If your crime involved injury to a person, property damage, or economic loss, you will have to pay victim restitution.<sup>2145</sup>

Usually the court orders victim restitution at the time of sentencing, however, the court can order it at any time afterward, if needed.<sup>2146</sup> This means that even if the judge did NOT order victim restitution when you were sentenced, he or she can still order it later—and you will still have to pay it!

(2) RESTITUTION FINES: Restitution fines go to the state to repay your debt to society. Everyone who is convicted of a crime MUST pay a restitution fine, so if you have a conviction—regardless of whether it was a misdemeanor or a felony—you have to pay a restitution fine.<sup>2147</sup>

In some situations, even if you were never convicted, you may still have to pay a restitution fine. For example, if your case was dismissed because you successfully completed a diversion program (i.e. drug treatment or anger management) or you received a deferred entry of judgment (DEJ), you will still be ordered to pay a restitution fine.<sup>2148</sup> Also, if some of your charges were dismissed as part of a plea bargain, you still may have to pay restitution on the dismissed charges!<sup>2149</sup>

(3) REVOCATION RESTITUTION FINES: If you are sentenced to any type of supervision (parole, mandatory supervision, Post Release Community Supervision, or probation), the court will impose a revocation restitution fine. However, this fine is suspended unless you violate the conditions of your supervision and your supervision is revoked. This means you do not have to pay this fine unless your supervision is revoked.<sup>2150</sup>

IMPORTANT NOTE ABOUT VICTIM RESTITUTION: Victim restitution never goes away. It is not discharged in bankruptcy,<sup>2151</sup> and you will continue to owe any unpaid victim restitution even after you have completed your sentence and term of supervision. You must continue paying restitution when the victim dies, and must pay even if the victim never claimed restitution. The only way to get rid of victim restitution is to pay it off.<sup>2152</sup>

<sup>2152</sup> Prior to 2008, judges had statutory authority under Penal Code sections 1203.3(b)(4) and 1202.4 to waive restitution for any “extraordinary or compelling reason.” California’s adoption of Marsy’s Law amended the state constitution to remove all language allowing the waiver of victim restitution, thereby “effectively negat[ing]” the above statutory provisions. See Cal. Judge’s Benchguide § 83.77 (2014).

IS IT POSSIBLE TO OWE MORE THAN ONE TYPE OF RESTITUTION?

Yes. In fact, it is likely that you owe more than one type of restitution. Almost everyone with a conviction will owe victim restitution. Most people will owe BOTH victim restitution AND restitution fines.<sup>2153</sup> Anyone whose supervision was permanently revoked may owe all three types of restitution.

Also, if you have convictions from more than one case, the court can order all three types of restitution in each case.<sup>2154</sup>

WHO IS CONSIDERED A “VICTIM” TO RECOVER VICTIM RESTITUTION?

The law defines “victim” VERY broadly. Even if no one was physically hurt during the crime, the court can order you to pay for property damage or economic losses caused by the crime. You could be ordered to pay restitution to ANY of the following:

- A specific person (or people) who suffered physical or emotional harm, had property taken or damaged, or had to pay out-of-pocket expenses as a result of the crime;
- The family of the person harmed;
- The Victim Compensation & Government Claims Board (Restitution Fund);
- A business that was damaged or had money losses due the crime; and/or
- A government agency that was damaged or had money losses, suffered vandalism damage, or had to clean or repair graffiti caused by the crime.<sup>2155</sup>

COURT FINES AND PENALTIES

WHAT ARE COURT FINES AND PENALTIES?

Court fines and penalties are money you must pay as part of your punishment for your conviction, in addition to the rest of your sentence.<sup>2156</sup> The amount you have to pay will depend on the specific offense(s) you were convicted of, and the total amount you owe for other fines.

IMPORTANT: You may be charged multiple sets of fines and penalties for the same conviction, because the state and county can each fine you separately for the offense.<sup>2157</sup>

WHAT SHOULD I KNOW ABOUT COURT FINES AND PENALTIES?

1. Some fines and penalties can be ordered as conditions of your probation.<sup>2158</sup> (See PG. 662 for fines and penalties that are conditions of your probation.)
2. Some fines and penalties are determined based on your ability to pay, which means the court must find that you can afford to pay the fine BEFORE imposing them.<sup>2159</sup> Others are imposed regardless of your ability to pay.<sup>2160</sup>

COURT ADMINISTRATIVE FEES

WHAT ARE COURT ADMINISTRATIVE FEES?

Administrative fees are money you pay to the courts, county, and other agencies to cover the day-to-day costs of running the courts and criminal justice system. Administrative fees are used to pay for things like court security, probation supervision, public defender fees, jail time, and debt collection.<sup>2161</sup> Some fees are imposed by the court; other fees are imposed by the county or by other agencies.

<sup>2157</sup> CAL. PENAL CODE §§ 1202.4(a), 1464; CAL. GOV'T CODE § 76000. The state can also charge additional fines for specific types of offenses. See CAL. HEALTH & SAFETY CODE § 11372.5(a) (drug offenses); CAL. PENAL CODE §§ 230.3 (sex offenses), 647.1 (prostitution and lewd conduct), 1202.5 (theft offenses); CAL. VEH. CODE § 23645 (DUI offenses).

<sup>2160</sup> CAL. PENAL CODE § 1202.4(c) (court not required to consider inability to pay restitution fine unless fine is greater than the statutory minimum); see also People v. Long, 164 Cal. App. 3d 820 (1985) (providing that the trial court did not err in imposing a criminal restitution fine without considering defendant's ability to pay).

<sup>2161</sup> See CAL. GOV'T CODE §§ 27712 (public defender fees), 29550, 29550.1, 29550.2 (jail booking fees); CAL. PENAL CODE §§ 987.5; 987.8 (presentence investigation costs and attorney fees), 1463.07 (administrative screening fee), 1465.8 (court security fee), 2085.5(e), (f), (i) (administrative fee for collection of restitution payments by CDCR and/or county jail).

WHAT SHOULD I KNOW ABOUT COURT ADMINISTRATIVE FEES?

1. Administrative fees generally CANNOT be conditions of probation, because they are NOT intended as punishment.<sup>2162</sup> One exception to this rule is the Criminal Justice Administration Fee (sometimes referred to as the jail booking fee), which CAN be a condition of probation.<sup>2163</sup>
2. Most administrative fees are imposed only if you are able to pay them.<sup>2164</sup> Often, these fees can be waived.<sup>2165</sup>

WHAT HAPPENS TO MY COURT-ORDERED DEBT WHILE I'M INCARCERATED?

Your debts CAN increase while you're inside—but WHETHER they do and by HOW MUCH will depend on different things, such as: how old the debt is, whether it has been sent to collections, the amount of victim restitution you owe, and whether you've been making restitution payments.

Some reasons your debt may increase while you're incarcerated are:

- You can be charged interest and administrative fees on your restitution debts.<sup>2166</sup>
  - NOTE: If you are paying restitution through your facility while incarcerated, you may be charged administrative fees for any payments you make.<sup>2167</sup> If CDCR or a county agency is automatically taking restitution payments directly from your prison or jail account, you may not even realize you're being charged extra. (See PG. 675 for more information about paying restitution while you're incarcerated.)
- If your debt is delinquent, you may be charged a $300 penalty (called a "civil assessment") for late payments or non-payment.
  - NOTE: If you were unable to pay the debt because you were incarcerated, you may be able to ask the court to forgive ("vacate") the penalty.<sup>2168</sup> (See PG. 677 for information on vacating civil assessment charges.)
- If your debt has been sent to "collections" (see explanation in side box) you may be charged an extra administrative fee to cover the costs of transferring your debt to the collection agency.<sup>2169</sup>
- You may be charged for failures to appear in court.<sup>2170</sup>
- You may be charged a fee if your driver license was suspended due to unpaid court debts.<sup>2171</sup>

WILL MY DEBTS BE SENT TO "COLLECTIONS"?

Maybe. The more delinquent your debt is, the more likely that it will be, or already has been, sent to collections.

Each court, county, and agency handles unpaid debts differently. The court may start by trying to collect the debt itself. Once the debt becomes overdue, courts often send unpaid

WHAT IS "DELINQUENT DEBT"?

If you have missed one or more payments, your debt is "overdue" or "delinquent." Usually, you will get a letter notifying you that your debt has become delinquent, and you will have a limited time to make a payment or reestablish an installment plan before extra punishments and fines are imposed.

WHAT ARE "COLLECTION AGENCIES"?

When courts (or anyone else) can't get a person to pay their debt on time, they often will hire a "collection agency" to try to get back the money owed. Collection agencies track down the person who owes (the "debtor"), and tries to get them to pay. If they are successful in collecting the debt, the collection agency receives a percentage of the payment.

PENAL CODE §§ 987.8 (cost of legal assistance), 1203.1b (cost of probation), 1203.1c (cost of incarceration in local jail), 1203.1e (cost of parole supervision), 1203.1m (cost of imprisonment); cf. ## HOW CAN MY COURT-ORDERED DEBT AFFECT ME WHILE I AM ON A TERM OF SUPERVISION?

IMPORTANT!—IF YOU ARE ON SUPERVISION: It is very important to know which debts are conditions of that supervision—and to pay them first, if possible. In general, making restitution payments will ALWAYS be a condition of your supervision.<sup>2174</sup> Other fines and fees can also be ordered as conditions of supervision.<sup>2175</sup> You can find out exactly which payments the court considers conditions of your probation by asking your parole or probation officer for a copy of your supervision order. You (or your lawyer) can also go to the court and ask the clerk for a copy of the records (the “minutes”) from your sentencing.

If you don't pay the debts that are conditions of your supervision: (1) the court can extend the term of your supervision to the maximum time allowed,<sup>2176</sup> or (2) the court may order you to do community service to satisfy your remaining fines and fees, or (3) the court may determine that you have violated your supervision and re-incarcerate you. If you are on probation and you complete your probation term, but you haven't paid off all the restitution and fines that are conditions of your probation, the court may find that you did NOT successfully complete probation. This can make it harder to get your conviction dismissed later under California's expungement statute.<sup>2177</sup> However, due to a recent court decision, you cannot be denied mandatory expungement because you still owe victim restitution. See PG. 962 for more information on mandatory and expungement and victim restitution.

Here are other ways that owing unpaid restitution and other fines can affect you while you are on supervision:

- It can be harder to transfer to another county, and you will NOT be allowed to transfer out of state.<sup>2178</sup>
- If you want to get discharged early, it is very important to make reasonable restitution payments.<sup>2179</sup>
- Even if you successfully complete your supervision and are discharged, you will continue to owe any unpaid restitution (and all other debts that the court does not discharge).<sup>2180</sup>

For more information on getting your conviction(s) expunged/ dismissed, see the UNDERSTANDING & CLEANING UP YOUR CRIMINAL RECORD CHAPTER, beginning on PG. 931.

WHICH TYPES OF COURT-ORDERED DEBT ARE LIKELY TO BE CONDITIONS OF MY PROBATION?

Restitution—Making restitution payments will almost ALWAYS be a condition of your probation.<sup>2181</sup>

Other Fines & Penalties—Some other fines and penalties may also be conditions of your probation. However, each type of fine and fee is different, so you will need to check your specific sentencing order to see which payments are conditions of your probation.

Fines and fees that are always (or almost always) conditions of your probation:

Seymour*, Case No. H040560 (Santa Clara County, Super. Ct. No. CC955665), it is unclear whether you can be denied mandatory expungement because of unpaid fines and reimbursements. - Hate Crime Restitution;<sup>2187</sup>
- Abduction Restitution.<sup>2188</sup>

Administrative Fees—In general, administrative fees CANNOT be conditions of probation.<sup>2189</sup> This includes things like court security fees, probation supervision costs, and attorney fees.<sup>2190</sup> However, one exception to this rule is the Criminal Justice Administration Fee (sometimes referred to as the jail booking fee), which CAN be a condition of probation.<sup>2191</sup>

IMPORTANT: These are only examples. YOU SHOULD CHECK YOUR SENTENCING ORDER TO SEE WHICH FINES AND FEES ARE CONDITIONS OF YOUR PROBATION.

WHAT HAPPENS IF I DON'T PAY OFF THESE DEBTS?

It depends. Different types of debts have different consequences if you don't pay them off. The consequences are also affected by the amount of debt you owe, how old the debt is, and which agency is trying to collect from you (for example, whether your debt is still with the court, with county collections, with a private collection agency, or with the Franchise Tax Board).

In the previous section we explained what can happen if you don't pay debts that are conditions of your supervision. This section will explain other consequences you may face if you don't pay off your court-ordered debts (whether you are on supervision or not).

DEBT COLLECTION:

If you owe unpaid restitution, fines, or court fees, the people or agencies that you owe (i.e. the victim, the victim's family, the Victim Compensation Board, the Franchise Tax Board, private collection agencies) can try to collect the unpaid debt in the following ways:<sup>2192</sup>

- Wage garnishment—If you are employed, a portion of your wages (up to 25%) can be automatically taken out (withheld) from your paycheck to pay your court-ordered debt. Money can continue to be taken from your paycheck until you have paid off the full amount you owe.<sup>2193</sup> (For more information about what to do if your wages are being garnished by the Franchise Tax Board, see PG. 676.)
- Property lien—If you own property (like a car or a house) a lien can be put on your property. A lien gives the person (or agency) that you owe the right to claim your property to satisfy the debt you owe them. If you have a lien on your property, you may not be able to sell that property until you have paid off the amount you owe. If you DO sell the property, you will have to give over the money from the sale to the person you owe.<sup>2194</sup>
- Lien on your bank account—If you have a bank account, a lien can be put on the account. You will not be able to access the money in your account, and any checks you write from the account will bounce until the lien is removed.<sup>2195</sup>

All of these actions can lower your credit score, which can make it harder to get a loan, rent an apartment, or find a job.

NOTE: *Inheritance money—If you receive an inheritance during or after your incarceration from a family member or loved one, the CDCR can take that money to satisfy your court-ordered debt. For more information, see Appendix A, PG. 684.

OTHER POSSIBLE CONSEQUENCES:

There are other possible consequences of unpaid or overdue debt, but everyone’s situation will be different. Some other ways that you may be negatively impacted by unpaid court-ordered debt are:

- It can be harder to get a professional or occupational license, which is required for many types of jobs. For example, you need an occupational license to work as a barber, beautician, nurse, or contractor. (For more information on professional/occupational licenses, see the EMPLOYMENT CHAPTER, PG. 601.)
- The Franchise Tax Board can seize any state tax refunds, lottery winnings, or other income to pay off your restitution and fine obligations.<sup>2196</sup>
- If you are ordered to appear in court because you have not paid your court-ordered debt, and you do not go to court, you could be arrested and charged with a misdemeanor.<sup>2197</sup>
  - Important: If you have not made payments, you won’t be arrested simply for not paying. However, if a judge has ordered you to come to court and explain why you are not paying, you can be arrested for not going to court.
  - If you receive an “order to appear,” you MUST go to court on the day and time listed in the order. Even if you don’t have any money to make the payments, it is very important that you attend this court hearing.
- Unpaid restitution and/or other fines can make it harder, to get your conviction dismissed under California’s “expungement” statute.<sup>2198</sup> But, you cannot be denied a mandatory dismissal of your conviction just because you have unpaid victim restitution. (For more information, see PG 962 in the UNDERSTANDING & CLEANING UP YOUR CRIMINAL RECORDS CHAPTER, beginning on PG 931).

IMPORTANT: NEW LAW REGARDING DRIVER LICENSE SUSPENSION:

California state law used to allow courts to suspend a person’s driver’s license if they failed to pay off their court-ordered debt. As of June 27, 2017 through passage of AB 103, the DMV and judges can no longer suspend your driver’s license for a “failure to pay” (FTP).<sup>2199</sup> This new policy is not retroactive, meaning it will not apply to you if your license was suspended before June 27, 2017. Read more on PG. 53.

HELPFUL HINT

What is a “credit score,” and why does it matter?

A credit score is a record of how you have borrowed and repaid money in the past, and is considered a predictor of whether you are likely to repay your debts in the future. Your credit score is a number—usually between 300 and 850. The higher the number, the better your score. Your credit score is based on things like current debts you owe (including court-ordered debts), whether you’ve paid off previous debts in a timely manner, your income, etc.<sup>2200</sup>

Creditors, landlords, and some employers may look at your credit score when deciding whether to give you a loan, rent an apartment to you, or hire you for a job. (Note: In California, only certain people can legally see your credit score. For more information about what employers and landlords can see about you, see the EMPLOYMENT CHAPTER (PG. 557) and HOUSING CHAPTER (PG. 332).

If you want to know what your credit score is, you will probably have to pay to get it from a commercial credit reporting agency. However, you are entitled to a FREE COPY of your credit report, which will let you see the information that is used to calculate your credit score. You can request your free credit report by mail by submitting an Annual Credit Report Request Form.<sup>2201</sup> A sample form is included in Appendix A, PG. 684. For more information about getting your credit report, contact the Annual Credit Report Request Service at 1-877-322-8228.

DOES A CREDIT REPORT SHOW RESTITUTION AND COURT FINES?

If you have been making your payments regularly and on time, restitution and other court-ordered debt shouldn't show up on your credit report.<sup>2202</sup> However, once you begin missing payments, the court can sell your debt to a collection agency that will likely report the debt to the credit bureau.<sup>2203</sup> Additionally, if you don't pay off your debt, a creditor or debt collector can sue you to collect. If they win, the court will attempt to enforce the debt as a civil judgment against you.<sup>2204</sup> Unlike criminal judgments, civil judgments (such as child support payments and money owed after losing a lawsuit) do show up on credit reports. Civil judgments are categorized in the public records section of a credit report, and are generally listed as "judgments."<sup>2205</sup> Thus, it is unlikely that anyone (such as a landlord) could use your credit report to see information about your criminal conviction. Still, it's a good idea to get a copy of your credit report to make sure. For more information about how to get your credit report, see page 731. For information on how to get and keep a good credit score, see Appendix J on PG. 710.

WHAT ARE MY OPTIONS IF MY WAGES ARE GARNISHED OR THERE IS A LIEN ON MY PROPERTY?

If your wages are being garnished or there is a lien on your bank account or property, you may be able to request an exemption for money or property that you need to live on (such as your car or house). An exemption means that the portion of your wages or property that you need in order to support yourself and your family CANNOT be taken.<sup>2206</sup>

- For more information about requesting an exemption from wage garnishment, talk to your employer. You should have received a notice regarding your wage garnishment (called an "Earnings Withholding Order," form WG-002) and instructions on how to request an exemption (Judicial Council form WG-003).<sup>2207</sup> These forms are available in Appendix C , PG. 688, and Appendix D , PG. 691. They are also available online at <http://www.courts.ca.gov/documents/wg002.pdf> and <http://www.courts.ca.gov/documents/wg003.pdf>.
- To request an exemption from a property lien, you will need to file a Claim of Exemption (Judicial Council form EJ-160).<sup>2208</sup> This form is provided in Appendix E , PG. 694 and is also available online at <http://www.courts.ca.gov/documents/ej160.pdf>. For a list of the types of property that you can request an exemption for see Appendix F , PG. 696 (Judicial Council form EJ-155), or go to <http://www.courts.ca.gov/documents/ej155.pdf>.
- If your wages are being garnished by the CA Franchise Tax Board (FTB), you can claim a financial hardship and ask them to reduce the amount taken out of each paycheck.<sup>2209</sup> Call the FTB at (916) 845-4064 to ask for assistance. (Note: The Franchise Tax Board CANNOT change the total amount of debt you owe, only the amount being taken from each paycheck.)<sup>2210</sup>

Even if you don't have enough money to pay off your debts, it's important to show that you are making an effort and want to pay them off! The court and judge will often work with you if you can show that you are trying to take responsibility for your debt to the best of your ability. You can ask the judge to help you set up an installment plan, or request that he or she waive (forgive) some of fines and fees. Many courts will let you do community service to work off your debt—or you can even opt to spend time in jail to pay off or reduce what you owe.<sup>2211</sup>

If your debt has been sent to a private collection agency or the FTB, you can ask that agency to help you set up a payment plan. If the FTB is garnishing your wages, you can also ask them to change the amount that is being taken out of your paycheck (but they CANNOT change the total amount of debt you owe.) The FTB can be very helpful—so don't be afraid to contact them for assistance!

The bottom line: Court-ordered debt can be a scary thing to deal with. But even if you can't pay now, there are other things you can do to improve your situation. DON'T IGNORE YOUR DEBT or it will only get worse!

TRAFFIC FINES AND TICKETS

WHAT ARE TRAFFIC FINES AND TICKETS?

Traffic fines are penalties you are ordered to pay for driving-related or vehicle-related violations. Traffic tickets are the actual paper citations you get when you commit violations. There are three types of traffic tickets:

1. PARKING TICKETS—Parking tickets are for violations while your vehicle is parked (for example, if you park your car where or when you're not allowed to, or don't pay the parking meter).<sup>2212</sup>
2. INFRACTION TICKETS—Infraction tickets are for minor driving violations (such as running a stop sign or failing to use a turn signal), or often for mechanical problems with your car equipment (such as a broken tail-light), or for administrative violations related to your registration, insurance, or Drive License (for example, if one of these has expired).<sup>2213</sup>
3. MISDEMEANOR TICKETS—Misdemeanor tickets are issued for more serious driving violations (like a DUI or driving on a suspended license—these are types of misdemeanor criminal convictions).

NOTE: ANOTHER NAME FOR TRAFFIC FINES IS “BAIL”—Traffic fines are also called “bail.” The traffic court may use this term when talking about your traffic fines and payments. Traffic “bail” is not the same thing as bail in a criminal case, but is sometimes used in a similar way. As of June 8, 2015, if you are required to appear in court for an infraction ticket, you no longer need to “post bail” (pay some or all of your traffic fine) beforehand, except in a few situations.<sup>2214</sup> If you are required to appear in court for a misdemeanor ticket, you may need to “post bail” (pay some or all of your traffic fine) BEFORE your court date. You will then get this money back if the court dismisses your ticket or finds you not guilty of the traffic violation. This Chapter will use the term “fines” instead of “bail” to describe the money you owe for a traffic ticket.

HOW DO I KNOW WHICH TYPE OF TICKET I HAVE?

If you park or leave your car somewhere and there is a ticket on the windshield when you get back, this is probably a parking ticket (although some agencies will issue “fix-it” tickets for parked cars with visible mechanical issues or expired registration tags). Parking tickets are the least serious type of ticket and do NOT involve the courts.

If you get pulled over and get a ticket while driving, it is an infraction or a misdemeanor ticket. Usually you get these tickets from a law enforcement officer who pulls you over on the road for a violation you committed while driving.

WHAT IS “TRAFFIC COURT”?

Where all traffic-related issues are heard and addressed. Some counties have special traffic courts that deal exclusively with traffic-related issues. In others, the “traffic court” may just be a separate counter or department within the main courthouse. Traffic courts deal only with traffic infractions.

WHAT ARE “FIX-IT” TICKETS (CORRECTABLE VIOLATIONS)?

A correctable violation (“fix-it”) ticket is a ticket for a problem with your car that you must fix (for example, a broken tail light, expired registration. After you fix the problem, and show the court proof, your ticket will be dismissed.

<sup>2214</sup> CAL. RULES OF COURT § 4.105. There are three exceptions when the judge may or must require you to “post bail” for an infraction ticket before your court date: (1) The judge must require you to post bail if you choose to pay or challenge the ticket through certain legal procedures that require bail to be posted beforehand (for example, pleading guilty and paying the ticket without going to court, under CAL. VEH. CODE §§ 40510 or 40521; or challenging your ticket through a trial by written declaration, under CAL. VEH. CODE § 40902); (2) The judge may require you to “post bail” if you do not sign a written promise to appear in court; (3) The judge may require you to “post bail” if he or she finds that you are unlikely to appear for your court date without posting bail beforehand, and specifically states the reasons for his/her decision. CAL. RULES OF COURT § 4.105(c). This new rule only applies to infraction tickets, not to misdemeanor tickets.

- An infraction ticket will instruct you to either pay a fine, or appear in court on a particular date and time if you want to challenge the ticket or can't pay the fine.
- For a misdemeanor ticket, you MUST appear in court on the date and time shown or a warrant will be issued for your arrest. (That's why the ticket is also called a "Notice to Appear").

NOTE: For some misdemeanor violations (for example, a DUI), the police may arrest you on the spot and take you into custody. You may need to pay bail and/or sign a promise to appear in court before the police let you go. Afterward, you MUST appear in court on the date and time assigned to you in the promise to appear.

Tickets related to your car equipment, registration, insurance, or driver license are usually infraction tickets. Sometimes you can get the ticket dismissed if you correct the problem that you were cited for (also called a "fix-it" ticket or "correctable violation").

IMPORTANT: When you sign any ticket, you are making a promise to do something—pay the fine, appear in court, and/or correct the problem as required by the ticket.

WHAT COULD HAPPEN IF I GET A NEW TICKET?

It depends on the type of ticket you get.

Parking tickets: If you get a parking ticket, you just have to pay a fine. The ticket will have information about how much the fine is, what agency you owe it to (usually to the local city government or parking authority), and how to pay (by mail, in person, by phone, or online). If you disagree with the ticket, you can contact the parking agency and ask how to challenge it.<sup>2215</sup> If you don't pay the parking ticket on time, the fines will increase. Eventually, if you haven't paid the fine, you will not be able to renew your car registration. Parking tickets will NOT affect your ability to get a state ID or driver license because parking tickets attach to a vehicle, NOT a person.<sup>2216</sup>

Infraction tickets: If you get an infraction ticket, read the ticket carefully to see what to do. You may just need to pay a fine or you may have to fix whatever problem the ticket was issued for and then bring proof to the issuing agency. However, you may be required to appear in court on a particular date and time. You must act BEFORE the deadline on your ticket. Remember, by signing the ticket, you have promised to pay the fine, correct the problem, or appear in court. You may have to:

1. Pay the fine, which means you plead guilty to the violation and the court will close the case. The infraction will appear as a conviction on your Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) record, but it will not be considered a criminal conviction.<sup>2217</sup> It may add "points" to your driving record, which may have other consequences.<sup>2218</sup>
  - NOTE: You may be eligible to go to "traffic school," to keep the conviction points off your record.<sup>2219</sup> (For more information about traffic school, see PG. 680.)
2. Go to court on the day and time listed on the ticket. You can plead not guilty and ask for a trial to dispute the ticket, or plead guilty to the infraction and pay the fine.<sup>2220</sup>
3. If you want to contest the ticket (plead not guilty) but were NOT required to appear in court, you can request a trial by written declaration. This means that instead of going to court to fight your case, you and the police officer give the judge statements and evidence in writing.<sup>2221</sup>
4. If you got a "fix-it" ticket, you can have your case dismissed by fixing the problem, showing proof that you have made the correction, and paying a fee. To get a proof of correction, you must get an "authorized person" to sign the "Certificate of Correction" line on your ticket. An "authorized person" is:
  - A DMV or court clerk—for driver license and car registration violations;
  - A police officer—for equipment violations;
  - A court clerk—for proof of car insurance.<sup>2222</sup>

IMPORTANT: NEW LAW REGARDING PAYMENT PLANS: As of Fall 2017, low-income drivers who are unable to pay their parking tickets OR tickets related to public transportation (such as fare evasion) have a legal right to set up a payment plan with the court and/or have their fines or penalties reduced.<sup>2223</sup> In order to take advantage of this right, the court must formally declare you to be ‘indigent’ (meaning low-income).<sup>2224</sup> If you think you qualify, you can apply for an indigence determination within 60 days of receiving your ticket or infraction. Contact the criminal clerk in your county’s superior court for more information about indigence determinations.

If you are on probation, parole, or community supervision: In most cases, an infraction ticket won’t be considered a violation of your probation or parole because infractions are not criminal offenses. However, in some cases, an infraction ticket could be a violation of your supervision, depending on your underlying conviction, the specific conditions of your supervision, and the nature of the infraction. For example, if you are on probation for a DUI offense and have conditions related to alcohol and driving, a ticket for having an open container in your vehicle might be considered a violation of your supervision. If you have any questions or concerns about your terms of supervision, you should talk to your probation or parole officer (or better yet, a lawyer). (You can also find more information in the PAROLE & PROBATION CHAPTER, beginning on PG. 125.)

Misdemeanor tickets: For a misdemeanor ticket, you must go to court on the date shown on your ticket. If you want to dispute (deny) the charges, you can plead not guilty and ask for a trial. You are entitled to have a lawyer represent you throughout the process. If you cannot afford a lawyer, the court will appoint a public defender to represent you. You may have to pay a fine (bail) in advance, but you will get the money back if you are found not guilty.<sup>2225</sup> In some cases (for serious misdemeanors, like DUIs, or for repeat offenses), you may also face jail time and/or have your license suspended or revoked.

WARNING: If you are on probation, parole, or community supervision, a misdemeanor ticket could be a violation of your probation or parole conditions. You should contact a lawyer immediately, if you can. (For more information on how a new criminal offense may affect your community supervision, see the PAROLE & PROBATION CHAPTER, beginning on PG. 125.)

WHAT COULD HAPPEN IF I DON’T PAY MY TRAFFIC FINES OR IF I DON’T APPEAR FOR MY COURT DATE?

There are serious consequences if you don’t pay your traffic fines, or if you don’t show up for your court date.<sup>2226</sup>

FAILURE TO PAY YOUR FINES:

- The amount you owe in traffic fines can increase by A LOT. You may be charged interest and additional fees as penalties for paying late or not paying at all.<sup>2227</sup>
- If you agreed to make installment payments to the court for your traffic fines, and you do not make the required payments, the court can order you to pay a $300 civil assessment fine.<sup>2228</sup>
- Your debt could be referred to a collection agency, which can affect your credit score and, in turn, your ability to get a loan, rent an apartment, or qualify for some jobs. (See PG. 663 for more information on “collections”).
- For parking tickets—You will not be allowed to renew your car registration if you owe unpaid parking fines for that car (and you may be charged an extra fee for having your registration suspended).<sup>2229</sup> Your car MUST be registered with the DMV in order for you or anyone else to drive it, but the DMV will NOT let you renew your registration until you pay off all fines and fees you owe. This means your car CANNOT legally be driven or sold during this time (and you can be charged with other offenses if you drive your car when it's not registered).<sup>2230</sup> But remember, parking tickets attach to specific CARS—NOT people—so you CAN still drive other cars during this time.

- If you have a correctable violation (“fix-it” ticket) and do not make the corrections required by the ticket OR do not provide proof of correction, you can be charged with a misdemeanor.<sup>2231</sup>
- A Judge may order you to appear in court to explain why you have not paid your ticket.

FAILURE TO APPEAR IN COURT:

If a judge has ordered you to appear in court because of your unpaid ticket, you must appear. If you do not, the court can charge you with a misdemeanor for “failure to appear” or “contempt of court,” and issue a warrant for your arrest.<sup>2232</sup> The court can also suspend your driver’s license for failure to appear.<sup>2233</sup>

I THINK I HAD AN OLD TRAFFIC TICKET, BUT I CAN’T REMEMBER OR CAN’T FIND IT. WHAT ARE MY OPTIONS?

Old traffic tickets can be difficult to track down! This is because cities, counties, the state, and even some colleges have the power to issue traffic tickets—and each agency may handle overdue tickets differently. This can make it hard to know whether you owe unpaid traffic fines, how much you owe, whom you owe fines to, and what to do next. The first step is to find out where your ticket is.

FOR PARKING TICKETS:

- If you CAN remember where you got the ticket, you can contact the city where you got the ticket and ask how to resolve a parking ticket. If the city has a separate department or agency that handles traffic tickets, you will need to speak with someone from that office directly.
- If you CAN’T remember where you got the ticket, you can contact the DMV and ask whether there are any holds on your car registration. (A hold means that you are not allowed to renew your registration because you didn’t pay a parking ticket.)<sup>2234</sup> The DMV will be able to tell you which county, city, or parking agency put the hold on your registration—this is where you owe one or more outstanding parking tickets.<sup>2235</sup>
- You will also find out about any unpaid parking tickets when it’s time to renew your car registration (which you have to do every year). The DMV will send you an annual notice to renew your registration which will list any unpaid parking fines you owe and where you got each ticket.<sup>2236</sup> You will not be allowed to renew your registration until you pay all these fines and fees.<sup>2237</sup>

FOR INFRACTION AND MISDEMEANOR TICKETS:

- The easiest way to track down all of your old misdemeanor and infraction tickets is through the DMV. You can go to any DMV office and ask for a list of your warrants, which should be available for free.<sup>2238</sup> The list of warrants will show all outstanding traffic tickets where you failed to appear in court (FTAs) and/or failed to pay (FTPs), and will also show where you got the ticket.<sup>2239</sup>
- You can also ask the DMV whether there are any holds on your driver license due to outstanding traffic tickets.<sup>2240</sup> (A hold means that your license has been suspended and/or you cannot renew it because you didn’t pay a traffic ticket or you failed to appear in court.) The DMV will be able to tell you which court put the hold on your license—this is where you owe outstanding traffic tickets.<sup>2241</sup>

WHAT ARE MY OPTIONS IF THE DMV TOLD ME I HAVE AN OUTSTANDING TRAFFIC TICKET?

FOR PARKING TICKETS:

- Once you know where you owe old parking tickets, you should contact the local parking authority directly to find out how much you owe and what to do next.

- If the ticket is old enough, it may have been sent to collections. If this is the case, you will need to contact the collection agency (county collections, a private agency, or the California Franchise Tax Board) to find out how to pay off your debt. (For more information on finding the collection agency that has your parking ticket debt, see PG. 674.)
- If you have multiple tickets, there may be more than one hold on your vehicle registration. It's important to pay off any tickets with registration holds first, so that you can renew your registration!

FOR INFRACTION AND MISDEMEANOR TICKETS:

If you got an infraction or misdemeanor traffic ticket and you: (1) did not pay the ticket; (2) did not go to court on the date listed on the ticket; or (3) went to court and were ordered to pay a fine by the judge, but did not pay the fine, ask if your local court has any traffic amnesty programs.

IMPORTANT NOTE ABOUT ARREST WARRANTS: When you are charged with a “failure to appear” (FTA) or “failure to pay” (FTP), the traffic court judge may order a warrant for your arrest.<sup>2242</sup> If there is any chance you have an arrest warrant for one of these reasons, CONTACT A LAWYER AS SOON AS POSSIBLE. A lawyer may be able to get you a court date to try and fix the situation.<sup>2243</sup> It is very important to attend any court dates! Be aware that even if you go to court to get the warrant removed, you will likely still have to pay for the ticket and any additional fines and fees. Learn more about reducing traffic court debt on PG. 680.

I HAD A PENDING (UNRESOLVED) TRAFFIC TICKET WHEN I WAS INCARCERATED. WHAT HAPPENED TO IT?

If you were formerly incarcerated in a California state prison: Under state law, the DMV must dismiss most non-felony traffic tickets that were pending when you went to prison. A ticket is “pending” when the court has not yet made a decision in the case (meaning, never ordered you to pay the fine). Only tickets for misdemeanor traffic offenses and infractions can be dismissed under this law. Parking tickets CANNOT be dismissed this way.<sup>2244</sup> PLEASE NOTE: this rule only applies to people who were incarcerated in state prisons!

Additionally, your traffic ticket CANNOT be dismissed if:

- You got the ticket while you were on parole;<sup>2245</sup>
- The ticket is for an offense that would require the DMV to automatically revoke or suspend your driver license if you were convicted;<sup>2246</sup>
- You are serving your sentence in county jail under Realignment.<sup>2247</sup>

I BELIEVE I CAN GET MY TRAFFIC TICKETS DISMISSED UNDER VEHICLE CODE SECTION 41500. HOW DO I DO THAT?

You must proactively request dismissal from the DMV directly. The court will not automatically do this on your behalf. You will need to send a letter to the DMV on official California Department of Corrections & Rehabilitation letterhead, and get it signed by an “Authorized Representative.”

- If you're currently incarcerated, you should ask your Correctional Counselor or other prison staff person to provide letterhead and sign off on your request.
- If you're formerly incarcerated and on some form of community supervision like probation or parole, you will have to ask your parole or probation officer to provide letterhead and sign off on your request.<sup>2248</sup>

The letter should say that you are requesting dismissal of your misdemeanor or infraction ticket under Vehicle Code Section 41500, and it must include the dates of your commitment and release (if you're out). Send your request to: Department of Motor Vehicles, Division of Drivers Safety and Licensing, P.O. Box 9412890, Sacramento, CA 94290. A DMV employee will then review your request to decide if your ticket qualifies for dismissal.

HELPFUL HINT

Here are 3 more options to look into if you are struggling to pay your traffic fines:

1. Payment Plans—If you owe unpaid traffic fines, you can contact the court, parking authority, or collection agency that you owe money to and ask about setting up a payment or installment plan (where you pay off a little every month instead of everything all at once).
2. Amnesty Programs—Some counties have traffic amnesty programs to help people reduce the amount of traffic debt owed and in some cases, reinstate a suspended driver license.<sup>2249</sup> Contact the traffic court in the county where you owe money for more information.
3. Specialty Courts—Some counties have special homeless courts, DUI courts, or other community courts that may be able to help you resolve your tickets and fines. Contact the local public defender in the county where you got the ticket to ask if there are any community courts available and whether you are eligible. What if I owe court-ordered debt for a federal offense?

I HAVE DEBT RELATED TO A FEDERAL COURT CASE. WHAT CAN I DO?

Up to this point, this Court-Ordered Debt Chapter has only covered debts that were ordered by a California state court, and NOT debts ordered by a federal court.

If you have debts that stem from a federal offense, your court-ordered debt will look different, because federal courts have their own rules for restitution, fines, and fees. However, these three general types of debt are the same in the federal system:

1. Restitution: Repays any victims (people, organizations, government agencies, etc.) that suffered harm, property damage, or monetary losses caused by your actions.<sup>2250</sup> This is like victim restitution in state court.
2. Fines: Serve as additional punishment for your offense and are part of your criminal sentence.<sup>2251</sup> The amount of the fine will depend on the crime for which you were convicted.<sup>2252</sup> These are like fines and penalties in state court.
3. Special Assessments: Fees assigned for each separate offense you were convicted of. The amount of the Assessment depends on the seriousness of the offense. ALL of your federal Special Assessment debt will be forgiven 5 years after your conviction, after which you will no longer owe this debt.<sup>2253</sup>

WARNING: Just like for state court debt, you may also owe additional interest or other penalties on your federal court-ordered debt (for example, if you don't make required payments on time).

FOR MORE INFORMATION ON FEDERAL COURT-ORDERED DEBT

If you have questions about your federal court-ordered debt, you should contact your federal public defender or the federal public defender office in your area.

- To find out how much you owe, contact the federal district court where you were convicted. You will need to speak with the Finance Department to find out your balance.
- To find out if you owe additional interest or penalties, you will need to contact the U.S. Attorney's Financial Litigation (Collections) Unit to learn about these additional amounts.
- Your federal probation officer may also be able to answer questions about your court-ordered debt, such as how much you owe and/or how to make payments.

III. TAKING CONTROL OF YOUR COURT-ORDERED DEBT

WHAT WILL I LEARN?

- How to take control of your court-ordered debt, including:
  - How find out how much you owe;
  - How to get your debt reduced or forgiven; and
  - Strategies for managing and paying off your debt.

Taking control of your court-ordered debt is done by knowing the type of debt you owe, the amount of debt you owe, and creating plan as to how to repay this debt based on how it will impact on your parole/probation term and employment. In Part III, we will answer the following questions for each type of debt:

- How do I find out how much I owe?
  - Restitution
  - Court fines & penalties and court administrative fees (generally handled the same way)
  - Traffic fines & fees
- How do I pay off or “satisfy” my court-ordered debt?
  - Restitution
  - Court fines & penalties and court administrative fees (generally handled the same way)
  - Traffic fines & fees
- Is there any way to reduce or forgive my court-ordered debt?
  - Restitution
  - Court fines & penalties and court administrative fees (generally handled the same way)
  - Traffic fines & fees

HOW DO I FIND OUT HOW MUCH COURT-ORDERED DEBT I OWE?

Since there are typically three types of debt: restitution, court fines and penalties, and court administrative fees, to find out how much you owe requires you to ask different questions to different people/agencies to make sure you know of all of your debt and to figure out how much you owe. Below three different debt types are discussed as well as debts you may owe if you received traffic tickets as part of your case or if you had tickets prior to being incarcerated.

STATE & FEDERAL RESTITUTION

If you are incarcerated in a state prison, you should be able to get a copy of your restitution balance sheet from your facility (either a CDCR facility or county jail). Ask your Correctional Counselor if you have any questions about your restitution.<sup>2254</sup>

If you have just been released from state prison, your facility (or the agency it has chosen) will either continue to collect your debt itself or refer your debt out to a private collection agency or the Franchise Tax Board.<sup>2255</sup> You should get a demand notice from whichever agency will continue collecting your restitution debt within 90 days of your release, although there is no set time for this.<sup>2256</sup>

If you are on state parole, probation, or community supervision, talk to your parole agent or probation officer.<sup>2257</sup> They can give you a copy of your balance sheet, which has information about how much you currently owe.

At any time, you can also find out how much you owe by contacting an Adult Restitution Agent at the CDCR Office of Victim & Survivor Rights & Services Restitution Unit at (877) 256-6877 (toll free). They will be able to tell you your restitution balance and can give you information about what to do while you wait for the collection agency to contact you.<sup>2258</sup>

REQUESTING COPIES OF YOUR ORIGINAL SENTENCING ORDERS

If you want to see what amounts you were originally ordered to pay, you can request a copy of your sentencing order from the court that sentenced you.

HOWEVER, these amounts are the original amounts ordered by the court, and will NOT reflect any payments that you’ve made OR include any interest or fees that have been added since. The order also will NOT show the debts you owe from ANY other cases.

If you were released from federal prison or are on federal supervision, you can find out how much federal restitution you owe by calling the District Court's Finance Unit at (415) 552-4621.<sup>2259</sup> The Finance Unit can also tell you the status of your payments and help you create a payment plan. Please note that if you previously failed to make payments on time, you may owe additional money on top of your restitution due to interest or penalty fees. To find out whether this is the case, call the District Court's Litigation Unit at (415) 436-6970.

I HAVEN'T EVER RECEIVED NOTICE THAT I OWE ANY MONEY FOR RESTITUTION, SO I PROBABLY DON'T, RIGHT?

Not necessarily. While you should receive notice of your debt, it is possible that you won't. As we said in the beginning of this Chapter, any number of things may have prevented the notice of your debt from getting to you. Even if you have received a demand notice, it is possible that the notice you received only covered some, but NOT all of your debts. Remember, your various debts may have been sent to different agencies. For this reason, it is possible that you owe money even if you did NOT receive a notice and it is possible that you owe more money than the notice stated. It is always better to check in order to be safe!

I KNOW HOW MUCH RESTITUTION I OWE. CAN A COURT ORDER MORE RESTITUTION AFTER I'VE ALREADY BEEN SENTENCED?

Generally, the trial court continues to have control over restitution issues throughout the period between sentencing and the completion of parole or probation.<sup>2260</sup> During that time, the court has the authority to add or modify a restitution order on a motion of the victim, defendant, or district attorney, or on the court's own motion.<sup>2261</sup> Once the period of parole or probation has expired, the court can no longer order you to pay additional restitution to a victim.<sup>2262</sup>

COURT FINES AND PENALTIES AND COURT ADMINISTRATIVE FEES

As discussed on PG. 660, court fines and penalties are debts you may get as punishment or consequences for the crime you were charged with. Court administrative fees are paid for the daily operation of the court. While these two debts are different, here these debts are discussed together because the court usually adds these fees together and requires you to pay them together and to one office.

HOW DO I FIND OUT IF I HAVE ANY COURT FINES AND FEES?

STEP 1: Contact the court where you were convicted

To find out how much you owe in court fines and fees, you should start by contacting the court in the county where you were convicted. You should try to provide your case number, however you may be able to locate your case using your name, birth date, and/or other personal information. If you have any court papers from your case, they will list your case number and the county you were convicted in. If you don't have any of your court papers, you may need to get a copy of your RAP sheet to figure out what court(s) you have convictions from.

STEP 2: Find out where your debt is now

When you contact the court, the clerk should be able to tell you what you were ordered to pay, whether your case has been sent to collections, and if so, which collection agency now has your debt. Remember, if you have convictions from multiple cases, even if they are all in the same county, you will need to ask about every case. If you have convictions from different counties, you will need to contact the court in each county.

Make sure to ask the court for the contact information for each and every agency that will be collecting your debt. If some or all of your debt is still with the court, ask the clerk how to contact the court's "collection" or "revenue" unit (the department that keeps track of court-ordered debts and payments). (For a list of California county court collection unit contact information, see Appendix H , PG. 703.)

STEP 3: Contact the collection agency in charge of your debt

Once you know which collection agency is collecting your debt, you can contact them directly to ask how much you owe and how to pay. Remember that your debts may be collected by several different collection agencies, so you may need to contact all the different agencies to find out how much you owe in total. You may get shuffled around to many different people, but this is important, so be patient!

TRAFFIC FINES & FEES

HOW DO I FIND OUT HOW MUCH I OWE IN TRAFFIC FINES?

FOR NEW TICKETS AND FINES:

- A parking ticket shows the amount you must pay on the ticket itself. The ticket will also say where to send your payment (usually to the local city government or parking agency), how to pay in person, and/or whether you can pay online. If you want to dispute the ticket itself or the amount that you owe, contact the parking agency on the ticket and ask the clerk what to do.<sup>2263</sup>
- An infraction ticket will show you either (1) the amount of the fine that you have to pay, or (2) when you have to appear in court. If you are required to go to court, the judge will tell you how much the fine is.<sup>2264</sup>
- For a misdemeanor ticket, you must go to court on the date stated on your ticket. The court will tell you how much you must pay if you are convicted. Your fines and fees may be as much as $5000, you may face jail time, and/or your driver license may be suspended.<sup>2265</sup>
- If you have questions or disagreements about your infraction or misdemeanor ticket, contact the court listed on your ticket. Contact information and/or links for all local traffic courts is also available online at <http://www.ca.gov/Driving/LawsSafety/TrafficFines.html>.

FOR OLD TICKETS AND FINES:

If you don't have the paper ticket anymore, but you know WHERE you got it...

- For parking tickets, contact the parking authority in the city where you got the ticket and tell them you need information about an old parking ticket. This may be the Department of Parking and Traffic, the county sheriff's department, or the local police department.
- For infraction and misdemeanor tickets, contact the traffic court in the county where the ticket was issued. The traffic court clerk will be able to tell you how much money you owe and explain the payment process.<sup>2266</sup> The clerk will be able to tell you if you have multiple tickets for traffic-related infractions or misdemeanors in that county, but will not have information about non-traffic related offenses. The clerk also will not be able to tell you if you have unpaid traffic tickets in other counties.

If you don't know WHERE you got the ticket or if the ticket is OUTSTANDING...

- See PG. 669 to find out how to find your old traffic tickets.
- Follow steps 1 and/or 2 above once you know where you have unpaid traffic tickets.

If your traffic fines have been referred to collections: You will need to contact the collection agency to find out how much you owe and how to pay off your fines. Ask the court or agency that issued the ticket which collection agency they send your debt to, and be sure to get the collection agency's phone number and contact information.

GENERAL INFORMATION ABOUT TRAFFIC FINES:

An important thing to know about traffic fines is that there are lots of additional fees and penalties that can get added to your initial fine. These extra fees and penalties are added automatically—regardless of whether it's a new or old ticket, and even if you pay everything on time! Your fines may also increase if you have prior traffic violations or points on your driving record. Depending on what your original ticket was for, the additional fees and penalties can sometimes add up to several hundred dollars for an infraction ticket (and much more for a misdemeanor ticket).<sup>2267</sup>

IV. PAYING OFF OR “SATISFYING” MY COURT-ORDERED DEBT

How you pay your fines, fees, and restitution will vary, because each court and agency handles unpaid debts slightly differently. Depending on where you were convicted, the type(s) of debt(s) you owe, how much you owe, how old your debt is, and whether you are currently incarcerated or on supervision, your debt may be collected by any one of these departments or agencies:

- Court Collections
- CDCR
- Local jail or juvenile hall
- Parole officer
- Probation Department
- Victim Compensation & Government Claims Board
- Franchise Tax Board
- County collection agency
- Private collection agencies

RESTITUTION

HOW DO I PAY RESTITUTION WHILE INCARCERATED?

CDCR (or the county jail) will automatically deduct victim restitution, and, if possible, restitution fine payments from deposits in your trust account and any wages you earn.<sup>2268</sup> You can also make voluntary payments whenever you like.

If a friend or family member on the outside sends you money, the CDCR will automatically apply half of the sum to your restitution, with an additional 10% of that half going towards paying administrative costs.<sup>2269</sup> Friends and family on the outside can also send you money specifically for restitution, in which case the administrative costs are waived.<sup>2270</sup>

HOW DO I PAY RESTITUTION WHILE ON STATE PAROLE?

CDCR has most likely sent your victim restitution debt to the Franchise Tax Board for collection. The FTB will send you a demand notice with contact information and instructions on how to set up a payment plan. You can also contact the FTB directly to make payment arrangements. (See PG. 676 for FTB contact information.) If you also want to pay off your restitution fines (or parole revocation fines) voluntarily while you are on parole, you can send these payments directly to CDCR. Your parole agent can tell you how much you owe and/or answer other questions about your payments.<sup>2271</sup>

Make sure you include your name and CDCR number with your payment, and send to:
CDCR—Office of Trust Accounting, P.O. Box 276088, Sacramento, CA 95827

IMPORTANT: You must pay off your restitution in full to transfer your parole from California to another state, otherwise your transfer request will be denied.<sup>2272</sup> Once you pay off your restitution, your parole agent will request a receipt showing a zero balance to submit with your transfer request. Learn more about interstate transfer on PG. 217.

<sup>2268</sup> CAL. PENAL CODE § 2085.5 (money collected will be used to pay off direct orders (victim restitution) first, and then restitution fines). The law also authorizes CDCR and/or the county collection agency to deduct a 10% administrative fee, in addition to the restitution payments collected.

HOW DO I PAY RESTITUTION WHILE ON PROBATION, PRCS, OR MANDATORY SUPERVISION IN CALIFORNIA?

You should ask your probation officer about making payments.<sup>2273</sup> You can also call the CDCR Office of Victim & Survivor Rights & Services Restitution Unit at (877) 256-6877 (toll free) to discuss your restitution balance and arrange your payments.

IMPORTANT: PAY OFF CONDITION-OF-PROBATION DEBTS FIRST! Always try to pay off debts that are conditions of your probation first, as these can affect the length of your probation.<sup>2274</sup> (Payments are supposed to go to these debts first automatically, but this doesn't always happen.)<sup>2275</sup> BUT NOTE: If you are entitled to a mandatory dismissal of a conviction under Cal. Penal Code § 1203.4 because your probation was terminated (ended) early, you cannot be denied the dismissal because you still owe victim restitution.<sup>2276</sup> This means that if you owe victim restitution, you still have the RIGHT to a mandatory dismissal of a qualifying conviction. See PG 962 in the UNDERSTANDING & CLEANING UP YOUR CRIMINAL RECORD CHAPTER for more information.

Make your payments in-person, online, or by mail:

- If you make a payment in person, ask the clerk (or collections representative) who receives your payment to put it toward your restitution and any other fines imposed as conditions of your probation first.
- If you make payments online, you can select which fines or fees your payment will go toward. Make sure you select the ones that are conditions of your probation first.
- If send your payment by mail, write on your check or money order in the memo line—or include a note—that indicates which fine or fee the payment is specifically meant for.

After you are off state parole, CDCR will refer the remainder of your debt (unpaid restitution fines, parole revocation restitution, court fines and fees, administrative fees) to the California Franchise Tax Board.<sup>2277</sup>

WHAT WILL HAPPEN IF I CAN'T PAY THE RESTITUTION?

It depends who you owe the restitution to.

If the California Franchise Tax Board (FTB) is in charge of collecting your restitution debt, here are some steps you can take to possibly make your financial situation easier:

1. Set Up a Payment Plan: Contact the FTB to discuss your options for paying your debt in installments instead of all at once;
2. Manage Your Payments Online: Set up an online account to instantly view your current balance, make payments, and keep records of the debt you have already paid.
3. Get Your Payments Reduced: If the FTB is taking too much money out of your paycheck (called “wage garnishment”) and you don’t have enough to live on, you can claim financial hardship and ask the FTB to reduce the amount being taken out of each paycheck.<sup>2278</sup> (Note: The FTB can only lower the amount taken from each payment, but cannot reduce the total amount of debt that you owe.) (See PG. 663 for more information on wage garnishment.)
4. Dispute the Amount You Owe: If you disagree with the AMOUNT of debt you owe, you will need to contact the local court or county collection agency listed on your demand notice (the document notifying you that you owe money) directly. The FTB can help you lower the amount you pay each month, but it CANNOT answer questions or make changes to your total debt orders.

The California FTB employs representatives to help you. You can call the FTB at (916) 845-4064 during normal weekday hours (Monday-Friday, 8 a.m. - 5 p.m.) or visit the FTB’s website at:

CAN MY PUBLIC BENEFIT PAYMENTS BE GARNISHED TO PAY OFF RESTITUTION?

Yes. At least when it comes to Social Security, the court is authorized to order garnishment of public benefits as a means of paying off victim restitution.<sup>2279</sup> The government agency that provides the public benefit can garnish a maximum of 25 percent of your monthly benefit amount.<sup>2280</sup>

IF I RECEIVE AN INHERITANCE, CAN IT BE TAKEN TO PAY OFF MY RESTITUTION?

Yes. Under California Probate Code Sections 216 and 9202, estate attorneys, beneficiaries, and personal representatives are required to inform the California Victim Compensation Board (VCB) when a deceased person has an heir who was or is currently incarcerated within 90 days of the person's death. To comply with these code sections, you must complete the Inmate Inheritance Notification Form (see Appendix A on PG. 684) and mail it to the address listed on the form. Once this form has been received by the VCB, the VCB has four months to pursue collection of any outstanding fines or orders.<sup>2281</sup>

THE VICTIM NEVER CLAIMED RESTITUTION. DO I STILL HAVE TO PAY?

Yes. The CDCR is in charge of managing restitution accounts for direct orders, even once you are released. Most of the time, the CDCR does not initially have an address for the victim to which they can direct payments. In such a case, depending on your custody status, either the CDCR or the Victim Compensation and Government Claims Board hangs onto the payments until the victim can be located. State law permits victims to come forward at any time to claim restitution collected on their behalf.<sup>2282</sup>

THE VICTIM WHO WAS RECEIVING MY RESTITUTION PAYMENTS JUST DIED. DO I STILL HAVE TO PAY?

Yes. If you were ordered to pay restitution directly to the victim of a crime ("direct order"), and that victim has died, the executor or administrator of the victim's estate will begin receiving restitution payments on his or her behalf.<sup>2283</sup> Of course, restitution can only be awarded for economic losses the victim incurred before he or she died, so any additional economic losses incurred after or as a result of the victim's death are not your responsibility.<sup>2284</sup>

COURT FINES, PENALTIES & ADMINISTRATIVE FEES

HOW DO I PAY OFF THE COURT FINES, PENALTIES, AND ADMINISTRATIVE FEES?

As discussed on PG. 660, court fines and penalties are debts you may incur as punishment or consequences for the crime you were charged with. Court administrative fees are the fees that are paid for the daily operation of the court. While these two debts are different, here these debts are discussed together because they are usually grouped together (totaled) when discussing how much you owe the court and require you to pay both fees together and to pay these fees to one office.

The process for collecting court fines and fees is complicated and may be different from county to county. In general, you can follow these instructions:<sup>2285</sup>

STEP 1: Contact the court(s) where you were convicted

See PG. 673 (Step 1 on how to find out how much you owe in court fines and administrative fees) for instructions on how to identify and contact the court(s) where you were convicted.

STEP 2: Find out who is in charge of collecting your debt and contact them

Different counties have different methods for collecting court fines and fees. Depending on where you are located, collection may be handled by different agencies, including the court itself, a county agency, a private collection agency, or the Franchise Tax Board. See PG. 673 above (Steps 2-3 on how to find out how much you owe in court fines and administrative fees) for instructions on how to identify and contact the agency(ies) in charge of collecting your debt. Remember that your debts may be collected by several different collection agencies, so you may need to contact each of these different agencies about making payments.

GETTING RID OF CIVIL ASSESSMENT CHARGES

If you don't make payments on time or don't go to court when you're supposed to, the judge adds an extra fee of $300 to your debt. This is called a "civil assessment." If the reason you didn't pay or appear in court was because you were incarcerated, and you were charged with a civil assessment as a result, you should be able to get it waived by filing a "Petition to Vacate Civil Assessment." This form is available from the court clerk. A sample form is also available in Appendix I , PG. 708.

STEP 3: Discuss your payment options.

When you contact the collection agency or court that's in charge of your debt, a representative can help you design a payment plan that works best for your situation. The goal is to create a plan that will prevent you from facing extra fees or other penalties (like a hold on your DMV record) that can result from late or insufficient payments.

It is important to be open and honest about your current financial situation, including whether or not you have a job, pay child support, or owe any other debts or payments. Most of the time, the collection representative will take these things into account and work with you to create a plan that you can realistically stick to.

Depending on your individual situation and the amount of money you owe, the collection agency may ask you to pay everything off right away. In other situations, they may allow you to set up a payment plan so that you make smaller payments over time. Remember that the agency or court might charge a fee to cover the costs of managing your payment plan, and might charge additional fees for each payment you make.<sup>2286</sup> Collection agencies can also charge BIG penalty fees for any late payments (or even demand that you pay off the entire remaining amount due). Make sure you ask about fees and penalties and/or read the fine print before you agree to a payment plan!

IMPORTANT: USING COMMUNITY SERVICE TO PAY OFF FINES. In the past, every county's court system had different policies regarding the extent to which community service could reduce court-ordered debt. However, on January 1, 2017, the Penal Code was amended to include a provision expressly allowing community service to reduce fines associated with misdemeanor and felony convictions.<sup>2287</sup> Recent case law suggests that each day of community service completed will reduce such a fine by $125.<sup>2288</sup>

WHAT MIGHT HAPPEN IF I CAN'T PAY MY DEBT?

If you don't keep up with your payments, your debt becomes delinquent (overdue). The agency in charge of collecting your debt will send a notice letter to your last known address explaining that your payment is overdue.<sup>2289</sup> After 10 days, the court or agency may order you to pay extra fees on top of what you already owe, or they may put a hold on your DMV record.<sup>2290</sup> The amount of late fees you may owe will depend on many factors, including what county your debt is in, what agency is in charge of collection, and the amount of debt you owe. (For more information on fair debt collection practices, see Appendix G , PG. 699.)

- If you are on parole, talk to your parole agent and explain that you are having a hard time making payments. He or she may be able to work with you to help you manage this debt.<sup>2291</sup>
- If you are on probation, talk to your probation officer and explain that you are having a hard time making payments. The probation department or the court may do a financial evaluation (meaning a consideration of your income, other debts, etc.), and will decide whether to reduce your payment amounts based on your inability to pay.<sup>2292</sup> You also have the right to ask to court to reduce some or all of your fines and fees.<sup>2293</sup> Keep in mind, however, that the judge can also order you to look for work as a condition of your probation, and may require you to bring in proof that you're applying for jobs every week.<sup>2294</sup>

IN GENERAL, YOUR INABILITY TO PAY WILL NOT BE CONSIDERED A VIOLATION IF IT IS DUE TO CIRCUMSTANCES BEYOND YOUR CONTROL. However, in more serious cases, you could have your probation extended or even revoked if:

1. you're not paying debts that are a condition of your probation AND you are also violating other probation conditions (such as reporting requirements), OR
2. the court thinks that you are willfully refusing to pay.

<sup>2288</sup> People v. Carranza (2016) 6 Cal.App.5th Supp. 17 , 29 (stating, "The clear purpose of the bill, as discerned from the text of the amendments enacted, was to increase the amount of credit from $30 to $125, and to concomitantly reduce the amount of time in custody, or—by application of section 1205.3—the community service days, required to satisfy a fine.")

For this reason, it is very important that you speak with your probation officer and make it clear that you are not avoiding payments on purpose. If you are able to make even very small payments, this will help show the court and your probation officer that you are making an effort.

- If you are not on any form of supervision, contact the agency in charge of collecting your debt and ask to set a new payment plan. (See PG. 673 for information on how to find and contact the agency in charge of your debt to set up a payment plan.)
- If you are re-incarcerated, the debt associated with your prior conviction will not go away. You will still be responsible for paying it off. However, you should not face any extra fees or interest charges for failing to pay while you are inside.<sup>2295</sup> If for some reason you are charged a fee for missing a payment while incarcerated, you should contact the court or collection agency when you are released and provide them with proof that you were incarcerated during that time period to have the fee waived.<sup>2296</sup>

TRAFFIC FINES AND FEES

HOW DO I PAY MY TRAFFIC FINES?

It depends on the type of traffic fine.

- For parking tickets, send your payment to the parking agency listed on the ticket.
- For infraction tickets: Read the ticket carefully—it will tell you whether to pay a fine or appear in court.
- If you are paying a fine, you will make payments to the court in the county where you received the ticket. Check the ticket for specific information about how and where to send your payment. You may also get a letter from the court—most counties will send you information about how to pay or contest (challenge) your ticket, and whether you have the option of attending traffic school instead. You can also contact the court right away to set up a payment plan.<sup>2297</sup>

The ticket will also indicate whether you have a “correctable violation.” If so, you can have your ticket AND traffic fine dismissed by fixing the problem, showing proof that you have made the correction, and paying a dismissal fee.<sup>2298</sup> To get proof that you have corrected the problem, you must get an authorized person to sign the “Certificate of Correction” line on your ticket. Bring the signed ticket and your dismissal fee payment to the court clerk BEFORE the deadline on the ticket. (In some cases, you may also be able to send your proof of correction and payment by mail—check your ticket or contact the court to find out.) The court will then dismiss your case and it will not go on your record.

1. For driver license & car registration violations, get the DMV or a court clerk to sign your ticket.
2. For equipment violations, get your ticket signed by a police officer.
3. For proof of car insurance at the time of the citation, get your ticket signed by a court clerk.

TRAFFIC SCHOOL MIGHT BE AN OPTION:

In some cases, you may be able to attend traffic school for your ticket.<sup>2299</sup> Traffic school is a driver training class that you can take to make sure that your ticket does not show on your driving record. Tickets can impact your driving record by adding “points” to it. Points on your record can cause your insurance rate to increase and can even result in the suspension or revocation of your license.

You may get a letter from the court telling you if traffic school is an option, but you can also contact the court directly to ask. If the court lets you go to traffic school, you will need to complete the course by a specific deadline and provide a certificate of completion to prove that you have completed it.<sup>2300</sup> Make sure you attend a traffic school that is approved by the court, otherwise you will not receive credit for completing the course. The court can provide you with a list of approved schools.

If you successfully complete traffic school, your ticket will still go on your driving record, but it will be made confidential (hidden).<sup>2301</sup> Also, you will still have to pay all of your traffic fines, AND you will also have to pay additional enrollment fees to the court and to the traffic school.<sup>2302</sup> However, you will NOT get any points added to your driving record,<sup>2303</sup> which means your insurance rates won't go up and your license will not be in danger of suspension or revocation. So, even though traffic school can cost you MORE money in the SHORT term, it can SAVE you a lot of money and trouble in the LONG run. For more information on traffic school, ask the traffic court clerk or visit the Judicial Council website at <http://www.courts.ca.gov/9410.htm>.

CAN I GO TO TRAFFIC SCHOOL TO PAY OFF MY TRAFFIC TICKETS?

Generally, you can go to traffic school if:

- You have a valid, regular (not commercial) driver license,
- Your ticket is for a moving violation that is an infraction (not a misdemeanor), and
- You were driving a regular (non-commercial) vehicle when you got the ticket.

Some reasons why you may NOT be eligible for traffic school:

- You have a parking ticket or misdemeanor ticket;
- Your ticket was for a serious moving violation—including speeding more than 25mph over the speed limit;
- Your ticket was for a DUI or other drug/alcohol-related violation;
- You've gone to traffic school for another ticket within the past 18 months; or
- You were driving a commercial vehicle when you got the ticket.<sup>2304</sup>

For OLD infraction tickets, you will need to find out which court or agency is in charge of collecting your fines (see PG. 669) and how much you owe (see PG. 674). Then contact that agency to find out how to pay off your fines.

For misdemeanor tickets: You will need to go to court in the county where you got the ticket, on the day and time listed on your ticket. The court will tell you how much you owe, and you will make payments to the court.

For OLD misdemeanor tickets, you will need to find out which court or agency is in charge of collecting your fines (see PG. 669) and how much you owe (see PG. 674). Then contact that agency to find out how to pay off your fines.

IMPORTANT: Remember, you must pay your fines BEFORE the deadline listed on the ticket or given by the court. If you don't pay your fines on time, you can be charged double in penalties and your case may be referred to a collection agency. The DMV may also put a hold on your registration or driver license, until you pay your fines.<sup>2305</sup>

WHAT OPTIONS DO I HAVE IF I CANNOT PAY MY TRAFFIC FINES?

It depends on the type of traffic fine.

FOR PARKING TICKETS

Talk to the parking agency (or collection agency, if your parking fines were sent to collections) about setting up a payment plan. Keep in mind that the payment plan may charge additional fees, as well as big penalties for missed payments—so make sure to ask about any fees and penalties before you sign up!

FOR MISDEMEANOR AND INFRACTION TICKETS

Check with the local traffic court to ask about any programs that could help you deal with traffic debt related to a misdemeanor or infraction. If you have any open warrants (or are unsure), check first with your local public defender to see what your options are IMPORTANT WARNING FOR PEOPLE WITH OPEN WARRANTS: if there's ANY possibility that you might have an outstanding warrant for your arrest—for ANY reason (including new charges against you or a failure to appear in court) from ANY county—it is recommended that you call the public defender or a private lawyer to check on your warrant status first, and to ask what your options are.

REDUCING OR FORGIVING COURT-ORDERED DEBT

WHAT OPTIONS DO I HAVE TO REDUCE OR FORGIVE MY COURT-ORDERED DEBT?

It depends on the type of court-ordered debt.

RESTITUTION

As we have stated, restitution is mandatory and stays with you for life. However, a judge may order you to do community service instead of paying restitution if he or she finds “compelling and extraordinary reasons” for doing so. Again, your inability to pay is not a compelling or extraordinary reason.<sup>2306</sup>

COURT FINES & PENALTIES AND COURT ADMINISTRATIVE FEES:

It is often possible to get your fines and fees reduced or forgiven (“vacated”) by the court. However, it depends heavily on what county your debt is from, and which judge is considering your case.

In general, judges are more likely to reduce or waive fines and fees if you can show that:

- You’re making an effort to pay your debts (for example, you’re paying restitution, even though you can’t afford to pay the other fines and fees);
- You’re taking steps toward rehabilitation (for example, you’re in drug treatment or anger management counseling; you’re enrolled in school; you’ve reunited with your family); and
- You’re following all other conditions of your supervision.

Here are some ways that you may be able to reduce, forgive, or otherwise satisfy your fines and fees:

- Some courts may allow you to do community service instead of paying your fines and fees.<sup>2307</sup> However, there is a lot of variation from county to county, and many counties may not offer community service at all. If the judge did not give you the option of community service at sentencing, you should contact the court or local public defender to ask if the county runs a community service program.
- The court may allow you to voluntarily choose to do jail time instead of paying your court-ordered fines. You can get your debt reduced by $30/day spent in custody.<sup>2308</sup>
- You can go to the court directly and ask the judge to forgive (“vacate” or “dismiss”) or reduce your debts.
- If you get your conviction dismissed, the court can forgive any remaining fines and fees you owe, including restitution fin<sup>2309</sup> (but the court CANNOT forgive your victim restitution).<sup>2310</sup>

IMPORTANT INFORMATION ABOUT PAYING YOUR COURT-ORDERED DEBT:<sup>2311</sup>

- If you owe payments on more than one case, make sure you specify which case AND which fine or fee within that case your payment is for—otherwise the payments may automatically go to your oldest case first.<sup>2312</sup> Remember, you want to pay off the debts that are conditions of probation, BEFORE paying off any other debts.
- Try to make small, consistent payments to the court. This shows that you are aware of your debts and are doing your best to pay them off. It may also keep the court from sending your case to collections.
- If you sign up for a payment plan, make sure to ask about the interest rate, any additional fees, and penalties for missed payments. Collection agencies often add extra fees and interest, which could increase the total amount you have to pay.
- Keep a list of all payments you make, including the date and time, and who you gave the payment to (the court, county collection agency, FTB, or private collection agency). When you make a payment, always ask for a receipt for the current payment and a print-out of the amount you still owe.

TRAFFIC FINES & FEES

Even if you do not have a car and/or you do not drive frequently, traffic fines and fees can have a significant impact on your parole or probation conditions and/or ability to find employment. Because of their impact, it can help to find out if you have any tickets and if you owe any fees and look for options to have them reduced or canceled. A few of those options are discussed below.

<sup>2312</sup> CAL. PENAL CODE § 1203.1d (allocation of partial payments). The older case may not be the most important one to pay off; for example, if you owe administrative fees on the older case, but you owe restitution or other fines that are conditions of probation on a newer case, making payments on the newer case is more important.

> If you had pending (unresolved) traffic tickets and fines when you were incarcerated, you may qualify to have the fines cancelled under Vehicle Code Section 41500. See PG. 670 to learn more.

> If unpaid traffic fines caused you to lose your driver's license, a new law passed in June 2017 may help. As of the passage of AB 103 on June 27, 2017, your driver license can no longer be suspended for unpaid fines. However, it can still be suspended for a failure to appear in court. Additionally, a court can no longer report a failure to pay fines and/or bail to the DMV, no matter the reason(s)! Before June 27, 2017, the DMV would suspend licenses upon receiving these reports from courts, but under the new law, this practice should have ended statewide!

If your license was suspended BEFORE June 27, 2017 due to failure to pay, you may still be able to have your traffic debt forgiven and have your license reinstated if...

- You are serving a state prison sentence or a Realignment sentence in county jail, AND your ticket was “pending” when you were incarcerated. You will have to proactively request dismissal from the DMV under Vehicle Code 41500. If you are sending it while currently incarcerated, it will need to be on CDCR letterhead and be signed by an Authorized Representative. Your request should be sent to: Department of Motor Vehicles, Division of Drivers Safety and Licensing, P.O. Box 9412890, Sacramento, CA 94290.
- Your license was suspended for a Failure-to-Pay, Failure-to-Appear or other failure-to-comply that is more than 5 years old. You can call the DMV Mandatory Actions line at (916) 657-6525 to see if your license qualifies.
- Your local county court has a process for waiving fees. For information on local court practices, the legal nonprofit EBCLC has created the following website where you can search for more information by county: <http://ebclc.org/reentry-legal-services/>.

V. CONCLUSION

Many people struggle with different types of debt, but it can be particularly difficult if you are trying to rebuild your life after incarceration. If you have court-ordered debt, the bottom line is, you will likely have to figure out a way to pay it off at some point. Hopefully this Chapter gave you some useful information to help you not only minimize the debt itself, but also its impact on your life.

Date this order was received by employer (specify the date of personal delivery by levying officer or registered process server or the date mail receipt was signed):

TO THE EMPLOYER REGARDING YOUR EMPLOYEE:

Name and address of employer

Name and address of employee

Social Security No.  on form WG-035  unknown

1. A judgment creditor has obtained this order to collect a court judgment against your employee. You are directed to withhold part of the earnings of the employee (see instructions on reverse of this form). Pay the withheld sums to the levying officer (name and address above).

If the employee works for you now, you must give the employee a copy of this order and the Employee Instructions (form WG-003) within 10 days after receiving this order.

Complete both copies of the form Employer's Return (form WG-005) and mail them to the levying officer within 15 days after receiving this order, whether or not the employee works for you.

2. The total amount due is: $

Count 10 calendar days from the date when you received this order. If your employee's pay period ends before the 10th day, do not withhold earnings payable for that pay period. Do withhold from earnings that are payable for any pay period ending on or after that 10th day.

Continue withholding for all pay periods until you withhold the amount due. The levying officer will notify you of an assessment you should withhold in addition to the amount due. Do not withhold more than the total of these amounts. Never withhold any earnings payable before the beginning of the earnings withholding period.

3. The judgment was entered in the court on (date):

The judgment creditor (if different from the plaintiff) is (name):

4. The INSTRUCTIONS TO EMPLOYER on the reverse tell you how much of the employee's earnings to withhold each payday and answer other questions you may have.

(Employer's Instructions on reverse)

INSTRUCTIONS TO EMPLOYER ON EARNINGS WITHHOLDING ORDERS

WG-002

The instructions in paragraph 1 on the reverse of this form describe your early duties to provide information to your employee and the levying officer.

Your other duties are TO WITHHOLD THE CORRECT AMOUNT OF EARNINGS (if any) and PAY IT TO THE LEVYING OFFICER during the withholding period.

The withholding period is the period covered by the Earnings Withholding Order (this order). The withholding period begins ten (10) calendar days after you receive the order and continues until the total amount due, plus additional amounts for costs and interest (which will be listed in a levying officer's notice), is withheld.

It may end sooner if (1) you receive a written notice signed by the levying officer specifying an earlier termination date, or (2) an order of higher priority (explained on the reverse of the EMPLOYER'S RETURN) is received.

You are entitled to rely on and must obey all written notices signed by the levying officer.

The Employer's Return (form WG-005) describes several situations that could affect the withholding period for this order. If you receive more than one Earnings Withholding Order during a withholding period, review that form (Employer's Return) for instructions.

If the employee stops working for you, the Earnings Withholding Order ends after no amounts are withheld for a continuous 180-day period. If withholding ends because the earnings are subject to an order of higher priority, the Earnings Withholding Order ends after a continuous two-year period during which no amounts are withheld under the order. Return the Earnings Withholding Order to the levying officer with a statement of the reason it is being returned.

WHAT TO DO WITH THE MONEY

The amounts withheld during the withholding period must be paid to the levying officer by the 15th of the next month after each payday. If you wish to pay more frequently than monthly, each payment must be made within 10 days after the close of the pay period.

Be sure to mark each check with the case number, the levying officer's file number, if different, and the employee's name so the money will be applied to the correct account.

WHAT IF YOU STILL HAVE QUESTIONS?

The garnishment law is contained in the Code of Civil Procedure beginning with section 706.010. Sections 706.022, 706.025, 706.050, and 706.104 explain the employer's duties.

The Federal Wage Garnishment Law and federal rules provide the basic protections on which the California law is based. Inquiries about the federal law will be answered by mail, telephone, or personal interview at any office of the Wage and Hour Division of the U.S. Department of Labor. Offices are listed in the telephone directory under the U.S. Department of Labor in the U.S. Government listing.

THE CHART BELOW AND THESE INSTRUCTIONS APPLY UNDER NORMAL CIRCUMSTANCES. THEY DO NOT APPLY TO ORDERS FOR THE SUPPORT OF A SPOUSE, FORMER SPOUSE, OR CHILD.

The chart below shows HOW MUCH TO WITHHOLD when the state minimum wage is $9.00 per hour, for different amounts of disposable earnings (as described in the Computation Instructions) and different pay periods. If the minimum wage changes in the future, the levying officer will provide a chart showing the new withholding rates.

MAXIMUM WITHHOLDING FROM DISPOSABLE EARNINGS BY PAY PERIOD

MINIMUM WAGE: $9.00 per hour

(Beginning July 1, 2014)

Daily or Weekly	Every Two Weeks	Twice a Month	Monthly
$360.00 or less in workweek: No withholding	$720.00 or less: No withholding	$780.00 or less: No withholding	$1560.00 or less: No withholding
From $360.01 to $450.00: Amount above $360.00	From $720.01 to $900.00: Amount above $720.00	From $780.01 to $975.00: Amount above $780.00	From $1560.01 to $1950.00: Amount above $1560.00
$450.01 or more: 25% of disposable earnings	$900.01 or more: 25% of disposable earnings	$975.01 or more: 25% of disposable earnings	$1950.01 or more: 25% of disposable earnings

COMPUTATION INSTRUCTIONS

State and federal law limits the amount of earnings that can be withheld. The limitations are based on the employee's disposable earnings, which are different from gross pay or take-home pay.

To determine the CORRECT AMOUNT OF EARNINGS TO BE WITHHELD (if any), compute the employee's disposable earnings.

(A) Earnings include any money (whether called wages, salary, commissions, bonuses, or anything else) that is paid by an employer to an employee for personal services. Vacation or sick pay is subject to withholding as it is received by the employee. Tips are generally not included as earnings since they are not paid by the employer.

(B) Disposable earnings are the earnings left after subtracting the part of the earnings a state or federal law requires an employer to withhold. Generally these required deductions are (1) federal income tax, (2) federal social security, (3) state income tax, (4) state disability insurance, and (5) payments to public employee retirement systems. Disposable earnings will change when the required deductions change.

After the employee's disposable earnings are known, use the chart below to determine what amount should be withheld. In the column listed under the employee's pay period, find the employee's disposable earnings. The amount shown below that is the amount to be withheld. For example, if the employee is paid disposable earnings of $1000 twice a month (semi-monthly), the correct amount to withhold is 25 percent each payday, or $250.

The chart below is based on the state minimum wage that is in effect on July 1, 2014. It will change when the minimum wage changes. Restrictions are based on the minimum wage effective at the time the earnings are payable.

Occasionally, the employee's earnings will also be subject to a Wage and Earnings Assignment Order, an order available from family law courts for child, spousal, or family support. The amount required to be withheld for that order should be deducted from the amount to be withheld for this order.

IMPORTANT WARNINGS

1. IT IS AGAINST THE LAW TO FIRE THE EMPLOYEE BECAUSE OF EARNINGS WITHHOLDING ORDERS FOR THE PAYMENT OF ONLY ONE INDEBTEDNESS. No matter how many orders you receive, so long as they all relate to a single indebtedness (no matter how many debts are represented in that judgment), the employee may not be fired.
2. IT IS ILLEGAL TO AVOID AN EARNINGS WITHHOLDING ORDER BY POSTPONING OR ADVANCING THE PAYMENT OF EARNINGS. The employee's pay period must not be changed to prevent the order from taking effect.

IT IS ILLEGAL NOT TO PAY AMOUNTS WITHHELD FOR THE EARNINGS WITHHOLDING ORDER TO THE LEVYING OFFICER. Your duty is to pay the money to the levying officer who will pay the money in accordance with the law that applies to this case.

IF YOU VIOLATE ANY OF THESE LAWS YOU MAY BE HELD LIABLE TO PAY CIVIL DAMAGES AND YOU MAY BE SUBJECT TO CRIMINAL PROSECUTION!

EMPLOYEE INSTRUCTIONS

---

---

-NOTICE-
IMPORTANT LEGAL NOTICE TO EMPLOYEE ABOUT EARNINGS WITHHOLDING ORDERS
(Wage Garnishment)

The Earnings Withholding Order requires your employer to pay part of your earnings to the sheriff or other levying officer. The levying officer will pay the money to a creditor who has a court judgment against you. The information below may help you protect the money you earn.

-NOTICIA-
NOTICIA LEGAL IMPORTANTE RESPECTO A LAS ÓRDENES DE RETENCIÓN DE SUELDO

La Orden de Retención de Sueldo requiere que su empleador pague una parte de su sueldo a un oficial de embargo. El oficial le pagará el dinero retenido a su acreedor que ha conseguido una decisión judicial en contra de usted. Pida usted que un amigo o su abogado le lea este papel oficial. Esta información le puede ayudar a proteger su sueldo.

---

CAN YOU BE FIRED BECAUSE OF THIS?

NO. You cannot be fired unless your earnings have been withheld before for a different court judgment. If this is the first judgment for which your wages will be withheld and your employer fires you because of this, the California Labor Commissioner, listed in the phone book of larger cities, can help you get your job back.

HOW MUCH OF YOUR PAY WILL BE WITHHELD?

The reverse of the Earnings Withholding Order (abbreviated in this notice as EWO) that applies to you contains Employer Instructions. These explain how much of your earnings can be withheld. Generally, the amount is about 25% of your take home pay until the amount due has been withheld. The levying officer will notify the employee of an additional assessment charged for paying out money collected under this order and that amount will also be withheld.

If you have trouble figuring this out, ask your employer for help.

IS THERE ANYTHING YOU CAN DO?

YES. There are several possibilities.

1. See an attorney. If you do not know an attorney, check with the lawyer referral service or the legal aid office in your county (both are listed in the yellow pages under "Attorneys").
An attorney may be able to help you make an agreement with your creditor, or may be able to help you stop your earnings from being withheld. You may wish to consider bankruptcy or asking the bankruptcy court to help you pay your creditors. These possibilities may stop your wages from being withheld.
An attorney can help you decide what is best for you. Take your EWO to the attorney to help you get the best advice and the fastest help.
2. Try to work out an agreement yourself with your creditor. Call the creditor or the creditor's attorney, listed on the EWO. If you make an agreement, the withholding of your wages will stop or be changed to a smaller amount you agree on. (See item 4 on the reverse for another way to make an offer to your creditor.)
3. You can ask for an EXEMPTION. An exemption will protect more, or maybe even all of your earnings. You can get an exemption if you need your earnings to support yourself or your family, but you cannot get an exemption if:
  - a. You use some of your earnings for luxuries and they aren't really necessary for support; OR
  - b. You owe money to an attorney because of a court order in a family law case; OR
  - c. You owe the debt for past due child support of spousal support (alimony); OR
  - d. You owe the debt to a former employee for wages.

HOW DO YOU ASK FOR AN EXEMPTION?

(See the other side of this form for instructions about claiming an exemption.)

HOW DO YOU ASK FOR AN EXEMPTION?

1. Call or write the levying officer for three (3) copies each of the forms called "Claim of Exemption" and "Financial Statement." These forms are free. The name and address of the levying officer are in the big box on the right at the top of the EWO.
2. Fill out both forms. On the forms are some sentences or words which have boxes  in front of them. The box means the words which follow may not apply to your case. If the words do apply, put a check in the box.

Remember, it is your job to prove with the Financial Statement form that your earnings are needed for support. Write down the details about your needs.
3. For example, if your child has special medical expenses, tell which child, what illnesses, who the doctor is, how often the doctor must be visited, the cost per visit, and the costs of medicines. These details should be listed in item 6. If you need more space, put "See attachment 6" and attach a typed 8½ by 11 sheet of paper on which you have explained your expenses in detail.
4. You can use the Claim of Exemption form to make an offer to the judgment creditor to have a specified amount withheld each pay period. Complete item 3 on the form to indicate the amount you agree to have withheld each pay day during the withholding period. (Be sure it's less than the amount to be withheld otherwise.) If your creditor accepts your offer, he will not oppose your claim of exemption. (See (1) below. )
5. Sign the Claim of Exemption and Financial Statement forms. Be sure the Claim of Exemption form shows the address where you receive mail.
6. Mail or deliver two (2) copies of each of the two forms to the levying officer. Keep one copy for yourself in case a court hearing is necessary.

Do not use the Claim of Exemption and Financial Statement forms to seek a modification of child support or alimony payments. These payments can be modified only by the family law court that ordered them.

FILE YOUR CLAIM OF EXEMPTION AS SOON AS POSSIBLE FOR THE MOST PROTECTION.

ONE OF TWO THINGS WILL HAPPEN NEXT

- (1) The judgment creditor will not oppose (object to) your claim of exemption. If this happens, after 10 days the levying officer will tell your employer to stop withholding or withhold less from your earnings. The part (or all) of your earnings needed for support will be paid to you or paid as you direct. And you will get back earnings the levying officer or your employer were holding when you asked for the exemption.

—OR—

- (2) The creditor will oppose (object to) your claim of exemption. If this happens, you will receive a Notice of Opposition and Notice of Hearing on Claim of Exemption, in which the creditor states why your exemption should not be allowed. A box in the middle of the Notice of Hearing tells you the time and place of the court hearing which will be in about ten days. Be sure to go to the hearing if you can.

If the judgment creditor has checked the box in item 3 on the Notice of Hearing on Claim of Exemption, the creditor will not be in court. If you are willing to have the court make its decision based on your Financial Statement and the creditor's Notice of Opposition, you need not go to the hearing.

The Notice of Opposition to Claim of Exemption will tell you why the creditor thinks your claim should not be allowed. If you go to the hearing, take any bills, paycheck stubs, cancelled checks, or other evidence (including witnesses) that will help you prove your Claim of Exemption and Financial Statement are correct and your earnings are needed to support yourself or your family.

Perhaps you can even prove the Notice of Opposition is wrong. For example, perhaps the Notice of Opposition states that the judgment was for wages for a past employee. You may be able to provide evidence that the person was not an employee or that the debt was not for wages.

If the judge at the hearing agrees with you, your employer will be ordered to stop withholding your earnings or withhold less money. The judge can even order that the EWO end before the hearing (so you would get some earnings back).

If the judge does not agree with you, the withholding will continue unless you appeal to a higher court. The rules for appeals are complex so you should see an attorney if you want to appeal.

If you have one court hearing, you should not file another Claim of Exemption about the same EWO unless your finances have gotten worse in an important way.

If your EWO is to be changed or ended, the levying officer must sign the notice to your employer of the change. He may give you permission to deliver it to the employer, or it can be mailed.

WHAT HAPPENS TO YOUR EARNINGS IF YOU FILE A CLAIM OF EXEMPTION?

Your employer must continue to hold back part of your earnings for the EWO until he receives a notice signed by the levying officer to change the order or end it early.

The levying officer will keep your withheld earnings until your Claim of Exemption is denied or takes effect. At that time your earnings will be paid according to the law that applies to your case.

REGARDING CHILD SUPPORT

If you are obligated to make child support payments, the local child support agency may help you to have an Order Assigning Salary or Wages entered. This order has the top priority claim on your earnings. When it is in effect, little or no money may be available to be withheld for an EWO. And, if the local child support agency is involved in collecting this support from you, it may agree to accept less money if this special order is entered.

WHAT IF YOU STILL HAVE QUESTIONS?

If you cannot see an attorney, or don't want to see an attorney, you might be able to answer some of your questions by reading the law in a law library. Ask the law librarian to help you find sections 706.050 and 706.105 of the California Code of Civil Procedure. Other sections of the code, beginning with section 706.010 may also answer some of your questions.

Also, the office of the Wage and Hour Division of the U.S. Department of Labor may be able to answer some of your questions. Offices are listed in the telephone directory under the U.S. Department of Labor in the U.S. Government listing.

APPENDIX F

Exemptions from the Enforcement of Judgments (Judicial Council Form EJ-155)

See next page.

The following is a list of assets that may be exempt from levy on a judgment.

Exemptions are found in the United States Code (USC) and in the California codes, primarily the Code of Civil Procedure (CCP).

Because of periodic changes in the law, the list may not include all exemptions that apply in your case. The exemptions may not apply in full or under all circumstances. Some are not available after a certain period of time. You or your attorney should read the statutes.

If you believe the assets that are being levied on are exempt, file a claim of exemption form, which you can get from the levying officer.

AMOUNT OF EXEMPTIONS: A list of the amounts of exemptions from a judgment under CCP § 703.150 starting on April 1, 2004, is available from the clerk of the court and on the California Courts Web site at www.courtinfo.ca.gov. Except as otherwise provided, the dollar amounts of the exemptions will be adjusted thereafter at three-year intervals on April 1, and the adjusted amounts will become effective immediately on that date.

Fair Debt Collection Practices & A Sample Letter to Debt Collection Agency

The Fair Debt Collection Practices Act (FDCPA) is a federal law that prohibits debt collectors from using abusive, unfair, dishonest, or misleading practices to collect money from you. The Federal Trade Commission (FTC) is the federal government's agency that enforces your rights under the FDCPA.<sup>2313</sup>

Under the FDCPA, a debt collector is someone who regularly collects debts owed to others. This includes collection agencies, lawyers who collect debts on a regular basis, and companies that buy overdue debts and then try to collect them.

Here are some questions and answers about your rights under the Act.

CAN A DEBT COLLECTOR CONTACT ME ANY TIME OR ANY PLACE?

No. A debt collector may not contact you at inconvenient times or places, such as before 8 AM or after 9 PM, unless you agree to it. And collectors may not contact you at work if they're told (orally or in writing) that you're not allowed to get calls there.

HOW CAN I STOP A DEBT COLLECTOR FROM CONTACTING ME?

If a collector contacts you about a debt, you may want to talk to them at least once to see if you can resolve the matter - even if you don't think you owe the debt, can't repay it immediately, or think that the collector is contacting you by mistake. If you decide after contacting the debt collector that you don't want the collector to contact you again, tell the collector - in writing - to stop contacting you. Here's how to do that:

Write a letter to the debt collector and make a copy of the letter (see PG. 702 below for a sample letter). Send the original by certified mail, and pay for a "return receipt" so you'll be able to prove that the collector received the letter. Once the collector receives your letter, they may not contact you again, with two exceptions: A collector can contact you to (1) tell you there will be no further contact, or (2) let you know that they or the creditor intend to take a specific action, like filing a lawsuit. Sending such a letter to a debt collector to whom you owe money will NOT get rid of the debt, but it should stop the contact. The creditor or the debt collector still can sue you in court to collect the debt.

CAN A DEBT COLLECTOR CONTACT ANYONE ELSE ABOUT MY DEBT?

If an attorney is representing you about the debt, the debt collector must contact the attorney, rather than you. If you don't have an attorney, a collector may contact other people - but only to find out your address, your home phone number, and where you work. Collectors usually are prohibited from contacting third parties more than once. Other than to obtain this location information about you, a debt collector generally is not permitted to discuss your debt with anyone other than you, your spouse, or your attorney.

WHAT DOES THE DEBT COLLECTOR HAVE TO TELL ME ABOUT THE DEBT?

Every collector must send you a written "validation notice" telling you how much money you owe within five days after they first contact you. This notice also must include the name of the creditor to whom you owe the money, and how to proceed if you don't think you owe the money.

CAN A DEBT COLLECTOR KEEP CONTACTING ME IF I DON'T THINK I OWE ANY MONEY?

If you send the debt collector a letter stating that you don't owe any or all of the money, or asking for verification (proof) of the debt, that collector must stop contacting you. You have to send that letter within 30 days after you receive the validation notice. But a collector can begin contacting you again if it sends you written proof of the debt, like a copy of a bill for the amount you owe.

WHAT PRACTICES ARE OFF LIMITS FOR DEBT COLLECTORS?

Harassment: Debt collectors may not harass, oppress, or abuse you or any third parties they contact. For example, they may not:

- use threats of violence or harm;

- publish a list of names of people who refuse to pay their debts (but they can give this information to the credit reporting companies);
- use obscene or profane language; or
- repeatedly use the phone to annoy someone.

False statements: Debt collectors may not lie when they are trying to collect a debt. For example, they may not:

- falsely claim that they are attorneys or government representatives;
- falsely claim that you have committed a crime;
- falsely represent that they operate or work for a credit reporting company;
- misrepresent the amount you owe;
- indicate that papers they send you are legal forms if they aren't; or
- indicate that papers they send to you aren't legal forms if they are.

> Debt collectors also are prohibited from saying that:

- you will be arrested if you don't pay your debt;
- they'll seize, garnish, attach, or sell your property or wages unless they are permitted by law to take the action and intend to do so; or
- legal action will be taken against you, if doing so would be illegal or if they don't intend to take the action.

> Debt collectors may not:

- give false credit information about you to anyone, including a credit reporting company;
- send you anything that looks like an official document from a court or government agency if it isn't; or
- use a false company name.

Unfair practices: Debt collectors may not engage in unfair practices when they try to collect a debt. For example, they may not:

- try to collect any interest, fee, or other charge on top of the amount you owe unless the contract that created your debt - or your state law - allows the charge;
- deposit a post-dated check early;
- take or threaten to take your property unless it can be done legally; or
- contact you by postcard.

CAN I CONTROL WHICH DEBTS MY PAYMENTS APPLY TO?

Yes. If a debt collector is trying to collect more than one debt from you, the collector must apply any payment you make to the debt you select. Equally important, a debt collector may not apply a payment to a debt you don't think you owe.

CAN A DEBT COLLECTOR GARNISH MY BANK ACCOUNT OR MY WAGES?

If you don't pay a debt, a creditor or its debt collector generally can sue you to collect. If they win, the court will enter a judgment against you. The judgment states the amount of money you owe, and allows the creditor or collector to get a garnishment order against you, directing a third party, like your bank, to turn over funds from your account to pay the debt.

Wage garnishment happens when your employer withholds part of your compensation to pay your debts. Your wages usually can be garnished only as the result of a court order. Don't ignore a lawsuit summons. If you do, you lose the opportunity to fight a wage garnishment.

CAN MY FEDERAL BENEFITS BE GARNISHED?

Many federal benefits are exempt from garnishment (meaning they cannot be taken to pay certain debts), including:

- Social Security Benefits
- Supplemental Security Income (SSI) Benefits
- Veterans' Benefits
- Civil Service and Federal Retirement and Disability Benefits
- Military Annuities and Survivors' Benefits
- Federal Emergency Management Agency Federal Disaster Assistance

BUT federal benefits may be garnished under certain circumstances, including to pay delinquent taxes, alimony, child support, or student loans.

WHAT ARE MY OPTIONS IF I THINK A DEBT COLLECTOR HAS VIOLATED THE LAW?

You have the right to sue a collector in a state or federal court within one year from the date the law was violated. If you win, the judge can require the collector to pay you for any damages you can prove you suffered because of the illegal collection practices, like lost wages and medical bills. The judge can require the debt collector to pay you up to $1,000, even if you can't prove that you suffered actual damages. You also can be reimbursed for your attorney's fees and court costs. A group of people also may sue a debt collector as part of a class action lawsuit and recover money for damages up to $500,000, or one percent of the collector's net worth, whichever amount is lower. Even if a debt collector violates the FDCPA in trying to collect a debt, the debt does not go away if you owe it.

WHAT SHOULD I DO IF A DEBT COLLECTOR SUES ME?

If a debt collector files a lawsuit against you to collect a debt, respond to the lawsuit, either personally or through your lawyer, by the date specified in the court papers to preserve your rights.

WHERE DO I REPORT A DEBT COLLECTOR FOR AN ALLEGED VIOLATION?

Report any problems you have with a debt collector to the California Attorney General's office, the Federal Trade Commission, and the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau. California has its own debt collection laws that may give you more rights and protections than the federal Fair Debt Collection Practices Act.

APPENDIX J

Steps To Get & Keep a Good Credit Score (Consumer Financial Protection Bureau)

See next page.

To get and keep a good credit score, pay attention to your credit report.

Your credit report shows information about how you have used credit, such as how much credit you have, how much of your available credit you are using, whether you have made your payments on time, and whether anyone has sent a loan you owe to a debt collector.

A credit score is a number that is used to predict how likely you are to pay back a loan. Your credit score starts with the information about you from your credit report. A mathematical prediction formula is applied to this information about you from your credit report. That prediction formula, which is called a scoring model, creates a number which is your credit score. You probably have numerous credit scores.

Credit scores are used by companies to make decisions such as whether to approve a mortgage at a certain rate or issue a credit card. Different lenders use different scoring formulas so your score can vary from lender to lender. Usually a higher score makes it easier to qualify for a loan and means a better rate of interest. Most scores range from 300-850, although there is one scoring method that uses a range from 501-990.

To get and keep a good credit score –

- Pay all your loans on time.
- Make sure information in your credit report is correct.
- Don't use too much of the credit that is available to you.

STEPS TO GET AND KEEP A GOOD CREDIT SCORE

PAY YOUR BILLS ON TIME

Pay your bills on time, every time. One way to make sure your payments are on time is to set up automatic payments at the creditor's website or from your bank's online site. But, you have to watch your bank balance to make sure you have enough money in your account to cover the payments. Also, don't just pay the minimum amount if you can afford to pay more, because it will take you much longer to pay off the debt if you only pay the minimum amount.

Tip: People with the best credit scores usually are those who pay off their credit cards in full every month.

DON'T GET CLOSE TO YOUR CREDIT LIMIT

Credit scoring models look at how close you are to being "maxed out," because the formulas predict that people who are using too much of their available credit may have future troubles with repayment. If you use too much of your total credit lines, you can hurt your credit score. Experts advise keeping your use of credit at no more than 30% or less of your total credit limit.

Tip: If you close some credit card accounts and put most or all of your credit card balances onto one card, it may hurt your credit score. That's because it will probably mean that you are using a high percentage of your total credit limit.

DON'T APPLY FOR A LOT OF NEW CREDIT IN A SHORT TIME, ESPECIALLY IF YOU ARE GETTING READY TO GET A MORTGAGE OR A CAR LOAN

Your credit score may decline if you have too many credit accounts, and if you apply for or open a lot of new accounts, such as several credit cards, in a short time. If you are planning to take out a big loan for a car or a house, be particularly careful not to apply for or open many new credit accounts within a short period before applying for the loan because doing so may affect your score. However when you request your own credit report, or when your creditors check your credit report, those requests to see your credit report should not hurt your score.

Tip: Opening new credit card accounts frequently to get the promotional rate or store discount will show up on your credit report as lots of new credit accounts, which is likely to hurt your credit score.

THE LONGER YOUR CREDIT HISTORY, THE BETTER

Credit scores are based on experience over time. The more experience you have with getting and paying for your credit, the more information there is to determine whether you are a good credit risk.

GET YOUR FREE CREDIT REPORT EVERY YEAR

Get free copies of your credit report from each of the big three consumer reporting agencies every year. If the information about you in the credit reports of the three large consumer reporting agencies is different, your credit score from each of the agencies will be different.

Online: You can order your credit report at www.annualcreditreport.com. Beware - some other sites that use the word "free" may charge you for another service in order to get your credit report. www.annualcreditreport.com really is free.

By phone: You can also order your free credit report by calling 877-322-8228.

By mail: To order free reports by mail, get the Annual Credit Report Request Form at www.ftc.gov/bcp/edu/resources/forms/requestformfinal.pdf and mail it to: Annual Credit Report Request Service, P.O. Box 105281, Atlanta, GA 30348-5281.

Tip: You don't have to buy your credit score. The information you receive from the agencies is adequate. If you do buy a score, it is likely that the score the lender buys will be different from the score that you buy.

READ YOUR CREDIT REPORT AND DISPUTE ANY ERRORS

If you find something wrong with your credit report, write to both the consumer reporting agency and the creditor that provided the information, if applicable, to tell them what you think is wrong and why. Include copies of any documents that support your position. When a consumer disputes credit report information, the agency and the creditor generally have to investigate the dispute and correct inaccurate information. For more information, please visit the FTC site www.ftc.gov/bcp/edu/pubs/consumer/credit/cre03.shtm.

AVOID PAYING UPFRONT FEES TO "REPAIR" YOUR NEGATIVE CREDIT HISTORY

There are a lot of places that promise to "repair" or "fix" your credit for an upfront fee but no one can remove negative information, such as late payments, from a credit report if it is accurate. You can only get your credit report fixed if it contains errors and you can do that on your own (see #6). According to the Federal Trade Commission, some companies who claim they can help you may get you in trouble by telling you to do something that could be illegal, such as setting up a false identity to hide your credit history from your creditors.

BE PROACTIVE IN DEALING WITH CREDIT

If you are having trouble paying creditors on time, the sooner you talk to your creditors the more likely it is you can work something out with them, such as a temporary payment plan. If you need help, look locally for a credit counselor but check to make sure they are trustworthy. If you are having trouble with your mortgage, there is help available through the government's Making Home Affordable program, www.mha.gov, or the HOPE Hotline – 888-995-HOPE. If you start to get debt collection mail or calls from someone you've never heard of, it could be that one of your debts was sold to a debt collector, or it could be a case of identity theft. Ignoring the problem usually makes it worse.

The Federal Trade Commission's "Building a Better Credit Report" (www.ftc.gov/bcp/edu/pubs/consumer/credit/cre03.shtm) has information on correcting errors in your report, tips on dealing with debt and avoiding scams—and more.

Consumer Debt and Tax Law Legal Referrals

Attorney Referrals

- Bill Taggart
300 Frank H Ogawa Plz Ste 370
Oakland, CA 94612
Phone: (510) 893-9999
Email: wetaggart@wtjrlaw.com
Notes: Provides consumer debt and tax law services at reasonable rates; his services were recommended by a contact in the Tax Law group at Latham & Watkins.
- Bay Area Legal Incubator (BALI)
BALI is a program that helps new attorneys get up and running with legal practices in which they are committed to providing affordable legal services. They practice in a range of areas, including consumer debt. Although they are based in Oakland, many of their attorneys are willing to take cases throughout the state. The best way to get in contact with them is by filling out an initial screening questionnaire on their website: <https://www.bayarealegalincubator.org>.

Low Income Taxpayer Clinic (LITC)

The Low Income Taxpayer Clinic (LITC) program is a matching grant program that provides federal funds to organizations so they in turn can provide LITC services to taxpayers who are low income or who speak English as a second language (ESL).

Clinics participating in the LITC program provide:

- Representation for individuals in disputes with the Internal Revenue Service (IRS), including audits, appeals, collection matters, and federal tax litigation. LITCs can also help taxpayers respond to IRS notices and correct account problems;
- Education about taxpayer rights and responsibilities; and
- Advocacy on behalf of low income and ESL taxpayers.

LITC services are free or low cost for eligible taxpayers. Although LITCs receive partial funding from the IRS, clinics, their employees, and their volunteers are completely independent of the IRS. Each clinic determines whether prospective clients meet income guidelines and other criteria before agreeing to represent them.

FAMILY & CHILDREN:

Reunification & Other Family-Related Issues

The FAMILY & CHILDREN CHAPTER will give you an overview of the issues that parents and caregivers experience when trying to reconnect with and care for their children, as well as legal issues that arise during incarceration related to children, spouses/partners, and other family-related issues. This Chapter will teach you how to establish or re-establish your rights, responsibilities, and relationship with your child(ren), and how to navigate the family court systems so that you can best handle any issues related to custody, guardianship, juvenile dependency/CPS cases, visitation, child support, spousal support, paternity, and ending marriages or domestic partnerships.

DISCLAIMER - YOUR RESPONSIBILITY WHEN USING THIS GUIDE: When putting together the Roadmap to Reentry: A California Legal Guide, we did our best to give you useful and accurate information. However, the laws change frequently and are subject to differing interpretations. We do not always have the resources to make changes to this informational material every time the law changes. If you use information from the Roadmap to Reentry legal guide, it is your responsibility to make sure that the law has not changed and applies to your particular situation. If you are incarcerated, most of the materials you need should be available in your institution's law library. The Roadmap to Reentry guide is not intending to give legal advice, but rather legal information. No attorney-client relationship is created by using any information in this guide. You should always consult your own attorney if you need legal advice specific to your situation.

FAMILY & CHILDREN APPENDIX..... 796

WHAT WILL I LEARN IN THE FAMILY & CHILDREN CHAPTER?

- Key terms and concepts that you will frequently come across when you are navigating family law issues.
- How to locate and reconnect with your child; how your incarceration, parole/probation, and any court orders (such as protective orders) could affect your rights and responsibilities as a parent.
- What the three different courts are that handle family law cases in California and how to best navigate each court system.
- What the rights and responsibilities of a parent or caregiver are to care for a child and to make decisions for him/her.
- What your rights are to see and spend time with your child.
- What happens when a judge appoints a legal guardian to care for a child, and what your rights and responsibilities are as a guardian or parent.
- Your options as a parent if CPS or a judge removes your child from your home, and how to become a guardian for a child in a dependency court case.
- How to get custody or visitation if your case involves your child's other parent.
- A basic overview of juvenile delinquency court and how your child's juvenile delinquency court case could affect your ability to reconnect with your child in reentry.
- Becoming an adoptive parent, reconnecting with a child who you gave birth to while incarcerated, establishing paternity/parentage, and other family issues in prison, jail, or reentry.
- How to end a marriage or domestic partnership while incarcerated or after your release, and what to do if your spouse wants a divorce while you are incarcerated.
- Child support payments and other child support issues, including what to do if you owe past, overdue child support payments when you return to the community from prison or jail.
- Domestic Violence-related restraining orders, options for getting a restraining order, and what to do if you have a restraining order against you.

I. INTRODUCTION

IMPORTANT! Always follow the conditions of any Criminal Protective Orders, Personal Conduct No-Contact Orders, or Supervision Conditions against you. For more information, go to PG 737.

Family support is the biggest predictor of success in reentry.<sup>2315</sup> Yet family law can be confusing and few family law attorneys represent people in reentry for free. This Chapter aims to provide you with information and resources on how to navigate legal issues related to your family and children, so you will be better equipped upon release.

This Chapter will explain basic family law issues you may face during your reentry. These issues are:

- Reunification with children.
- Stay-away orders from family members, children and loved ones.
- Creating and ending partnerships and marriages.
- Court-ordered debts related to a family law case (including “child support” and “spousal support”).

This Chapter will guide you through different legal questions that come up and different options you have as a parent, grandparent, spouse, or partner. It will also explain what your rights are as a parent or grandparent with a criminal record trying to reunify with your child or grandchild and/or gain greater legal rights.

We hope to provide you with the information you need to establish a positive relationship with your family and your community.

QUESTIONS? If you have questions after reading this Chapter, we recommend that you contact a lawyer, a case manager, or a trusted friend in the community to help you work through this material. You can also contact Root & Rebound and we will try to provide further assistance or referrals (call our Reentry Legal Hotline any Friday, 9 AM - 5 PM PST at phone number 510-279-4662, write to us at Root & Rebound, 1730 Franklin St., Suite 300, Oakland, CA 94612, or email us at roadmap@rootandrebound.org). You may also want to contact a local legal aid organization for help with your case. You can find a list of legal aid organizations across California on PG. 1127 at the back of guide.

KEY TERMS IN THE FAMILY & CHILDREN CHAPTER

If you are a parent or caregiver with a criminal record, and you have legal issues related to your family situation, it can help to know some basic legal concepts like: What is a guardian? What are custody and visitation? Here, we explain the definitions of some of the key terms that will appear again and again in this Chapter, so you can refer back.

Adoption: Adoption means giving complete parental rights and responsibilities to someone who is not the child’s biological (“by blood”) parent. Once the adoption is final, the adoptive parents are considered to be the child’s new legal parents, and the child’s birth parents no longer have any rights to the child. Adoption is permanent, meaning it generally can’t be changed afterward. An adoptive parent can be a stepparent or domestic partner of one of the child’s birth parents, a relative who has been caring for the child, or someone not related to the child by blood.

Arrears: Arrears are unpaid, overdue child support payments (child support debt). In other words, arrears are money you owe from past child support payments that you did not make. Arrears are different from current child support payments that you have to make now, which cover the cost of caring for your child today. Often, there are different rules for arrears (child support debt) and current child support payments (child support you owe now), so it’s important to know the difference. In addition, the state will charge you interest (10%) on your arrears, so the debt amount you owe will continue to increase—even if you’re actively paying your current child support payments.

“Best Interest of the Child”: This is the legal standard in any legal case involving a child’s care (like child custody and visitation cases) that the judge will use. The judge will ask what is in the “best interest of the child,” looking at factors like: the parent or caregiver’s criminal records and Child Protective Services (CPS) record, the child’s health and safety, and whether the child will be raised in a stable and loving environment.

Case Plan: A case plan is created by Child Protective Services (CPS) when it gets involved in a case regarding your child. The case plan sets out the steps you must take to get your child back. For example, a case plan could require you to attend parenting or counseling classes, participate in substance abuse treatment, and/or visit with your child. If CPS has removed your child from your home, your CPS social worker or the juvenile dependency court judge should give you a copy of your case plan, and as part of the case plan, the county must offer you certain programs and services that you need to complete your case plan for a limited amount of time upon reentry (see the term for “Family Reunification Services” for more information below).

Caregiver: A caregiver is a person responsible for a child’s care and supervision from day to day. The caregiver may or may not be the child’s biological parent OR the child’s legal guardian. In some cases, a caregiver who is a close blood relative of the child will have more legal rights in a given situation than a non-relative (meaning unrelated) caregiver.

Child Support Payment: A judge may order the parent who does not have custody (see definition below) of the child to pay child support to the parent who does have custody of the child. This “child support payment” is to help cover the cost of caring for the child.

Child Protective Services (CPS): CPS is the part of the California Department of Social Services (CDSS) that responds to reports of child abuse or neglect. Every county in California has a CPS office.

Court Order: A “court order” is a decision by a judge in court, usually in writing. A court order requires someone to do OR not do something. A court order might say whether you currently have custody and/or visitation with your child; who else has custody and/or visitation with your child; and which court is involved in your family’s case. Court orders also require you to do things like attend a parenting class or prevent you from contacting someone. It is important to know about any court orders in your child’s case, because a court order may restrict how and when you can contact your child OR your child’s caregiver—and will help you understand what steps to take next.

Custodial Parent: The custodial parent is the parent who has physical custody of his or her child, meaning the child lives with this parent. For comparison, see also definition for “non-custodial parent” below.

Custody: Custody is the legal rights and responsibilities to live with and care for your child. While you were in prison/jail, you were unable to have custody of your child. Once you’re released, if you want to communicate with, visit, or get custody of your child, you will need to find out who has custody of your child now.

- Physical Custody: The legal right to have your child live with you.
- Legal Custody: The legal right to make important decisions about your child’s health, education, and well-being.

Declaration of Paternity: A “Declaration of Paternity” is a legal document that says who is the “natural father” (the biological father) of a child. It must be signed by both of the child’s biological parents (father and mother).

Dependency Court: The court family cases are started in if a child’s parent(s) are suspected of abuse or neglect and Child Protective Services (CPS) has become involved in the child’s case.

Family Law Facilitator (sometimes called the Self-Help Facilitator): Every family court should have a “Family Law Facilitator,” which is someone who can help you with court forms, answer questions, provide general information about family law issues, and walk you through some of the steps of your case if you do not have a lawyer. However, the Family Law Facilitator cannot give any legal advice or answer questions about a specific case. To find your local Family Law Facilitator, see Appendix A, PG. 797, or go to <http://www.courts.ca.gov/selfhelp-facilitators.htm>.

Family Reunification Services: These are services that Child Protective Services (CPS) must provide you with, with certain exceptions, if it is involved in a legal case regarding you and your child.<sup>2316</sup> Family reunification services are meant to help you complete your “case plan” (see definition above) and any other dependency court requirements to encourage reunification with your child.

Foster Care: Sometimes when a child is removed from his or her parents’ home, the judge will send the child to live in a “foster care” placement. “Foster care” describes the placement of a child living with one or two “foster parents”—people who the State has licensed, trained and approved to care for children in their home. However, foster parents have fewer rights than legal guardians or biological parents, so the judge and Child Protective Services (CPS) will continue to be legally responsible for making decisions about the child.

WHO MIGHT BE A CAREGIVER?

The person caring for your child may be the child’s other parent, or may be a relative, family friend, foster parent, or someone else who has a relationship with your child. These are just some examples of people who might be caregivers - so your child’s situation may be different!

Guardian (or “Legal Guardian”): A guardian is an adult (not the child’s parent), such as a relative or family friend, who has legal and physical custody (see definitions under “custody” above) of the child. A guardianship does not terminate the parental rights of the child’s legal or biological parents; it only puts their parental rights on hold while the guardian has physical and legal custody.<sup>2317</sup> Learn more about guardians on PG. 748.

Lien: A lien is the right to take (and sell) property belonging to another person until that person pays off a debt s/he owes. For more information about liens, read the COURT-ORDERED DEBT CHAPTER, beginning on PG. 654.

Local Child Support Agency (LCSA): LCSAs are county-run offices that collect and enforce child support payments by making sure that custodial parents and guardians receive the payments from non-custodial parents.

Non-Custodial Parent: The non-custodial parent is the parent who does not have physical custody of his or her child. For comparison, see also definition for “custodial parent” above.

Notice: In any case involving you and your rights as a parent, you are legally required to receive “notice” of the case, which means you must be informed of the case. This “notice” could be a letter mailed to you, an announcement made by the judge in court, paperwork handed to you in person in court, at your home, or while you are incarcerated. Depending on your role in the case, you may have the right to get the “notice” papers handed to you IN PERSON—even while incarcerated. Often, a local law enforcement officer or Sheriff takes on the role of giving people “notice” papers inside prison or jail.

Parent: We use the term “parent” to describe the child’s legal or biological mother or father, with the understanding that the child’s parent(s) may or may not be caring for the child from day to day. See also “caregiver” to understand how that person could be someone other than a child’s “parent.”

Parental Rights: Parents (see definition above) have a lot of legal rights with respect to their minor children, including the right to live with, care for, and make decisions for their children under the age of 18. These rights are called “parental rights.” In some situations, a parent’s rights can be temporarily put on hold and/or given to someone else (such as a legal guardian). In extreme situations, a parent’s rights may be taken away permanently (through the termination of parental rights and adoption of the child by another person or family). However, parents have the right to special legal protections before their legal rights can be changed or taken away without their permission.

Petition/Petitioner: A petition is a legal document that asks a judge to do or not do something. A petitioner is the person (or people) who asks the judge to do this, by filing the petition in court.

Restraining Order (Protective Order): A restraining order is a court order from a judge that can protect someone from being physically harmed, threatened, stalked, or harassed. The person who asks for and is protected by the restraining order is called the “protected person” (or protected party). The person whom the restraining order is against is called the “restrained person” (or restrained party). There are several types of restraining orders:

- Domestic violence restraining order: if someone is the victim of domestic violence, they can request a domestic violence restraining order.
- Personal conduct order: This type of order prohibits (stops) the restrained person from doing specific acts towards the protected person. For example, the order may prohibit the restrained person from contacting, stalking, sexually assaulting, or destroying property of the protected person.
- Stay-away order: This type of order requires the restrained person to stay a certain distance away from the protected person and/or from a specific place (such as the protected person’s house or workplace).
- Residence exclusion order: This type of order requires the restrained person to move out from where the protected person lives, and to take only their own clothing or personal belongings until there is a court hearing.

<sup>2317</sup> By contrast, adoption does terminate the parental rights of the child’s legal or biological parents, and also creates a permanent parent/child relationship between the child and his/her adoptive parent. See CAL. FAM. CODE § 7505(a) (cessation of parental authority upon appointment of guardian); CAL. PROB. CODE § 2351(a) (custody rights of guardian); CAL. WELF. & INST. CODE § 366.26 (distinguishing between termination of parental rights and guardianship proceedings; contrast adoption, which terminates parental rights, with guardianship, which does not); In re Guardianship of Ann S., 45 Cal. 4th 1110, 1124 (2009) (probate guardianship suspends parental rights).

Reunification: Reunification can mean 2 things: In the real world (i.e., outside of court), reunification can mean reuniting with your child and (re)developing a relationship with him/her. In court, reunification means getting back your legal right to care for your child, after s/he has been removed by CPS.

Removal: When CPS or a judge takes a child away from his/her parent's custody.

Visitation: Visitation is the legal right to spend time with your child.<sup>2318</sup> When a judge makes a custody order, he/she must give visitation rights to the parent who does not have custody of the child, unless granting visitation is not in the child's best interest.<sup>2319</sup>

THE IMPACT OF A CRIMINAL RECORD ON A LEGAL CASE ABOUT YOUR CHILD OR GRANDCHILD

WHAT IS A CRIMINAL RECORD?

Before we jump deep into family law issues, we think it's important to understand what a "criminal record" is. In the UNDERSTANDING & CLEANING UP YOUR CRIMINAL RECORD CHAPTER, PG. 931, we go into more detail about what a criminal record is and who can access it. Here is a quick summary.

Your "criminal record" is the broad term used to describe any contact you have had with law enforcement, the courts, or another part of the criminal justice system that was written down (recorded). Your entire criminal record includes: arrests (whether or not they led to a conviction), any criminal charges filed against you, convictions (felonies or misdemeanors, even if they get "expunged"), pleas, acquittals ("not guilty" findings), dismissals, sentences, periods of incarceration in jail or prison, and any other contact with the criminal justice system. BUT—and this is an important but—not everyone can see this entire record because some criminal records are protected under certain circumstances.

To learn more about criminal records, go to the UNDERSTANDING & CLEANING UP YOUR CRIMINAL RECORD CHAPTER on PG. 654.

HOW WILL MY CRIMINAL RECORD IMPACT MY ABILITY TO RECONNECT WITH MY CHILD OR GRANDCHILD?

In any legal case involving children, a criminal record could, and often does, affect your ability to reconnect with a child or grandchild.

A judge making decisions about the care of a child will look at anything and everything about a child's and the parents' life that relates to the well-being of the child and who is best suited to care for and have a relationship with that child.<sup>2320</sup> This includes the judge looking at things like:

- Your FULL criminal record (including dismissed/expunged/sealed records);<sup>2321</sup>
- Your Child Protective Services (CPS) records;
- Current or past court orders;
- Current or past stay-away or protective orders against you (or that you took out against someone else);<sup>2322</sup>
- Social media like Facebook, Instagram accounts, etc. for any evidence about you as a person and parent;
- Your home and setup, in which Court investigators and sometimes attorneys and social workers will visit the place you live to assess you, your interactions with your child and other people in your home; and your overall living situation;<sup>2323</sup> and
- Your past and current contact with your child.

WHAT ARE EXAMPLES OF LEGAL CASES INVOLVING CHILDREN?

Examples of legal cases involving children include cases about: custody, visitation, ending a marriage, adoption, guardianship, CPS/dependency cases, and fostering a child. These cases may also involve questions about paternity/parentage, child support, spousal support, and/or protective orders.

<sup>2320</sup> CAL. FAM. CODE § 3011 (A court will look at a parent's criminal record "among any other factors it finds relevant" when making a decision about who cares for a child.); CAL. PENAL CODE § 11105 (b)(1).

<sup>2323</sup> CAL. FAM. CODE § 3011 (In making a determination on what is the "best interests of a child," the court can consider any "relevant" factors. The court must look to all the circumstances bearing on the best interests of the minor child.)

Even though your record will come up in court, it is often STILL POSSIBLE to reconnect with your child or grandchild.

ARE THERE ANY CONVICTIONS THAT WILL AUTOMATICALLY BAN ME FROM RECONNECTING WITH MY CHILD OR GRANDCHILD?

Yes. For some conviction offenses, the law will automatically ban you from reconnecting with a child/grandchild. And for some conviction offenses, a judge is unlikely to grant full custody or unsupervised visitation. See the chart that follows.

HOW DIFFERENT CONVICTIONS WILL AFFECT YOUR CUSTODY & VISITATION RIGHTS
CONVICTION OFFENSE	HOW WILL THIS AFFECT MY CHANCES OF GETTING CUSTODY OR VISITATION?
Domestic Violence	Judges are hesitant to give custody to someone who has engaged in domestic violence, and will consider any history of domestic abuse against your child, the other parent, or a partner. <sup>2324</sup>
Rape	A judge will not allow someone who has been convicted of rape to have any custody or visitation with a child who was conceived from that rape. <sup>2325</sup>
Other Convictions	A judge usually will not grant custody or unsupervised visitation in the following circumstances, unless the s/he finds that there is no risk of harm to your child: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• If you have a conviction for certain child abuse offenses,<sup>2326</sup></li> <li>• If you have a conviction for first-degree murder of the child’s other parent; and/or</li> <li>• If you are a 290-sex offender registrant for an offense where the victim was a minor (under 18), or if you live with someone else who is a 290-sex offender registrant for an offense where the victim was a minor (under 18).<sup>2327</sup></li> </ul>

For more information on how your criminal record will be a factor in a judge’s decision regarding your custody/visitation rights, see PG. 735.

<sup>2324</sup> CAL. FAM. CODE §§ 3011(b), 3020(a), 3031, 3044. The judge will also consider any restraining or protective orders against you. Nonetheless, you may still be able to get custody by showing that you have completed all court-ordered treatment and/or behavioral programs (e.g., batterer’s treatment program, parenting classes, anger management, drug or alcohol treatment, or conditions of probation or parole); complied with all parole/probation/supervision requirements; complied with any restraining or protective orders against you; have not committed any further domestic violence; and that custody would be in your child’s best interest. CAL. FAM. CODE § 3044(b).

<sup>2327</sup> CAL. FAM. CODE § 3030; see also CAL. PENAL CODE § 290. For child abuse convictions and registered sex offender registrants, the judge must find that there is “no significant risk to the child.” § 3030(a). For first-degree murder of the other parent, the judge must find that there is “no risk to the child’s health, safety and welfare.” § 3030(c). In both cases, the judge must state his/her reasons in writing or on the record. However, the judge may still permit supervised visitation in these cases.

II. THE RIGHTS OF PARENTS & GRANDPARENTS

WHAT WILL I LEARN ABOUT PARENTS' & GRANDPARENTS' RIGHTS?

- Whether or not the law automatically gives you the right to care for your child.
- The difference between your rights as a parent to care for your child and your rights as a grandparent to care for your grandchild.
- How a grandparent can make informal or formal arrangements to care for a grandchild

ANY AUTOMATIC RIGHTS?

DO I AUTOMATICALLY HAVE A RIGHT TO CARE FOR MY CHILD OR GRANDCHILD?

Not necessarily. Although it may seem like parents and grandparents would have automatic rights to care for a child, being blood-related (biologically related) or married to someone who is blood-related to a child does not mean you automatically have the right to live with, see, or make decisions about your child or grandchild. It's also important to note that the legal rights of parents are MUCH stronger than those of grandparents. Below we discuss whether you have the legal right to care for a child as a parent and grandparent:

For Parents: The law assumes that a child's parents—biological or adopted—will make decisions in the “best interest of the child.” so they usually have the automatic legal right to do so.<sup>2328</sup> Courts get involved when something goes wrong, and then the judge makes decisions based on what is in “the best interest of the child” (learn more on what factors a judge looks at in deciding what is in the “best interest of the child” on PG. 735).

- For women, if you give birth to a child, you are the child's biological parent and so under the law you have the automatic legal right to care for that child unless (1) you have chosen to give up your parental rights through adoption OR (2) the state limited or took away your parental rights for a certain reason.<sup>2329</sup>
- For men, if it is scientifically proven that you are the biological father of the child (this is called paternity) or you were married to or in a domestic partnership with the mother when the child was born, then you have the automatic legal right to care for that child unless (1) you have chosen to give up your parental rights through adoption OR (2) the state limited or took away your parental rights for a certain reason.<sup>2330</sup>

For Grandparents: Under the law, grandparents do NOT have any automatic legal rights to see or care for their grandchildren. In other words, just because your biological child has a child of his or her own does NOT mean you have any legal right to care for or make decisions about that grandchild.<sup>2331</sup> But a grandparent CAN make informal or formal arrangements to take care of or see their grandchildren.

- Informally, absent any legal restrictions due to your criminal background, you MAY be able to make arrangements with your grandchild's caregiver or parent(s) to spend time with your grandchild.
- If an informal arrangement isn't possible, then a grandparent could ask a judge in court for custody or visitation with their grandchildren.
  - In family court, a grandparent can join an ongoing case involving the grandchildren and ask for custody or visitation.<sup>2332</sup> For more information on Family Court, see PG. 744
  - In probate court, a grandparent can start a case or join on ongoing case and request permanent or temporary guardianship of their grandchildren if a parent is UNABLE to take care of the child. For more information on Probate Court, see PG 748.
  - In dependency court, a grandparent can ask the judge and the county's Child Protective Services (CPS) to take care of their grandchild(ren) when a child has been removed from their parents' care due to abuse or neglect allegations. For more information on Dependency Court, see PG. 755.

Again, whether or not a grandparent will be able to get legal custody of their grandchildren through a formal court case in family court, probate court or dependency court will all depend on what a judge decides is in the “best interest of the child”—learn more about this standard on PG. 735.

<sup>2330</sup> Judicial Council of Cal., Parentage/Paternity (2015), <http://www.courts.ca.gov/selfhelp-parentage.htm>. (“The law will presume a person is a child's other parent under the following circumstances (unless proved otherwise to a court). For example, John will be presumed to be the child's other parent if: He was married to the child's mother when the child was conceived or born; He attempted to marry the mother (even if the marriage was not valid) and the child was conceived or born during the “marriage”; He married the mother after the birth and agreed either to have his name on the birth certificate or to support the child; or He welcomed the child into his home and openly acted as if the child was his own. This concept is called “parentage by estoppel” and means that the court can find that a man is the legal father, even if he is not the biological father, if he has always treated the child as his own. The presumptions that apply to married couples also apply to those who entered into a registered domestic partnership after January 2005.”).

III. BASIC STEPS TO RECONNECT WITH YOUR CHILD OR GRANDCHILD

WHAT WILL I LEARN ABOUT RECONNECTING WITH CHILDREN?

- Steps you can take to start the process of reconnecting with your child or grandchild.
- What a court order is and why it is important for understanding your rights and responsibilities when reconnecting with your child, and how to find out if there is a court order concerning your child.
- How conditions of parole or probation might impact your ability to reconnect with your child.
- Ideas for how to locate your child.
- How you can find out whether your child or grandchild has an open court case, and what to do if there is or is not an open court case involving your child or grandchild.

Below are basic steps to reconnect with your child or grandchild in your reentry. The steps mostly focus on parents reconnecting with their child(ren), but we also make note of rules that specifically apply to grandparents.

For Parents: Everyone's relationship with their child is different and the ways in which a parent's incarceration will affect that relationship will be different too. But the law assumes that it is best for a child to have a relationship with both parents, unless there is a specific reason to believe that contact with one or both parents will harm the child.<sup>2333</sup> If you have been incarcerated but are genuinely ready to play a positive role in your child's life and still maintain some or all of your parental rights, then the law says your child should be able to reconnect with you so long as that is safe and health for him or her. In any legal case involving your child, the judge must decide what is the "best interest of your child."<sup>2334</sup> For more information on what factors a judge looks at in deciding the "best interest of the child," see PG. 735.

IMPORTANT! Always follow the conditions of any Criminal Protective Orders, Personal Conduct No-Contact Orders, or Supervision Conditions against you. For more information, go to PG. 737.

I AM IN REENTRY, AND I WANT TO RECONNECT WITH MY CHILD OR GRANDCHILD. WHERE CAN I START?

STEP 1: Find out if there are any court orders that could limit or stop you from contacting your child and/or your child's caregiver.

> What is a court order?

A court order is a legal decision by a judge requiring something. It could affect your ability to reconnect with your child, so it is very important to know about them. A court order could impact you in the following ways:

- A court order could limit your custody or visitation rights.
- A court order could require you to DO or NOT DO something.<sup>2335</sup>

> Why are court orders important to know about when I am trying to reconnect with my child?

Court orders are very important because they may explain your rights and responsibilities with your child—including when and how you are allowed to visit and contact the child. If you break a court order, then you could ruin your ability to reconnect with your child. Why? By violating the court order, you could face civil or criminal consequences that could prohibit you from contacting your child at all. Also, breaking a court order is a violation of the law as well as a violation of supervision. If you want to change a court order, you need to go to the court where the order is from and ask about the process to change it.

EXAMPLES OF COURT ORDERS

Examples of court orders include Personal Conduct No-Contact Orders, Restraining Orders, and Criminal Protective Orders. For full definitions of each of these types of orders, see the "Key Terms" section of this Chapter, beginning on PG. 722.

For more information on how your criminal record will be a factor in a judge's decision regarding your custody/visitation rights, see PG. 796.

> How do I know if there is a court order affecting my rights with my child?

IF YOU WERE SERVED WITH COURT PAPERS (before, during, or after your incarceration), check the papers to see if they include court orders that limit your custody and/or visitation rights with your child OR limit your ability to contact your child and/or your child's other parent or current caregiver (for grandparents, the child's caregiver might be your child, your grandchild's other parent, or someone else).

IF YOU ARE NOT SURE IF THERE ARE ANY COURT ORDERS, you can find out by contacting the clerk in the local county court where your child's case is going on. You can usually call the clerk's office by phone or go in person when the clerk's office is open. Ask for copies of ALL the court orders in the case. Usually, a court order will say "court order" or "order" on the paperwork.

To figure out if there is a case in court that involves your child and more information on this question, see Step 4 on PG. 729 below.

STEP 2: Find out if there are any CONDITIONS OF PAROLE, PROBATION, OR OTHER TYPE OF COMMUNITY SUPERVISION that could limit or stop you from contacting your child and/or your child's caregiver.

If you are on parole, probation, or some other type of community supervision, you must get to know and follow ALL of the terms and conditions of your supervision. This includes any rules about whom you can and cannot contact, places where you can and cannot travel, move, live, or visit.

These conditions can impact your ability to see or visit your child(ren)—so be aware of them BEFORE you start contacting or visiting them.

If you want to change any conditions of supervision, read about the process for your type of community supervision in the PAROLE & PROBATION CHAPTER of this guide: see PG. 178 (state parole); 205 (PRCS); 198 (Mandatory Supervision), 198 (informal probation), 202 (formal probation), 219 (Federal Supervised Release or Federal Probation). Until and unless a supervision condition is changed through the legal process, you should ALWAYS FOLLOW IT!

You may also be able to request a travel pass from your parole or probation officer to travel beyond where you are normally allowed to go. You may need a travel pass to attend a court hearing or visit with family members or friends for your case. For more information about travel restrictions and other conditions of supervision, see PG. 125 in the PAROLE & PROBATION CHAPTER. For more information about protective, no-contact, and restraining orders, see also PG. 737.

STEP 3: Locate your child.

If you do not already know where your child is, the next step is to locate your child—so long as there are no court orders or conditions of your supervision that prevent you from contacting your child or child's caregiver.

You will need to know the location of your child and child's caregiver if you want to contact that child or "serve" the caregiver with any court papers, if you open a case. (To "serve" someone with court papers means to give proper legal documentation and notification about a court case to certain required people.)

HELPFUL HINT

General Tips for Locating Your Child

4. IF CHILD PROTECTIVE SERVICES (CPS) IS INVOLVED in your child's case, you can contact CPS to help you locate your child and current caregiver.
5. IF CPS IS NOT INVOLVED in your child's case, you could try to call family members, friends, the other parent, or the other parent's family or friends—so long as this contact would not violate any court orders, parole/probation conditions, personal conduct no-contact and/or protective orders!
6. IF YOU STILL CAN'T LOCATE YOUR CHILD, you could try social media (such as Facebook or Twitter) to ask if a friend or family member knows where your child is or who is taking care of him/her. Remember to always be safe and careful—only contact people you trust, and follow any orders or supervision conditions against you!

STEP 4: Find out if there is a court case (an open case or a past case) involving your child(ren).

Next, you will need to know if there's already a court case (open OR closed) involving your child(ren).

For Parents: By law, when a court case is filed about a child, both parents have the rights to (1) be notified of the case, (2) be sent copies of the court documents, and (3) have the chance to respond.

IF YOU WERE SERVED WITH COURT PAPERS ABOUT YOUR CHILD'S CASE WHILE YOU WERE INCARCERATED, those papers should tell you: (1) the case number, and (2) the exact court the case was in.

GET UP-TO-DATE COURT PAPERS!

Even if you were served with court papers while in prison/jail, it is best to get a new copy of the court order once you get out to make sure that you have all the most up-to-date papers.

PLEASE NOTE: Mistakes often happen with the legal filing and mailing processes—so if you’re a parent, there’s a chance that you didn’t receive the papers that you should have; let the judge know if this happened!

For Grandparents: You may be able to request court papers on open cases about your grandchild if you can show:

- 1) You have actual knowledge or belief that the court records exist AND
- 2) The papers are necessary for you to see.<sup>2336</sup>

HELPFUL HINT

General Tips for Figuring Out if there is a Court Case Involving Your Child or Grandchild

1. ASK A CAREGIVER: If you know your child’s caregiver, you can ask him or her about any court case(s) involving your child. It can help to ask (1) which court the case is (or was) in; (2) the case number (if the caregiver can find it); (3) copies of any court or legal papers from your child’s case; and (4) any other information that you can find out.
2. CONTACT THE COURT: If you don’t know where or with whom your child is living (or if the caregiver won’t give you any information), you could contact ALL THREE COURTS in the county where your child lives (or where your child was living when you last knew)—(1) family court, (2) probate court, and (3) dependency court. Be prepared to provide as much information as you can about your child and yourself.<sup>2337</sup>

STEP 5: IF THERE IS A COURT CASE INVOLVING YOUR CHILD, it is best to next contact the court clerk to request a copy of any court orders and other documents about the court case, and ask to join the case.

If there is a court case involving your child, you will most likely have to join that case, as opposed to starting a new one, to increase your custody or visitation rights.

FOR ANY CASE—WHETHER IT IS OPEN OR IN THE PAST—ALWAYS GET COPIES OF ANY COURT ORDERS! Getting copies of all court papers, including court orders, are an important part of the process of learning about or joining a case. Court orders can explain your current rights and responsibilities with your child—including when and how you are allowed to visit and contact the child OR limiting or preventing you from contacting the child. If you want more custody or visitation, you may need to ask the judge to change this court order.

IF CPS IS INVOLVED IN YOUR CHILD’S CASE, ask the clerk at the dependency court in the county where your child lives for any court orders.<sup>2338</sup> You can also ask your county social worker and/or the dependency court judge for:

- (1) A copy of your case plan, which explains what you need to do to get your child back (IF that is an option at this point in time); AND
- (2) Family reunification services, which are classes and programs to help you get your child back.
- Learn more about the Juvenile Dependency Court Process on PG. 755).

- For juvenile dependency court rules and procedures, see PG. 755.
- For family court rules and procedures, see PG. 744.
- For a SUMMARY of the three family-related courts listed here, see the chart on PG. 741.

STEP 6: IF THERE IS NO COURT CASE INVOLVING YOUR CHILD and NO COURT ORDERS, you will likely need to open a new case to ask a judge for more rights and responsibilities as a parent.

For Parents: If there is no court case involving your child OR no court order in your child’s case, you will likely need to open a new case.

To start a new case, you may need to file a “petition” in court, which means you file specific paperwork to ask the judge for more rights and responsibilities as a parent (or caregiver). And depending on what rights you want to get (for example, custody, visitation, guardianship, etc.), you may need to go to one of the courts discussed on PG. 741).

<sup>2336</sup> CAL. R. CT. rule 5.552(c); see also Charles S v Superior Court, 168 Cal. App. 3d 151 (1985) (A grandparent’s interest in the child has been ruled to sufficiently strong to warrant involvement in court proceedings in the past.) (setting the precedence that any relative who is interested in the welfare of the child has standing to participate in juvenile court proceedings).

- For probate court rules and procedures, see PG. 748.
- For juvenile dependency court rules and procedures, see PG. 755.
- For family court rules and procedures, see PG. 744.
- For a SUMMARY of the three family-related courts listed here, see the chart on PG. 741.

Once you file a petition in the proper court, you will have to prepare to go to court for a hearing or other procedures. Each of the three family-related courts in California has different powers, different rules, and different procedures that you need to be aware of before going to court.

Exactly how your record will impact your request for greater custody and visitation rights will depend on the court your case is in and the exact conviction(s) on your record. Some convictions will completely prevent you as a parent or a grandparent from getting custody or visitation of your child or grandchild. For more information on the impact of specific convictions, see PG. 726.

You may also consider asking a judge for VISITATION before you ask for full CUSTODY. Read the helpful hint box on PG. 731 for more information.

HELPFUL HINT

It's Easier to Get Visitation Rights than Custody

In general, if you are the child's parent, it is usually easier to get visitation rights with your child at first, rather than full custody after a period of incarceration. California has a strong public policy of supporting parent-child relationships and allowing visits unless they will be harmful to the child.<sup>2339</sup> Asking a judge for visitation rights with your child—and then allowing for some time to show that the visits are going well—can be a great first step to getting custody. Through visitation with your child, you can show a judge that you are responsible, have a good relationship with your child, and eventually request greater custody rights.

For Grandparents Who Want to Reunify with Grandchildren: If there is no existing court case regarding your grandchild, your options are limited because you can only start a new case in very limited circumstances. Read the section on “Grandparents Rights” on PG. 745 for more information on when a grandparent can start a new case.

Yes, a criminal record could, and often does, affect your ability to reconnect with your child or grandchild. But in many cases, it is STILL POSSIBLE to reconnect with your child or grandchild, even though your record will come up in court.

IV. DEFINING CUSTODY & VISITATION

WHAT WILL I LEARN ABOUT CUSTODY & VISITATION?

- What custody is and different types of custody.
- What legal and physical custody arrangements like in real life.
- What visitation is and how a judge can make different types of visitation orders depending on a parent’s (or caregiver’s) situation.
- What visitation plans could look like in real life.

WHAT DO CUSTODY AND VISITATION HAVE TO DO WITH MY REENTRY?

“Custody” and “visitation” are important legal concepts in reentry because you may not be able to see or care for your child or grandchild as soon as you get out of prison or jail. You might have to go to court to have visits or custody of the child(ren) you want to reconnect with, and your criminal record is likely to be a factor a judge looks at if you must go to court.

CUSTODY

WHAT DOES CUSTODY MEAN?

“Custody” is the legal right to care for and make decisions about a child.<sup>2340</sup> A judge will make an order deciding who has custody of a child, whether it is one parent, both parents, or in special circumstances, another caregiver.<sup>2341</sup> There are two types of custody that a judge can make decisions about: (1) physical custody and (2) legal custody.<sup>2342</sup> A parent or caregiver can have both physical custody AND legal custody (as parents often do), or just one of these forms of custody.<sup>2343</sup> Other terms like “joint custody” or “joint physical custody” mean that both parents share in their parenting responsibilities.<sup>2344</sup> When a parent has “sole legal custody” this means that only one parent has the ability to make decisions about a child.<sup>2345</sup>

THIS CHART EXPLAINS THE DIFFERENT TYPES OF CUSTODY ARRANGEMENTS THAT A PERSON CAN HAVE THROUGH A COURT:

TYPES AND MEANINGS OF CUSTODY
PHYSICAL CUSTODY TYPES AND MEANING	LEGAL CUSTODY TYPES AND MEANING
SOLE PHYSICAL CUSTODY: Your child lives with you full time (although the other parent or caregiver may have visitation rights). You, and only you, are responsible for your child’s daily care and supervision. NOTE: It’s very common for one parent/caregiver to have both sole physical custody and sole legal custody.	SOLE LEGAL CUSTODY: You, and only you, are the person who can make important decisions about your child’s health, education, and well being. NOTE: It’s very common for one parent/caregiver to have both sole physical custody and sole legal custody.
JOINT PHYSICAL CUSTODY: Your child lives with you part of the time, and with the other parent (or caregiver) part of the time. You are responsible for your child’s care and supervision when s/he is with you, and someone else is responsible for your child’s care when the child is with him/her. Joint physical custody does not necessarily mean there is an equal 50/50 split in time between parents (or caregivers); it could be that the child spends more time with one parent than the other. This is still joint custody.	JOINT LEGAL CUSTODY: You and the other parent (or caregiver) share the right to make important decisions about your child. It is possible for the judge to give the parents joint legal custody, but still give one parent complete power to make certain types of decisions alone, and have both parents share responsibilities for other types of decisions. An important note: Even when both parents have the right to make decisions about the child, they do not have to agree on every decision. Either parent can make the decision alone, and they have an independent right to do so.<sup>2346</sup>

WHAT DO LEGAL AND PHYSICAL CUSTODY ARRANGEMENTS LOOK LIKE IN REAL LIFE?

There are so many different possible arrangements and combinations of legal and physical custody (sole and joint). Here are some examples that show these concepts in real life. Remember, these are just examples—no two situations are exactly the same. There is no such thing as a “normal custody arrangement,” so it is okay if your situation is different than in these three stories.

COMMON EXAMPLES OF CUSTODY ARRANGEMENTS

STORY #1: Jessica is an 8-year-old girl. The judge gave her mother, Maria, sole physical custody, meaning that Jessica lives with Maria full time. Jessica’s father, John, recently returned home from prison and asked the court for visitation. The court gave him weekly visitation with Jessica, but not any physical custody. However, the court gave both Maria and John joint legal custody over Jessica, which means they both get to make important decisions for her—like medical decisions and where to go to school, etc. But only Maria has physical custody, meaning that only Maria is responsible for Jessica’s day-to-day care. To change this arrangement, John would need to go to court to ask for joint physical custody.

STORY #2: David’s parents, Carlos and Rashida, are separated, but the judge gave them joint physical custody and joint legal custody of their son. David lives with Rashida during most of the week (Monday-Thursday), and with Carlos on weekends (Friday-Sunday). Rashida and Carlos live in the same school district, so David can attend school normally during the week. Rashida and Carlos also share joint legal custody, which means they both get to make important decisions for their child—like medical decisions, where to go to school, etc.

STORY #3: The judge appointed Kerry’s grandmother, Mary, as her legal guardian, because both of Kerry’s parents were unable to care for her due to their drug addiction. This means that Mary has both sole physical and legal custody of Kerry. Kerry lives with Mary (physical custody), and Mary gets to make all important decisions for Kerry (legal custody)—like medical decisions, where to go to school, etc. Kerry’s parents do NOT have physical or legal custody of their child, but her father, Joseph, asked the judge and got supervised visitation with her. Kerry’s mother, Janet, is currently incarcerated and does not have visitation (but she can ask the judge for visitation rights while she’s in prison or after she gets out).

VISITATION

WHAT DOES VISITATION MEAN?

“Visitation” is the legal right to visit and spend time with a child. A judge can write an order describing when and how often the parent, grandparent, or other family member can visit the child. When a judge decides a person’s parental rights are limited to seeing and spending time with a child rather than living with and making major decisions for the child, this means that person does NOT have “custody” of the child. Visits can be for the day or overnight, supervised, or unsupervised.

THIS CHART EXPLAINS THE 3 TYPES OF VISITATION PLANS A COURT COULD ORDER:

TYPES OF VISITATION PLANS

REASONABLE VISITATION—a flexible plan that allows the petitioning parent to work out the details of visits with the other parent (or caregiver)—such as when, where, how often, and for how long the visits will take place.

SCHEDULED VISITATION—a detailed plan with exact dates and times for the parent to visit the child.

SUPERVISED VISITATION—a plan that allows the petitioning parent to visit their child regularly but requires someone else to be present and supervising the visits, to make sure that the child is safe and that the parent and child get along well.<sup>2347</sup>

NO VISITATION—the judge may decide not to give the parent any visitation at all. This happens if the judge is concerned that a parent will harm a child and thinks it’s best for the child not to have contact with the parent.

<sup>2347</sup> The judge may grant supervised visitation if s/he thinks that your child should see you regularly, but (1) has concerns about the child’s safety, or (2) you haven’t seen your child in a long time and need time to be (re)introduced. The judge’s supervised visitation order will state when you can visit your child, and may also state where and who the supervisor will be. A non-professional supervisor can be a family member or friend who cares about the child and wants to help. A professional supervisor is someone trained and experienced in providing supervision services, and will likely charge a fee for the services. All supervisors are legally required to report suspected child abuse. CAL. FAM. CODE § 3200 et seq.; CAL. RULES OF COURT § 5.20.

WHAT DO VISITATION ARRANGEMENTS LOOK LIKE IN REAL LIFE?

Here are some common examples of visitation arrangements:

COMMON EXAMPLES OF VISITATION ARRANGEMENTS

STORY #1: Robin and Sally are married and have three children. After Robin was incarcerated, Sally filed for a separation from Robin and requested sole custody, both legal and physical, of all the children. The judge granted Sally's requests for both the separation and the custody of the children. Upon his release, Sally and Robin agreed on a reasonable visitation plan that allowed Robin and Sally to create their own visitation schedule without a judge. Every Sunday, Robin and Sally would meet at Sally's home to figure out when Robin could see the children and for how long. This is reasonable visitation.

STORY #2: Robin wanted more time with his children each week so he asked if they could agree on a different visitation schedule. Sally and Robin were not getting along well since Robin's reentry; Sally felt uncomfortable with giving Robin more time with the children so she said no. Robin went to court and asked a judge to grant more visitation with the children. Because Robin and Sally could not come to an agreement and the judge did not find any reason for denying Robin time with his children, the judge ordered a visitation schedule that provided the exact days and times Robin could spend time with his children. This is a scheduled visitation.

STORY #3: Sally asked the judge to deny Robin visitation with the children. Sally presented evidence about Robin's behavior and the judge decided that Robin could not spend time with the children without supervision. The judge ordered supervised visitation for Robin. He was able to see his children twice a week, but the visits took place at a court ordered place with someone designated by the court to supervise. This is supervised visitation.

V. JUDGES, COURTS & THE “BEST INTEREST OF THE CHILD” LEGAL STANDARD

WHAT WILL I LEARN ABOUT JUDGES, COURTS & THE “BEST INTEREST OF THE CHILD” LEGAL STANDARD?

- Why the court would be involved in your family matters.
- How judges use the “best interest of the child” legal standard to make decisions about who can care for or see your child or grandchild.
- Which factors a judge may consider when making decisions about custody and visitation with your child or grandchild.
- How past substance abuse could impact your ability to reconnect with your child or grandchild.
- How cleaning up your criminal record might help you gain custody or reunite with your child.

WHY WOULD THE COURTS BE INVOLVED IN MY FAMILY MATTERS?

There are so many different reasons that courts get involved in family matters. Examples of when courts get involved include cases of divorce or legal separation; cases about paternity/parentage; disagreements about custody, visitation, or child support; when one or both parents are no longer able to care for a child because they are sick, disabled, incarcerated, or passed away; or the court is supervising a child’s care due to allegations of abuse or neglect.

In most cases, incarceration will affect your relationship with your family, and the courts may end up getting involved to decide who should have the legal right to make decisions about your child or grandchild, and who should be able to visit or care for your child or grandchild. While you are/were incarcerated, it’s possible that there were changes in your child’s care that had nothing to do with your actual conviction, but the courts got involved either because there was already an open case about the child, someone asked the court to get involved, OR the county’s Child Protective Services (CPS) deemed it necessary for the court to oversee the care of your child because of abuse or neglect allegations.

If a court case is opened about the care of your child, it is important to know that everything in your criminal record will be available to the judge in that case. But the judge doesn’t look only at your criminal record; s/he looks at your record as one factor among MANY factors about whom is best suited to care for your child, and what is in the child’s “best interest.” To learn about the convictions that may ban you from reunifying with a child, see the chart on PG. 726. To learn more about the factors a judge looks at in making decisions about a child’s care, see the next question!

WHAT FACTORS DOES A JUDGE LOOK AT WHEN MAKING A DECISION ABOUT CUSTODY AND VISITATION WITH MY CHILD/GRANDCHILD?

The Legal Standard: “Best interest of the child”:

As we stated earlier, when deciding whether to let you see, care for, or make decisions for your child or grandchild, the judge must find that it would be in the “best interest of the child” to allow you the contact you desire.<sup>2348</sup> To make this decision, a judge looks at many parts of a child’s life and relationship with you, as well as the other people in the child’s life.<sup>2349</sup>

For the most part, there are no hard and fast rules about what is in a child’s “best interest,” in particular when it comes to considering a parent or caregiver’s criminal record. Certain convictions may ban you from reunifying with your child, and you can learn about those in the chart on PG. 726. But in most cases, the judge will consider many factors.

Factors a judge will look at about THE CHILD include, but are not limited to, the child’s:

- Age;
- Health;
- School needs;
- Relationship with each parent (or caregiver);
- Connections at home, school, and in the community;
- Each parent’s (or caregiver’s) ability to care for the child;
- Any history of family violence or substance abuse by either parent (or caregiver).

Factors a judge will look at about YOU include, but are not limited to:

- Whether you've had a smooth transition back to the community;
- Whether you've made reasonable efforts to stay in touch with your child;<sup>2350</sup>
- Your criminal record (to which convictions will make it more difficult or even impossible to reconnect with your child, see the chart on PG. 726);
- How much contact you currently have (and/or previously had) with your child;<sup>2351</sup>
- If you have the ability of parents to care for child (money, housing, job, stability, etc.);
- How much time you were away from your child while in prison or jail, especially if you were unable to stay in touch with him/her during this period;<sup>2352</sup>
- If you have a history of substance abuse (see the next question);

These factors will all go into the judge's decision about what is in the "best interest of the child," and your custody and visitation rights as a parent or caregiver.

I HAVE A HISTORY OF SUBSTANCE ABUSE. HOW WILL THIS IMPACT MY ABILITY TO RECONNECT WITH MY CHILD OR GRANDCHILD?

If you have struggled with addiction, drugs or alcohol (whether or not this is related to your system involvement or past convictions), the judge will consider this history when deciding whether custody or visitation with you is in your child's "best interest."<sup>2353</sup> The judge may require you to do drug or alcohol testing, or—if you are granted custody or visitation—may even order you to never use any drugs or alcohol.<sup>2354</sup> However, the judge cannot deny you custody based ONLY on the results of a positive drug test—a dirty test is only one factor when deciding whether custody would be in your child's best interest.<sup>2355</sup>

WOULD IT HELP MY FAMILY LAW CASE TO CLEAN UP MY RECORD?

It depends—but it can never hurt your case. We recommend cleaning up your criminal record in case there is any misinformation or mistakes that could unfavorably affect your case in family court. Also, there could be updates that would look more favorable in family court such as expungement and dismissals. For more information, see the UNDERSTANDING AND CLEANING UP YOUR CRIMINAL RECORD CHAPTER on PG. 931.

SHOW YOUR RECOVERY SUCCESS!

If you have a history of substance abuse, consider ways you can show that you are on the right path by:

(1) Keeping a record of rehab meetings you attend including date and time.

(2) Ask for letters of support from your drug counselor or sponsor.

(3) Prepare to discuss how you have avoided drugs and stayed clean. You may talk about where you live, whom you are friends with and how those changes have helped to keep you sober and clean.

HELPFUL HINT

Clean Up Your Criminal Record & Get Convictions Expunged

If possible, it is recommended that you get your conviction expunged ("dismissed") under California Penal Code Section 1203.4—or that you clean up your criminal record in other ways—before trying to get custody of a child in dependency court.<sup>2356</sup> Expungement does NOT remove the conviction from your criminal record, but it has many benefits. For example, cleaning up your record and getting convictions expunged can only help you in trying to get custody, guardianship, or reunite with your child, because it will show the judge that you are committed to making positive changes in your life and can take on greater caregiving responsibilities.<sup>2357</sup> Some judges (but not all) will even treat an expunged conviction the same as a criminal record exemption—meaning they'll excuse the conviction in deciding that child can live with you as a guardian through dependency court.<sup>2358</sup> For more information about expungement and other ways to clean up your criminal record, read the UNDERSTANDING & CLEANING UP YOUR CRIMINAL RECORD CHAPTER, beginning on PG. 931.

VI. PROTECTIVE COURT ORDERS & “NO-CONTACT” CONDITIONS

WHAT WILL I LEARN ABOUT PROTECTIVE ORDERS & “NO-CONTACT” CONDITIONS?

- What to do if you have a protective order or “no-contact” condition against you because of a court order or probation, parole, or other community supervision.
- What the consequences are for violating a protective order or “no-contact” condition.
- How to challenge a protective order that is a condition of parole, probation, or other community supervision.
- How to challenge a protective order that is part of a court order.
- How other conditions of probation or parole, such as travel restrictions, could impact your ability to reconnect with your child or grandchild.

I BELIEVE THERE IS A PROTECTIVE ORDER OR “NO-CONTACT” CONDITION AGAINST ME. WHAT CAN I DO?

There are two types of protective orders (also called “stay-away”, “no-contact”, and “restraining” orders) that could be in place against you:

- 1) A protective order could be a condition of your supervision, required by parole, probation, or some other type of community supervision) AND/OR
- 2) A protective order could be required by a court (put in place by a judge in a criminal court and/or civil court).<sup>2359</sup>

In either case, you MUST follow the protective order. While following the protective order, you can still challenge, fight or appeal it!<sup>2360</sup> Read the question on PG. 738 to learn how.

PLEASE NOTE: It’s important to get to know the SPECIFICS of any orders preventing you from contacting another person. For example, a protective order/ “no-contact” condition may prevent you from contacting the caregiver or other parent of your child or grandchild; but this protective order may not apply to your child or grandchild, unless it specifically says so. This can create a situation where, for example, you are allowed to contact your child, but you cannot arrange for a visit with your child because you are not allowed to contact your child’s caregiver or the other parent.

WHAT COULD HAPPEN IF I VIOLATE A COURT’S PROTECTIVE ORDER OR A “NO-CONTACT” CONDITION OF MY SUPERVISION?

If you violate a court’s protective order or a “no-contact” condition of your supervision that forbids you from contacting another person, you could be fined and/or re-incarcerated for violating the court order or the conditions of your supervision.<sup>2361</sup> While following the protective order, you can still challenge, fight or appeal it! Read the next question on PG. 738 to learn how.

Again, it is important to get to know the SPECIFICS of any protective orders or “no-contact” conditions against you so that you do not violate them.

IMPORTANT: You might have protective and restraining orders against you from both criminal and civil courts, each with different conditions or requirements. So what rules should you follow? Answer: the criminal court order! A protective order from criminal court is stronger than a civil restraining order from family, probate, dependency, or any other civil court. If you have multiple orders against you from different courts, you MUST follow the criminal protective order.<sup>2362</sup>

It is also important to know about any conditions or orders against you, because if you go to court to ask for greater rights with your child (for example, increased custody or visitation), the judge will consider any protective or restraining orders against you.<sup>2363</sup>

IMPORTANT: If your criminal case involved domestic violence or child abuse, then it is possible that the judge gave your child a protective order against you. If your child has a protective order against you, do NOT contact your child.

HOW DO I CHALLENGE A PROTECTIVE ORDER OR “NO-CONTACT” CONDITION OF MY PAROLE OR PROBATION?

The process for challenging a protective order or “no-contact” condition depends on who put the order in place against you.=

(1) IF THE PROTECTIVE ORDER IS A CONDITION OF YOUR PAROLE, PROBATION, OR OTHER FORM OF COMMUNITY SUPERVISION: It may be possible to get the condition removed or changed IF you don’t have a history of domestic violence or abuse.<sup>2364</sup>

- To challenge a condition of state parole, you will likely have to file a CDCR Form 602 administrative appeal and Form 22 with the Parole Department.<sup>2365</sup> Read more about that process in the PAROLE & PROBATION CHAPTER at PG. 178.
- To challenge a condition of probation or Mandatory Supervision, you must go back to the criminal court that sentenced you to probation or supervision, and ask the judge to remove or change the condition.<sup>2366</sup> Read more about that process in the PAROLE & PROBATION CHAPTER at PG. 198 (misdemeanor probation) and PG. 202 (felony probation).
- To challenge a condition of Post-Release Community Supervision (PRCS), you will have to either file an administrative appeal through probation or go directly to Superior Court depending on whether the county probation department or the court put the condition on you.<sup>2367</sup> Read more about that process in the PAROLE & PROBATION CHAPTER at PG. 205.
- To challenge a condition of federal probation, you will have to file a Notice of Appeal with the Clerk of the Court where you were convicted and contact the Federal Public Defender’s Office. Read more about that process in the PAROLE & PROBATION CHAPTER at PG. 219.
- To challenge a condition of Supervised Release, you will have to file a Notice of Appeal with the Clerk of the Court where you were convicted and contact the Federal Public Defender’s Office. Read more about that process in the PAROLE & PROBATION CHAPTER at PG. 219.
- To challenge a condition of federal parole, you will have to file a Notice of Appeal with the Clerk of the Court where you were convicted and contact the Federal Public Defender’s Office.<sup>2368</sup> Read more about that process in the PAROLE & PROBATION CHAPTER at PG. 219.

(2) IF THE PROTECTIVE ORDER IS A COURT ORDER (from a criminal court or civil court) based on a history (or allegations) of domestic violence, neglect, abuse, stalking, or threats.<sup>2369</sup> You must go back to the same court and ask the judge to change or cancel the order.<sup>2370</sup>

- If you need assistance changing a criminal court-ordered protective order, contact a public defender or your lawyer from your criminal case.
- If you need assistance in changing a civil court-ordered protective order, you can ask the Family Law/Self-Help Facilitator at your local county court (see Appendix A on PG. 797 to find contact information for your local Family Law Facilitator).

ADDITIONAL RESTRICTIONS FROM PAROLE OR PROBATION & YOUR GENERAL RIGHTS

I AM ON PAROLE OR PROBATION. HOW COULD THIS IMPACT MY ABILITY TO RECONNECT WITH MY CHILD OR GRANDCHILD?

In addition to “no-contact” conditions (read more on PG. 737), you may have travel restrictions placed on you by parole or probation that limit your ability to reconnect with your child or grandchild.

Travel Restrictions could make it difficult for you to visit your child or grandchild, especially if he or she lives in another county. If you have limits on where or how far you can travel, you should talk to your parole agent or probation officer and request a travel pass—and make sure you get approval in writing! Alternatively, you can arrange with family, friends, a case manager or mentor, parole officer, or through the court (by requesting a change in the conditions of your supervision) for your child or grandchild to come visit you. Always check with your parole agent or probation officer if you are unsure if you have any travel restrictions.

Transfer Restrictions: There may also be limitations on your ability to transfer your parole location to certain counties for a number of reasons—and you should get to know these limitations BEFORE you attempt to move, visit, or contact your child or grandchild. Again, it is always best to follow a condition while appealing it rather than violate that condition. Speak to your parole agent or probation officer about your conditions so that you are clear where you can go and where you cannot go.

- To challenge a condition of state parole, you will likely have to file a CDCR Form 602 administrative appeal and Form 22 with the Parole Department.<sup>2371</sup> Read more about that process in the PAROLE & PROBATION CHAPTER at PG. 178.
- To challenge a condition of probation or Mandatory Supervision, you must go back to the criminal court that sentenced you to probation or supervision, and ask the judge to remove or change the condition.<sup>2372</sup> Read more about that process in the PAROLE & PROBATION CHAPTER at PG. 198 (misdemeanor probation) and PG. 202 (felony probation).
- To challenge a condition of Post-Release Community Supervision (PRCS), you will have to either file an administrative appeal through probation or go directly to Superior Court depending on whether the county probation department or the court put the condition on you.<sup>2373</sup> Read more about that process in the PAROLE & PROBATION CHAPTER at PG. 205.
- To challenge a condition of federal probation, you will have to file a Notice of Appeal with the Clerk of the Court where you were convicted and contact the Federal Public Defender's Office. Read more about that process in the PAROLE & PROBATION CHAPTER at PG. 219.

VII. THE THREE COURTS THAT HANDLE FAMILY MATTERS & NAVIGATING THEM

WHAT WILL I LEARN ABOUT COURTS?

- The three different courts that make decisions about family and children issues.
- Where you can locate court forms during reentry and while awaiting release.
- How to request transportation to court for cases about your parental rights while you are incarcerated.
- How to get visitation with your child while you are still incarcerated.

INTRODUCTION TO THE THREE COURTS THAT HANDLE FAMILY & CHILDREN MATTERS

This section will explain the three courts in California that make legal decisions about family issues and the care of children. Just because your situation seems to fit into the description of cases that happen in one type of court... does not mean the case will definitely be heard and decided by a judge in that court.

Family law cases can be long, complicated, and difficult to navigate. Every case is different and every county handles cases dealing with family and children a little bit differently. It can even vary by judge within the same county!

But don't let this overwhelm you. There are people you can contact to get help with your family law situation so you do not have figure things out alone:

- First, there are Family Law/Self-Help Centers in every county that can help you decide which court to go to, where to file your forms, and what kinds of documents to show as evidence.
- Second, you can also read this Chapter and call Root & Rebound's Reentry Hotline (any Friday, 9AM - 5PM, at phone number 510-279-4662) for more information about reunifying with your children or working through a family law case when you have a criminal record. We accept Collect Calls.
- Third, for a list of legal aid offices in your region of California that may be able to help you, see PG. 1127.

WHAT ARE THE DIFFERENT COURTS IN CALIFORNIA THAT MAKE DECISIONS ABOUT FAMILY AND CHILDREN?

There are 3 different courts in California that make decisions about family matters and the care of children: probate court, juvenile court, and family court.

It is important to understand the basics of all three courts so you know the best place to go to restore or establish your rights as a parent, grandparent, caregiver, or guardian.

Here are the 3 courts and what you need to know:

(1) Family court handles cases about divorce, child support, paternity/parentage, and SOME child custody and visitation cases.

(2) Probate court handles "probate guardianship" cases. Individuals who want to become a child's legal guardian, such as relatives or family friends, may file guardianship petitions in this court for temporary or permanent guardianship. This does not end the parent's rights, but instead puts them on pause.

(3) Juvenile court includes two divisions: dependency and delinquency.

- Dependency court handles cases of child abuse and neglect, also called CPS cases. The government agency Child Protective Services (CPS) opens a case in dependency court if someone reports that a child may be at risk. (Note: CPS can have different names in each county of California; it is often called the Department of Child and Family Services). If a child is at risk at home, the dependency court may take over custody of the child. A child is sometimes called a "ward" of the dependency court.
- NOTE: Delinquency court makes decisions in cases where a child (under the age of 18) is arrested and charged with a crime. This court may send the young person to juvenile hall as a punishment for breaking the law. For more information on delinquency court, visit the California Courts' website at <http://www.courts.ca.gov/selfhelp-delinquency.htm>. We do not go into detail about delinquency court in this guide because the guide is focused on people in the adult criminal justice system and in reentry from prisons and jails.

If you know which court your family's or child's case is in:

This section gives background on all three courts—probate, family, and dependency. If you already know which court your case (or your child's case) is in, you can skip directly to the section of this Chapter that discusses that court.

If you do NOT know which court your family's or child's case is in:

If you do not know which court your case (or your child's case) is in, or if it's in any court at all, read the steps on PG. 728 to learn how to find out which court might be involved. You can also review the chart on the next page (PG. 741) to get a basic idea of what each of the three courts does.

SUMMARY OF CALIFORNIA COURTS THAT MAKE DECISIONS ABOUT FAMILY & CHILDREN
GENERAL QUESTIONS	FAMILY COURT	PROBATE COURT	DEPENDENCY COURT
WHEN WOULD MY CHILD OR I NEED TO GO TO THIS COURT?	You would want to go to Family Court to ask for custody or visitation if you are the child's parent and you have an issue with the other parent.  The family court also hears cases that involve divorce, child support, and paternity cases. <sup>2375</sup>	You would need to go to Probate Court in two main situations:  (1) The court has appointed (chosen) someone else (not the child's parent) to be the guardian for your child, and you want custody or visitation with your child. A guardian is an adult (not the child's parent), such as a relative or family friend, who has legal and physical custody of the child. <sup>2376</sup> Learn more on PG. 741 . ) OR  (2) You want to become the guardian for someone else's child.	You or your child might go to Juvenile Dependency Court if the child's parent(s) are suspected of abuse or neglect and Child Protective Services (CPS) has become involved in the child's case.
WHO STARTS THE CASE?	A parent	(1) A person who wants to become the guardian of someone else's child. (This could be a relative or family friend.) This person might be living with the child already, but want more rights and responsibilities; OR  (2) A parent who is trying to end a guardianship already in place through the probate court , and get custody or visitation with their child back; OR  (3) The guardian for a child such as a relative or family friend who wants to end an existing guardianship arrangement.	Child Protective Services (CPS) or the District Attorney
WHERE DO I FIND MORE INFORMATION ABOUT THE RULES &amp; PROCEDURES OF THIS COURT?	See PG. 744 .	See PG. 748 .	See PG. 755 .

<sup>2375</sup> Specifically: The family court hears those custody and visitation cases that don't involve child abuse or neglect, and that don't involve guardianships. This section will explain each of these issues and kinds of cases, one by one.

<sup>2376</sup> By contrast, adoption does terminate the parental rights of the child's legal or biological parents, and also creates a permanent parent/child relationship between the child and his/her adoptive parent. See CAL. FAM. CODE § 7505(a) (cessation of parental authority upon appointment of guardian); CAL. PROB. CODE § 2351(a) (custody rights of guardian); CAL. WELF. & INST. CODE § 366.26 (distinguishing between termination of parental rights and guardianship proceedings; contrast adoption, which terminates parental rights, with guardianship, which does not); In re Guardianship of Ann S., 45 Cal. 4th 1110, 1124 (2009) (probate guardianship suspends parental rights).

WHERE CAN I FIND THE COURT FORMS I NEED TO START A CASE IN ONE OF THE 3 FAMILY-RELATED COURTS?

Each of the three courts that handle family matters has LETTERS and NUMBERS to identify forms that are specific to their court:

- Family court forms start with FC.
- Probate court forms start with GC.
- Dependency court forms start with JV.
- For all the courts, fee waiver forms usually start with FW.

You can find California court forms on the following website: <http://www.courts.ca.gov/forms.htm>. Of course, because rules and procedures vary county by county, you ALWAYS want to check with your local court's rules and procedures to find out which court forms are preferred or required in your county.

Below we further explain how you can access various court forms for your family or child's case, depending on whether you are currently or formerly incarcerated.

If you are formerly incarcerated:

California court forms are available online from the California Courts' website at <http://www.courts.ca.gov/forms/forms.htm>. You can also ask the court's Family Law/Self-Help Facilitator (see Appendix A) to help you with the court forms you need. Finally, your local law library may also be able to help you with the court forms, legal research materials, and information about other legal resources you may need.

HELPFUL HINT

Family Law/Self-Help Facilitators are Available to Help

It can be very helpful to talk to a lawyer about your family law case. If you do not have a lawyer to represent you, your local family court's Family Law/ Self-Help Facilitator can help you with forms and procedures—but NOT legal advice (see Appendix A for listings of Family Law Facilitators across the state). You may also want to contact a local legal aid office and find out if someone can help you with your case (see a listing of legal aid offices at the back of this guide beginning on PG. 1127).

If you are currently incarcerated:

You have the right to petition to start a case while you are incarcerated, but there may be barriers that make it so you cannot be present at court or, because of your incarceration, cannot meet requirements needed for custody, since you cannot have physical custody of your child while you are incarcerated. For more information on custody see PG. 732. For more information on convictions that bar you from requesting custody or visitation, see PG. 726. Before you start a case, make sure your incarceration or conviction is not an automatic bar from getting a favorable result in court. If you have access to the Internet, the California court forms are available online from the California Courts at: <http://www.courts.ca.gov/forms/forms.htm>.

You can also request the forms from Legal Services for Prisoners with Children (LSPC). You can call them at: (415) 255-7036, or write them at: Legal Services for Prisoners with Children, 1540 Market St., Suite 490, San Francisco, CA 94102

LSPC also has a 2012 manual that has the forms you may need. You can find this manual at: www.prisonerswithchildren.org/wp-content/uploads/2013/08/Incarcerated-parents-version-12.11.12.pdf

I AM CURRENTLY INCARCERATED. CAN I GO TO A COURT HEARING FOR A CASE INVOLVING MY CHILD?

Yes - for any court hearing involving your child, you can ask the judge to be transported and it is up to the judge whether or not to order your transportation for the hearing; and for certain types of cases, you have the automatic right to be transported. As an incarcerated parent, you have the RIGHT TO REQUEST transport to:

1. A court hearing in a dependency court case; and
2. Hearings in other courts (such as family court, probate court, and juvenile delinquency court) that could affect your parental rights (including cases about custody and visitation, divorce, paternity/parentage cases, guardianship, child support, etc.).<sup>2377</sup>

In these cases, the judge decides whether or not to grant your request.<sup>2378</sup>

As an incarcerated parent, you have THE AUTOMATIC RIGHT to be present at the following hearings:

1) Jurisdictional and dispositional hearings in dependency court:

- Jurisdictional and Dispositional hearings are formal meetings in front of a judge once a case has begun in juvenile dependency court. At the jurisdiction hearing the judge will decide whether the allegations in the petition are true. If the judge decides the allegations are true, the court will take authority over your child. This is called jurisdiction in the law; that is why the hearing is called the jurisdiction hearing.
- Disposition is the part of the case where the judge will decide what you should do to make things better for your family and your child. This is called the reunification plan.

2) Hearings that seek to terminate their parental rights:

- Hearings that seek to terminate parental rights are formal meetings in front of a judge about ending the right a parent has to see and care for their child. If a parent's rights are terminated, that parent can no longer make legal, medical or general life decisions for the child. In the eyes of the law, the child is no longer that parent's child. Examples of the types of cases that could end a parent's right include: adoption, petition terminating the parental rights of alleged father, or a petition for emancipation.

Under state law, the judge should automatically make an order for you to be transported to these types of hearings. The court MUST send a copy of the “transport order” to the warden or sheriff of your facility at least 15 days before the date you need transportation. If you do not receive this order, or if you want to be transported to court for other dependency court hearings, you can write to the court to request such an order, or ask the attorney representing you to request one.<sup>2379</sup> The sheriff’s department in the county in which hearing takes place is responsible for arranging your transportation, but you may have to be proactive and follow up with your institution to make sure you are transported on time.<sup>2380</sup>

I AM CURRENTLY INCARCERATED. CAN I GET VISITATION ORDERED WITH MY CHILD?

Yes, you have the right to request visitations while you are incarcerated. However, we recommend trying to come to an informal agreement with the child’s caregiver for visits to your facility. Filing a lawsuit is a timely and costly process that can cause confrontation in your family. If you have an informal visiting schedule then you are more likely to have an amicable relationship with the child’s guardian. Once you have a successful visit or two, you can ask the caregiver for a reasonable schedule for visits.<sup>2381</sup>

WHAT DOES IT MEAN TO BE PRESENT AT A HEARING?

The right to be present means the right to be physically present in the courtroom while the hearing takes place. Even if you waive your physical presence, you may be able to participate in the hearing in other ways. Depending on the technology at your facility, you may be able to participate in the hearing via telephone or videoconference.

IMPORTANT! Be sure to put your agreement in writing—it can be a simple letter from you stating what you have agreed. Keep a copy. Then keep written records of how your arrangement is working out over time.

If you cannot agree on an informal visitation plan with your child’s caregiver, then you can request visitation through court. If that is your situation, you can follow the steps for starting or joining a case in any of the three family-related courts (see PG 742 or how to start or join a case).

Grandparents, because they do not have any automatic right to visitation, cannot ask the court for visitation with their grandchild while they are incarcerated, but may be able to set up an informal agreement with the child’s parent or caregiver to come visit them.

VIII. FAMILY COURT

WHAT WILL I LEARN ABOUT FAMILY COURT?

- Why you would need to go to family court to reconnect with your child or grandchild.
- How a judge's decisions in family court can affect your rights as a parent or grandparent.
- How a judge will decide if you can have custody or visitation with your child or grandchild, and how the rights of parents are different from the rights of grandparents in family court.
- Which convictions may bar you from reconnecting with your child or grandchild in family court.
- How you can show a judge in family court that custody or visitation with you is in the "best interest of the child."
- How to show mitigating circumstances related to your criminal record.
- How to reconnect with your child or grandchild without going to family court.

WHAT IS FAMILY COURT?

Family court is the court system that handles cases involving married couples or domestic partners and their children, if they have any. Please keep reading to learn more.

WHY WOULD I GO TO FAMILY COURT TO RECONNECT WITH MY CHILD OR GRANDCHILD?

You may go to family court cases about divorce or separation; child support; paternity/parentage questions; and/or custody and visitation disagreements between parents or caregivers (so long as CPS is NOT involved).<sup>2382</sup> A family court judge may make decisions and orders related to any of these types of cases.

Additionally, in some probate court cases, the judge making decisions about a probate guardianship will transfer a case from probate court to family court if a biological parent ACTIVELY OBJECTS to the guardianship placement. The probate court tends to see this type of a dispute as a custody disagreement better suited for family courts to handle. Read more about probate court guardianships beginning on PG. 748.

To learn about alternatives to going to family court, see PG. 747.

HOW CAN A JUDGE'S DECISION IN FAMILY COURT AFFECT MY RIGHTS AS A PARENT?

A judge in family court can make a decision (called a "court order") about what kind of custody or visitation arrangement you get to have with your child. Depending on the order, a judge could increase or decrease your parental rights to have custody of your child. For more information on the legal meanings of "custody" and "visitation" and examples of custody and visitation arrangements in real life, see PG 732.

Examples:

- 1) If the judge grants the other parent or caregiver full legal custody of your child, then you no longer get to live with or make important decisions about that child.
- 2) If the judge grants the other parent full physical custody but joint legal custody, then you cannot live with your child, but you still get to make decisions about his/her life.

HOW CAN A JUDGE'S DECISION IN FAMILY COURT AFFECT MY RIGHTS AS A GRANDPARENT?

As you may recall from the section on "grandparents' rights," beginning on PG 727, grandparents do not have an automatic legal right to custody of or visitation with their grandchild(ren).

But if you successful join an ONGOING family court case about your grandchild, the judge could:

- Grant you visitation rights if you meet the legal requirements (see PG 745), AND/OR
- Grant a parent or other caregiver custody of your grandchild, and that parent or caregiver then chooses whether or not to let you see the child.<sup>2383</sup>

HOW WILL A FAMILY COURT JUDGE DECIDE IF I GET CUSTODY OR VISITATION WITH MY CHILD OR GRANDCHILD?

A family court judge who is deciding whether or not to give you custody or visitation rights (meaning rights to see, care for, and/or make decisions for your child or grandchild) must find that it would be in the "best interest of the child” to do so. The factors a judge will look at in deciding what is in the “best interest of the child” are on PG. 735; your criminal record is just one factor the judge will consider.<sup>2384</sup>

<sup>2383</sup> In order to have a judge order visitation with a grandparent, the grandparent must join the case and prove a "strong bond" with his or her grandchild. A judge will probably deny a grandparent's request for visitation if the parents object or if the parents are still married and living together.

For Parents: The law assumes that it is in the “best interest of the child” to have a stable, consistent relationship with both parents through custody and/or visitation. BUT if one or both parents can’t provide the care and stability that your child needs—or if there is a specific reason to believe that having contact with the parent(s) would be harmful to your child—then the judge will consider other options or even limit or cut off contact between the parent(s) and their child.<sup>2385</sup>

For Grandparents: A Grandparent may request to become the child’s primary caregiver, getting custody of the child, OR a judge might order visitation rights under certain circumstances.

- If you are a grandparent seeking CUSTODY of your grandchild: As a grandparent, you cannot ask for custody of your grandchild if both parents still have full rights to the child. However, if BOTH of your grandchild’s PARENTS have lost or ended their parental rights, you can then ask for custody of your grandchild by asking to become the child’s legal guardian in probate court (see PG. 748 OR in dependency court if CPS is involved in the child’s case (see PG. 755 OR by adopting the child (see PG. 767).
- If you are a grandparent seeking VISITATION with your grandchild: Under state law, a grandparent cannot ask a judge in family court for visitation with a grandchild if the parents of the child are still married, UNLESS one of the following is true:
  - 1) The parents are living apart from each other;
  - 2) One parent’s location has been unknown (for at least a month);
  - 3) One of the parents joins your “petition” (a request filed with the court) to ask for visitation—which means the parent with custody is supporting your request to the judge to have visits;
  - 4) The child doesn’t live with either parent;
  - 5) The grandchild has been adopted by a stepparent.<sup>2386</sup>

If one or more of these factors are TRUE, you can ask a judge in family court for visitation with your grandchild. The judge will then balance the following factors to make a decision:

1. Whether you and your grandchild already have a strong relationship (“a bond”), so that visitation will be in your grandchild’s “best interest;”<sup>2387</sup> AND
2. The rights of the child’s parents to make decisions about what is in the best interest of their child.<sup>2388</sup>

Because parents are given priority in making decisions about their child’s care, a family court judge will probably deny your request for visitation if:

1. Your grandchild’s parents object to giving you visitation, AND/OR
2. The parents are still married and living together with your grandchild.<sup>2389</sup>
  - a. BUT THERE IS ONE IMPORTANT EXCEPTION! If you were ever the legal guardian of your grandchild, that can help. You can tell the family court judge that since you previously served as the legal guardian of your grandchild, you have an important connection (“bond”).<sup>2390</sup>
3. In addition to the above two situations, you will DEFINITELY be denied visitation if your grandchild has been adopted by a person other than a stepparent or another grandparent of the child.<sup>2391</sup> This means that if your grandchild was adopted by someone who is not a stepparent or grandparent, then your rights as a grandparents have been cut off (terminated), just like those of your grandchild’s biological parents.

ARE THERE ANY CONVICTIONS THAT WILL AUTOMATICALLY BAN ME FROM RECONNECTING WITH MY CHILD OR GRANDCHILD IN FAMILY COURT?

Yes. As stated on PG. 726 your criminal record can be one of many factors a family court judge will consider in deciding what is in the “best interest of the child.”

For some conviction offenses, the law will automatically ban you from reconnecting with a child or grandchild. For other convictions and criminal history that do not completely prevent you from having custody or visitation with your child, a family court judge will look at this history as one factor of many in deciding what custody and/or visitation plan is in the “best interest of the child.” For example, if you have past convictions for child abuse, first-degree murder of the child’s other parent, or being a 290-sex offender registrant where the victim was a minor, a judge is unlikely to grant full custody or unsupervised visitation. See the chart below, and learn more about how a criminal record will be a factor in a judge’s decision regarding your custody/visitation rights, see PG. 725.

HOW DIFFERENT CONVICTIONS WILL AFFECT YOUR CUSTODY & VISITATION RIGHTS
CONVICTION OFFENSE	HOW WILL THIS AFFECT MY CHANCES OF GETTING CUSTODY OR VISITATION?
Rape that led to Child’s Conception	Judges will not allow someone who has been convicted of rape to have any custody or visitation with a child who was conceived from that rape. <sup>2392</sup>
Domestic Violence	Judges are hesitant to give custody to someone who has engaged in domestic violence, and will consider any history of domestic abuse against your child, the other parent, or a partner. <sup>2393</sup>
Other Convictions	Judges usually will not grant custody or unsupervised visitation in the following circumstances, unless the s/he finds that there is no risk of harm to your child : <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• If you have a conviction for certain child abuse offenses;<sup>2394</sup></li> <li>• If you have a conviction for first-degree murder of the child’s other parent; and/or</li> <li>• If you are a 290-sex offender registrant for an offense where the victim was a minor (under 18), or if you live with someone else who is a 290-sex offender registrant for an offense where the victim was a minor (under 18).<sup>2395</sup></li> </ul>

WHAT CAN I SHOW THE FAMILY COURT JUDGE THAT CUSTODY OR VISITATION WITH ME IS IN THE “BEST INTEREST OF THE CHILD”?

When making a case plan to present to the judge in family court to increase your custody or visitation rights, here are some suggestions of ways you can show the judge that custody or visitation are in the “best interest of the child” (note: learn more about the “best interest of the child” legal standard on PG. 735):

- Write down ALL of your efforts to see your child or grandchild and keep the document in a safe place in case you go to court. By recording the date and times you called can help show to the court that you have taken the process of connecting with your child/grandchild seriously. This may help you if the child’s caregiver has been difficult in allowing you to visit.
- Stay in contact with your child/grandchild. Whether you are incarcerated or not, try to stay a parental figure as much as you can by remembering dates important to your child and asking your child’s caregiver or others about the child.
- Start slowly with visits. If you and the other parent (or caregiver) feel better about your reconnecting with your child slowly, you might start with short visits in the other parent’s (or caregiver’s) home. Then over time, if you build a record of positive visits, you can discuss making your visits longer and more frequent.
- You can make other requests of the other parent (or caregiver), in addition to visits. You can ask to call and write to your child, to receive photos and report cards, to stay updated on school progress and health issues, and to be asked about important decisions.
- Keep written records of everything. Put any agreements in writing, and always keep an extra copy safe. As your visits continue, keep written records of how things are going.

<sup>2392</sup> CAL. FAM. CODE § 3030(b). The law is very strict in this instance and does not permit even supervised or conditional visitation.

<sup>2393</sup> CAL. FAM. CODE §§ 3011(b), 3020(a), 3031, 3044. The judge will also consider any restraining or protective orders against you. Nonetheless, you may still be able to get custody by showing that you have completed all court-ordered treatment and/or behavioral programs (e.g., batterer’s treatment program, parenting classes, anger management, drug or alcohol treatment, or conditions of probation or parole); complied with all parole/probation/supervision requirements; complied with any restraining or protective orders against you; have not committed any further domestic violence; and that custody would be in your child’s best interest. CAL. FAM. CODE § 3044(b).

<sup>2395</sup> CAL. FAM. CODE § 3030; see also CAL. PENAL CODE § 290. For child abuse convictions and registered sex offender registrants, the judge must find that there is “no significant risk to the child.” § 3030(a). For first-degree murder of the other parent, the judge must find that there is “no risk to the child’s health, safety and welfare.” § 3030(c). In both cases, the judge must state his/her reasons in writing or on the record. However, the judge may still permit supervised visitation in these cases.

NOTE: Child Protective Services (CPS) creates a case plan when it gets involved in a case regarding a child. The case plan sets out the steps you must take to get your child back. For example, a case plan could require you to attend parenting or counseling classes, participate in substance abuse treatment, and/or visit with your child.

WHAT CAN I DO TO SHOW MITIGATING CIRCUMSTANCES RELATED TO MY CRIMINAL RECORD?

You can show the judge anything that indicates that giving you custody or visitation will be in the best interests of your child. You can show the judge things like: certificates earned during incarceration, letters to and from your child, letters of support from family and friends, documents that show attendance in self-help groups, proof of employment.<sup>2396</sup>

WHAT ARE ALTERNATIVES TO RECONNECTING WITH MY CHILD/GRANDCHILD WITHOUT GOING TO FAMILY COURT?

Below we describe other ways you can reconnect with your child without going to family court:

- Informal Custody or Visitation Plan: Parents and caregivers can make their own arrangements for custody and visitation without going to court. But, if the parents or caregivers can no longer agree on an arrangement for the care of the child then one or both of the parents or caregivers will have to go to court to ask a judge for a formal custody or visitation plan. This formal plan will be binding and enforceable as a court order.<sup>2397</sup>
- Mediation: Before granting or changing custody or visitation for your child, the judge will hold a hearing. The judge may require you and the other parent to attend mediation.<sup>2398</sup> Mediation is an alternative dispute resolution (known as ADR) method to help people resolve their disputes without having to spend time and money going to court. In mediation, the parents or caregivers have the help of an expert (a mediator) in resolving these disagreements. The goals of mediation are to:
  - Help you make a parenting plan that is in the best interest of your children.
  - Help you make a parenting plan that lets your children spend time with both parents.
  - Help you learn ways to deal with anger or resentment.<sup>2399</sup>
  - Mediation can be voluntary (by choice) or ordered (required) by the court. For more information on mediation in family court, see Appendix B (and for more information, see Form FL-314-INFO, “Child Custody Information Sheet - Child Custody Mediation,” available online at: <http://www.courts.ca.gov/documents/fl314info.pdf>).

IMPORTANT REMINDER: If you have a restraining order or no-contact against you of any kind, make sure you follow the conditions of that order BEFORE you attempt to contact your child's caregiver or other parents to make sure you do not violate the order! If you are UNSURE if you have an order against you, see PG. 728 on how to find out if there is an order against you and what you can and cannot do.

IX. PROBATE COURT GUARDIANSHIPS

WHAT WILL I LEARN ABOUT PROBATE COURT?

- What probate court is.
- Why you would need to go to probate court to reconnect with your child or grandchild, and why this is especially important for grandparents
- Your rights and responsibilities as a child's legal guardian.
- The difference between a guardianship, adoption, and foster care.
- How to end a guardianship to get your parental rights back in reentry.
- How a judge's decisions in probate court can affect your rights as a parent.
- Your rights as a parent if you have been incarcerated and someone else is the guardian of your child.
- How and why you would go to probate court to become the guardian of someone else's child, and how going to probate court could help you financially to take care of someone else's child.
- How a probate court judge will decide if you should be the guardian of someone else's child.
- How your criminal record may affect your chances of being appointed as the guardian for someone else's child.
- How your criminal record may affect your chances of being appointed as the guardian or conservator for an elderly or disabled person.
- How you can show a judge in probate court that you being appointed the guardian is in the "best interest of the child."
- Alternatives to becoming a guardian through the probate court.

This section goes into TWO DIFFERENT SCENARIOS about probate guardianships:

1. If you were formerly incarcerated and now want to END a probate guardianship set up for your child by someone else while you were away.
2. If you were formerly incarcerated and want to BECOME the probate guardian of someone else's child, and have questions about how your record will impact your ability to do so.

Note: A parent would never become the guardian for his or her own child—only a non-parent becomes a "guardian" for someone else's child.<sup>2400</sup>

If Child Protective Service (CPS) is involved in the child's case, you probably have to go to juvenile dependency court. See PG. 755 to learn more.

WHAT IS PROBATE COURT?

Probate court makes decisions in probate guardianship cases. The probate court judge decides whether or not to appoint a non-parent as a child's guardian, and when (if ever) to end a guardianship.

WHY WOULD I HAVE TO GO TO PROBATE COURT TO RECONNECT WITH MY CHILD OR GRANDCHILD?

People go to probate court seeking to become a child's legal guardian and must file a "petition" (a legal request) to do so.

In reentry, you might become involved in a probate case to:

- Become a guardian (non-parents only);

- End a guardianship set up while you were incarcerated or away for other reasons (parents only, who are looking to get their parental rights back); OR
- Support someone else becoming a guardian for your child (parents only).

To become a guardian, you have to open a case in probate court. But to end a guardianship or support someone else becoming your child's guardian, you will have to JOIN his or her open probate court case.

A Special Note for Grandparents: This information is very important for grandparents because probate court will be the court you will want to file a “petition” if there is no ongoing case involving your grandchild and you want to become his or her guardian. Remember! Grandparents’ don’t have automatic rights to care for a grandchild (learn more about your rights on PG. 727).

CHART: HOW IS GUARDIANSHIP DIFFERENT THAN ADOPTION OR FOSTER CARE?

THE CHART BELOW EXPLAINS THE DIFFERENCES BETWEEN GUARDIANSHIP, ADOPTION, AND FOSTER CARE.

GUARDIANSHIP	ADOPTION	FOSTER CARE:
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• A guardianship is awarded when:</li> <li>• Parents still have parental rights. They can ask for reasonable contact with the child.</li> <li>• The judge in court can end a guardianship if the parents become able to take care of the child.</li> <li>• Guardians can be supervised by the court.</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• An adoption is awarded when:</li> <li>• The parents' rights are permanently ended.</li> <li>• The legal relationship with the adoptive parents is permanent and is exactly the same as a birth family.</li> <li>• An adopted child inherits from his or her adoptive parents, just as a birth child would.</li> <li>• Adoptive families are not supervised by the court.</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Foster case happens when:</li> <li>• The parents’ rights are temporarily transferred to the state but parents may be able to see the child if CPS grants permission.</li> <li>• A judge can end a foster care placement if CPS determines that the parent(s) can take care of the child or a relative/caregiver gets guardianship or adopts the child.</li> <li>• Foster parents are completely supervised and licensed by the state.</li> </ul>

SCENARIO 1: RECONNECTING WITH YOUR CHILD IN PROBATE COURT

WHY WOULD I GO TO PROBATE COURT TO END A GUARDIANSHIP?

You would go to probate court to end a guardianship if someone else (other than the child’s parents) was given guardianship of your child while you were incarcerated. If a judge in probate court formally created the guardianship, then you have to go to probate court to end it.

IF I HAVE BEEN INCARCERATED AND SOMEONE ELSE IS THE GUARDIAN OF MY CHILD, WHAT ARE MY LEGAL RIGHTS AS A PARENT?

Guardianship does NOT end your parental rights; it puts them on hold while the guardian has the child.<sup>2401</sup> This allows the guardian(s) to make all the decisions about caring for the child that a parent would make, without permanently cutting off the parents’ rights to ask for custody of their child back in the future.<sup>2402</sup>

Parent’s Rights: The child’s legal or biological parents still have certain rights for their child during the guardianship:

- The children in a guardianship are still considered legally and biologically “related” to their parents (the parents’ rights are not terminated);
- The judge or the guardian of the child can allow the parents or other relatives to visit with the children in a guardianship;<sup>2403</sup>
- When the judge appoints a guardian to have custody of a child, the judge may also give visitation rights to the child’s parent(s) and/or sibling(s) to visit the child.
  - If the judge orders visitation, the child’s guardian must allow these visits to take place.

<sup>2401</sup> By contrast, adoption does terminate (end) the parental rights of the child’s legal or biological parents, and also creates a permanent parent-child relationship between the child and his or her adoptive parent. See CAL. FAM. CODE § 7505(a) (cessation of parental authority upon appointment of guardian); CAL. PROB. CODE § 2351(a) (custody rights of guardian); CAL. WELF. & INST. CODE § 366.26 (distinguishing between termination of parental rights and guardianship proceedings; contrast adoption, which terminates parental rights, with guardianship, which does not); In re Guardianship of Ann S., 45 Cal. 4th 1110, 1124 (2009) (probate guardianship suspends parental rights).

<sup>2402</sup> CAL. PROB. CODE § 1500 et seq. The guardian is responsible for the child’s care, including the child’s: food, clothing and shelter; safety and protection; physical and emotional growth; medical and dental care; education and any special needs. The guardian is also responsible for supervision of the child, and may be liable for any intentional damage the child may cause.

- If there is no court order for visitation, the guardian has the right to decide whether the child may visit with his/her parent(s) or other relatives. So if you don't have a court order and the guardian is not letting you see your child, you might need to go to Probate Court to ask the judge for visitation.
- Please Note: You will need to ask for visitation from the same probate court that appointed your child's current guardian, which may be in a different county from where you live. You will also need to use that county's own specific probate court forms to request visitation.<sup>2404</sup>

Parent's Responsibilities:

The child's legal or biological parents also still have certain responsibilities for their child during the guardianship. Parents must continue to financially support their children in a guardianship (including paying child support if it's ordered - read more about child support on PG. 778). Also, children in a guardianship can inherit money or get Social Security benefits from their parents.<sup>2405</sup> If you are currently or about to become incarcerated and would like to learn how to pause your child support payments, see PG. 780 in the "Child Support" section.

HOW CAN A JUDGE'S DECISION IN PROBATE COURT AFFECT MY RIGHTS AS A PARENT?

If a judge in probate court decides not to end the guardianship then you will not be able to get legal custody of your child until the guardianship ends. If the judge in probate court does terminate the guardianship, you will have legal custody of your child.

HOW WILL A JUDGE IN PROBATE COURT DECIDE IF I GET CUSTODY OR VISITATION WITH MY CHILD?

The judge will make a decision based on what is in the best interest of the child. See PG. 735 for more information on what factors a judge will look at when deciding what is in the best interest of the child.

ARE THERE CONVICTIONS THAT WILL AUTOMATICALLY BAN ME FROM RECONNECTING WITH MY CHILD IN PROBATE COURT?

Yes, there are certain convictions that will automatically ban you from reconnecting with your child. See the chart on PG. 726 for more information.

WHAT CAN I DO TO SHOW THE PROBATE COURT JUDGE THAT CUSTODY OR VISITATION WITH ME IS IN THE "BEST INTEREST OF THE CHILD"?

It can help to clearly explain the things that make you a positive person in the child's life. You can emphasize your ability to care for the child, the strength of your relationship with the child, the stability you can bring to the child's life, and why it is best for the child to live or visit with you. If possible, you should also talk to a lawyer. To find a legal aid organization near you, see Appendix A, PG. 797, for places that may offer help.

WHAT CAN I DO TO REDUCE THE WEIGHT THE JUDGE GIVES MY CRIMINAL RECORD?

As stated in the family court section on PG. 747, You can show the judge anything that indicates that giving you custody or visitation will be in the best interests of your child. You can show the judge things like: certificates earned during incarceration, letters to and from your child, letters of support from family and friends, documents that show attendance in self-help groups, proof of employment.<sup>2406</sup> However, if you have a conviction that automatically bans you from getting custody or visitation with your child, then mitigating evidence will not be considered. See PG. 726 for a list of convictions that will automatically bar you from getting custody or visitation.

SCENARIO 2: BECOMING THE PROBATE GUARDIAN OF SOMEONE ELSE'S CHILD WHEN YOU HAVE A RECORD

WHAT IS A LEGAL GUARDIAN?

As a legal guardian, you are responsible for caring for and making decisions for the child, including:

- 1) Where the child lives;
- 2) Education;
- 3) Health care;
- 4) Social services;

- 5) Financial support and/or public benefits;
- 6) Supervision and misconduct;
- 7) Driver license; military service; and marriage;
- 8) Any other responsibilities that the judge orders.<sup>2407</sup>

Guardianship may look different depending on what court you are in. This section focuses on guardianships through probate court. To learn what guardianship looks like through a juvenile dependency court, visit PG. 755.

WHY WOULD I GO TO PROBATE COURT TO BECOME THE GUARDIAN OF SOMEONE ELSE'S CHILD?

Sometimes a parent cannot take care of a child. Typical reasons include:

- Serious physical or mental illness;
- Military service and have to go overseas;
- In-patient rehabilitative treatment;
- Incarceration;
- Drug or alcohol abuse problem;
- History of being abusive; or
- Cannot take care of their child for some other reason.

A legal guardian can take care of a child when a parent is unable to until the parent is able to take care of the child again or a more permanent situation is made such as adoption.

WHO CAN BE A LEGAL GUARDIAN?

Anyone, so long as a judge in probate court approves them. You would go to probate court to become the guardian of someone else's child if you are a close friend or relative of the child and want to help take care of the child because the parent cannot. You can take care of the child until the parent is able to again or you can help arrange a more permanent situation such as adoption.<sup>2408</sup>

Remember - You would not go to probate court to BECOME a guardian if you are the child's parent. In general, the child's legal or biological parent cannot be appointed as the child's guardian - only someone who is not the parent can be appointed guardian. If you are the child's parent and want to get custody or visitation, you will generally need to go to family court (PG. 744) or juvenile dependency court if there is a CPS case involving your child.<sup>2409</sup>

To give you custody of someone else's child through a probate guardianship, a probate court judge will look at the following factors:

- 1) Whether the guardianship is in the "best interest of the child." In all child custody and visitation cases, including ones for probate guardianship, the judge will consider such factors as:
  - a. The health and safety of the child,
  - b. Any history of abuse by the parent or person seeking custody,
  - c. Habitual or continued substance abuse by the parent,
  - d. The criminal record of the non-parent petitioning for guardianship, AND
  - e. Whether the child will be raised in stable and loving environment.<sup>2410</sup>
- 2) Whether giving custody to someone other than the child's parent(s) would harm the child.<sup>2411</sup> The goal is to make sure the child is raised in a safe, stable, and loving environment.<sup>2412</sup>

REMEMBER! Your criminal record is one factor in the judge's decision in allowing someone to be the guardian of a child. For more information on how your criminal record will impact your ability to reconnect with your child, see PG. 725 ("What does a judge look at when making a decision about . . . my child/grandchild?").

HOW CAN MY CRIMINAL RECORD AFFECT MY CHANCES OF BEING APPOINTED AS A GUARDIAN IN PROBATE COURT FOR SOMEONE ELSE'S CHILD?

There are many aspects of your record that could affect your ability to become the legal guardian of someone else's child in probate court. We explain what the judge will look at about your record, including what positives can help weigh against your criminal history. In probate court, the judge will look at the following:

- PAST CONVICTIONS: The judge can consider all of your convictions when deciding whether to appoint you as a guardian. But certain types of convictions are more likely than others to affect your chances of being appointed as a guardian.<sup>2413</sup> Although the judge will consider all of your past convictions, the convictions that are viewed most negatively are child abuse and/or domestic violence; registered sex offenses where the victim was a child; and rape or murder of the child's other parent.<sup>2414</sup>
- RESTRAINING ORDERS: The judge will also consider any restraining or protective orders against you.<sup>2415</sup>
- CPS HISTORY: The judge will look at any history with Child Protective Services (CPS).<sup>2416</sup>
- DRUG OR ALCOHOL ABUSE: Finally, a judge will consider any history of drug or alcohol abuse (whether or not you have any convictions that were related to that drug or alcohol abuse) to decide if it is in the child's best interest to make you his/her guardian.<sup>2417</sup> The judge may require you to do drug or alcohol tests, or make an order that requires you NOT to use any drugs or alcohol. However, the probate court judge cannot deny your guardianship petition based only on the results of a positive drug/alcohol test—a dirty test is only one factor of many when deciding whether the guardianship would be in the child's best interest.<sup>2418</sup>
- NEW CONVICTIONS: If you've been appointed the child's legal guardian, the judge can remove you as guardian (meaning, end your guardianship rights) if you are convicted of a felony, regardless of whether the underlying offense happened before or after you became the child's legal guardian in court.<sup>2419</sup>

YOU CAN ALSO PRESENT POSITIVES TO THE PROBATE COURT JUDGE—see the next question!

WHAT CAN I DO TO SHOW THE PROBATE COURT JUDGE THAT CUSTODY OR VISITATION WITH ME IS IN THE “BEST INTEREST OF THE CHILD”?

It can help to clearly explain the things that make you a positive person in the child's life. You can emphasize your ability to care for the child, the strength of your relationship with the child, the stability you can bring to the child's life, and why it is best for the child to live or visit with you. If possible, talk to a lawyer. To find a free legal aid organization in your area, see Appendix A, PG. 797, for places that may be able to help.

IMPORTANT! If you are looking for information on guardianship in juvenile dependency court cases, where Child Protective Services (CPS) is involved, go to PG. 762 These two courts (probate vs. dependency) have different rules for deciding who can become a guardian and how their judges will look at criminal records.

WHAT ARE SOME ALTERNATIVES TO BECOMING A GUARDIAN THROUGH THE PROBATE COURT?

A guardianship is not always necessary; there are alternatives to a legal guardianship that don't require going through the probate court! Here are some of your other options:

Option 1: Power of Attorney for a Minor Child:

- A caregiver can sign a Power of Attorney for a Minor Child in front of a notary that gives you physical “custody” of the child and lets you make decisions about the child's education and medical care. Learn more about notary services on PG. 32.

WHAT IS A NOTARY?

A notary is a person who can perform certain legal procedures or create documents that are recognized by the court. A notary will charge you for their services. To find affordable notary services, contact your local legal aid office to see if they have a notary on site and how much it would cost.

<sup>2418</sup> CAL. PROB. CODE § 1514(b); CAL. FAM. CODE § 3041.5. The results of the drug/alcohol test will only be used when considering whether you should be the child's guardian (i.e., whether the guardianship is in the child's best interest), and cannot be used for any other purpose, such as criminal prosecution, parole violation, or civil penalties. Moreover, you may request a hearing to challenge the results of a positive test.

- Make sure you have the child's health insurance information. If you want to add the child to your health insurance, you will likely need a court-ordered guardianship (called a "guardianship of the person"), since most insurance companies will require a court order.
- The parents can cancel the Power of Attorney at any time.<sup>2420</sup>

Option 2: Caregiver's Authorization Affidavit:

Get a Caregiver's Authorization Affidavit and instructions online at:

<http://www.courts.ca.gov/documents/caregiver.pdf>.

- If the child will remain in California, the person taking care of the child can complete and sign a Caregiver's Authorization Affidavit.
- If you are a relative of the child, this document allows you to enroll the child in school and make decisions about the child's medical care. If you are not a relative, you will only be able to enroll the child in school and make medical decisions for the child that are related to school (like immunizations or physical exams required for school enrollment).
- The Caregiver's Authorization Affidavit is NOT an official court form.
- The parents do not have to sign the Caregiver's Authorization Affidavit.
- The parents can cancel the Caregiver's Authorization Affidavit at any time.
- If the child is no longer living with the caregiver, the affidavit is not valid. The caregiver must notify the school and health care provider if the child is no longer living with him or her.
- There are certain things that you will NOT be able to do or you will have a lot of difficulty even if you have this form and a notarized letter. For example, it may be hard for you to get medical insurance for the child unless you are the legal guardian. Most insurance companies will not allow you to add the minor to your insurance unless you have a court order making you the guardian.<sup>2421</sup>

Option 3: Private Agreement with Child's Parents:

This would be an agreement between you and the child's parents. In case you ever have to go to court over the agreement, it's best if a lawyer writes the agreement, and both you and the child's parents sign it.<sup>2422</sup>

HOW COULD THE PROBATE COURT HELP ME FINANCIALLY TAKE CARE OF SOMEONE ELSE'S CHILD?

If you are taking care of someone else's child and want support, you may be able to get financial help as a guardian through child support from the child's parents or government assistance (called "public benefits").<sup>2423</sup> For more information on how to request child support in family court, see PG. 744. There are also some key public benefits programs (run by the government) explained below:

- CalWorks: If you are related to the child, you can get CalWorks even if you do not need the money. You can also get CalWorks if you are not related to the child but you need financial help.
- Foster care payments: Some guardians can get this. The amount may be more than welfare.
- Kin-GAP (Kinship Guardianship Assistance Payment Program): This is for people who are related to a child in a juvenile dependency case. It pays the same amount as foster care payments.
- SSI (Supplemental Security Income): If the child has a disability, he/she may be able to get SSI or state disability benefits. You can use this money to take care of the child.
- Medi-Cal: Guardians can get this for the child and for themselves if they are financially needy and are related to the child.<sup>2424</sup>

Ask the social worker on your case about what help you can get.

CARING FOR ADULTS: BECOMING THE PROBATE CONSERVATOR FOR AN ELDERLY OR DISABLED PERSON WHEN YOU HAVE A RECORD

WHAT IS A CONSERVATORSHIP?

A conservatorship operates much like a legal guardianship (see PG. 750), but instead of being responsible for a child, you are responsible for an adult. The subject of a conservatorship (called the conservatee) is usually an adult who cannot take care of or manage their own affairs, whether due to their age or a mental or physical disability.<sup>2426</sup> Although responsibilities differ depending on the type of conservatorship, if you become the conservator for a loved one, you may be responsible for overseeing the conservatee's:

- 1) Daily care, including food, clothing, and shelter;
- 2) Finances, assets, and estate planning (such as drafting a will);
- 3) Medical care.

HOW DO I BECOME A LOVED ONE'S CONSERVATOR?

Establishing a conservatorship is complex and may require the help of a lawyer with expertise in family, probate, and/or estate law. To get a sense of how probate conservatorships operate in your area, visit the website of your county's Superior Court. It will have information about the procedures you must follow where you live.

CAN I BE A LOVED ONE'S CONSERVATOR IF I HAVE A CRIMINAL RECORD?

Though the law is silent on how a person's criminal record could affect their petition for conservatorship, the Probate Code gives the court discretion to remove an established conservator who has a felony conviction, regardless of whether the conviction occurred before or after their conservatorship began.<sup>2427</sup> The local court rules concerning conservators' criminal records are more restrictive in some areas than others.<sup>2428</sup> If you have been denied appointment or removed as a loved one's conservator due to your criminal record, call Root & Rebound's Reentry Legal Hotline to speak to a lawyer about your options.

X. JUVENILE DEPENDENCY COURT

WHAT WILL I LEARN ABOUT JUVENILE DEPENDENCY COURT?

- What juvenile dependency court is.
- Why CPS would start a case in juvenile dependency court.
- How a judge in juvenile dependency court decides where to place a child.
- Why you would go through juvenile dependency court to reconnect with a child.
- How a juvenile dependency court judge's decisions could affect your rights as a parent.
- Which convictions may prevent you from reconnecting with your child in dependency court.
- What evidence you could show a dependency court judge that custody or visitation should be given to you.
- How to ask for greater custody or visitation rights.
- What foster care is and how your criminal record could affect your ability to become a foster parent.
- What you can do to reconnect with you child if they were placed in foster care while you were incarcerated.
- What a juvenile court guardianship is and how your criminal record could affect your ability to become a child's guardian through dependency court.

WHAT IS JUVENILE DEPENDENCY COURT?

The local county Child Protective Services (CPS) opens a case in juvenile dependency court when a child's parent(s) or caregivers are suspected of abuse or neglect.<sup>2429</sup>

When would CPS get involved?

CPS gets involved in a child's life when a parent has been violent with, abused, or neglected a child, or if the child tests positive for drugs at birth.<sup>2430</sup> When CPS gets involved, they may open a case in juvenile dependency court.<sup>2431</sup> Whether or not they open a case in dependency court depends on if CPS removed the child from his or her home. Once CPS removes the child, a case is started in juvenile dependency court.<sup>2432</sup> In most cases, the parent(s) will have the opportunity to get their child back if they meet certain requirements.<sup>2433</sup>

What is considered child abuse?

Under the law, abuse may be physical harm, sexual abuse, cruel or unreasonable punishment, using drugs while pregnant, and/or neglect of a child.<sup>2434</sup>

Can CPS remove my child from my care just because I have a criminal record?

No. Just having a criminal record is not enough for Child Protective Services (CPS) or a judge to take your child away—there has to be some connection between your conviction and a risk of harm to your child. For example, a conviction for child abuse, certain violent felonies, or using drug or alcohol in a way that put your child at risk could cause CPS or the judge to remove your child from your care.<sup>2435</sup>

HOW IS JUVENILE DEPENDENCY COURT DIFFERENT FROM JUVENILE DELINQUENCY COURT?

Juvenile delinquency courts are for cases where a child is charged with committing a crime. Juvenile dependency courts, on the other hand, are for cases where a parent or caregiver is suspected of abusing or neglecting a child. Sometimes, children are involved in both of these courts at the same time—if they are both being charge with a crime and there is a case of suspected child abuse or neglect by their parents. If your child is being charged with a crime, see the next section on juvenile delinquency on PG. 765.

<sup>2431</sup> When someone makes a report about your child's safety to the police or welfare department, the police or a social worker must investigate to decide whether the dependency court should get involved to protect your child. This might happen because someone suspected that your child wasn't well taken care of, was abused or neglected, or was left with someone who didn't take good care of him/her. Under the law, "child abuse" includes: physical harm done on purpose to a child; sexual abuse of a child, including assault and exploitation; cruel or unreasonable punishment of a child; and/or neglect of a child—failure to provide necessary care, food, shelter, etc. CAL. WELF. & INST. CODE § 300 ("dependent child" defined).

<sup>2435</sup> See, e.g., CAL. WELF. & INST. CODE § 366.21(e) (at status review hearing, court must consider parent's criminal record "to the extent that the criminal record is substantially related to the welfare of the child or the parent's or guardian's ability to exercise custody and

WHY WOULD I GO TO JUVENILE DEPENDENCY COURT?

You would go to Juvenile Dependency Court because of one of the following situations:

- CPS is involved in investigating an allegation that your child was abused or neglected; or
- You are, or want to be, the child's foster parent.

SCENARIO 1: RECONNECTING WITH YOUR CHILD(REN) IN DEPENDENCY COURT

WHY WOULD I GO TO JUVENILE DEPENDENCY COURT TO RECONNECT WITH MY CHILD?

You would go to juvenile dependency court to reconnect with your child or grandchild if CPS is involved in investigating an allegation of child abuse or neglect. As a parent, that could mean your child was taken away from you or the child's caregiver. You would attend juvenile court proceedings to try and resolve the allegations of abuse and neglect.<sup>2436</sup>

A grandparent could be involved either because the grandparent is accused of abuse or neglect or the grandparent wants to become the child's guardian while the investigation by CPS continues.<sup>2437</sup>

HOW CAN A JUDGE'S DECISION IN JUVENILE DEPENDENCY COURT AFFECT MY RIGHTS AS A PARENT?

A judge's decision could either take away or limit your rights as a parent. Unless the case is dismissed, meaning the allegations of child abuse or neglect are found to be untrue, your parental rights will be affected in dependency court. Keep reading for more information on different kinds of judge's orders. If your child is part of a CPS case in juvenile dependency court, the judge could make orders that:

1. Place your child with relatives, foster parents, or a court-appointed legal guardian; and/or
2. Give you visitation rights; and/or
3. Give you a case plan that requires you to attending parenting classes, counseling, or other programs, and/or
4. End your parental rights if you are unable to successfully complete your case plan within 18 months.<sup>2438</sup>

Just like any court's decisions about the custody of a child, a dependency court judge must decide what is in the "best interest of the child." This means the judge will make decisions that affect your parental rights to care for, live with, see, and make decisions for your child—and can even reduce or take away some of these rights completely. Most of the time, you will have a year to complete your requirements if you keep making progress. But if your child is under three years old, you will have only six months to show that you are committed to finishing up everything.<sup>2439</sup>

Below we briefly describe some of the caregiving arrangements that a judge can order through a case in juvenile dependency court:

- 1) Long-Term Guardianship: This is where the court places the child with a relative if family reunification services are unsuccessful. The child will stay with the guardian until he or she is 18.<sup>2440</sup> See more on PG. 750. Guardianships can also be set up through probate court if CPS is not involved. See more on Guardianships on PG. 750.
- 2) Foster case: This is where a child is placed with one or two "foster parents"—people who the State has licensed, trained and approved to care for children in their home. However, foster parents have fewer rights than legal guardians or biological parents, so the judge and Child Protective Services (CPS) will continue to be legally responsible for making decisions about the child.
- 3) See more on PG. 761.
- 4) De Facto Parent: This is where a non-parent who has been taking care of a child can get parental legal rights IF ALL OF THE FOLLOWING ARE TRUE:
  - a. The child is a "dependent" or "ward" of the juvenile dependency court (meaning the dependency court has an open case about that child); AND control regarding his or her child;" parent's participation in substance abuse treatment is not prima facie evidence of detriment to child). Cf. CAL. WELF. & INST. CODE § 361.5(b)-(c) (grounds for denial of reunification services).

<sup>2440</sup> See SUPERIOR COURT OF CAL., County of San Francisco, Guardianship of Children, <http://www.sfsuperiorcourt.org/divisions/probate/guardianship-children>, (2016).

- b. You are currently or have been taking care of the child every day; AND
- c. You have been acting as the child's parent; AND
- d. You are meeting or have met the child's needs for food, shelter, clothing, as well as care and affection.<sup>2441</sup>

PLEASE NOTE: No law says exactly what a “de facto parent” needs to do for this arrangement to be approved by a judge in court. Judges make this decision based on other court cases and their own court rules!<sup>2442</sup> For more information on “de facto parent” status, see Appendix D, PG. 802.

- 5) Adoption: This is where a non-parent adopts a child because the dependency court has ended the rights of the parents. This is different from a guardianship, which puts parental rights on hold. For more information on adoption, see PG. 767.

To learn more about how a judge makes this decision about where to place a child, see below on PG. 757. For more information on the difference between guardianship, adoption and foster care see PG. 749.

How will a dependency court judge decide where to place a child?

TO PLACE BACK WITH THE PARENT(S): The judge will decide whether or not to let the child return home with the parents if, given the situation presented to the judge by CPS and the parents, it is safe for the child to return home with the parents.<sup>2443</sup> This is a case-by-case analysis.

TO NOT PLACE WITH THE PARENT(S): If the child returning home with one or both parents is not an option, then the judge in dependency court will decide where to place a child based on what is in the best interest of that child (learn more about this legal standard “best interest of the child” on PG. 735).

The judge can place the child in a legal guardianship so long as:

- 1) The parent and child (if old enough to meaningfully comment) agree; AND
- 2) The judge finds that the guardianship is in the child's best interest; AND
- 3) The guardian meets the same basic requirements as a guardian has to meet in probate court (see PG. 750) for the requirements for guardians)<sup>2444</sup>—BUT! A guardian in dependency court has to go through criminal background checks as a foster parent.<sup>2445</sup>

However, if the judge decides not to place the child in a legal guardianship or there are no family or friends to ask the judge and CPS to care for the child, then the child will be considered a “dependent” or “ward” of the court and placed in foster care.<sup>2446</sup> Keep reading this section for more information on foster care.

HOW WILL A DEPENDENCY COURT JUDGE DECIDE IF I GET CUSTODY OR VISITATION WITH MY CHILD?

A judge makes a decision on whether or not you get custody or visitation based upon what is in the best interests of the child, including most importantly if permitting the child to live with our visit you will be safe for the child. Your criminal record could prevent you from reuniting with your child in juvenile dependency court if the judge finds that because of you are not able to provide for the child or that it is not in the child's best interest for you to provide for the child.<sup>2447</sup>

ARE THERE ANY CONVICTIONS THAT WILL AUTOMATICALLY BAN ME FROM RECONNECTING WITH MY CHILD IN DEPENDENCY COURT?

Yes, there are certain convictions that will automatically ban you from reconnecting with your child. See the chart on PG. 726 for more information.

MY PARENTAL RIGHTS WERE TERMINATED WHILE I WAS INCARCERATED. WHAT CAN I DO?

STEP 1: Speak to an attorney about appealing. If your parental rights were terminated recently, you may be able to appeal. For example, if you did not get advance notice of a hearing at which you had the right to be present, and the hearing resulted in an unfavorable decision, your absence at the hearing may be grounds for an appeal.<sup>2448</sup> You should speak to an attorney about your particular circumstances to see whether an appeal is an appropriate solution.

STEP 2: If your child has not been adopted, he or she may be able to file a 388 petition to reinstate your parental rights. This remedy may be available under two circumstances: if your child hasn't been adopted within three years of the termination of your parental rights, OR, regardless of how much time has passed, if both your child and the social service agency agree that adoption is unlikely. See Appendix E - PG. 803 for more information about 388 petitions.

MY CHILD WAS PLACED IN FOSTER CARE WHILE I WAS INCARCERATED. WHAT CAN I DO TO RECONNECT?

As we explained on PG. 761, a child is placed in foster care when Child Protective Services takes custody of a child due to a concern that the child's parents or caregivers are unable, unwilling or unfit to care for the child. The goal of foster care is to reunify with their parent(s) or guardian or find another suitable permanent living arrangement. CPS files a juvenile dependency petition in dependency court when the child is removed from his/her home and placed in a foster home.<sup>2449</sup> You can make sure you are involved in every step of the legal process as your child is placed in foster care.

STEP 3: First, you should get in contact with Child Protective Services ("CPS") as soon as you are incarcerated and tell them where you are and that you want to be involved as soon as there is a case regarding your child.

STEP 4: Second, you have a right to be present and represented by a lawyer at all of the following hearings:

- Detention Hearing
- Jurisdiction Hearing
- Disposition Hearing
- Status Review Hearing
- Permanent Plan Hearing

Remember! California Penal Code section 2625(d) gives incarcerated parents *the right to be transported to court for jurisdictional and dispositional hearings in dependency court.<sup>2450</sup> This means you have the right to be physically present at all the hearings involving CPS and your child in dependency court. See PG. 742 for more information about asserting your right to be present at such hearings.

STEP 5: Third, most important for you will be the disposition hearing, where the court will decide what you need to do to reunify with your child. CPS will write a case plan that you must follow if you want to reunify with your child upon your release.. At this hearing you can request that the court order several ways to keep in contact with your child including:

- Collect phone calls between you and your child on a regular basis
- Visits with your child
- A plan to transport your child for visits
- Counseling for you
- Counseling for your child
- Other services for you or your child

<sup>2449</sup> CAL. WELF. & INST. CODE § 300 (CPS will file a petition in juvenile dependency court if it believes that "there is a substantial risk that the child will suffer serious physical harm or illness by the inability of the parent or legal guardian to provide regular care for the child.").

- Services for extended family or Family Preservation Services.<sup>2451</sup>

STEP 6: Finally, the court will be more likely to return your child to you during Status Review Hearings if you:

- Follow the case plan (reunification requirements)
- Visit your child as often as possible
- Live in a safe place
- Get a job that you can support your family on
- Follow all probation or parole rules.

WHAT CAN I SHOW THE DEPENDENCY COURT JUDGE THAT CUSTODY OR VISITATION WITH ME IS IN THE “BEST INTEREST OF THE CHILD”?

If you are the child’s parent and want to reunite with your child, AND your parental rights have NOT yet been ended (“terminated”), you generally have the right to reunite with your child even if you have a criminal record (so long as you don’t have a conviction that automatically bans contact with your child, see PG. 726 and even while you are incarcerated.<sup>2452</sup>

Regardless of your criminal record, you will need to show that reuniting with your child will be in your child’s best interest and will not put your child at risk of harm.

It will help to show the dependency court judge proof of the following:

- 1) Rehabilitation: Showing evidence that you have treatment for drug or alcohol use or even parenting or counseling courses can help. Before your hearing, you should ask for any paperwork that shows the dates of your treatment or meetings you attended. You may also want to bring letters of support from your counselors.
- 2) Letters of Support: These can be from case managers, teachers, family, friends, and others who know both you and your child.
- 3) Proof of Housing and Income: By showing evidence of where you live and proof of where you work can also help. You may also consider showing the court a budget of how you plan to provide for both you and your child financially to show that you have thought and planned to be reunited with your child.
- 4) Proof that you are successfully complying with all conditions of your probation, parole, or community supervision.<sup>2453</sup>

Other things you can do to show the judge that you are serious about reuniting with your child and are ready to have increased caregiving responsibilities and rights include the following:

- 1) Visit your child as much as you can; and
- 2) Address the issues that caused Child Protective Services (CPS) and/or the court to get involved in the first place (for example, work on dealing with substance abuse, anger management, and other issues).

Finally, the judge is more likely to give you visitation rights sooner than full custody rights, regardless of your criminal record. Under state law, it is generally assumed that it’s in a child’s best interest to have visits with his/her parent(s); judges are encouraged to give visitation rights to the parent(s), so long as the visits will not be harmful to the child.<sup>2454</sup> To decide whether visitation is in your child’s best interest, the judge will look at things like your relationship with your child, whether your child’s other parent (or caregiver) is in favor of the visits, whether your child wants to visit with you (depending on the child’s age), and how well you and your child get along during those visits—not just whether you have a criminal record.<sup>2455</sup>

IMPORTANT: Remember, you have a LIMITED PERIOD OF TIME to complete your dependency “case plan” requirements and reunite with your child. If your child’s dependency court case started or was happening while you were incarcerated, the clock may have already started to run during your time inside. This means you will have to work extra hard to complete all of your case plan requirements and show the judge that you’re ready to care for your child again once you get out (before your time runs out).<sup>2456</sup>

<sup>2453</sup> See, e.g., CAL. WELF. & INST. CODE 366.22(a) (return of child to parent or guardian at permanency review hearing).

<sup>2454</sup> CAL. WELF. & INST. CODE § 362.1. The judge may order you to have supervised visits if it has concerns about your child’s wellbeing during the visits. See PG. 780 for more information about supervised visitation.

<sup>2456</sup> Remember, you have the right to reasonable reunification services even while you are incarcerated (with certain exceptions). You should take advantage of any services and/or other programing that are available, and make every effort to stay in touch with your

WHAT CAN I DO TO SHOW MITIGATING CIRCUMSTANCES AND REHABILITATIVE EVIDENCE RELATED TO MY CRIMINAL RECORD?

As stated in the family court section on PG. 747, You can show the judge anything that indicates that giving you custody or visitation will be in the best interests of your child. You can show the judge things like: certificates earned during incarceration, letters to and from your child, letters of support from family and friends, documents that show attendance in self-help groups, proof of employment.<sup>2457</sup> However, if you have a conviction that automatically bans you from getting custody or visitation with your child, then mitigating evidence will not be considered. See PG. 726 for a list of convictions that will automatically bar you from getting custody or visitation.

REQUESTING A CHANGE TO A DEPENDENCY COURT ORDER

IF THERE IS ALREADY AN ORDER ABOUT MY CHILD FROM A JUDGE IN JUVENILE DEPENDENCY COURT, HOW DO I ASK FOR GREATER CUSTODY OR VISITATION RIGHTS?

As part of an earlier court order, a dependency court judge may have: (1) placed your child with relatives or foster parents;<sup>2458</sup> (2) given you visitation rights, and/or; (3) given you a case plan that requires you to attend parenting/counseling classes and do other things to reunify with your children.

If the dependency court judge has made an order giving your child's care to a foster parent or guardian, here are some things you can do to help your chances of getting your child back:

- Visit your child as much as you can, and
- Follow your case plan.

Doing these things will put you in a better position to ask for greater custody or visitation rights from the dependency court judge. If the court sees you have been making positive visits with your child and following your case plan, it may respond more favorably when you file a 388 petition—special legal paperwork to change a past dependency court order and ask for greater custody or visitation rights. Learn more about filing a 388 petition in on Appendix E, PG. 804.

➤ IF YOU HAVE A LAWYER:

If the dependency court is actively reviewing your child's case, you can ask a lawyer to help you write the 388 petition on Form JV-180, "Request to Change Court Order."

➤ IF YOU DON'T HAVE A LAWYER, USE FORM JV-180:

You can file a "388 petition" on your own by using Form JV-180. If you need more space to explain your answers, you can attach extra sheets of paper.

- 1) Fill out your petition and include supportive documents: If you need more space to explain your answers, you can attach extra sheets of paper to your petition. Attach any documents that may strengthen your request, such as: letters from your child asking to see you, copies of letters you sent to your child, a letters or declarations from relatives stating that your child wants to see you, certificates earned, character reference letters from people who support your request, and documentation about your current employment, schooling, or housing situation.
- 2) Deliver your petition to the court: You can hand-deliver or mail your petition papers to the court. First, make 2 copies of everything. Keep one copy for yourself. Then deliver the original and one copy to the court, or mail them with a self-addressed, stamped envelope enclosed.
- 3) Wait to see if the judge orders a hearing: Once you deliver the original and a copy of your petition, the court clerk will file the original, stamp the copy, and return the copy to you in person or by mail. Next, the judge will read your petition and decide either (1) to schedule a court hearing for your petition, or (2) deny your petition.

WHAT IS A 388 PETITION?

Under Welfare and Institutions Code 388, any parent of a dependent child, a dependent child of the juvenile court (with the assistance of an appointed guardian), or other person having interest in a dependent child of the juvenile court may file a 388 petition when there is a change of circumstance or there is new evidence in their case. For more information on 388 petitions, see Appendix F on PG. 803.

child, during your sentence. CAL. WELF. & INST. CODE § 361.5(e); see also, e.g., V.C. v. Sup. Ct., 188 Cal. App. 4th 521 (2010) (holding that father's failure to participate in available reunification services while incarcerated justified trial court's decision to terminate reunification services and provided evidence that returning child to father's custody would be detrimental).

<sup>2458</sup> Dependency and probate courts can both create guardianships. These are two different procedures. Dependency guardianship cases usually involve CPS, and dependency courts usually appoint attorneys for parents. Probate guardianship cases usually don't involve CPS, and probate courts usually don't appoint attorneys for parents.

- 4) Prepare for your court hearing: If the judge orders a hearing, read the entire dependency court section of this chapter to learn about how your record will come up and how you can prepare for your hearing.

SCENARIO 2: BECOMING A FOSTER CARE PARENT OR GUARDIAN OF SOMEONE ELSE'S CHILD THROUGH JUVENILE DEPENDENCY COURT

The second scenario we deal with in this section is answering questions for people with records who want to BECOME the foster care parent or guardian of a child who has an open CPS and dependency court case. The dependency court has its OWN RULES—different from probate court and family court—about the impact a criminal record will have on someone's request to become the legal caregiver of some else's child.

BECOMING A FOSTER CARE PARENT WITH A RECORD THROUGH JUVENILE DEPENDENCY COURT

WHAT IS FOSTER CARE?

Foster care is a system run by the California Department of Social Services (CDSS) that provides temporary homes for children who cannot live with family or a legal guardian. A child in foster care was removed from his or her home by Child Protective Services (CPS) because the child's parents were unable, unwilling or unfit to care for the child. The goal of foster care is to reunify the child with his or her parent(s) or guardian(s) OR find another suitable permanent living arrangement. This may include an adoptive home, long-term guardianship, or living with a relative.

- For more information on adoption, see PG. 767.
- For more information on guardianship, see PG. 750.

WHO CAN BE A CHILD'S FOSTER PARENT?

To become a foster parent in California, you need to get a license from the California Department of Social Services and pass a criminal background check.<sup>2459</sup>

HOW COULD MY CRIMINAL RECORD AFFECT MY ABILITY TO BECOME A FOSTER PARENT?

In October 2017, the Governor passed SB 213, a law loosening restrictions on which crimes automatically bar someone from becoming a foster parent and streamlining the process of reviewing the criminal records of people trying to become foster parents. Before this law, a person's criminal record impacted both: (1) their ability to get the required state license from the California Department of Social Services (CDSS) to be a foster parent AND (2) the dependency court's determination of whether allowing someone to become a foster parent is in the "best interest of the child."<sup>2460</sup> Applicants with criminal records underwent a lengthy exemption process, resulting in unnecessary delays in foster placements.<sup>2461</sup>

Now, although you will still undergo a background check as part of your application, the exemption process is simpler and less restrictive. As a result, your past conviction(s) may not prevent you from becoming a foster parent if the Department of Social determines you have good character and are rehabilitated. The following factors will be considered when making that determination:

- 1) The nature of the crime.
- 2) Period of time since the crime was committed and number of offenses.
- 3) Circumstances surrounding the commission of the crime that would demonstrate that repetition is not likely.
- 4) Activities since conviction, including employment or participation in therapy or education, that would indicate changed behavior.
- 5) Granting by the Governor of a full and unconditional pardon. For more information on a pardon from the Governor, see PG. 984 in the UNDERSTANDING & CLEANING UP YOUR CRIMINAL RECORD CHAPTER.
- 6) Character references.

Unfortunately, people with certain convictions remain unable to become foster parents under SB 213. Convictions that will automatically ban you from becoming a foster parent include:

- Murder;
  - Manslaughter;
  - Voluntary manslaughter;
  - Kidnapping;
  - Rape;
  - Sexual battery; and
  - All crimes requiring registration as a sex offender.<sup>2462</sup>
- For a full list of the convictions that will automatically bar you from becoming a foster parent, see Appendix I, on PG. 819.

If you are unsure if your conviction will prevent you from becoming a foster parent, talk to a lawyer, Family Law/Self-Help Facilitator (see a list of local contact information in Appendix A, PG. 797), or your local county CPS agency.

WHAT IS THE BACKGROUND CHECK PROCESS FOR POTENTIAL FOSTER PARENTS?

In order to become a foster parent in California, you need to get a license from the California Department of Social Services (CDSS) and pass a criminal background check.<sup>2463</sup> Prospective foster parents, as well as anyone else who will have contact with the foster child, must provide two sets of fingerprints to the California Department of Justice (CA DOJ)—one set is to run a state record check and one set is to perform a Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) national check.<sup>2464</sup>

In addition to checking a person’s criminal history, the CA DOJ checks the Child Abuse Registry and reports to the CDSS any previous complaints for the CDSS to further investigate.<sup>2465</sup>

PLEASE NOTE: The same background check rules and process apply to a person living in a foster home OR providing childcare to a foster child, even if that person is not the foster parent him/herself.<sup>2466</sup>

BECOMING A GUARDIAN WITH A RECORD THROUGH DEPENDENCY COURT

WHAT IS A JUVENILE COURT GUARDIANSHIP?

Legal guardianship is a court order saying that a certain adult—someone who is not the child’s parent—is in charge of taking care of the child.<sup>2467</sup> Guardians have many of the same legal rights and responsibilities as parents do while the guardianship is in place. They can make decisions about where the child lives, the child’s health care, and where the child goes to school.<sup>2468</sup>

Remember! In California, there are 2 kinds of legal guardianships: (1) probate guardianships and (2) juvenile dependency guardianships.

Many guardianships are set up through the probate court, not in juvenile dependency court. If your child is NOT a dependent of the juvenile court, you may want to read about probate guardianships on PG. 748. NOTE: A guardian who was appointed through dependency court has the same responsibilities as a guardian appointed <sup>2462</sup> See CAL. HEALTH & SAFETY CODE §1522(g)(1). For the full list of convictions that will bar you from becoming a foster parent, please see Appendix I, PG. 897 of this chapter. If you are unsure if your conviction falls under this law, please consult an attorney or your local foster care agency.

<sup>2464</sup> See CAL. HEALTH & SAFETY CODE §1522(d)(4)(D) (“[A]n applicant for a foster family home license or for certification as a family home, and any other person specified in subdivision (b) who is not exempt from fingerprinting, shall submit a set of fingerprint images and related information to the Department of Justice and the Federal Bureau of Investigation, through the Department of Justice, for a state and federal level criminal offender record information search, in addition to the criminal records search required by subdivision (a).”).

<sup>2465</sup> See CAL. HEALTH & SAFETY CODE §1522.1(a) (“(a) Prior to granting a license to, or otherwise approving, any individual to care for or reside with children, the department shall check the Child Abuse Central Index pursuant to paragraph (4) of subdivision (b) of Section 11170 of the Penal Code.”).

<sup>2466</sup> See CAL. HEALTH & SAFETY CODE §1522(b)(1)(B) (This section applies to “Any person, other than a client, residing in the facility or certified family home.”).

in probate court, although they do not have an automatic duty to provide status reports to the court at least once a year. Guardians through dependency court still have the following responsibilities.

A guardian through dependency court is responsible for the following for the dependent child:

- Health care: You can make medical decisions for the child. You can give permission for most medical and dental treatments, and for counseling or therapy.
- Education: You can choose the child's school and learning program. If he/she needs special education, you can work with the school to write an individualized education program ("IEP").
- Social services: You can get help for the child from programs such as Head Start, Regional Centers (for children with developmental disabilities), California Children's Services (for children with physical disabilities or certain medical conditions), and after-school programs.
- Residence: You can decide where the child lives.<sup>2469</sup>
- Financial support: You can choose to support the child by yourself; or, if you want help, you can ask for welfare, foster care payments, or other help.<sup>2470</sup>
- Marriage: You and the court must give permission for the child to get married if he/she wants to do so while under 18.
- Armed forces: You can give permission for the child to join the armed forces if he/she is under 18.
- Driver's License: You can give permission for the child to apply for a driver's license. You'll have to pay for any damage if he/she gets in an accident, and you must get insurance to cover the child. If you change your mind, you can sign a form at the Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) to cancel the child's license.
- Misconduct: You can be sued for money damages if the child does something wrong.
- Other responsibilities: The judge can ask you to take on other responsibilities. For example, the judge can set up visits for the child with his/her parents or sisters/brothers.

WHO CAN BE A CHILD'S LEGAL GUARDIAN IN DEPENDENCY COURT?

Guardians can be grandparents, brothers or sisters, aunts or uncles, other relatives, foster parents, family friends, or others who know the child. A guardian doesn't have to be blood-related to the child.<sup>2471</sup>

HOW COULD MY CRIMINAL RECORD AFFECT MY ABILITY TO BE APPOINTED AS THE CHILD'S GUARDIAN IN DEPENDENCY COURT?

First, the bad news: If the child is NOT living with you right now, before the judge can make you the child's guardian and allow the child to live with you, the court staff (or a county social worker) must run a background check on you AND any other adults who live in your home or who will spend significant time with the child.<sup>2472</sup> If you (or any other adult who gets checked) have a criminal record, the judge will not allow the child to live with you UNLESS you get a "criminal record exemption" from the county social service agency.<sup>2473</sup> A criminal record exemption means you must get the county social service agency to excuse your conviction and not hold it against you in the process of becoming the child's guardian through dependency court.

What convictions can I NOT get an "exemption" for?

Unfortunately, many convictions are considered "non-exemptible," which means if you or anyone in your home has a non-exemptible conviction on your criminal record, the judge will NOT allow the child to live with you, even if living with you would otherwise be good for the child.<sup>2474</sup>

Non-exemptible convictions include: A FELONY conviction for child abuse, child neglect, spousal abuse, other crimes against a child (including child pornography), or for a crime involving violence (including rape, sexual assault, and homicide), and a felony conviction within the last 5 years for physical assault, battery, or a drug- or alcohol-related offense.<sup>2475</sup>

<sup>2469</sup> But note: if you move to a different city in California, you have to tell the court in writing; and if you want to move out of California, you need the court's permission.

<sup>2470</sup> Your county may also try to get child support from the child's parents. In a guardianship, parents still have a legal duty to support their child financially.

<sup>2472</sup> CAL. WELF. & INST. CODE § 361.4. The background checks will include both criminal records and child abuse, and may also be conducted on any person over age 14 living in your home if the social worker believes that person may have a criminal record.

<sup>2473</sup> To get a criminal record exemption, you must show strong evidence of your good character, such that living with you will be in the child's best interest AND will not put the child at risk of harm. CAL. WELF. & INST. CODE § 361.4(d)(2).

<sup>2474</sup> CAL. WELF. & INST. CODE § 361.4(d)(2); Los Angeles Cnty. Dep't of Children & Fam. Svcs. v. Superior Court (Valerie A.), 7 Cal. App. 4th 1161, 1168 (2001), review denied. The complete list of non-exemptible offenses is contained in CAL. HEALTH & SAFETY CODE § 1522(g). However, certain offenses are "non-exemptible only under specified circumstances," and the Director of Social Services may have discretion to grant an exemption for an offense that otherwise would be non-exemptible. See In re Esperanza C., 165 Cal. App. 4th 1042, 1057 (2008). In addition, some counties may not have authority to issue an exemption, which means the judge cannot place a child in a home where any person has been convicted of a crime other than a minor traffic violation. CAL. WELF. & INST. CODE § 361.4(d)(6).

IMPORTANT EXCEPTION: BUT—and this is a big BUT—if the child is already living in your home, the judge can allow the child to continue living with you, even if you or someone else in the home has a “non-exemptible” conviction, especially if the child is doing well there.<sup>2476</sup>

XI. JUVENILE DELINQUENCY COURT: JUST THE BASICS

WHAT WILL I LEARN ABOUT JUVENILE DELINQUENCY COURT?

- The types of cases that are in juvenile delinquency court.
- How a child’s case in juvenile delinquency court could affect your parent rights and your ability to reconnect with your child in reentry.
- Whether your criminal record could affect your child’s case in juvenile delinquency court.

The following is a brief overview of juvenile delinquency court cases. Root & Rebound is focused on providing information to people who are in reentry from prison and jail, and people with past involvement with the justice system. In general, we do not focus on situations in which a person is actively defending a charge in adult criminal court or juvenile delinquency court. But because many people in reentry have children involved in the juvenile justice system, we are including a brief overview here. If you have a child involved in a juvenile delinquency case and have questions, we recommend you speak with your child’s lawyer, or someone at the juvenile delinquency court that is handling your child’s case.

WHAT IS JUVENILE DELINQUENCY COURT?

There are two types of cases that end up in juvenile delinquency court: they are called “601 petitions” and “602 petitions”.<sup>2477</sup>

- 601 petitions: The county’s probation department files 601 petitions based on crimes that are only illegal when someone is a child under the age of 18. This includes things such as breaking curfew, skipping school, running away, or disobeying parents. If the court finds a child under the age of 18 guilty of one of these offenses, the child is called a “status offender.”<sup>2478</sup>
- 602 petitions: The District Attorney’s office files 602 petitions based on crimes that would still be illegal even if the child were 18 years or older. These types of crimes include both felonies and misdemeanors. If the court finds the child guilty of these types of crimes, it is called an “adjudication” (instead of a “conviction,” which is the term used to describe crimes that people are found guilty of in the adult criminal court system). A child who has an “adjudication” is called a “delinquent” to describe their legal status.<sup>2479</sup>

In juvenile delinquency court, they have hearings called “fitness” hearings (sometimes called “waiver” hearings), where the judge decides if the child is “unfit” for juvenile delinquency court. If the child is found “unfit” for juvenile court, the child’s case will be held in adult criminal court, with adult punishments. Children can only be found “unfit” for juvenile delinquency court, and have their case sent to adult criminal court, if they were 14 or older at the time of the alleged offense.

HOW COULD A CASE IN JUVENILE DELINQUENCY COURT AFFECT MY ABILITY TO RECONNECT WITH MY CHILD IN MY REENTRY?

It will be difficult to reconnect with your child if they are in the custody of the juvenile justice system (juvenile hall) or incarcerated in jail or prison as an adult. Please read the next question for more about how your child’s delinquency case can affect your parental rights.

WHAT COULD HAPPEN TO MY PARENTAL RIGHTS IF MY CHILD HAS A CASE IN JUVENILE DELINQUENCY COURT?

You may not be able to take your child home with you. The juvenile court will hold a “detention hearing” where the judge decides whether or not you, as the parent, have the right to take your child home while the case is ongoing. The judge’s decision on where to release the child is based what the judge determines is best for your child, including the following factors:

- (1) If the District Attorney has evidence to support the charges, AND
- (2) One of the following is true:
  - The child has violated a juvenile court order;
  - The child is a flight risk (meaning the child is likely to run away);;

- There is immediate and urgent necessity to detain (hold the child in custody) the child for the child's protection; or
- It is reasonably necessary for the protection of someone else or their property that the child be detained.<sup>2480</sup>

During this process, you, as the child's parent, have the RIGHT to:

- Get a copy of the 601 Petition and/or 602 Petition,<sup>2481</sup> which explain what your child is being accused of (in other words, these petitions are NOT findings of guilt).
- To be legally notified of the first hearing, called a "detention hearing."<sup>2482</sup>
- Be present at all your child's hearings and court dates (see PG. 742 for more information).<sup>2483</sup>
- Your child's juvenile delinquency court file, AND
- To ask that your child's court hearings to be kept confidential<sup>2484</sup>.

COULD MY CRIMINAL RECORD AFFECT MY CHILD'S CASE IN JUVENILE DELINQUENCY COURT?

No. Your criminal record cannot affect your child's case in juvenile delinquency court.

For more information on Juvenile Delinquency Court, see Appendix G, PG. 813. There you can find more information on the following:

- 1) What juvenile delinquency court is;
- 2) What happens when your child is arrested and accused of breaking the law;
- 3) The rights you as a parent and your child have when your child is charged with a crime;
- 4) The type of hearings you and your child must attend;
- 5) The decisions the court can make about your child when your child has been charged with a crime; and
- 6) How your child's records can be sealed.<sup>2485</sup>

XII. BECOMING AN ADOPTIVE PARENT WITH A RECORD

WHAT WILL I LEARN ABOUT ADOPTION?

- Understand adoption.
- The background check process for potential adoptive parents.
- Whether you can adopt a child if you have a criminal record.

This section is focused on people with criminal records who want to BECOME adoptive parents. If your child was adopted out while you were incarcerated or because of your conviction history, and you want to learn about your options, see PG. 755 about juvenile dependency court and CPS involvement instead.

WHAT IS ADOPTION?

Adoption is the legal process of forming a legally recognized parent-child relationship when you are not the child's biological or birth parent. Adoptive parents have ALL the same legal rights and responsibilities that a biological parent would have had. That adoptive parent-child relationship is permanent and is seen as exactly the same as that of a birth family under the law. An adoptive parent can be a stepparent or domestic partner of one of the birth parents, a relative of the child who has been caring for the child, or someone unrelated to the child by blood. For more information on adoption and how to adopt a child, visit the following website: <http://www.childsworld.ca.gov/pg1302.htm>.

WHAT IS THE BACKGROUND CHECK PROCESS FOR POTENTIAL ADOPTIVE PARENTS?

Anyone who applies to adopt a child will have to provide a lot of documentation, including a state criminal record and fingerprints that will be run through the California Department of Justice's (CA DOJ) state database and the FBI's federal database.<sup>2486</sup>

CAN I ADOPT A CHILD IF I HAVE A CRIMINAL RECORD?

It depends on your past conviction(s) and the past conviction(s) of anyone else living in the adoptive home.<sup>2487</sup> If your past conviction was related to the abuse or neglect of a child, or was for a violent offense, the judge may not allow you to adopt. If you were convicted of abuse or neglect or a violent offense, it you should talk to a lawyer about whether you will still be able to legally adopt a child.<sup>2488</sup> Because the judge is determining what is in the best interest of the child, convictions related to child abuse or neglect will likely bar you from adopting a child.<sup>2489</sup>

> Convictions that will AUTOMATICALLY Ban You from Adopting a Child:

Whether you are going through an adoption agency, family court, or juvenile dependency court, under state law you may not adopt a child if you have a felony conviction for child abuse or neglect, spousal abuse, any crimes against a child (including child pornography), or for a violent crime such as rape, sexual assault, or homicide).<sup>2490</sup> You also may not adopt a child if you have a felony conviction within the last 5 years for physical assault, battery, or a drug- or alcohol-related offense (in other words, you will have to wait 5 years after the date of your conviction to be able to adopt a child in California).<sup>2491</sup>

So regardless of whether it is a court or an adoption agency reviewing your record, you will not be approved as an adoptive parent if one of the above bans applies.

> Convictions that MIGHT Ban You from Adopting a Child:

The question above explained state law that automatically prevents people with certain convictions from adopting a child, no matter if it is a court or an adoption agency making the decision.

In addition to those convictions, a family court, dependency court, and/or an adoption agency will also screen and consider the following factors about you:

- How you've dealt with difficult or stressful life situations in the past;
- Relationships within your family;

- Ability to take over the responsibility for the care, guidance, and protection of a child;
- Emotional flexibility and stability;
- Self-esteem;
- Coping ability;
- How you accept normal hazards and risks;
- Motivation for adoption;
- Your ability to have a parent-child relationship and to enjoy life with a child;
- Flexibility regarding your expectations of the child.<sup>2492</sup>
- Social background;
- Educational background;
- Financial stability;
- Work adjustment; and
- Adequacy of housing.<sup>2493</sup>

In sum, courts and adoption agencies review every adoption application individually. Your conviction history will be one factor, but depending on your current situation and efforts at rehabilitation, you may still be able to adopt (unless you have a conviction on the list of ones that automatically prevent you from adopting, on PG. 726).

I HAVE A FELONY CONVICTION THAT AUTOMATICALLY BANS ME FROM ADOPTING A CHILD. CAN RECORD CLEARING REMEDIES HELP ME ADOPT?

Maybe. If you successfully obtain a felony reduction under Penal Code section 17(b), your conviction must be treated as a misdemeanor for all purposes – including adoption.<sup>2494</sup> This means you can no longer be automatically banned on the basis of your felony conviction alone. Depending on the nature and circumstances of your crime, a family court, dependency court, and/or an adoption agency may still consider your reduced conviction as one factor among many indicating your fitness to adopt. (See previous question.) However, keep in mind that the act of seeking a felony reduction is evidence of your initiative and a desire to move forward with your life. Emphasize this and other factors showing proof of rehabilitation in your application.

MY CHILD WAS ADOPTED OUT WHILE I WAS INCARCERATED. WHAT CAN I DO TO RECONNECT?

If your child was adopted while you were incarcerated, you should have received notice (in writing, on official court papers) of this adoption. Although you are incarcerated, you had the right to be present at any hearing where your parental rights could be terminated.<sup>2495</sup> If you were not notified and your child was given up for adoption, talk to a lawyer IMMEDIATELY to discuss your rights and what can be done. If you were notified of the hearing but chose not to contest the adoption or appear at the hearing, your options are much more limited. Once parental rights have been terminated, you are no longer considered the parent of – or even related to – the child in question.<sup>2496</sup>

A lawyer may be able to help you draft an agreement with the adoptive parents so that you can continue to have contact with your child. This may be a formal agreement in writing and filed in court OR an informal agreement between you and the adoptive parents.<sup>2497</sup> A family lawyer can advise you on which is the better solution.

XIII. FAMILY ISSUES INSIDE PRISON OR JAIL

WHAT WILL I LEARN ABOUT FAMILY ISSUES INSIDE PRISON OR JAIL?

- How to connect with your child after your release if you gave birth while incarcerated.
- Ways you can show that you will be able to parent your child after your release.
- What paternity/parentage is and why it matter for reentry.
- What kinds of convictions will restrict your ability to have jail/prison visits with a child.

PREGNANCY & MOTHERING WHILE INCARCERATED

For more information and specific questions about being pregnant and giving birth while incarcerated, see Appendix H, PG. 817.

I GAVE BIRTH WHILE INCARCERATED. HOW DO I CONNECT WITH MY CHILD AFTER I AM RELEASED?

If your release date or parole date falls within 6-8 weeks after you deliver your baby, you should be given family planning services while you are incarcerated.<sup>2498</sup> Family planning services include referrals to physicians or community agencies and encouragement to enroll in life education classes.<sup>2499</sup>

WHAT CAN I DO TO SHOW THAT I AM ABLE TO PARENT MY CHILD AFTER MY RELEASE?

Using a notebook, keep a record of all the things you did while incarcerated to prepare yourself to take care of your child in reentry. If you need to go to court after you are released, these types of records won't prove to a judge that you are immediately ready to take over parenting, but they will help to show the judge that you tried to stay involved with the events in your child's life, maintain a positive, loving relationship with your child, and work on improving yourself—all things that help your chances to reconnect with your child through the court system.

Keep track of the following:

- All requests for visitation—even ones where your child's caregiver refused to allow the visit.
- Any educational programs you participate in, like parenting classes or vocational classes, and the dates for every class you attend. Try to collect any documents to show proof of attendance, certificates of completion, or awards you received. These will help to show a judge how hard you worked while incarcerated to be prepared as a parent after your release.
- A record of what you have done while incarcerated to keep track of your child and his/her development and well-being. For example, write down the dates and times you called your child and/or the child's caregiver, received a call, or visited with your child and/or your child's caregiver. Also keep track of the letters you sent—and ask for updates about your child, like his or her health, report card, physical, social and emotional development, and overall well-being.
- Save any letters or pictures you receive from your child's caregiver while you are incarcerated.

RESTRICTIONS ON CHILDREN VISITING CURRENTLY INCARCERATED PARENTS

CAN MY CHILDREN VISIT ME IN STATE PRISON?

It depends. If you were convicted of certain crimes involving a child, CDCR may prohibit or restrict your child from visiting you while you are incarcerated.<sup>2500</sup> This flow chart summarizes the CDCR’s visitation policies for people convicted of child-related offenses:

HOW DO I GET A COURT ORDER TO REINSTATE VISITATION WITH MY CHILD?

If you were convicted of certain offenses involving your own child, the CDCR may not allow your child to visit at all. To try to resintate visitation privileges, you can request a court hearing to determine whether visitation is in your child’s best interests.<sup>2501</sup> If the court finds in your favor, you may be able to have non-contact visits with your child.<sup>2502</sup> The court in which you must file depends on the status of your parental rights, among other factors. Legal Services for Prisoners with Children’s Child Custody and Visiting Rights Manual for Incarcerated Parents<sup>2503</sup> has more information about reinstating visitation. To request a free copy of the manual by mail, write to:

WHAT IS THE INSTITUTION CLASSIFICATION COMMITTEE, AND HOW DO I REQUEST CONTACT VISITS THROUGH IT?

The Institution Classification Committee is one of several “classification committees” that each institution must establish.<sup>2504</sup> The committee is composed of various members, including a chairperson (commonly the warden), an alternate chairperson (such as a correctional administrator), a psychiatrist or physician, and several other employees of the institution.<sup>2505</sup> The ICC’s duties include recommending the transfer of inmates.<sup>2506</sup> Given the warden of your institution is likely the chairperson of the ICC, you should first direct any request regarding visitation to the warden’s attention.

I WAS ARRESTED FOR A CHILD-RELATED OFFENSE, BUT NOT CONVICTED. CAN MY CHILD VISIT ME IN JAIL OR PRISON?

If you were arrested for one of the offenses listed in the flow charts above, your visiting status is unrestricted UNLESS the classification committee at your institution has determined that you could present a threat to minor visitors (visitors under the age of 18).<sup>2507</sup> The classification committee makes these decisions on a case-by-case basis, considering information from arrest reports, court transcripts, and other official documents.<sup>2508</sup> If the classification committee finds that such visits could be dangerous or harmful, you will be restricted to non-contact visits with your child.<sup>2509</sup> You can appeal the committee’s decision by filing a grievance form (using a CDCR Form 602 in stateprison, or using your jail’s grievance form).<sup>2510</sup>

PATERNITY/PARENTAGE ISSUES

WHAT IS PATERNITY/PARENTAGE?

Under the law, there is a difference between being biologically related to a child and having the legal right to decide what is best for the child. “Paternity” or “parentage” is a legal concept—not a biological one! This means that you can be the child’s biological parent but not the “legal parent,” OR you can be the child’s legal parent even if you are not the biological parent. There are specific legal rules for deciding whom the child’s legal parents are—in other words, rules for establishing paternity/parentage (these legal rules are also called “presumptions”).

When a child is born, the woman who gives birth to the child (the child’s biological or “natural mother”) is automatically the child’s legal parent. But the child does not have another legal parent until paternity/parentage is established according to these legal rules. Even if someone is the child’s biological parent (and can prove it), if he was never married to the mother of the child, they are not considered the child’s legal parent and do not have any legal rights or responsibilities for the child UNLESS paternity/parentage is legally established according to these presumptions.<sup>2511</sup> To learn more about how paternity/parentage is established, keep reading this section.

For same-sex couples, if a couple conceives through assisted reproduction (i.e. with a sperm or egg donor) than the non-biological parent is treated by law as if they were the legal parent of the child as long as there is consent in writing signed by both parents.<sup>2512</sup> The couple does not need to be married to meet this standard.<sup>2513</sup> Non-biological parents can also establish parentage if they received the child into their home and openly held them out to be their natural child, or were married at the time the child was born, but to establish legal parentage this way you would need to go to court.<sup>2514</sup>

WHY DOES LEGAL PATERNITY/PARENTAGE MATTER?

Establishing paternity/parentage gives you and your child many rights, including a right to child support, access to your child’s medical records, public benefits for you and the child, and more. Once parentage is established, a family-related court (family court, probate court, or dependency court) can make orders for custody, visitation, child support, health insurance, name changes, and reimbursement of pregnancy and birth costs.<sup>2515</sup> Until parentage is established, the court can’t make orders about these issues.

WHAT DOES PATERNITY HAVE TO DO WITH MY REENTRY?

There are two reasons why paternity/parentage can be important in reentry:

- 1) Only biological or adoptive parents have legal rights to care for and making decisions about their child. You may have an informal agreement if you are not the biological parent, but you cannot go to court to ask a judge for (more) custody or visitation. However, if you are not the biological or adoptive parent of the child, you can seek custody or visitation by asking a judge in court to become a guardian or foster parent. For information on how to become a guardian, see PG. 750. For information on how to become a foster parent, see PG. 761.
- 2) If you are the biological or adoptive parent, you may have child support obligations. For more on child support obligations, see PG. 778.

IMPORTANT: If a person is established as a legal parent of a child, that person MUST financially support the child. It is a crime for a legal parent to fail to support his or her child.<sup>2516</sup> A legal parent also has the right to get custody or visitation rights related to the child. For more information on how financial support may occur, please see the section on Child Support section beginning on PG. 778. For more information on custody and visitation, please see the overview on custody and visitation on PG. 732.

CAN MY CRIMINAL RECORD AFFECT PATERNITY ISSUES AND RECONNECTING WITH MY CHILD?

Yes. After establishing paternity, a parent with a criminal record may be limited or completely denied some or all of the benefits of paternity at the time of the court hearing OR may have to establish a record of good behavior to do things like visit the child. This is a sad reality for many people in reentry trying to reconnect with their children. However, to even begin the process and establish a record of good behavior, it's necessary to establish legal paternity/ parentage.

HOW DO I ESTABLISH PARENTAGE?

There are two main ways to establish paternity/parentage when the child's parents are not married:

1. Go to court and get a court order—either on your own or with the help of the Local Child Support Agency (LCSA). To begin, you should collect the forms you will need and file them in the county where your child lives (see <http://www.courts.ca.gov/1201.htm> for help on finding the right county.) Once you have found the right county, you can visit the steps below to guide you in filing your case.
  - For steps for filing a parentage case, go to: <http://www.courts.ca.gov/11298.htm>.
  - For instructions how to answer a request to establish parentage in court, go to: <http://www.courts.ca.gov/11309.htm>.
  - For forms and instruction to finish you parentage case go to: <http://www.courts.ca.gov/11299.htm>.
2. Both parents sign a voluntary “Declaration of Paternity.” For more information on a Declaration of Paternity, see Appendix J, PG. 821.

CAN I ESTABLISH MY PARENTAGE IN COURT WHILE I AM INCARCERATED?

Yes, you can establish paternity/parentage while you are incarcerated, but it will be difficult.

If you establish paternity/parentage through a court order, you are required to file the correct forms and “serve” them - give them formal notice - on the other party in the suit. You also have to make arrangements to either attend court hearings in person or through a videoconference. You can do all these things while you are incarcerated but it may not be easy:

1. Forms: We recommend you obtain assistance from one or all of the following:
  - You can write to the Family Law Facilitator in the county where your child is currently living
  - Law clerks in the law library (if you have one in your institution)
  - Family and Friends - they can call the Family Law Facilitator for you or download the correct forms off the internet at <http://www.courts.ca.gov/forms.htm> and send them to you.
2. Filing fees: If you have limited funds, we recommend you try and obtain a file fee waiver from the court.
3. Attending court hearings: you can do one of the following:
  - Request to be transported to court for the hearings. For more information on your right to be transported to court see PG. 742.
  - An alternative to your physically appearing in court is appearing by telephone or videoconference. We recommend that you ask for one of these options if transportation to court is not possible or feasible for you.<sup>2517</sup>

If you establish paternity/parentage by signing a “Declaration of Paternity,” it must be signed by both parents at the same time and notarized. If you are incarcerated, this may not be possible. Another challenge is that the form is in triplicate and is only available through government offices such as county Social Services, Registrars of Births and Deaths, and Family Law Facilitators.<sup>2518</sup>

<sup>2517</sup> Legal Services for Prisoners with Children, Child Custody and Visiting Rights Manual for Incarcerated Parents (2015). This is a detailed resource for all information related to filing a court case in family court in order to establish paternity.

<sup>2518</sup> If you have the cooperation of the mother, then she or you can contact the county offices for assistance in signing the form. You can also ask for assistance from the prison's litigation office, your counselor, or other institution staff. Perhaps the mother can go to your institution and you can both sign the same form there in front of a notary. Or, perhaps you can each sign separate forms that say the same thing and have them separately notarized.” Legal Services for Prisoners with Children, Incarcerated Parents Manual, Rights and Responsibilities (2015).

XIV. ENDING A MARRIAGE OR DOMESTIC PARTNERSHIP (DIVORCE & SEPARATION)

WHAT WILL I LEARN ABOUT ENDING A MARRIAGE OR DOMESTIC PARTNERSHIP?

- How to end a marriage or domestic partnership.
- How to end a marriage or domestic partnership while you are incarcerated.
- How to get a divorce if you have an order not to contact your spouse or if you cannot find your spouse after you are released.
- What will happen if your spouse wants a divorce while you are incarcerated.

HOW CAN I END MY MARRIAGE OR DOMESTIC PARTNERSHIP?

A marriage or domestic partnership can end by the following legal cases: divorce, legal separation, annulment, or summary dissolution. The following chart defines each way to end a marriage or domestic partnership, how to get it, and how to respond to a request to end a marriage or domestic partnership.

THIS CHART PROVIDES MORE INFORMATION ON HOW TO END A LEGAL RELATIONSHIP:

CAN I END A MARRIAGE OR DOMESTIC PARTNERSHIP WHILE I AM INCARCERATED?

You can end a marriage or domestic partnership while you are incarcerated in the same way you would if you were out of prison or jail. However, there are a few factors you should take into consideration when deciding whether or not to end your marriage or domestic partnership while you are incarcerated:

- 1) You may not be able to go to the court hearings.<sup>2524</sup>
- 2) You will not be able to get physical custody of any child(ren).
- 3) You are not guaranteed visitation rights with any child(ren).
- 4) It can be difficult to access information about your finances and property while you are incarcerated.

DIVORCE QUESTIONS WHILE INCARCERATED & AFTER RELEASE FROM PRISON OR JAIL

CAN I FILE FOR DIVORCE WHILE I AM INCARCERATED?

Yes you can. The same requirements apply as if you were not incarcerated. See Appendix K, PG. 822, for the steps. But there are some things you should consider:

- 1) You will not be able to present at the hearing unless it is ABSOLUTELY NECESSARY.<sup>2525</sup> It will be very hard for you to show that it is necessary for you to be present at court. To request to be present, you must file a motion with the court explaining your reasons for wanting to be at the hearing. You can also request that you be allowed to call in or participate by videoconference.
- 2) You won't be able to gain custody because you are incarcerated so that part of your divorce proceeding will not be handled. Instead, you will have to come back to court once you are released to discuss custody.
- 3) There is no guarantee that your child or children will visit you in jail and may be more difficult if you get a divorce while in jail.
- 4) Since you will not be present at the divorce, you may not be able to get information about property or financial interests that you may be entitled to from your spouse. If you get a divorce while incarcerated, you will not be able to go back to get these things.

I WAS INCARCERATED AND HAVE AN ORDER NOT TO CONTACT MY SPOUSE. HOW DO I GET A DIVORCE?

The process of divorce is the same, but you CANNOT make contact with your spouse or domestic partner. Instead, you will have to ask someone to file your forms for you.

To protect yourself and to make sure you do not violate the no-contact order, talk to your attorney who represented you at the time you received the protective order if you received the no-contact order as a result of a criminal investigation or criminal conviction. If the no-contact order was condition of your parole, you should contact the defense attorney/public defender who represented you and/or ask your parole officer for help. Both of these people can help you find resources so that you can begin the divorce process.

I WAS INCARCERATED, AND NOW I CANNOT FIND MY SPOUSE. HOW DO I GET A DIVORCE?

If you can no longer find your spouse, you must still file the paperwork and go through the steps of filing a divorce (see Appendix K on PG. 822 for those steps). When you appear in court, you will need to show that you tried your best to find your spouse. The judge may ask you questions about how you tried to find your spouse. If the judge feels like more should be done, s/he may require you to “notify” your spouse by “publication” (a newspaper posting) or by “posting” (putting the divorce notice on a bulletin board in the courthouse).<sup>2526</sup>

MY SPOUSE WANTS A DIVORCE AND I AM INCARCERATED. HOW WILL I BE NOTIFIED? WHAT SHOULD I DO?

You will likely receive paperwork through the mail, which will include the Summons, and Petition legal papers that were filed by your former spouse. You will also receive a form called the “Notice and Acknowledgment of Receipt” (FL-117). This form asks if you would like to “waive” (meaning give up) your right to be served with future papers. If you do not agree to give up this right, then your spouse seeking the divorce will have to arrange for someone to serve future papers related to the divorce to you personally (usually someone you spouse hires or someone in law enforcement).

<sup>2524</sup> See CAL. PENAL CODE § 2625. You have the right to be present at any court proceeding that may terminate your parental rights. You have a right to be present at any court proceeding in an action that may terminate your parental rights or make a judgment about your child when your child is a dependent in court. But a divorce is different, since it is neither, you will likely not be able to attend unless as part of the divorce your parental rights could be (or if your spouse requested) terminated.

Once you have received this paperwork, you will have 30 days to respond.<sup>2527</sup> For steps on how to respond, please see Appendix K on PG. 822. Unfortunately, however, there is no law saying you have the right to be present at the court hearing—unless there will be a potential change in your rights as a parent.<sup>2528</sup> BUT you can still respond! You should still respond to the petition within 30 days if you disagree with something that is included in the paperwork filed by your spouse—for example, see Appendix K on PG. 822, for reasons why you could disagree with the petition.

XV. MANAGING & NAVIGATING SPOUSAL & CHILD SUPPORT

WHAT WILL I LEARN ABOUT SPOUSAL & CHILD SUPPORT?

- What family-related court-ordered debt is, including child support and spousal support, and how it can affect your reentry.
- How to manage child support payments and spousal support payments during and after incarceration, including changing the amount you owe.
- What the consequences for failing to pay child support or spousal support are.
- What to do if you owe past, overdue child support payments or spousal support payments when you return to the community from prison or jail.
- How to ask for spousal support and whether you can ask for spousal support while you are incarcerated.

Many people coming home from prison or jail are surprised to find they owe lots of money to various courts, agencies, and people. The money you owe can make it very hard to get back on your feet, which can leave you feeling frustrated and discouraged. In this section, we will walk you through the different types of court ordered debts that a judge can order you to pay to support your children or spouse.

WHAT IS A FAMILY-RELATED COURT-ORDERED DEBT?

In the COURT-ORDERED DEBT CHAPTER, beginning on PG. 654, we explain the types of court-ordered debts you may owe because of criminal justice system involvement. Examples of these debts include: restitution; court fines and penalties; administrative fees; and traffic fines and fees.

There are a other court-ordered debts we do not cover in that chapter because these debts are specific to court orders involving your child(ren) or former spouse. Here we provide you with an overview of family-related court-ordered debts, specifically child support and spousal support.

HOW WILL OWING FAMILY-RELATED COURT-ORDERED DEBTS AFFECT MY REENTRY?

Family-related court-ordered debts are important to manage and navigate because if you are unaware, unwilling, or unable to pay, they can add up quickly and harm you as you try to rebuild stability in your reentry. If you owe money to help support your child or spouse, this may affect your wage earnings, credit score, ability to secure housing, bank accounts, and failure to pay could be a violation of your conditions of parole, probation, or other type of community supervision. Here, we describe each family-related court-ordered debt, how to find out if and how much you owe, how to request a change to the order, how to manage your payments, and the consequences for failure to pay.

CHILD SUPPORT DEBT

BASICS OF CHILD SUPPORT

WHAT IS CHILD SUPPORT?

Child support is a monthly payment that a judge can order a PARENT (including an adoptive parent) to make to another parent or caregiver to cover the child's care and living expenses. State law says that every parent must financially support his or her child.<sup>2529</sup> Usually, the parent who does not have custody of the child (or who has custody some of the time and earns more money) pays child support to the parent or caregiver who has custody of the child most or all of the time.<sup>2530</sup>

WHO HAS TO PAY CHILD SUPPORT?

A court can only order you to pay child support if you are legally considered to be the child's mother or father.<sup>2531</sup> You have to pay child support when a family court judge makes a child support order, which says how much each parent is required to pay. A family court judge can make a child support order in any of the following cases (please note: EITHER parent can ask the judge for a child support order in any of the following cases).<sup>2532</sup>

<sup>2530</sup> This is because CAL. FAM. CODE § 3900 et seq. says both parents are expected contribute equally to their child's financial needs.

- 1) Divorce, legal separation, or annulment—for parents who are married to each other and want to end their relationship;
- 2) Paternity (parentage)—for parents who are NOT married to each other;
- 3) Petition for Custody and Support of Minor Children—for parents who have signed a voluntary Declaration of Paternity, OR who are married and want to stay married;
- 4) Domestic violence restraining order—for married OR unmarried parents; OR
- 5) In some situations, the Local Child Support Agency (LCSA) may also start a child support case in court against one or both parents/caregivers (see next question for more information about LCSA child support cases).<sup>2533</sup>

In general, you must continue to make child support payments until your child turns 18 years old,<sup>2534</sup> or until the judge or LCSA agrees to change the order. Child support also ends if your parental rights are terminated.<sup>2535</sup>

Do legal guardians have to pay child support?

No.<sup>2536</sup> Child support is a parental responsibility, not a legal guardian's responsibility, and therefore a judge cannot order a legal guardian to pay child support.<sup>2537</sup> But adoptive parents DO take on a legal financial responsibility to support their adoptive child(ren)—because they assume all legal rights and responsibilities of biological parents (unlike legal guardians).<sup>2538</sup>

WHO RECEIVES MY CHILD SUPPORT PAYMENTS?

In general, your child support payments go to the child's other parent or caregiver who has physical custody of the child, OR to the state of California if your child receives public benefits or if Child Protective Services (CPS) is involved.

Can you pay child support directly to the legal guardian of a child?

You can pay child support directly to the guardian in an informal capacity. If the guardian or the local child support agency (LCSA) has requested child support in court you will have to pay the state disbursement unit and they will provide support to your child's guardian.<sup>2539</sup>

HOW WILL OWING CHILD SUPPORT AFFECT MY REENTRY?

Owing child support can affect every area of your reentry from getting employment to occupational licenses to public benefits and even housing. If you do not make child support payments, you can face such serious consequences as the following:

- 1) If you are employed, your employer will automatically deduct (take away) a portion of your wages to pay your current and/or overdue child support obligations (called a wage assignment or wage garnishment);<sup>2540</sup>
- 2) Your child support payments can be automatically deducted (taken away) from other income and benefits you earn, including state or federal income tax refunds, workers' compensation benefits, unemployment and state disability benefits, retirement benefits, and lottery winnings;<sup>2541</sup>
- 3) Liens can be placed on your property and bank accounts to pay overdue child support (see PG. 724 for more information about liens);<sup>2542</sup>
- 4) Your driver's license, occupational license, and commercial or recreational licenses may be suspended, revoked, or denied;<sup>2543</sup>
- 5) Your passport may be revoked or denied;<sup>2544</sup>

<sup>2534</sup> CAL. FAM. CODE § 3901(a). However, if your child is still in high school and lives with a parent, then child support continues until s/he graduates OR turns 19—whichever happens first. Alternatively, child support can end earlier if/when your child (1) gets married, (2) joins the military, (3) is emancipated, or (4) dies. Or child support may continue for longer if (1) the parents agree to a longer arrangement, or (2) the judge orders both parents to keep supporting a disabled adult child.

- 6) Unpaid child support will be reported to credit bureaus, which can hurt your credit rating and make it harder to get a loan, rent an apartment, or find a job;<sup>2545</sup> AND/OR
- 7) The amount of interest that you owe will continue to increase.<sup>2546</sup>
- 8) If you are unemployed and do not pay your child support obligations, the judge may order you to get a job (or at least to try). For example, the judge may order you to apply for a certain number of jobs every week until you get hired, and may require you to bring in proof of every job application you do.<sup>2547</sup>
- 9) Finally, if the judge finds that you are able to make child support payments and are willfully failing to pay, the judge can find you “in contempt of court” and have you arrested or put in jail.<sup>2548</sup> However, the judge usually only does this as a last resort, if all other enforcement efforts have failed.

HOW DO I FIND OUT WHETHER I OWE CHILD SUPPORT AND HOW MUCH I OWE?

If you were ordered to pay child support, you should have received papers from the LCSA or the other parent.<sup>2549</sup> If you can’t remember whether you received papers (or you don’t have them anymore), you should contact the LCSA to find out how much you owe.<sup>2550</sup> To find the LCSA in your county, call 1-866-901-3212 or visit <http://www.childsup.ca.gov/home/lcsaoffices.aspx>. You can also contact the family court clerk to get a copy of your child support order and other court papers.

If you disagree with the amount of overdue child support you (or the other parent) owe, you can ask the LCSA for a review of your account, and/or you can ask the judge to determine how much money you owe (called a Judicial Determination of Arrears).<sup>2551</sup> If the overdue child support payments are from the period of time you were incarcerated, there is a special form to ask the judge how much you owe (Form FL-676: Request For Judicial Determination of Support Arrearages or Adjustment of Arrearages Due to Incarceration or Involuntary Institutionalization.)<sup>2552</sup>

IMPORTANT: If you never received any papers or child support order, but the LCSA now says that you owe child support, you may be able to have the judge cancel the child support order. But you must act as soon as you find out that there is an order for you to pay child support. If you do not act immediately, the judge may refuse to cancel the order.

MANAGING YOUR CHILD SUPPORT PAYMENTS

I AM CURRENTLY INCARCERATED. DO MY CHILD SUPPORT PAYMENTS AUTOMATICALLY STOP WHEN I AM IN PRISON OR JAIL?

It depends on the date when your most recent child support order was issued by the judge AND for how long you were incarcerated. For most people, though, the answer is NO—child support generally does NOT stop automatically while you’re incarcerated.

WILL MY CHILD SUPPORT PAYMENTS STOP AUTOMATICALLY WHILE I'M INCARCERATED?
NO, your payments WILL NOT stop automatically if your child support order was issued before July 1, 2011.	If your current child support order was issued before July 1, 2011, your child support payments will NOT stop automatically while you're incarcerated. You will continue to owe child support payments while you are incarcerated, unless you get the judge to change your child support order. To stop your child support payments while you are incarcerated, you will need to ask the judge to reduce your payments to $0 because you do not have any income (unless you have an outside source of income to make your payments). See PG. 782 to learn how to do this.
YES, your payments SHOULD stop automatically if your child support order was issued on or after July 1, 2011, AND you are incarcerated for 90 days or more.	If your current child support order was issued on or after July 1, 2011 AND you are incarcerated for 90 days or more, your child support payments will be automatically paused (suspended) while you are incarcerated.<sup>2553</sup> This means that you will not owe any child support during the time you are incarcerated, and you will not have to do anything to make this to happen. But your child support payments will automatically continue again after you are released.<sup>2554</sup> This special law applies to child support orders issued (i.e., made and/or changed) on or after July 1, 2011, for parents who are incarcerated for 90 days or more.<sup>2555</sup> However, it may not apply if you are incarcerated for domestic violence, harassment, or for violating a previous child support order, OR if you have outside income and can afford to make payments while you're incarcerated.<sup>2556</sup>

In summary: If your most recent child support order was issued by the judge (i.e., made or changed) on or after July 1, AND you are/were incarcerated for 90 days or more, your payments should automatically stop while you are incarcerated. If your child support order was NOT made on or after July 1, 2011, your payments will NOT automatically stop while you're incarcerated (but you can ask the judge to reduce your payments to $0 while you're incarcerated—see Appendix L, PG. 824.

WILL MY CHILD SUPPORT PAYMENTS AUTOMATICALLY BEGIN WHEN I AM RELEASED FROM PRISON OR JAIL?

If your child support order was made or modified on or after July 1, 2011 then your child support will automatically resume once you are released from jail.<sup>2557</sup>

If your child support order was made before July 1, 2011 then you should check the judge's order to see if there is an expiration on the modification. If not the order will stay at zero until the recipient of the child support decides to file for modification again.<sup>2558</sup>

HOW DO I MAKE CHILD SUPPORT PAYMENTS?

You can make payments by one of the following methods, depending on whether or not the Local Child Support Agency (LCSA) is involved:

- 1) If the LCSA is involved (there is a formal arrangement for support payments between you and the other parent or caregiver):
  - When you pay your child support, you are making these payments to the California State Disbursement Unit (SDU).<sup>2559</sup> Under federal law, the California SDU is required to process 100% of child support payments (which used to be processed by the LCSA itself, but no longer).<sup>2560</sup>
  - Mail your payment (check or money order) to the California SDU at the following address:<sup>2561</sup>
California SDU, P.O. Box 989067, West Sacramento, CA 95798-9067
  - Call to make payments: 1-866-901-3212 (option 1)

<sup>2553</sup> CAL. FAM. CODE § 4007.5(a)(1). The law applies to child support orders issued on or after July 1, 2011, and remains in effect until July 1, 2020. § 4007.5(g), (h). It is possible this law will be extended.

<sup>2559</sup> Telephone and online payments also require a debit card, credit card, or bank information. For both telephone and online payments, you can make a single (one-time) payment or set up an account to make ongoing payments.

<sup>2561</sup> For payments by mail, send a check or money order to the following address. The check or money order should be payable to the "California State Disbursement Unit" and include your name and case identification number. Note: This address is only for regular child support payments: CA State Disbursement Unit (SDU), PO Box 989067, West Sacramento, CA 95798-9067.

- Pay online: https://www.childsup.ca.gov/payments/statedisbursementunit\(sdu\).aspx.aspx).
  - Pay in person at certain LCSA offices or any MoneyGram location.
    - To find an LCSA office that accepts payments, call 1-866-901-3212 or visit www.childsup.ca.gov/offices.
    - To find a MoneyGram location, call 1-800-926-9400 or visit www.MoneyGram.com/Locations. Use Receive Code 14630 to make a California child support payment. (Note: MoneyGram will charge an additional fee for making your payment.)
    - Note: You may need your child support Participant ID number and/or your social security number when you make a payment.
- 2) If the LCSA is not involved in your case, you must make payments directly to the other parent (or caregiver)—unless you are told otherwise.

HELPFUL HINT

Keep Records of Your Payments!

IMPORTANT! Whether you are making your payments to the California SDU or directly to the other parent, it's a good idea to always keep a record of every payment you make. You can keep a separate notebook where you write down the date and amount of each payment, or make notes on a calendar every time you make a payment (including the date and amount).

HELPFUL HINT

I lost my job or went to jail and cannot afford my child support payments!

IMPORTANT! If you cannot pay or are falling behind on your child support payments because you lost your job, went to jail, or some other important changes have happened, it's recommended that you immediately contact the LCSA and/or family court and ask to change your child support amount. Don't wait! You are responsible for paying the full amount of child support until the LCSA or judge changes the child support order. For more information about changing your child support order, see Appendix L, PG. 824.

WHAT CAN I DO IF MY MONEY IS BEING TAKEN OUT OF MY SALARY FOR OVERDUE CHILD SUPPORT PAYMENTS?

If you are employed, a portion of your wages will be automatically taken out to pay your current and/or overdue child support (called a wage assignment or wage garnishment).<sup>2562</sup> This will happen even if you only owe current child support payments, without any overdue payments or interest. If your child support payments are being taken directly from your wages, you should not need to make other payments.<sup>2563</sup>

If you are not employed, or if your child support is not being taken from your wages, you must make child support payments directly.

CAN I CHANGE OR ADJUST THE AMOUNT OF CHILD SUPPORT I OWE? ...WHILE I AM INCARCERATED? ...AFTER MY RELEASE?

IMPORTANT: The process for changing or lowering your CURRENT and FUTURE child support payments is different than the process for changing your PAST, OVERDUE child support debt. This question will explain how to change your current child support payments. To learn about changing your past, overdue child support debt, see PG. 785778.

First the bad news: In general, you CANNOT go back and change the amount of past, overdue child support payments and interest that you owe. (The only exception is for child support orders issued on or after July 1, 2011, or if you agree to settle your past debts owed the other parent or the state—see PG. 778 to learn more).<sup>2564</sup>

<sup>2563</sup> The judge is required to make an earning assignment order (also called income withholding or wage garnishment) any time there is an order to pay child support. CAL. FAM. CODE § 5230. If you want to make payments directly to the other parent (or caregiver) and NOT through wage assignment, you may be able to work out a different payment arrangement with him/her. If the LCSA is NOT involved in your case, you and the other parent (or caregiver) can agree to make child support payments in some other way, and can ask the judge to "stay" (put on hold) the wage assignment. In this situation, both parents (or caregiver) work out how child support will be paid and handle it between them. If the LCSA is involved in your case, the LCSA will have to agree to have the wage assignment put on hold. This may be difficult, however, because LCSAs usually prefer you to make child support payments through a wage assignment with your employer, and want all child support payments to go through the state payment system (called the State Disbursement Unit), NOT to the other parent directly. But you CAN ask the judge to change the amount of child support that you have to pay in the future, starting from the date when you file your court papers. You CAN also ask the judge to set up a monthly payment plan so you can repay what you owe in installments.<sup>2565</sup>

To ask for a change in your child support payments while incarcerated, fill out the “Incarcerated Parent’s Request to Review Child Support” form and send it to your local child support agency (LCSA).<sup>2566</sup> You can ask the prison or jail for a copy of this form, or for a sample form. If the form is not available, you should contact the LCSA immediately by phone or letter, and explain that you are incarcerated and need to change your child support payments.<sup>2567</sup>

See Appendix A, PG. 797, to find contact information for a list of LCSAs by county in California.

IMPORTANT: In general, the judge can only change the amount of child support you owe for future payments (starting from the day you file papers asking for the change). The judge cannot reduce the amount of past child support that you owe. Therefore, you should contact the LCSA and/or file your court papers as soon as you are incarcerated, if possible, to request a change in your payments.

If you are served with new child support papers while in prison or jail, you should contact the LCSA listed on the paperwork right away. It is best to contact the LCSA in writing, by filling out and sending back the blank Response form that you receive with the court papers.<sup>2568</sup> You only have 30 days (starting from the day you receive the papers) to respond to the LCSA and/or the court.<sup>2569</sup> You must notify the LCSA again once you are released.<sup>2570</sup>

To change the amount of your current and future child support payments, you must ask the judge or LCSA (if involved in your case) to change your child support order.

See the chart on the next page as a guide for how to request a change to current and future child support payments.

This form may be called Form FL-685 (if the LCSA has started a child support case for your child), or Form FL-270 or Form FL-320 (if the other parent or caregiver is asking you to pay child support). You will also need to complete forms with your income and financial information. If the LCSA has asked the judge to establish paternity (i.e., find that you are the child’s parent), you will need to return Form FL-610.

USE THE FOLLOWING CHART AS A GUIDE IF YOU WANT TO REQUEST A CHANGE IN YOUR CURRENT AND FUTURE CHILD SUPPORT PAYMENTS.

REQUESTING A CHANGE IN YOUR CURRENT & FUTURE CHILD SUPPORT PAYMENTS
YOU WANT TO REQUEST A CHANGE FROM→	The Court (the Judge)	The Local Child Support Agency (LCSA)
What should I do?	File a Request for Order of Child Support Modification (FL-300) AND Income & Expense Declaration (FL-150) or Financial Statement (FL-155) in family court. See Appendix L on PG. 824 for sample court forms. <sup>2571</sup>	Contact your LCSA and tell them you want a “review and adjustment” of your child support order.
What are the steps I need to follow?	To request a change in court, you must: Fill out the FL-300 AND FL-150 or FL-155 (see box above), and get other documents to show your income (see last bullet); File your court forms and other documents with the family court clerk; Serve copies of all your papers on the other parent (and LCSA, if involved in your case); and Have a court hearing to decide how much child support you must pay (see box below). IMPORTANT: You will need to show the judge that your circumstances have changed and you cannot afford your current child support payments—for example, because you were incarcerated, lost your job, have other expenses, or for some other reason. Along with your court forms, you should include any pay stubs or proof of income and your latest federal and state tax returns—these will show the judge how much money you make and how much you can afford to pay in child support. Ask the Family Law Facilitator for help getting all of your papers together.<sup>2572</sup>	To request a change from the LCSA: Contact your LCSA and tell them you want a “review and adjustment” of the child support order.
What happens next?	After you file your court forms and other documents, you will have a hearing. ## HELPFUL HINTS

What can I do if . . . ?

- If your driver's license has been suspended due to unpaid child support... First, contact the LCSA to see if they can help make arrangements to have your license released. If you cannot pay the amount required by the LCSA, you can ask the judge to reinstate (give back) your license by filing a Notice of Motion for Judicial Review of License Denial (Form FL-670) with the family court that issued your child support order (see Appendix L on PG. 824, for sample form).<sup>2573</sup>
- If there is a levy on your bank account... Contact the LCSA or call 1-866-901-3212 for any questions.
- If your passport has a hold on it... Federal law requires that anyone who owes more than $2,500 in overdue child support cannot get a passport.<sup>2574</sup> In California, you must pay off ALL of your overdue child support or have your child support case closed in order to get your passport released. Contact your LCSA for questions or assistance.<sup>2575</sup>

I AM FORMERLY INCARCERATED AND OWE MONEY FOR PAST, OVERDUE CHILD SUPPORT PAYMENTS (“ARREARS”). HOW CAN I CHANGE THESE ARREARS?

It depends on the date when your most recent child support order was issued by the judge AND for how long you were incarcerated.

POSSIBILITY #1: If your current child support order was issued on or after July 1, 2011 AND you were incarcerated for 90 days or more:

Your payments should have automatically stopped while you are incarcerated (see Appendix L, PG. 824, for more information about automatically stopping your child support payments while incarcerated). After you are released, if you discover that your child support payments were not automatically stopped—i.e., if you find that you owe child support from while you were incarcerated—you can ask the judge to “adjust” your child support arrears (i.e., reduce your debt to $0) for the time you were incarcerated.

To do this, fill out the Request for Judicial Determination of Support Arrearages or Adjustment of Arrearages Due to Incarceration or Involuntary Institutionalization (Form FL-676, available online at <http://www.courts.ca.gov/documents/fl676.pdf> or in Appendix L, PG. 824), and file it with the family court where your child support order is from. You will need to prove: (1) the dates when you were incarcerated, and (2) that you could not afford to pay child support while you were incarcerated (i.e., that you had no income or other money during that time.) However, if you were incarcerated for a domestic violence or harassment offense, or for violating a previous child support order, OR if you had outside income or assets and could afford to make child support payments while you were incarcerated, the judge may refuse to reduce your debt.<sup>2576</sup> BUT remember—this ONLY applies if your child support order was on or after July 1, 2011 AND you are incarcerated for 90 days or more.

POSSIBILITY #2: If your current child support order was NOT issued on or after July 1, 2011, or you were incarcerated for less than 90 days:

Your payments do NOT stop during your incarceration, so you will continue to owe child support payments for this time (unless you asked the LCSA or judge to change your payments while incarcerated—see the next question for more information about how to do this). Unfortunately, the judge cannot go back and change your overdue payments in this case, but you can ask the LCSA or other parent to forgive some of your overdue payments (see next question), and you can ask the judge to change your current child support payments going forward.

CAN I GET RID OF MY PAST, OVERDUE CHILD SUPPORT DEBT?

It depends, but probably not entirely.

IMPORTANT: The process for changing or lowering your PAST, OVERDUE child support debt (“arrears”) is different than the process for changing your CURRENT child support payment amount. This question will explain how to change your past, overdue child support debt. To learn about changing your current child support payments, see PG. 782.

This question will explain how to change your past, overdue child support debt.

STEP 1: First, figure out whether you owe overdue child support payments to the other parent (or caregiver) or to the state.

To find out, you can contact the LCSA and ask for a breakdown (detailed list) of your arrears. This will show how much you owe to the other parent and/or to the state. The chart below can also help you figure out whom you owe child support to—but it’s always best to get a breakdown from the LCSA to be sure!

STEP 2: Once you know whom you owe money to, use the following chart to figure out your next steps:

CHANGING OR LOWERING YOUR PAST, OVERDUE CHILD SUPPORT DEBT (ARREARS)
TO WHOM DO YOU OWE CHILD SUPPORT MONEY?	I OWE CHILD SUPPORT TO THE STATE (CALIFORNIA)	I OWE CHILD SUPPORT TO THE OTHER PARENT (OR CAREGIVER)
How do I know whom I owe?	If the other parent (or caregiver) is receiving public benefits for your child, or if CPS has taken your child, you owe child support to the State of California. <sup>2577</sup>	If your child support order was part of a divorce or family law case, you will probably owe child support directly to the other parent.
What should I do?	Apply for the Compromise of Arrears Program (COAP) (see PG. 722 for more information). <sup>2578</sup> If you qualify, the COAP program will reduce (but not completely eliminate) the amount of child support debt that you owe to the State, so you will not have to pay as much. <sup>2579</sup>	Try to work out an agreement (called a “settlement”) with the other parent (or caregiver). You may be able to work out an agreement to forgive some or all of the overdue child support, in exchange for your paying off the remaining amount right away.  For example, you could offer to make—and the other parent (or caregiver) could agree to accept—a single lump sum payment all at once, rather than making many smaller payments over time and having the debt drag out.
Important Information to Know:	If you miss any of your current child support or COAP payments, your COAP agreement will be cancelled AND you will owe all the debt that was previously reduced. You may not receive a refund for any of the COAP payments that you’ve already made, and you will be unable to reapply to the COAP program for 2 years. <sup>2580</sup>	If you reach an agreement with the other parent, you should make sure to put it in writing for the LCSA and the judge. <sup>2581</sup>

CAN I DISCHARGE MY CHILD SUPPORT ARREARS BY FILING FOR BANKRUPTCY?

No. Filing for bankruptcy will not cancel debt related to child support.<sup>2582</sup> There is unfortunately no legal procedure that completely discharges child support debt. While you may be able to reduce any child support arrears you owe to the state (see chart above), you will continue to owe some amount of child support until it is paid off.

I RECEIVE PUBLIC BENEFITS. CAN A PORTION OF MY PUBLIC BENEFITS BE TAKEN TO PAY FOR CHILD SUPPORT?

Yes. If you owe any child support payments (current and/or past, overdue payments), a portion of your public benefits payments can be automatically taken out to pay off your child support obligations. Your child support payments can be taken out of any benefits you receive except for General Assistance/General Relief (GA/GR) and SSI.<sup>2583</sup> That means your payments can be taken out of your unemployment, disability, workers compensation, veteran's benefits, or any other benefits you earn.

However, if you are already receiving public assistance, the judge may decide that your income is too low to owe current child support payments.<sup>2584</sup> BUT—this only applies to current payments. Even if the judge decides that your income is too low for current payments, you will still owe any past, overdue child support payments that were due in the past. You should ask the judge for a payment plan that lets you to make small payments over time.<sup>2585</sup> Remember: The only way you can avoid paying past, overdue child support payments is (1) if your child support order was issued on or after July 1, 2011, and the payments were due while you were incarcerated for 90 days or more; OR (2) if you get a settlement agreement with the COAP program or other parent.

For more information on paying child support, you can talk to the court Family Law Facilitator, contact the LCSA, or visit the California Courts' website on Paying a Child Support Order at <http://www.courts.ca.gov/1197.htm>.

CONSEQUENCES FOR FAILING TO PAY CHILD SUPPORT

CAN I BE IN VIOLATION OF MY SUPERVISION OR PAROLE IF I FAIL TO PAY CHILD SUPPORT?

Yes. Failure to pay child support can amount to a violation of supervision or parole if you are held in contempt of court for willfully withholding payment. This is because carrying out any criminal activity (which acting in contempt of court is) is a general violation of parole and supervision (for more information on parole and probation conditions, see the PAROLE & PROBATION CHAPTER, PG. 130).

CAN I GO TO JAIL FOR NOT PAYING CHILD SUPPORT?

Not paying child support can have very serious consequences. If a family court judge finds that you have the ability to pay support but are willfully not paying it, it can find you "in contempt of court." Being "in contempt of court" means you are not following an order from a judge and it could be punished with jail time. This enforcement tool is generally used only when all others have failed since it has such serious consequences.<sup>2586</sup> If you are being charged with contempt of court and could face criminal charges, you have the right to a lawyer. If you cannot afford a lawyer, ask the court to appoint one for you.<sup>2587</sup>

If you are able to show that you are not able to pay before the court, you will probably not be held in contempt (which can lead to jail time). However, this still may cause other problems. Although you may not go to jail for being in debt, your credit may be affected if you do not pay the child support you have been ordered to pay.<sup>2588</sup> If your credit is affected because you have not paid child support, you may have difficulty in doing things that result in a credit check like renting an apartment or purchasing a car.

SPOUSAL SUPPORT DEBT

BASICS OF SPOUSAL SUPPORT DEBT

WHAT IS SPOUSAL SUPPORT?

When a couple legally separates or divorces, a judge in family court may order one spouse or domestic partner to pay the other a certain amount of money each month in order to help pay for the less earning spouse or partner's living expenses.<sup>2589</sup> This is called "spousal support" for married couples and "partner support" in domestic partnerships.<sup>2590</sup> It is sometimes also called "alimony."<sup>2591</sup> To understand more about divorce and legal separation, see the section beginning on PG. 774.

IMPORTANT! Spousal and partner support are difficult legal issues. See a lawyer or a family law facilitator in your court. The family law facilitator will help you for free to:

- Understand spousal/partner support – how long the support may last and how it may affect your taxes;
- Help you calculate spousal or partner support; and
- Prepare court forms.
- To find a family law facilitator to help you understand spousal or partner support, see Appendix A, PG. 797 for resources.

WHO HAS TO PAY SPOUSAL SUPPORT?

If you and your spouse or partner either get a court-order for spousal support or you agree to a payment plan on your own, the spouse or partner that is the higher wage earner will have to pay the lesser-earning spouse or partner an adequate amount of money to help pay for the less his/her basic living expenses.<sup>2592</sup>

HOW WILL OWING SPOUSAL SUPPORT AFFECT MY REENTRY?

Owing spousal support can affect your credit score, your ability to get some types of employment, your income, and more. For example:

- Your Credit Score Can Be Affected: If a Local Child Support Agency (LCSA) is involved they will report your support non-payment to credit rating agencies. They are also entitled to use all the enforcement mechanisms that they use for child support non-payments.
- Your Employment and Income Can Be Affected: If the person receiving spousal supports files for wage garnishment, your employer may be forced to withhold part of your wages to pay back your past due spousal support.

HOW DO I FIND OUT IF I OWE SPOUSAL SUPPORT AND HOW MUCH I OWE?

If the Local Child Support Agency (LCSA) is involved because you are paying your spousal support payment along with your child support payment, you should contact the LCSA directly to ask how much you owe. To find the LCSA in your county, call 1-866-901-3212, or visit <http://www.childsup.ca.gov/home/lcsaoffices.aspx>.

If LCSA is not involved you should get in contact with the person you are paying spousal support to and ask them how much you owe. If that is not possible you can also contact the family law facilitator in your county. To find the family law facilitator in your county visit: <http://www.courts.ca.gov/selfhelp-facilitators.htm>

MANAGING SPOUSAL SUPPORT PAYMENTS

I RECEIVED LEGAL PAPERS ABOUT SPOUSAL SUPPORT. WHAT CAN I DO?

If you have been "served" spousal support papers (meaning that someone has given you, or mailed you legal papers telling you that they have filed papers that ask the Family Court to issue an order about spousal or partner support), you should respond if you want to have input into the judge's final decision.

To respond, you must file a "Responsive Declaration to Request for Order" (Form FL-320) and your "Income and Expense Declaration" (Form FL-150). Once you have filled out the forms, you could ask your Family Law Facilitator to review them before filing with the court clerk.

After you have filed your forms, you must serve your spouse/partner with your response and your Form FL-320 at least 9 days before the hearing (which is scheduled at the time you file your response with the court clerk).

I AM CURRENTLY INCARCERATED. DO MY SPOUSAL SUPPORT PAYMENTS AUTOMATICALLY STOP WHILE I AM IN PRISON OR JAIL?

Your spousal support payments do not automatically stop while you are incarcerated, but you can request that your order be paused or reduced if you are not longer able to pay. For steps on how to change an order, see Appendix M, PG. 831.

If you do not ask the family court judge to reduce your spousal support order, then your missed payments plus interest will add up while you are incarcerated, and you must pay this after you are released.

To reduce or pause spousal/partner support payments, you should either (1) if no children are involved, contact your local Family Law/Self-Help Facilitator OR (2) if children are involved, contact your local child support agency (LCSA). For help to find either your family law/self-help facilitator or LSCA, see Appendix A, PG. 797.

DO MY SPOUSAL SUPPORT PAYMENTS AUTOMATICALLY BEGIN WHEN I AM RELEASED FROM PRISON?

Because your spousal support payments do not automatically stop while you are incarcerated, then your release will not cause the payments to automatically begin. Follow the court order for your spousal support payments for all relevant dates and amounts owed.

HOW ARE SPOUSAL SUPPORT PAYMENTS MADE?

Most spousal support is paid through “earning assignments,” also known as “wage garnishments.” This is a portion of money that is removed from your paycheck BEFORE you get paid. In the same way that many taxes are taken out, an “earning assignment” or wage garnishment is removed directly from your paycheck and is considered payment for your court spousal order (and/or child support order).<sup>2593</sup>

- If you also have a child support earnings assignment in place, child support will be taken from your check first. Then, if you also owe spousal or partner support that will be taken from your check.
- If the local child support agency (LCSA) is involved in your case, they will automatically issue the earnings assignment and begin collecting from your paycheck through your employer.
- If the LCSA is not involved in your case, your former spouse or domestic partner, or the court itself, will prepare an “earnings assignment” and send it to your employer.

HOW DO PAYMENTS MADE BY EARNINGS ASSIGNMENT WORK?

When the court orders “wage garnishments,” your employer receives court papers that will tell him or her the amount of money that should be taken out (withheld) from your check each pay period. Once your employer receives this paperwork, he or she has just a few days to start taking the money out from your next paycheck.<sup>2594</sup>

Once this money is taken from your paycheck (or “withheld”), your employer will send your money based on the type of order was issued. If your order was for:

- ...spousal or partner support only, your employer will forward the payments to your spouse or partner directly.
- ...child support AND the local child support agency (LCSA) is involved, your employer will take the amount that was court ordered and will send it directly to the LSCA.
- ...child support and spousal support and the local child support agency (LCSA) is NOT involved, the money will be sent to the California State Disbursement Unit (SDU).<sup>2595</sup>

If you have any questions about the SDU, contact the SDU directly at 1-866-901-3212 or visit the California State Disbursement Unit’s website listed on Appendix A, PG. 797.

CAN I CHANGE THE AMOUNT OF SPOUSAL SUPPORT I OWE (WHILE I AM INCARCERATED OR AFTER MY RELEASE)?

After a judge makes a spousal or partner support order, one or both spouses or domestic partners may need to change the order. This may happen because you or your former spouse’s job changed, you or your former spouse does not need support any more, or you would like to make changes because the spouse that is paying cannot afford to pay the ordered amount. When deciding whether to change the order, a judge will look to determine if there are “changes in circumstances.”

IMPORTANT! Unless the judge signs a new court order, the existing spousal or partner support amount and order will not be changed. So, to protect yourself, even if you have a verbal agreement with your spouse/domestic partner to change the spousal or partner support amount, put it in writing and have a judge sign it. That way you have a current spousal or partner support order that reflects the current amount.

IMMEDIATELY! It takes time for the courts to process paperwork and/or to schedule a hearing before a judge to change court orders and you do not want to get into trouble if your circumstances have changed and now it is difficult to pay. Remember, failure to pay because you do not want to pay may result in the court stating you are in “contempt of court” which may lead to jail time.

For steps on how to change your spousal support court order, see Appendix M, PG. 831.

I AM FORMERLY INCARCERATED AND OWE MONEY FOR PAST, OVERDUE SPOUSAL SUPPORT PAYMENTS (“ARREARS”). HOW CAN I CHANGE THESE ARREARS?

You cannot change these arrears.

CAN I GET RID OF MY PAST, OVER DUE SPOUSAL SUPPORT PAYMENTS?

Unfortunately, although it is possible to modify the amount of spousal support that you pay and end spousal support all together, these changes cannot be made retroactively. There is no way to get rid of past over due spousal support payments.

I RECEIVE PUBLIC BENEFITS. CAN A PORTION OF MY PUBLIC BENEFITS BE TAKEN TO PAY FOR SPOUSAL SUPPORT?

It depends on the type of benefits you are receiving. Federal benefits can be garnished to provide spousal support.<sup>2596</sup> Under California law, up to 25% of unemployment compensation benefits and state disability benefits can also be withheld to pay spousal or child support<sup>2597</sup>. Other state benefits such as welfare cannot be withheld. An application has to be made to the court giving you an opportunity to contest any such garnishments before they can take effect.

CONSEQUENCES FOR FAILING TO PAY SPOUSAL SUPPORT

CAN I BE IN VIOLATION OF MY SUPERVISION OR PAROLE IF I FAIL TO PAY SPOUSAL SUPPORT?

Every person on parole and supervision is subjected to a set of general conditions, one of which is the prohibition of carrying out any illegal activities (see the PAROLE & PROBATION CHAPTER, beginning on PG. 125, for more information about the conditions that apply to your specific type of supervision).

Although not paying your spousal support is not a crime in and of itself, if a judge determines that you have the resources to pay, but are willfully refusing to do so, you might be found in contempt of court. This is a criminal charge that would amount to a parole violation.

CAN I GO TO JAIL FOR NOT PAYING SPOUSAL SUPPORT?

Someone cannot be put in jail just because they owe money. But the person who owes support is ignoring a court order to pay support, so he or she can be prosecuted for being in contempt of court and could go to jail for that reason. This enforcement tool is generally used as a last resort when all other efforts to collect support have failed. If you are being charged with contempt of court and could face criminal charges, you have the right to a lawyer. If you cannot afford a lawyer, ask the court to appoint one for you.<sup>2598</sup>

If you are able to show that you are not able to pay before the court, you will probably not be held in contempt (which can lead to jail time). However, this still may cause other problems. Although you may not go to jail for being in debt, your credit may be affected if you do not pay the spousal support you have been ordered to pay.<sup>2599</sup>

If your credit is affected because you have not paid spousal support, you may have difficulty in doing things that result in a credit check like renting an apartment or purchasing a car.

REQUESTING SPOUSAL SUPPORT PAYMENTS

HOW DO I ASK THE COURT FOR A SPOUSAL SUPPORT ORDER?

Spousal support can be requested by you and ordered by a judge in a divorce, legal separation, annulment or domestic violence restraining order proceeding. You can also agree to spousal support with your spouse on your own, outside of court. The agreement about spousal support (sometimes called a stipulation) will have the full force of law once a judge signs it.<sup>2600</sup>

You can ask for a spousal support order once you file (start) your divorce, legal separation, annulment or domestic violence restraining order case.<sup>2601</sup> You can get temporary orders for spousal support while you are waiting for the final judgment in your case. For more information on the procedure for requesting a temporary spousal support order, see Appendix M, PG. 831.

To set up a spousal support order, you or your spouse must request an order from the judge. The procedure for requesting an order depends on:

1. Whether you already have a family court case that involves you and your spouse or domestic partner; or
2. Whether you are starting a case for the first time.

IMPORTANT! We recommend you ask the family law facilitator in your court to help you fill out the forms in order to request spousal support. Additionally, the California Courts website has all the forms you may need in order to start or join a family court case (available at: <http://www.courts.ca.gov/9050.htm>).

CAN I ASK FOR SPOUSAL SUPPORT WHILE I AM INCARCERATED?

You can request spousal support while you are incarcerated but the judge will likely not grant it.<sup>2602</sup> The process is the same as it would be if you were not incarcerated. See the preceding question for information on how to request spousal support.

A judge, when ordering spousal support, looks at the receiving spouse's need for the money to meet basic expenses.<sup>2603</sup> It will be extremely hard for you to justify the need for financial support from your spouse while you are incarcerated because the federal, state or county institution where you are serving your sentence is already providing you with your basic necessities such as food, clothing and shelter and you do not have personal expenses during your incarceration.

Therefore, it is advised that you ask the judge to hold on making a determination as to spousal support until you are released.

When you are released this can change, so it is best to ask the court to put off any decision about spousal support until you are released. This way you can avoid going through the procedures for a change in support payments (which can be more time-consuming and difficult).")

XVI. DOMESTIC VIOLENCE & RESTRAINING ORDERS

WHAT WILL I LEARN IN THE DOMESTIC VIOLENCE & RESTRAINING ORDERS CHAPTER?

- What a domestic violence restraining order is and different types of domestic restraining orders.
- What a domestic violence order can and cannot do.
- What you must do if you have a restraining order against you, and what could happen if you violate a restraining order.
- What could happen if my partner who got the restraining order against me contacts or visits me.

OVERVIEW OF DOMESTIC VIOLENCE RESTRAINING ORDERS & VIOLATIONS

WHAT IS DOMESTIC VIOLENCE?

Domestic violence is defined as abuse or threats of abuse between two people who are in or have been in an intimate relationship (married or domestic partners, dating or used to date, live or lived together, or have a child together), or when there is violence between two people closely related by blood or by marriage.

Domestic violence laws consider the following to be abuse:

- 1) Physically hurting or trying to hurt someone, intentionally or recklessly;
- 2) Sexual assault;
- 3) Making someone reasonably afraid that they or someone else are about to be seriously hurt (like threats or promises to harm someone); OR
- 4) Behavior like harassing, stalking, threatening, or hitting someone; disturbing someone's peace; or destroying someone's personal property.

IMPORTANT: If you were abused by your partner before you were incarcerated and/or are afraid of your partner, it may help you to talk to a domestic violence counselor, even if you do not want (or are not sure if you want) to ask for legal protection.

- For domestic violence resources in your county, see <http://www.cdph.ca.gov/HealthInfo/injviosa/Pages/ViolencePreventionResourceDirectory.aspx>.
- For domestic violence resources in tribal communities, visit <http://www.cdph.ca.gov/HealthInfo/injviosa/Pages/ViolencePreventionResourceDirectory.aspx>

WHAT IS A DOMESTIC VIOLENCE RESTRAINING ORDER?

A domestic violence restraining order is a court order that helps protect people from abuse or threats of abuse from someone they have a close relationship with.<sup>2604</sup>

REMEMBER!

A court order is a legally enforceable decision made by a judge.

<sup>2604</sup> CAL. FAM. CODE § 6220.

CHART: DIFFERENT TYPES OF DOMESTIC VIOLENCE RESTRAINING ORDERS

THERE ARE FOUR DIFFERENT TYPES OF DOMESTIC VIOLENCE RESTRAINING ORDERS.<sup>2605</sup> PLEASE SEE THE CHART BELOW FOR GENERAL INFORMATION ON ALL FOUR RESTRAINING ORDER TYPES.

TYPES OF RESTRAINING ORDERS & STAY-AWAY ORDERS
	Emergency Protective Order	Temporary Restraining Order	Permanent Restraining Order	Criminal Protective Order or “Stay-Away” Order	Parole and Probation
Who can ask for it?	This is an order that only law enforcement can ask for by calling a judge. A judge can issue EPOs 24 hours a day. So, a police officer that answers a domestic violence call can ask a judge for an emergency protective order at any time of the day or night	You or your spouse. To get a temporary restraining order, paperwork must be completed and an explanation is given as to why an order is needed.	The person who asked for the temporary restraining order or the person who responded to the temporary restraining order.	Sometimes, when there is a domestic violence incident (or series of incidents), the district attorney will file criminal charges against the abuser. This starts a criminal court case going.	Sometimes your parole or probation conditions will include a special condition restricting contact with certain people.
How long does it last?	It can only last 7 days. It usually becomes a temporary restraining order.	This usually last between 20 and 25 days, until the court hearing date.	Usually lasts 3 years.	It depends on the outcome of the criminal case. If the accused person is found guilty or pleads guilty, it may last for 3 years.	The length of your parole or probation
What can a judge do with this type of order?	The judge can order the accused to leave the home.	The judge can order the accused to leave the home. If you violate the restraining order, you may go to jail, pay a fine, or both	At the end of those 3 years (or whenever your order runs out), a new restraining order can be requested so that the order continues.	The judge can order the accused to leave the home. If you violate the restraining order, you may go to jail, pay a fine, or both.	Depending on the type of order, should you breach the condition you would go through the parole or probation administrative appeal process.

WHAT CAN A RESTRAINING ORDER DO?

A restraining order is a court order made by a judge.<sup>2606</sup> It can require someone to:

- 1) Not contact or go near another person, their children, other relatives, or others who live with them;
- 2) Stay away from another person’s home, work, or their children’s schools;
- 3) Move out of another person’s house (even if they live together);
- 4) Not have a gun;
- 5) Follow child custody and visitation orders;
- 6) Pay child support;
- 7) Pay spousal or partner support (if they are married or domestic partners);
- 8) Stay away from any of another person’s pets;

<sup>2606</sup> CAL. FAM. CODE §§ 6300-6306.

- 9) Pay certain bills;
- 10) Not make any changes to insurance policies;
- 11) Not incur large expenses or do anything significant to affect someone or the other person's property if they are married or domestic partners; and
- 12) Release or return certain property.<sup>2607</sup>

WHAT CAN'T A DOMESTIC VIOLENCE RESTRAINING ORDER DO?

A restraining order cannot:<sup>2608</sup>

- 1) End your marriage or domestic partnership. It is NOT a divorce.
- 2) Establish parentage (paternity) of your children with the restrained person (if you are not married to, or in a domestic partnership with, him or her) UNLESS you and the restrained person agree to parentage of your child or children and agree to the court entering a judgment about parentage. You can read and use Agreement and Judgment of Parentage (Form DV-180) (see Appendix J, PG. 821 for the form) to do this.

I HAVE A RESTRAINING ORDER AGAINST ME. WHAT MUST I DO?

If you have a restraining order against you, there are things you may not be able to do, for example:<sup>2609</sup>

- 1) Go to certain places,
- 2) Do certain things,
- 3) Live in certain areas,
- 4) Visit or contact your children,
- 5) Visit or contact your current or former partner,
- 6) Own a gun or any other types of weapons
- 7) The restraining order may also affect your immigration status. If you are worried about this, talk to an immigration lawyer to find out if you will be affected.

What you can/can't do, and whom you can/can't see or visit, will be specifically outlined in the restraining order. Read it carefully!

WHAT COULD HAPPEN IF I VIOLATE A RESTRAINING ORDER AGAINST ME?

If you violate the restraining order, you may go to jail, pay a fine, or both.<sup>2610</sup> Make sure you review the order against you and know what you can and cannot do. A violation of a protective order can occur in many ways—for example, it could be a violation to contact the protected person through social media, even tagging the person in a picture or a comment. Violation of a protective order may also be leaving messages or being in the physical area of a protected person. A court may determine that you violated a protective order even if you respond to a message sent by the protected person. With all of these things in mind, the most simple instruction is to do not contact or respond to a person who has a restraining order against you in ANY manner.

WHAT COULD HAPPEN IF MY PARTNER—WHO GOT THE RESTRAINING ORDER AGAINST ME—CONTACTS OR VISITS ME?

You will likely STILL be in violation of the order. Restraining orders are not mutual, they are a one-way street.<sup>2611</sup> This means that only you as the “restrained person” can violate the order, the “protected person” cannot. It is your duty, as the restrained person under the protective order, to make sure that you quickly leave the area and do not try and communicate with your partner when you realized that your partner is in the same area.

NOTE: It is possible for both people to have mutual restraining orders against one another. To stay in compliance, you should follow any orders against you, even if you also have an order against the other person.

APPENDIX B

Procedures for Family Court Mediation

This Appendix explains more about the rules and procedures for child custody mediation—which can help to resolve disagreements about the care of a child.

WHAT IS CHILD CUSTODY MEDIATION?

Child custody mediation is a meeting place through the court for parents and caregivers to handle disagreements about custody and visitation plans for their children.<sup>2612</sup> In mediation, there is another person, a third-party mediator, who helps parents or caregivers come to an agreement. After mediation, the judge must sign this agreement in court to make it official. In some cases, the judge will make changes that he or she believes are in the “best interest of the child.”<sup>2613</sup>

IMPORTANT! Child custody mediation may not be appropriate in cases of domestic violence. A mediator’s role is to help resolve issues between parents who disagree, not to address issues related to domestic violence.

WHAT HAPPENS IN CHILD CUSTODY MEDIATION?

The mediator will meet with you and the other parent (or caregiver), either together or separately with your attorneys. The mediator will first ask questions to understand your family history and will share information about what children generally need at different ages.<sup>2614</sup> The child(ren) may be interviewed to better understand the situation.<sup>2615</sup>

Appointments with your mediator may last only a short time or take several hours. You may also meet with the mediator more than once.

If the parents are able to agree, the mediator helps the parents write a custody and visitation plan. If the custody and visitation plan is signed by the judge, this plan becomes an official court order. But it’s not official until signed by the judge.

In some counties in California, the mediator will make recommendations, as well, and may provide that written recommendation to the judge.

WHO IS THE MEDIATOR IN CHILD CUSTODY MEDIATION?

A mediator is a person who has been professionally trained (usually has a graduate degree) to help resolve disagreements between two people figuring out parenting plans, and knows a lot about the California family court system.

The mediator will not and cannot know you or the other parent/caregiver because he or she is supposed to listen to both of you equally and fairly.<sup>2616</sup> The mediator helps you decide when the children will be with each parent, how future decisions about your children will be made and will help you consider the best way to protect your children’s safety and well-being.<sup>2617</sup>

The mediator may also have additional information about community services that may be helpful to you and your child(ren).

HOW DO I FIND A MEDIATOR?

You can find low-cost mediators on the following website: <http://www.courts.ca.gov/selfhelp-familycourtservices.htm> (organized by county).

I DO NOT SPEAK ENGLISH AND/OR ENGLISH IS NOT MY FIRST LANGUAGE. CAN I GET AN INTERPRETER FOR MY CHILD CUSTODY MEDIATION APPOINTMENT?

It depends on the court. If you need an interpreter, you can ask your mediator if he/she has any recommendations. Also be sure to ask if there will be a fee, and if there is a fee for an interpreter, whether or not it can be waived (removed).

CAN THE CHILD CUSTODY MEDIATORS MAKE RECOMMENDATIONS ABOUT WHO GETS CUSTODY AND VISITATION?

It depends on the court. In some local family courts, mediators make recommendations to the judge about child custody and visitation. In these courts, if you and the other parent cannot agree on a parenting plan through mediation, the mediator is asked to give the court a written recommendation. This recommendation will contain the mediator's opinion about what parenting arrangement will be in your children's best interest. Both you and the other parent (or caregiver) will also get a copy of the mediator's recommendation.

In other courts, mediation is confidential and the mediators do NOT make a recommendation to the court about child custody and visitation. If the parents agree on any issues, the mediator may provide the court with a written summary that summarizes the issues that the parents agree on.

Usually, mediators interview both sides together, but if there has been domestic violence or there is a restraining order between the parents or other concerns about meeting together, the parents may ask to meet with the mediator separately. Sometimes, even when there is no domestic violence, the mediator may decide it is more appropriate and helpful to meet separately with each parent. The special rules about mediation allow the mediator to do this.

IS CHILD CUSTODY MEDIATION CONFIDENTIAL?

It depends on the court. The things you tell your mediator, either alone and/or with your child's caregiver, may not be kept secret (confidential). Ask for information in writing as to whether your conversations will be kept secret or shared with others. You can also ask the Family Law Facilitator about confidentiality and mediation.

IMPORTANT: If a mediator suspects that there is child abuse or has concerns about the physical safety of the child(ren), he or she may need to report the case to the local child protective services (CPS) or the court.

WILL WE BE FORCED TO MAKE AN AGREEMENT IN THE CHILD CUSTODY MEDIATION APPOINTMENT?

No. You will not be forced or required to make an agreement if you participate in child custody mediation. HOWEVER, before you enter into mediation, you should ask your mediator and/or the judge in family court what could happen if you do not reach an agreement with the other parent/caregiver.

If you and the other parent/caregiver reach an agreement on your parenting/caregiving plan:

The mediator will usually prepare a written agreement for both parents to sign. If neither parent has a lawyer, the mediator or the parents will give the agreement to the judge to approve and sign. When the judge signs it, it becomes an official court order. However, if you do have a lawyer, ask your lawyer any questions you have and ask your lawyer to review your written agreement BEFORE you sign it.

If you and the other parent/caregiver do NOT reach an agreement on your parenting/caregiving plan, the following may happen:

- There may be a court hearing or settlement conference with the judge to resolve issues.
- The judge may make decisions on a parenting plan for you.
- The judge may order a child custody evaluation by a mental health professional to get more information before making a decision. Keep reading for more information on child custody evaluations.
- In some courts, the judge may ask the mediator to make a recommendation, and will often approve and order that recommendation.

WHAT HAPPENS AFTER CHILD CUSTODY MEDIATION?

If you and the other parent/caregiver reach an agreement on your parenting/caregiving plan:

The mediator will write up a plan for both of you to sign. Once the judge approves and signs it, it becomes a court order.

If you and the other parent/caregiver do NOT reach an agreement on your parenting/caregiving plan:

What happens next depends on the court - so you should ask the mediator or Family Law Facilitator about how the process works in your local court. Here's what happens in many cases:

- Usually, there is a court hearing or settlement conference where everyone can decide on custody, visitation and child support. The judge may then decide on a parenting/caregiving plan and issue a custody and visitation order.
- Before issuing a custody and visitation order, the judge may require a custody evaluation by a mental health professional. The judge may also ask the mediator for a recommendation (in some courts).<sup>2618</sup>

APPENDIX C

Procedures to Begin or Join a Family Court Case about Custody and/or Visitation

If you are interested in getting custody of or visitation with your child, before reading this Appendix, we first recommend you read the following sections of this Chapter: STEPS FOR RECONNECTING (see PG. 728). ; BASICS ABOUT CUSTODY AND VISITATION (see PG. 732) These sections will help you understand the legal meaning of custody and visitation, what each looks like in real life, how your criminal record generally affects your rights to custody and/or visitation, and first steps to take if you are interested in reconnecting with a child in reentry. After reading these sections, if you would like to open a case in Family Court, the information below will help you understand how to begin or join a family court case.

STEP 1: Get help.

If you have any questions about starting a case and/or if you need help with deciding which form to pick and file, and/or what kind of case you should bring to family court, you can and should contact a lawyer, the Family Law Facilitator who works at your county family court (see Appendix A, PG. 797 to find your local Family Law Facilitator), and/or a legal aid provider.

STEP 2: Decide what type of case you are opening in Family Court—and fill out all the necessary forms.

- Petition for divorce or legal separation (FL-100): If you were married and now want to be divorced from the other parent who has custody of your child, you will file for divorce in family court. For more information of divorce or legal separation, see PG. 822.
- Petition for Dissolution of civil partnership/legal separation (FL-103): If you were in a domestic partnership (a same-sex relationship registered with the State of California) and now want to legally terminate that partnership from the other parent who has custody of your child, you would file for dissolution of domestic partnership in family court. Learn more about divorce/legal separation on PG. 822.
- Petition for custody and support of minor children (FL-260): If you were unmarried and the parentage of your child has already been officially established, then you can file a petition for custody and support of minor children in family court.<sup>2619</sup>
- Petition to establish parental relationship (FL-200): If you were unmarried and the parentage of your child has not been established in family court, you can file a petition to establish parental relationship.

HELPFUL HINTS

Assistance, Forms, & Fees in Family Court

- Family court forms for requesting custody and visitation are available on the California Courts' website at <http://www.courts.ca.gov/1192.htm>.
- If you have general questions or need assistance filling out your court forms, ask the court Family Law Facilitator to help you. If you have questions about your specific case or circumstances, you should talk to a lawyer.
- Filing the court papers to request custody or visitation can be very expensive ($400-$500). If you cannot afford to pay this, you can request a fee waiver from the court clerk when you file your papers.
- Once you file the forms by mailing them to the family court or bringing them to the court in person, you must wait and make sure the family court accepts your forms, that the documents were acceptable. Once you receive notice that the family court accepted the forms, you can move to STEP 4.

STEP 3: File all of the necessary forms with the family court to join or start a new case. Depending on the court, you may have to file your court forms in person. Pay the filing fees, or if you are low-income or on public benefits, ask for a fee waiver.

STEP 4: Once you receive notice from the family court that your forms were acceptable, you must serve a copy of the forms you filed as well as a response form on the person you are bringing a court case against in family court, usually here it will be your child's other parent.

When a case in family court is first filed, it must be personally served on the other party or parties. This means that you cannot mail the forms, but have to find someone to hand deliver the forms to whomever you are suing. This is called "service of process." Any adult over the age of 18 can do this for you.

STEP 5: Once the family court accepts your forms and you serve the papers on the other party or parties in the case, the judge in family court will order one, two or all three of the following:

- Schedule a hearing you must attend and/or
- Require you and the other parent to attend a mediation
- And/or order a custody evaluation.

IMPORTANT! Completing these steps means you are now involved in an active custody and/or visitation case involving your child. Family court cases, like all court cases, require a lot of paperwork, documents, and forms. Navigating all the court forms and processes can be, and often is, very confusing. We are trying to simplify this process for you by not bogging you down with details on each step mentioned above. As a result, we strongly recommend you get help from another person or legal aid organization that specializes in the family court process. They can and will help with all the specifics on forms, documents, paperwork, and processes. You should talk to a lawyer, the Family Law Facilitator who works at your county family court, and/or a legal aid provider. See referrals to legal aid organizations beginning on PG. 1127.

Additional Information about De Facto Parents Status

WHAT RIGHTS DO I HAVE AS A “DE FACTO PARENT”?

If a judge finds that you are a “de facto parent,” you have the right to:<sup>2620</sup>

- Be present at dependency court hearings.
- Have a lawyer represent you, if you hire one. (In some cases, the court may appoint a lawyer at no cost to you, but only if the judge thinks it’s necessary.)
- Present evidence and cross-examine witnesses.
- Participate in the child’s case (including the right to attend and participate in hearings, present evidence to the judge, ask questions, and be represented by a lawyer), and
- To help the judge decide what is best for the child.<sup>2621</sup>

For more information on becoming a de facto parent, visit the Judicial Council website at <http://www.courts.ca.gov/1207.htm>. You may also want to attach support letters from others who know you and your child.

HOW DOES A JUDGE DECIDE IF I AM A “DE FACTO PARENT”?

The judge will make a decision by looking at past court decisions and will consider the care you gave the child, how long you provided the care, and if you were able to meet the child’s needs.<sup>2622</sup> If you have harmed the child or put the child at risk, the judge will probably decide that you are not a “de facto parent.”<sup>2623</sup>

I TOOK CARE OF A CHILD WHO IS NOW A “DEPENDENT” IN THE JUVENILE DEPENDENCY COURT, BUT I CANNOT BE A “DE FACTO PARENT”. CAN I DO ANYTHING ELSE?

Even if you do not become a “de facto parent,” you can also fill out a “Caregiver Information Form” to give the judge more information about the child and help the judge make decisions about what will be best for him or her.

If you want to become a “de facto parent,” these forms can help you:

- De Facto Parent Request (JV-295)
  - Use this form if you would like to become a de facto parent for a child in a juvenile dependency case.
  - Form JV-295 is available at <http://www.courts.ca.gov/documents/jv295.pdf>.
- De Facto Parent Statement (JV-296)
  - Use this form to explain your relationship with the child and why you should be the child’s de facto parent.
  - Form JV-296 is available at <http://www.courts.ca.gov/documents/jv296.pdf>.
- Caregiver Information Form (JV-290)
  - Use this form to give the dependency court judge more information about the child. You can use this form even if you are not the child’s de facto relative.
  - Form JV-290 is available at <http://www.courts.ca.gov/documents/jv290.pdf>.
  - Instruction Sheet for Caregiver Information Form (JV-290-INFO) - This explains how to fill out the Caregiver Information Form. The Instruction Sheet is available at <http://www.courts.ca.gov/documents/jv290info.pdf>.

Remember, a “de facto parent” is not a legal guardian and has fewer legal rights than a guardian. If you are unsure if being a “de facto parent” or guardian is best, please see PG. 748 for more information.

<sup>2620</sup> Learn more about these rights by reading Rule 5.534(e) of the California Rules of Court. NOTE: As a de facto parent, you do NOT have the right to attorney fees. But in some cases the judge may give you an attorney, and the court will pay the fees. Also, you do NOT have the right to a rehearing. But you have a right to an appeal

<sup>2621</sup> CAL. RULES OF COURT §§ 5.502(10), 5.534(e). Use these forms to request and explain why you want to participate as the child’s de facto parent: Form JV-295 (De Facto Parent Request) and Form JV-296 (De Facto Parent Statement), available online at <http://www.courts.ca.gov/documents/jv295.pdf> and <http://www.courts.ca.gov/documents/jv296.pdf>.

388 Petitions: Basic Information

WHAT CAN I DO IF THE DEPENDENCY COURT JUDGE ENDED MY REUNIFICATION SERVICES, AND I WANT TO TRY AGAIN TO REUNITE WITH MY CHILD?

If the dependency court judge ended your reunification services with your child(ren), your ability to request a change to the judge's orders will depend on how much time has passed since the case was closed. You may be able to file what is called a 388 petition.

If the judge ended your reunification services (for example, because you did not meet the requirements of your case plan in time), and placed your child in long-term foster care or with a legal guardian, or closed your child's case, you may be able to file papers in dependency court (called a 388 petition) asking the judge to change the current court order and give you visitation, custody, and/or end a legal guardianship of your child.<sup>2624</sup> BUT if several years have passed since your child's dependency case was closed, it may be too late to go back to dependency court and ask to change the court order.<sup>2625</sup> Instead, you can file new papers in family court and ask to change the dependency court order. We briefly explain both processes below.

POSSIBILITY #1: If your reunification services ended recently (in approximately the past year):

You can file a 388 petition in the same juvenile dependency court where your child's case took place. In your 388 petition, you will need to explain AND prove to the judge (with documents, actions, and evidence) that:

- 1) There has been a significant change in circumstances (your life or how you live) or new evidence in your child's case since the judge made the current court order (see the Helpful Hint box below for more information and examples of significant changes in circumstances); AND
- 2) Giving you visitation, custody, or ending the guardianship is in your child's best interest.<sup>2626</sup>

HELPFUL HINT

Significant Change in Circumstances

The "change in circumstances" must generally be major and long-term. The judge wants to see that you are committed to the change and won't go back to your old situation—for example, that you successfully completed your prison or jail sentence; your parole, probation, or community supervision; and/or resolved whatever issues caused CPS and the court to get involved in the first place. Other examples might include: completing an anger management or domestic violence program and taking steps to fix any previous harm you caused; completing a drug rehabilitation program and staying sober for a year or more; and avoiding criminal activity or arrest for several years.<sup>2627</sup>

POSSIBILITY #2: If it has been several years since your reunification services ended:

You must go to family court and file papers asking to change the juvenile dependency court order. To be successful, you will have to show:

- 1) A significant change in circumstances (how your life is different and improved) since the juvenile dependency court judge made the current court order, AND
- 2) Giving you custody or visitation would be in your child's best interest.<sup>2628</sup>

<sup>2626</sup> CAL. WELF. & INST. CODE §§ 388, 778; telephone call with Eleanor Miller, reentry attorney, Pepperdine Legal Aid Clinic, Jan. 6, 2015.

<sup>2627</sup> See, e.g., In re Ernesto R., 230 Cal. App. 4th 219 (2014), reh'g denied (Oct. 17, 2014) (mother's completion of drug treatment program did not establish sufficiently changed circumstances, and mother's recent sobriety reflected "changing"—not changed—circumstances, where mother had a history of drug relapses, was in the early stages of recovery, and was still addressing a chronic substance abuse problem); In re Marcelo B., 209 Cal. App. 4th 635 (2012) (father's participation in 12-step meetings, completion of substance abuse program, and attendance at parenting classes were not prima facie evidence of change in circumstances, where father had already received extensive treatment for his alcoholism before the relapse that led to the current dependency proceeding); In re C.J.W., 157 Cal. App. 4th 1075 (2007) (parents' rehabilitation efforts did not establish changed circumstances where both parent had extensive histories of drug use and years of failing to reunify with their other children, and where their efforts at rehabilitation were only three months old at time of petition); see also In re J.C., 226 Cal. App. 4th 503 (2014), review denied (Aug. 13, 2014) (although mother's long term sobriety and renewed interest in parenting classes showed changed circumstances, she did not establish that changing court order to give her custody of child would be in the child's best interests, where child had a loving and stable placement with her maternal aunt, who had cared for child since her birth. The aunt had assumed full parental responsibilities and care for child, and the mother failed to present any evidence that child's best interests in permanency and stability would be furthered by the proposed modification).

<sup>2628</sup> CAL. WELF. & INST. CODE § 302(d) (stating that a final custody or visitation order from juvenile dependency court may be modified in family court only if "the court finds that there has been a significant change of circumstances since the juvenile court issued the order and modification of the order is in the best interests of the child."). For example, if you have already tried to change custody or

Writing a Dependency Court 388 Petition

You should ask the lawyer who represented you in dependency court (or someone else who is familiar with your case) to help you write the 388 petition, since it must be very detailed.<sup>2629</sup> (The court's Family Law Facilitator may also help explain the 388 petition process.)

Do You Want to File a 388 Petition for Modification in Juvenile Dependency Court?

HOW TO:

File a 388 Petition to change custody and visitation orders in a juvenile dependency case.

WHEN TO USE:

- You want to change a court order in a juvenile dependency court case (new or old).
- You are the parent of the child, the dependent child of the juvenile court (with a guardian) or other person having an interest in the child.
- Circumstances have changed since the last order was made or there is new evidence you want to present to the court.
- Note: If an attorney represented you in court, contact them first to see if they can help you.

Under Welfare and Institutions Code 388, any parent of a dependent child, a dependent child of the juvenile court (with the assistance of an appointed guardian), or other person having interest in a dependent child of the juvenile court may file a 388 petition when there is a change of circumstance or there is new evidence in their case. These instructions and samples show you how to petition the juvenile court to change any order of court previously made, or terminate the jurisdiction of the court. This is similar to the action in which the child was found to be a dependent of the juvenile court.

HOW TO FILE YOUR PAPERS:

Follow these easy steps in order from 1 to 3. All filing of papers and court appearances take place at Superior Court, 115 Terraine Street, San Jose, CA 95110 (see map), 408-299-8980.

1. Complete the attached Juvenile Dependency Petition (#JV-100) and the Modification Petition Attachment (#JV-180).

Note: You must state your relationship to, or interest in, the child and include all supporting information regarding any change of circumstance or new evidence. This information is required in order to file a 388 petition.

2. Make one copy of each form. The original is for the court and the copy is for you.
3. Go to the Juvenile Dependency Clerk's Office to submit the forms. The clerk's office will "receive" stamp the original and return the copy to you. If you are unable to come to the clerk's office in person you may mail these forms to the address listed above.

WHAT'S NEXT: The original forms are sent up to the assigned Judge or Commissioner. He or she will either grant, deny or set the matter for hearing. You will be notified by mail about the Dependency Court's decision.

For more help, visit the Court's Self-Service Center or contact the Santa Clara County Bar Association's Lawyer Referral Service and Modest Means Panel (408-971-6822) for a $30/30 minute consultation with an attorney and representation in court for a fee based on your income.

This form can be used to ask the court to change an order, to ask the court to dismiss your case, to ask the court to terminate reunification services, or to ask the court to recognize your relationship with your sister or brother. After filling out this form, take it to the clerk of the court.

Clerk stamps date here when form is filed.

APPENDIX G

More Information On The Juvenile Delinquency Process

If your child is involved in a juvenile delinquency case that means he or she is accused of breaking the law. This section covers what happens after a minor is arrested, how the juvenile delinquency court process works, what your child's rights are, and what your rights and responsibilities are as the parent (or guardian).

WHAT HAPPENS WHEN MY CHILD IS ARRESTED?

If your child is arrested, the police can:

1. Make a record of the arrest and let your child go home.
2. Send your child to an agency that will shelter, care for, or counsel your child.
3. Make your child come back to the police station. This is called being "cited back."
4. Give you and your child a Notice to Appear. Read the notice and do what it says. It will give you a date and time you must appear in court. DO NOT FORGET THIS DATE! If you and your child do not appear, a warrant may issued for your child's arrest and could further complicate your child's case.
5. Put your child in juvenile hall (this is called "detention"). Your child can make at least 2 phone calls within 1 hour of being arrested. One call must be to a parent, guardian, relative, or boss. The other call must be to a lawyer.<sup>2630</sup>

RIGHT AFTER THE ARREST, WHAT ARE MY CHILD'S RIGHTS?

If the police want to talk with your child about what happened, they must first tell your child his/her legal rights (called "Miranda rights"). These are:

- The right to remain silent.
- The right to know that anything he/she says will be used against him/her in court.
- The right to a lawyer - and, if you or your child can't pay for a lawyer, the court will appoint one. [If your child doesn't have a lawyer, talk to the public defender for advice.]<sup>2631</sup>

As a parent, while you may not be arrested or under suspicion, anything you say to law enforcement about your child may also be used against your child. For that reason, it would be best to talk to an attorney.

IF MY CHILD IS ARRESTED, WHAT ARE MY RIGHTS AND RESPONSIBILITIES AS A PARENT OR GUARDIAN?

Your rights if your child is arrested:

- You have a right to have the police tell you as soon as this happens<sup>2632</sup>
- You have a right to know where your child is, and what rights he/she has<sup>2633</sup>
- Inspect the court file<sup>2634</sup>

Your responsibilities if your child is arrested:

- You have legal responsibilities as a parent (or guardian), including to:
  - Attend hearings
  - Follow court orders related to you and your child.<sup>2635</sup>
- You may have financial responsibilities to pay for damage or losses that your child caused. If the court orders restitution, you may have to pay the victim for the harm your child caused.<sup>2636</sup> This may include paying for property your child stole or damaged, medical bills, or lost wages.
- You may have financial responsibilities to pay for your child's fees.<sup>2637</sup> Unless you're the victim, you'll get a bill and must pay for your child's lawyer, juvenile hall services (like food and laundry), and fees to keep your child in institutions. Note: Tell the court if you are unable to pay for these fees and costs. You may make a request to the court to waive court costs and fees but some of these fees may be difficult or impossible to waiver, like home monitoring or "ankle bracelets."<sup>2638</sup>

WHAT TO DO IF MY CHILD GETS A NOTICE TO APPEAR?

Read the Notice to Appear carefully. It will probably tell you to go to the probation department to meet with a probation officer. Go to <http://www.cdcr.ca.gov/> to find the local probation department.

Four things can happen at the meeting. The probation officer may:

1. Lecture your child and let him or her go home.
2. Let your child do a voluntary program instead of going to court. The program could be special classes, counseling, community service, or other activities. If your child finishes the program, he or she will not have to go to court. You may have to sign a contract that says what the child has to do. The contract can last 6 months.
3. Send your child home and send the case to the district attorney. The district attorney will decide to file a petition (papers that mean that your child will have to go to court) or not.
4. Keep your child locked up and send the case to the district attorney. The district attorney will then file a petition, usually within 2 days after the arrest. Your child will have a detention hearing on the next day the court is open. The court is closed on Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays.<sup>2639</sup>

If a petition is filed in court, your child's case will be filed in the juvenile delinquency court.

I GOT A NOTICE SAYING THAT MY CHILD HAS A "DETENTION HEARING" IN JUVENILE COURT. WHAT DOES THIS MEAN, AND WHAT HAPPENS NEXT?

Along with the notice about the hearing, you may receive a copy of a petition - either a 601 Petition or a 602 Petition - filed with the court about your child. The petition says what your child is accused of, and asks the court to handle your child's case. The notice tells you when and where to go for your child's first court hearing - the detention hearing.<sup>2640</sup> Read on for a bit more explanation:

WHAT SHOULD I KNOW ABOUT THE 601 AND 602 PETITIONS?

601 petitions are filed by the probation department and allege facts that are only illegal because the offender is a child. This includes things such as breaking curfew, skipping school, running away or disobeying parents. If the court finds a minor guilty of these offenses they will become what is known as a "status offender".<sup>2641</sup>

602 petitions are filed by the District Attorney's office and allege offenses that would be criminal if the minor were 18 years or older. This includes both felonies and misdemeanors. If the court finds the allegations to be true the child will become a "delinquent".<sup>2642</sup>

During what is known as the fitness or waiver hearing, the court will determine whether the child is "unfit" for juvenile court. If so, he or she will be tried in adult court. Children can only be deemed unfit if they were 14 or older at the time of the alleged offense.<sup>2643</sup>

AS A PARENT, WHAT ARE MY RIGHTS ABOUT RECEIVING NOTICE AND A PETITION?

As the parent, you have a right to get a copy of the petition about your child, along with notice about your child's first hearing - the detention hearing. (If your child is 8 or older, he/she should also get a notice.) If your child is locked up, you should get the notice at least 5 days before this hearing. If your child is not locked up, you should get the petition and a notice at least 10 days before the hearing. If the hearing is less than 5 days after the petition is filed, you should get the notice at least 24 hours before the hearing.<sup>2644</sup>

WHAT SHOULD I KNOW ABOUT MY CHILD'S DETENTION HEARING?

If your child is locked up for more than 2 days, he/she should have a detention hearing within 3 court days. At this hearing, the judge will decide if your child can go home before the next hearing.<sup>2645</sup>

MY CHILD'S CASE HAS BEEN SENT TO JUVENILE DELINQUENCY COURT. WHAT HAPPENS NEXT?

There are seven different types of hearings your child may have in juvenile court. You must go to these hearings.

At these hearings, the judge will decide what's best for your child. The judge may ask you questions, or you may be a witness in the case. If you can prove that your child listens to you and follows your rules, the judge may let your child go home with you.

Your child will get a lawyer who speaks for his/her interests, and the district attorney will speak for the state. You can ask to talk to the judge, but the court probably won't appoint you a lawyer.

If your child speaks a language other than English, he/she has a right to an interpreter. You may be able to have one, too. If you need one, ask the court before the hearing date.

The court will consider how old your child is, how serious the crime is, and whether your child already has a criminal record. The court will then decide what should happen with your child.<sup>2646</sup>

WHAT KINDS OF HEARINGS MIGHT MY CHILD HAVE IN JUVENILE COURT?

There are 7 kinds of hearings your child may have in juvenile court. You must go to these hearings.

Here are 7 types of hearings your child may have in juvenile court:

- 1) Detention hearing: If your child is locked up for more than 2 days, he or she will have a detention hearing within 3 court days. (A court day is a day the court is open.) The judge will decide if your child can go home before the next hearing.
- 2) The pretrial or settlement conference: In many counties, there is a court date to try to solve the problem without a trial.
- 3) Hearings on motions: These are court dates to work out different things. Motion hearings can come up at any time during the case.
- 4) Fitness or waiver hearing: This is a hearing to decide if your child will be tried as an adult. If the judge decides that your child is "unfit" for juvenile court, he or she will be tried in adult court. This will not happen if your child is under 14 years old when he or she committed the crime.
- 5) Jurisdiction hearing: This is when the judge decides if your child committed the crime.
- 6) Disposition hearing: If the judge decides your child committed the crime, there will be a disposition hearing to decide how to punish your child. This can be on the same day as the jurisdiction hearing. If the judge says your child did not commit the crime, there will be no disposition hearing.
- 7) Review hearings: Sometimes there are hearings to see how your child is doing in his placement.<sup>2647</sup>

WHAT CAN THE COURT DECIDE ABOUT MY CHILD?

The juvenile delinquency court can make any of the following orders:

- That your child will live with you under court supervision.
- That your child must be put on probation, and must live in a relative's home, a foster home or a group home, or an institution.
- That your child must be put on probation, and must be sent to a probation camp or ranch.
- That your child must be sent to the Division of Juvenile Justice (DJJ) of the California Dept. of Corrections and Rehabilitation (CDCR).<sup>2648</sup> This means he/she will spend 30-90 days in a reception center, which will determine your child's education and treatment needs. Then he/she will be sent to a correctional facility or youth camp.

How will the court make its decisions? What can the court decide to do?

The court will consider how old your child is, how serious the crime is, and the child's criminal record if any. The court can order that:

- Your child live with you under court supervision.
- Your child be put on probation. He or she may have to live with a relative, in a foster home or group home, or in an institution.
- Your child be put on probation and sent to a probation camp or ranch.
- Your child can be sent to the Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation, Division of Juvenile Justice (also called "DJJ"). If your child is tried in adult court, he or she will be sent to the Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation, Division of Adult Operations (also called "CDCR").<sup>2649</sup>

If your child is sent to the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation, Division of Juvenile Justice (DJJ), he or she will go to a “reception center” for the first 30 to 90 days. The center will find out what education and treatment your child needs. Then your child will go a correctional facility or youth camp.<sup>2650</sup>

Find the DJJ’s reception centers online at the following website:
http://www.cdcr.ca.gov/Juvenile\_Justice/Facility\_Locations/index.html.

MY CHILD’S CASE HAS BEEN SENT TO ADULT COURT. WHY DID THIS HAPPEN, AND WHAT HAPPENS NEXT?

Some children can legally be treated as adults in the criminal justice system.

If a child is 14 or older, his/her case can be sent to adult court for certain “serious” crimes, such as: Murder or attempted murder; Setting fire to a building with people in it; Robbery with a weapon; Rape; Kidnapping; Carjacking; Crimes with guns; Drug crimes; AND Escape from a juvenile detention facility.

If a child is tried in adult court, he/she can be sentenced to adult prison (CDCR).<sup>2651</sup> Depending on how old the child is when sentenced as an adult, and how long the sentence is, he/she may be allowed to stay at DJJ for certain parts of the prison sentence:

- If the child is under 16 when sentenced to adult prison, he/she will stay at the DJJ until he/she is at least 16.
- If the child is at least 16 when sentenced to adult prison, the judge can send him/her directly to adult prison. Or, if the child’s sentence ends before he/she turns 21, the judge can let him/her stay at the DJJ the whole time. If the child’s sentence ends after he/she turns 21, he/she will go to adult prison when he/she turns 18.

If your child’s case might be going to adult court, talk to a lawyer about what can happen.<sup>2652</sup>

IS THERE A WAY TO MAKE MY CHILD’S JUVENILE RECORDS DISAPPEAR?

Maybe. Your child might be able to get some of his/her juvenile records “sealed”: After your child turns 18, he/she can file a petition to have the records sealed. Or, 5-6 years after the case ends, you can file a petition to do this. If the court approves the petition, all records of the case and the arrest will be sealed.<sup>2653</sup>

For more information on sealing juvenile records, speak to your family law facilitator, a lawyer, or contact the clerk at the juvenile delinquency court where you child’s case is being heard. For more general information on sealing juvenile records, see <http://www.courts.ca.gov/28120.htm>.

APPENDIX H

Mothering While You Are Incarcerated

The Roadmap to Reentry guide is focused on identifying and navigating barriers for people in reentry from prison or jail—not on issues faced during your incarceration. But because mothering and pregnancy while incarcerated are such important topics, and can later impact your rights as a parent in reentry, this chapter and appendix provide a brief overview of some key questions you may have if you give birth while you are incarcerated. If you need more information, we recommend checking out the free resources referenced at the end of this Appendix.

➤ BEING A NEW MOTHER WHILE INCARCERATED

IS THERE ANY WAY I CAN STAY WITH MY CHILD AFTER I GIVE BIRTH?

Yes, but that chance is very slim. California has six very small mother-infant prison facilities. There are three facilities known as “Family Foundations” and you can only go there if you are sent by your sentencing judge.<sup>2654</sup>

The other program is the Community Prison Mother Program. There are also three of these facilities are located in Oakland (Project Pride), Pomona (Prototypes), and Bakersfield (Turning Point).<sup>2655</sup> Women are transferred here after they have given birth, applied to the program, and were accepted.

MY SENTENCING JUDGE RECOMMENDED THE FAMILY FOUNDATIONS PROGRAM. WHAT IS IT? WHAT WILL HAPPEN?

The Family Foundations Program (FFP) is an alternative sentencing program. To begin the process, it is best if your attorney or the court contact the Women and Children’s Services unit so that you may be prescreened for the program to determine if you are eligible and so you can be placed on the waiting list. At sentencing, the judge must recommend you for the program.<sup>2656</sup> If you meet the criteria for the program, you will go directly to the FFP location. If you aren’t screened until after you are sentenced, you will go first to prison and then later be transported to a FFP location.<sup>2657</sup> If you have another child and or you give labor prior to going to FFP, your child must be brought to FFP in order for you to stay. If your child isn’t brought to FFP, you will be sent back to state prison. While enrolled in the FFP, you will receive prenatal care, parenting classes and access to prenatal vitamins.<sup>2658</sup>

WHO IS ELIGIBLE TO GO TO FAMILY FOUNDATIONS PROGRAM?

To go to FFP, you must be<sup>2659</sup>

- A woman pregnant or have one or more children under age six at the time of entry,
- Be sentenced to 36 months state prison or less, and have an established history of substance abuse.

WHO IS NOT ELIGIBLE FOR FAMILY FOUNDATIONS PROGRAM?

By statute, you cannot go to FFP if you

- Have a prior prison term for, or a current conviction of, any of the so-called “serious” offenses listed in Penal Code section 1174.4(a)(2)
- If a woman’s child is under the jurisdiction of the juvenile dependency court, and Child protective Services objects<sup>2660</sup>

Other CDCR publications include more requirements. For example, a mother must not have an immigration or “potential or active Felony hold”, “must have primary custody of her child or children,” and sets a two-child limit.<sup>2661</sup>

<sup>2661</sup> 8 Undated information sheet entitled “The Family Foundations Program, California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation, A New Chance for Inmate Mothers”.

HOW DO I GET INTO THE COMMUNITY PRISON MOTHER PROGRAM?

After you give birth, you will receive notice of and a written application for the Community Prison Mother Program (CPMP).<sup>2662</sup> If you arrive at state prison and you are already a mother, you should be informed of the CPMP.<sup>2663</sup> If you meet the requirements, your facility will declare you “eligible” to participate.<sup>2664</sup> To take part in the program, you must apply and this process can take anywhere from a few months to over a year. But applying DOES NOT mean that you will be accepted. If you are denied, you will receive notice that you were denied and instructions to appeal.<sup>2665</sup>

WHO IS ELIGIBLE FOR CPMP?

To be eligible for the Community Prison Mothering Program, a woman must

- have one or more biological children under age six when received by or committed to state prison;
- be the primary caretaker of the children before incarceration, AND
- not been found to be an unfit parent. Or she can be pregnant or have given birth while under CDCR jurisdiction. She must be sentenced to a maximum of six years (after deduction of goodtime credit).

WHAT CAN STOP ME FROM BEING ELIGIBLE FOR CPMP?

There are several things that can stop you from being eligible for CPMP.<sup>2666</sup> For example, if you were convicted or pled guilty to certain sex or drug offenses you will not be eligible for CPMP.<sup>2667</sup> You may also be excluded if you have an older child.<sup>2668</sup>

HOW DO I KNOW IF THE CPMP IS BEST FOR ME?

Deciding what is best for you and your unborn child is difficult challenge. The best way to decide if the CPMP is best or finding a guardian can only be done with research and asking questions.

I AM CURRENTLY PREGNANT AND IN JAIL. WILL MY CHILD BE TAKEN AWAY FROM ME?

Yes. Unfortunately, you cannot return to your facility (whether it is a state or federal run facility) with a baby. Instead, it is important to make a placement plan for your child to make sure that he or she is cared for and to reunify in the future.

WHAT RIGHTS DO I HAVE TO MAKE SURE THAT MY CHILD GOES TO A GOOD HOME WHILE I’M INCARCERATED?

As a mother, you have the right to make arrangements for the care of your child, and it is important that you do so before you give birth.<sup>2669</sup>

Here is a summary of 3 ways in which you can make arrangements for your child after birth:

1. You may release your child to a blood relative like or a blood relative’s spouse even if the marriage ended by death or divorce;
2. You may place your child with a non-relative whom you consider an extended family member;
3. You may permanently release your child by giving up your parental rights.

WHAT IS THE PROCESS FOR CREATING A PLACEMENT PLAN? WILL MY FACILITY OR HOSPITAL HELP?

You should receive information from both your facility and the facility’s medical staff regarding a placement plan for your child.

Establishing Paternity

WHAT IS A DECLARATION OF PATERNITY?

A Declaration of Paternity is a form used in California that, when signed by both parents, establishes them as the legal parents of the child. It is used when parents of a child who are not married want to establish themselves as the child's legal parent. A properly signed Declaration of Paternity has the same effect as a court order from the judge.<sup>2672</sup>

DECLARATION OF PATERNITY: A Snapshot
What is it?	A form that when you complete, has the same effect as a court order as it establishes who the legal parents are of a child.
What does it do?	Since it establishes who are the child's legal parents are, a parent can go to court and ask for orders to be made for the care of the child including but not limited to custody, visitation, and child support.
When is it signed?	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• AT BIRTH: The parents can sign a declaration at the hospital when the child is born. If the parents sign at the hospital, the father's name will go on the child's birth certificate, and the mother does not need to go to court to prove who the father of the child is.</li> <li>OR,</li> <li>• LATER, AFTER BIRTH: The declaration can also be signed later. If the parents sign it after the child's birth certificate has been issued, a new birth certificate can be issued with the father's name.</li> <li>• Once the declaration is signed, the form must be filed with the California Department of Child Support Services Paternity Opportunity Program (POP) in order to be effective. After a signed Declaration of Paternity is filed with the court, the judge can make orders for custody, visitation, and support.<sup>2670</sup></li> </ul>
How do I Get A Copy?	If you filed a Declaration of Paternity and want a copy of it, you can either complete a Request for a Filed Declaration of Paternity (CS 918) or send a letter to the Department of Child Support Services-POP Unit. If you use a letter for your request, please include all the identifying information about the child and parents shown above. Also include your name, mailing address and signature since you are making the request. See Appendix J, PG. 821 for more information.
Can I cancel it?	Possibly, but it will depend on several factors. See Appendix J, PG. 821 for more information on cancelling your Declaration of Paternity. <sup>2671</sup>

WHERE CAN I GET HELP IN ESTABLISHING PARENTAGE?

Your Local Child Support Agency (LCSA) can bring an action to establish the paternity/ parentage of your child. As part of this action, they will ask the court for a child support order. This service is free and is available to both parents. To begin, call the LCSA and ask for an appointment to open a case for parentage and support. You can open a case during the pregnancy and a genetic test can be ordered (if the other person denies being the parent) after the child is born. Also, when one parent is on welfare for the children (for example, if they receive Cal-Works or Medi-Cal), the LCSA automatically gets involved and opens a case.<sup>2673</sup> You may also want to contact your local department of child support services, registrar of births, family law facilitator or welfare office.

IMPORTANT: The local child support agency (LCSA) can be a helpful resource but they are not your lawyers and the information you provide will not be kept secret (confidential). The LSCA can also share certain information to other agencies, the other parent or your employer. If you need more advice or privacy, it would be best to contact a lawyer and/or your local legal aid office.<sup>2674</sup>

APPENDIX K

Divorce or Legal Separation: Filing, Responding & Completing

Basic steps to file for a divorce or legal separation:

1. Fill out your court forms (see the next section): To file for divorce or legal separation, you have to fill out the same forms. If you want specific legal advice about how to fill out your court forms, talk to a lawyer. What you write on your court papers can be very important and can affect the outcome of the case. It is very important to be accurate and complete, and a lawyer can help you figure out how to fill out the forms so that they accurately reflect your position. This is especially important if you think you and your spouse or domestic partner are likely to have disagreements about the issues that the court forms ask you about.
2. File your forms: Turn in your forms (the originals AND copies) to the court clerk. If there are no obvious errors, the clerk will take the original of each form and return the copies to you, stamped "Filed."

You will have to pay a filing fee. If you cannot afford the fee, you can ask for a fee waiver.

IMPORTANT NOTE: If you want the judge to make temporary orders for child or spousal support, bill payment, protection from domestic violence, or other issues, you must fill out and file other forms with the order form for a divorce or dissolution of marriage. Talk to your family law facilitator or self-help center to ask for help with temporary orders.

1. Serve your court papers: The law says your spouse or domestic partner must be told that you have started the legal process for a divorce, legal separation, or annulment. To do this, you must "serve" your spouse or domestic partner with copies of all your court papers. The judge CANNOT make any orders or judgments in your divorce or legal separation case until your spouse or domestic partner has been properly "served."
2. Fill out and serve your financial disclosure forms: You have filed your petition in your divorce or legal separation case. Now, you are ready to complete the financial disclosures needed to get divorced or legally separated. Keep in mind that you can provide your financial disclosures at the same time as your petition if you wish, but NO LATER than 60 days after filing your petition.
3. The next steps all depend on whether or not your spouse or domestic partner has responded to your service. Please see the Judicial Council of California's website here: for more information on what to do next, or speak to your court's family law facilitator or an attorney.

Basic Steps to Responding to a Divorce or Legal Separation:

1. Either spouse in a marriage or partner in a registered domestic partnership can ask the court to end their legal relationship.
2. If you have been served with a petition and summons for dissolution (divorce) or legal separation, your spouse or domestic partner is asking the court to end your relationship. In California, as long as 1 person wants to end the marriage or domestic partnership, the court can end it, even if the other spouse or domestic partner does not agree or want to get divorced or legally separated.
  - a. You can either respond by contesting the divorce or dissolution or you can respond by not contesting it, meaning you agree and have no changes to make to the request.

THE FORMS

There are a lot of California forms that must be completed if you are filing, responding, or completing a divorce or legal separation. You may also have special forms that must be completed depending on the county you live in. To find your county, please see Appendix A on PG. X to find your county.

It is VERY important that all of your forms are completed and filed at the right time. To make sure you follow and complete all the steps, you can talk to a lawyer or a family law facilitator to help.

Below is a list of forms that you will have to complete whether you are filing or responding to a divorce.

- Petition – Marriage/Domestic Partnership (Form FL-100). On this form, you give the court some basic information about your marriage and/or domestic partnership, and you ask for the orders you want the court to make.
- Summons (Family Law) (Form FL-110). This form contains important information for you and for your spouse or domestic partner about the divorce or separation process. It contains some standard restraining orders limiting what you can do with your property, money, and other assets or debts. It also prohibits you or your spouse or domestic partner from moving out of state with your children from your marriage or partnership, and from applying for a new or replacement passport for any of your children together, without the prior written consent of the other or a court order. And it lets you know that if you or someone in your household need affordable health insurance, you can apply for Covered California. READ this form carefully!!

DECLARATION PAPERWORK

There may be things you must “declare” meaning you are to tell your spouse and/or the court what you have in order to get a divorce. Below are various forms you may also need to complete.

- Property Declaration (Family Law) (Form FL-160). Use this form if you need more space to list your property and debts.
- Declaration Under Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act (UCCJEA) (Form FL-105/GC-120). Use this form if you have child under the age 18 with your spouse or domestic partner.
- Child Custody and Visitation Application Attachment (Form FL-311). Use this form if you want to ask the court to make orders about custody and visitation at the time of your divorce. It is an optional form (you do not have to use it).

SERVICE PAPERWORK

An important part of filing for divorce is “service” which is also considered notification or how the other spouse and, or the local child support agency is told that you want a divorce.

Below are forms that you may need:

- Notice and Acknowledgment of Receipt (Family Law) (Form FL-117). Use this form if you decide to do service by mail. This form shows the court that your spouse or domestic partner received your forms. If your spouse or domestic partner does not sign, date, and return this form, you will have to have him or her served again by personal service. Remember, you must have someone 18 years or older (NOT you) and not involved in the divorce (NOT a family, friend, or relative) do this for you.
- Proof of Service by Mail to the Local Child Support Agency (Form FL-335). This form is used when you must serve the LSCA because either you or your spouse receives money or help from the government for a child in your relationship or if you have a current custody case taking place with the LSCA.
- Proof of Service of Summons (Form FL-115). This form must be completed whether you decide to have someone hand deliver divorce papers or mail them for you. It is very important your server fills out the Proof of Service correctly. If possible, have your family law facilitator or self-help center review it to make sure it was filled out properly.

FINANCIAL DISCLOSURE FORMS

In California, you and your spouse must give each other written information on what property or money you have and what expenses you have. This must be done so the property between two people can be split up equally. It also gives you financial information in order to make decisions about child support. If financial disclosures are not exchanged or if the financial disclosures are not correct, the divorce can be cancelled and the court can make orders about the property

There are two times when a disclosure occurs: (1) At the time of filing (preliminary disclosure), and (2) at the end of the divorce (final disclosure).

Below is a list of official court forms and other things you may need.

- Declaration of Disclosure. (Form FL-140). This is the form that you will use to write down your expenses. It must be sent to your spouse within 60 days of filing for divorce. This form will not be filed with the court, only given to your spouse.
- Schedule of Assets and Debts (Form FL-142) or a Property Declaration (Form FL-160); This form will not be filed with the court, only given to your spouse.
- Income and Expense Declaration (Form FL-150). Use this form to include money you have earned as part of business or investment opportunities you have had.
- Your Tax Returns for the last two years. These forms will not be filed with the court, only given to your spouse.
- Declaration Regarding Service of Declaration of Disclosure (Form FL-141). This form tells the court that you have given your spouse or domestic partner the preliminary or final declaration of disclosure. This form will be filed with the court.

There are a lot of steps to completing a divorce or dissolution of marriage. Luckily, the Judicial Council of California has put together a website showing you each and every step, including links to all the forms you need. We recommend you check them out,

Child Support Forms

Requesting and responding to child support requests can be complicated, so it is best to talk to a lawyer or Family Law Facilitator to discuss your situation first. Below is a chart on common support situations and the forms you would need. Please visit The Judicial Branch of California Courts at <http://www.courts.ca.gov/1199.htm> for detailed steps on how to fill out and file the right forms.

I WANT TO:	THE FORM I WILL NEED INCLUDE:
Respond to a request to pay child support.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Responsive Declaration to Request for Order (Form FL-320);</li> <li>• Income and Expense Declaration (Form FL-150); and</li> <li>• Proof of Service.</li> </ul>
Ask the judge to change the amount of child support I pay.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Request for Order (FL-300): Use this form to ask the judge to change your child support order. You will make a “Request for Order of Child Support Modification”</li> <li>• Financial Statement (Simplified) (FL-155): In most cases, you can use this form to show the judge your income, expenses, and how much you can afford to pay in child support.</li> </ul>
Ask the judge to review the denial of my driver license because of my child support debt.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Notice of Motion for Judicial Review of License Denial (FL-670): If your driver license was revoked or suspended due to unpaid child support, use this form to ask the judge to return your license (FL-670 also available at http://www.courts.ca.gov/documents/fl670.pdf).</li> </ul>
Pay less child support in the future.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Request for Order (Form FL-300). <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>○ NOTE: You can also use the Information Sheet for Request for Order (Form FL-300-INFO) for information to fill out Form FL-300. (Ask your family law facilitator if you need to check the box for “Court Order” and item 4 on Form FL-300). You will make a “Request for Reducing Child Support Order”</li> </ul> </li> <li>• Income and Expense Declaration (Form FL-150): On your Form FL-300, check the box at item 8 (“Other Relief”) and write in “Set monthly liquidation payment of $ (write in a reasonable amount).” The “liquidation payment” is the payment that goes toward your back spousal or partner support. It is very important that you fill out Form FL-150 very carefully and completely. That form will show the court why you cannot afford the high rate of payments the earnings assignment is asking for to pay off your balance.</li> </ul>
Stop having money removed from my paycheck/request a “Stay Earnings Assignment.”	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Stay of Service of Earnings Assignment Order (Form FL-455): On this form, mark the box that explains you have an agreement with your former spouse or partner (AND the LCSA if they are involved in your case) for another payment arrangement. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>○ You will get a court hearing where you can ask the judge to stop service of the earnings assignment.</li> <li>○ If the judge agrees with your request, he or she will sign the stay. This stops the earnings assignment from taking effect because it will not be served on your employer.</li> <li>○ If you get a stay, it is very important you both keep good records of all the payments, in case there are any issues in the future.</li> <li>○ Read the Stay of Service of Earnings Assignment Order (Form FL-455) for more information on “staying” an earnings assignment. If the person ordered to pay support does not follow your arrangement, you can ask the court to end the stay on the earnings assignment.</li> </ul> </li> </ul>

Find out how much child support I owe, and request for it to be changed.	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Request for Judicial Determination of Support Arrearages or Adjustment of Arrearages Due to Incarceration or Involuntary Institutionalization (Form FL-676): You can use this form to ask the judge how much child support you owe from when you were incarcerated. <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>○ NOTE: If your child support order was issued between July 1, 2011, and July 1, 2015, and your child support should have automatically stopped during this incarceration, you can use this form to ask the judge to change your child support debt (arrears) from the time while you were incarcerated (FL-676 also available at http://www.courts.ca.gov/documents/fl676.pdf).</li> </ul> </li> <li>• Information Sheet for Request for Judicial Determination of Support Arrearages or Adjustment of Arrearages Due to Incarceration or Involuntary Institutionalization (Form FL-676-INFO): This explains how to fill out the Request for Judicial Determination of Support Arrearages or Adjustment of Arrearages Due to Incarceration or Involuntary Institutionalization form (FL-676-INFO also available at http://www.courts.ca.gov/documents/fl676info.pdf).</li> </ul>

The Information Practices Act of 1977 (Civil Code Section 1798.17) and the Federal Privacy Act of 1974 (Public Law 93 579) requires that this notice be provided when collecting personal information from individuals. Information requested on this form, including your Social Security Number, is used by the Department of Child Support Services (DCSS) for purposes of identification and communication with you. The DCSS is required, under Section 466(a)(13) of the Social Security Act, to collect the Social Security Number of any individual who is subject to a divorce decree, support order, or paternity determination or acknowledgement. Social Security Number information is mandatory and will be kept on file at the local child support agency to locate and identify individuals and assets for the purpose of establishing, modifying, and enforcing child support obligations. Enrolling a child in health insurance may require the release of the child's Social Security Number and mailing address to the other parent's employer or the release of the child's Social Security Number to the other parent. The information in your case may be discussed with or given to the State, other public agencies that can legally receive such information, and to the other parent or his/her attorney to the extent required by law.

I understand that if the order is changed while I am incarcerated the order may be changed again when I am released and that I should contact my local child support agency upon my release. I declare under penalty of perjury that I have no income or assets and have no way of paying child support.

INFORMATION SHEET FOR REQUEST FOR JUDICIAL DETERMINATION OF SUPPORT ARREARAGES OR ADJUSTMENT OF ARREARAGES DUE TO INCARCERATION OR INVOLUNTARY INSTITUTIONALIZATION

Please follow these instructions to complete a Request for Judicial Determination of Support Arrearages or Adjustment of Arrearages Due to Incarceration or Involuntary Institutionalization (form FL-676) if you do not have an attorney to represent you. If you have an attorney, he or she should complete form FL-676. If you need free help completing form FL-676, you can contact the Family Law Facilitator's Office in your county. For more information on finding a family law facilitator, see the California Courts Online Self-Help Center at www.courts.ca.gov/selfhelp.

Form FL-676 should be used only if you disagree with the support arrearages that the local child support agency says that you owe or you need an adjustment due to incarceration or institutionalization and you cannot reach an agreement with the local child support agency. Form FL-676 cannot be used if you want to change your child support order.

When you have completed this form FL-676, file the original and attachments with the court clerk. The court clerk's address is listed in the telephone directory under "County Government Offices" or online at www.courts.ca.gov/courts/find.htm. Keep three copies of the filed form and its attachments. Serve one copy on the local child support agency, one copy on the other parent, and keep the other for your records. (See Information Sheet for Service of Process (form FL-611).)

INSTRUCTIONS FOR COMPLETING THE REQUEST FOR JUDICIAL DETERMINATION OF SUPPORT ARREARAGES OR ADJUSTMENT OF ARREARAGES DUE TO INCARCERATION OR INVOLUNTARY INSTITUTIONALIZATION (FORM FL-676) (TYPE OR PRINT IN BLACK INK):

Front page, first box, top of form, left side: Print your name, address, and telephone number in this box if it is not already there.

Front page, second box, left side: Print your county's name and the court's address in the box. Use the same address for the court that is on your most recent support order or judgment. If you do not have a copy of your most recent support order or judgment, you can get one from either the court clerk or the local child support agency.

Front page, third box, left side: Print the names of the Petitioner/Plaintiff, Respondent/Defendant, and Other Parent in this box. Use the same names listed in your most recent support order or judgment. If no name is listed for the Other Parent leave that line blank.

Front page, first box, top of form, right side: Leave this box blank for the court's use.

Front page, second box, right side: Print your case number in this box. This number is also listed on your most recent support order or judgment.

Front page, fourth box, left side: Check the box to indicate whether you are asking for a judicial determination of support arrearages or adjustment of arrearages due to incarceration or involuntary institutionalization. Check both boxes if you are asking for both a determination of arrears and an adjustment of arrears.

- 1.a.–b. You must contact the court clerk's office and ask that a hearing date be set for this motion. The court clerk will give you the information you need to complete this section.
2. This section states that the local child support agency is handling your support case.
- 3a. This section requires you to attach the statement or other document from the local child support agency that tells the amount of your support arrearages.
- 3b. This section requires you to attach your own statement of the amount of your support arrearages. Your statement must show a monthly breakdown of the amount of support ordered and the amount you paid each month. You may use Declaration of Payment History (form FL-420) and Payment History Attachment (form FL-421) to complete your statement of arrearages.

4. Complete all that apply. If you check the box in item 4a, attach or bring to the court hearing proof of the dates of incarceration or involuntary institutionalization. If you have any evidence or documentation that you had no income or assets, in addition to your sworn statement on the form, please bring that to court with you.

You must date the request, print your name, and sign the form under penalty of perjury. When you sign the form, you are stating that the information you have provided is true and correct.

Top of second page, box on left side: Print the names of Petitioner/Plaintiff, Respondent/Defendant, and Other Parent in this box. Use the same names listed on the front page.

Top of second page, box on right side: Print your case number in this box. Use the same number as the one on the front page. Instructions for how to complete the Proof of Service section of the Request form are in the Information Sheet for Service of Process (form FL-611). WHAT WILL I LEARN IN THE EDUCATION CHAPTER?

- The different educational options
- How to set up your educational goals
- How to assess your current educational level
- The different educational levels/programs and what you need to pursue them
- How your incarceration and criminal record might affect your educational goals
- Options to pay for your education

IMPORTANT: Root & Rebound has created a new toolkit, “My Education, My Freedom,” for currently or formerly incarcerated people and people with arrest and conviction histories who are actively pursuing their education (meaning you are either enrolling in school or already enrolled). To learn more and request a copy, please tell us more about your educational plans by writing us at Root & Rebound, 1730 Franklin Street, Suite 300, Oakland, CA 94612, calling us at 510-279-4662, or sending us an email at roadmap@rootandrebond.org.

I. INTRODUCTION

WHAT WILL I LEARN?

- A basic overview of your educational options
- What you need to get started in pursuing your education

Getting an education is one of the most important steps you can take in reentry if it feels right to you. Education can open up new opportunities and lead to a better career. This chapter can help you start (or continue) to plan for and reach your educational goals. It covers what programs, schools, and financial aid opportunities are available, and it takes you through the process of deciding what is right for you. The advice here is intended to be practical both for people who are currently incarcerated, as well as for people who were formerly incarcerated and have returned to the community.

A NOTE FOR READERS WHO ARE CURRENTLY INCARCERATED: Throughout this chapter, we will often suggest that you “call” the resource that you need. We understand that it might not be possible for you to make these phone calls yourself while you are incarcerated, however we offer it as general information for you, your family, and your advocates to use for your benefit.

DID YOU KNOW?

Studies show that formerly incarcerated people who receive general education or vocational training are much less likely to return to prison and much more likely to find employment after their release. In fact, people who participate in correctional education programs while incarcerated have a 43 percent lower chance of returning to prison, and a 13 percent higher chance of finding employment, than people who do not do educational programs while incarcerated.<sup>2677</sup>

QUESTIONS TO START WITH

Thinking through the following questions will help you set your educational goals and decide which path is best for you.

WHAT ARE MY EDUCATIONAL OPTIONS?

Your decision about which school or program you enroll in will depend on many factors: your personal and career goals, your finances, your educational background and current skills, and your ability to overcome any barriers that may arise because of your criminal history. Your decision may also depend on day-to-day needs—such as your health, family responsibilities, access to transportation, and parole or probation conditions.

To start, here is an overview of the educational options this Chapter will cover:

- Adult Basic Education (ABE) classes (PG. 856) improve your basic math, reading, writing, and life skills; and these classes can help you get ready for high school-level work.
- High school credentials (diploma or GED) (PG. 857) are a minimum requirement for many jobs, and are a necessary step before you can continue your education through a Career Technical Education program or a college or university degree. You can earn a high school credential by completing a high school diploma program or passing the GED test.
- Career Technical Education (CTE) programs (PG. 864) train you for specific kinds of jobs, and sometimes lead to certificates or professional/occupational licenses that you need for those jobs. Different programs take different lengths of time, but they’re often designed so that you can complete them in 1 year.
- College Degree: Two-year and four-year colleges and universities award college degrees (also called academic degrees) for completing a program of academic study. College degree programs usually do not train you for a specific type of job, but give you a wide variety of general skills that are useful for many different professions. The different types of college (academic) degrees are: associate, and bachelor’s.
  - Two-year college (associate degree) programs (PG. 868) allow you to earn an associate degree, which can be a stepping-stone to entry-level jobs or to a four-year college program. Note: Part-time students will take longer than 2 years.

<sup>2677</sup> Allie Bidwell, Report: Prison Education Programs Could Save Money, U.S. NEWS & WORLD REPORT (Aug. 22, 2013) <http://www.usnews.com/news/articles/2013/08/22/report-prison-education-programs-could-save-money>; see also CTR. FOR CMT’Y. ALT., The Use of Criminal History Records in College Admissions Reconsidered (2010) (“Post-secondary educational programs have been shown to reduce recidivism by approximately 40 percent. A research brief . . . reported on a Texas study in which participation in higher education lowered recidivism to 15 percent, 13 percent and under 1 percent for people who earned an associate’s, bachelors, and master’s degree, respectively. In contrast, the general recidivism rate hovers around 63 percent nationally. A study of recidivism rates among women showed that only 7.7 percent of those who took college courses in prison returned to prison after release, compared to 29.9 percent of those who did not participate in the college program. State-level studies in Texas, California, Alabama, and Maryland have, over the course of many years, shown significant reductions in recidivism associated with higher education in correctional settings.” (internal quotation marks omitted)).

- Four-year college and university programs (PG. 867) allow you to earn a bachelor’s degree, which can be a stepping-stone to higher-level jobs or to graduate or professional school. Note: Part-time students will take longer than 4 years.
- Graduate or professional schools allow you to earn advanced degrees after you’ve earned a bachelor’s degree. Earning a professional degree allows you to become licensed to work in professions like law or medicine; the kinds of jobs it can lead to depends on your field of study.<sup>2678</sup> Earning a master’s degree generally takes 2 years, and a doctorate degree can take 3 years or more.

WHAT EDUCATIONAL OPTIONS DO I HAVE WHILE I’M ON PROBATION OR PAROLE?

It depends. Once you are released, you will have access to free resources available in the community—including the Internet, public libraries, and community service organizations—that can help you do research, apply to schools and programs, and get financial assistance (“financial aid”) to help pay for your education. You may also become eligible (qualify) for more types of financial aid once you are released, which can allow you to consider schools or programs that you otherwise might not be able to afford.

However, the educational options available to you ultimately depend on where you live (urban areas tend to have more options), your life circumstances (such as family responsibilities), and any probation or parole conditions that might affect your access to educational programs and services (such as travel restrictions).

NOTE: Your parole agent or probation officer should be supportive and encourage you to pursue your educational goals as part of your successful reintegration.<sup>2679</sup> If you find that s/he is not supportive, or that your conditions make it difficult or impossible for you to get an education, call Root & Rebound’s reentry hotline by calling 510-279-4662, any Friday, 9 a.m. - 5 p.m. PST for strategies, information, and support.

A FEW GREAT RESOURCES:

Public Libraries

The local public library is an important gateway to other services and resources in your community. In addition to offering free access to computers and the Internet, libraries often have adult education classes, community calendars (support group meetings, free clinics, etc.), and some government forms that you might need. Librarians are also available to help you find whatever information you need. To find the public library closest to you:

- Check under “library” or “public library” in the city government section of your local phone book;
- Search the Internet for “library” or “public library” along with the name of your city or county; and/or
- You can also search the national database of public libraries provided by the Institute of Museum & Library Services at: http://www.ims.gov/research/public\_libraries\_in\_the\_united\_states\_survey.aspx.

America’s Job Centers of California (formerly called EDD One-Stop Centers)

America’s Job Centers of California offer many resources, all in one place, for people seeking a job or more education. Most services are free, but there may be a fee for some specialized education and training programs. Some of the services provided by America’s Job Centers include:

- Skills assessment: Staff can help you identify the skills you have and the skills you need to be ready for education, training, and/or employment.
- Career counseling: Counselors can help you identify jobs and professions that you might be interested in based on your skills, interests, and experience. They also can tell you about the job market in your local area.
- Training or referrals to training programs: Staff may provide direct training or refer you to training programs that can help you prepare to continue your education or enter the workforce.
- Referrals to other resources or services. Staff can direct you to organizations that can help you with other needs, such as transportation, child care, welfare assistance, unemployment insurance, and veterans’ services.

You can find an America’s Job Center of California in your area by:

- Calling the CareerOneStop helpline at 1-877-348-0502 or the U.S. Department of Labor’s National Helpline at: 1-877-872-5627; or by
- Searching the CareerOneStop Service Locator website at: <http://www.servicelocator.org>, or the America’s Job Center of California website at: <http://americasjobcenter.ca.gov/>.

Community Organizations

Community organizations provide many kinds of services. Most are free, but some may charge a fee. These organizations can help with employment, education, health care, counseling, housing, substance abuse treatment, transportation, and childcare. They also can provide referrals to other agencies. There are different ways you can find community organizations:

- 2-1-1: A community information service that connects you to local agencies, services, and organizations that can help you with a variety of needs. To contact 2-1-1:
  - Call 2-1-1 from any phone (note: phone service may not be available in all communities yet);
  - Visit the 2-1-1 Information & Referral Search website at <http://www.211.org>; or
  - Some communities also publish a paper copy of the 2-1-1 guide.<sup>2680</sup> Check your local public library to see if the paper guide is available in your community.
- Local Public Library: Often there will be a community message board with contact information for local organizations, or you can ask the librarian to recommend local resources (see above).

TIP: Make a list ready of the resources that you want to research before you go to the library. This will save you a lot of time and help you better organize your search. This is especially important if you are under time limitations because of curfews or restrictions imposed by your parole agent or probation officer.

WHAT EDUCATIONAL OPTIONS DO I HAVE WHILE I'M INCARCERATED?

You have options, but unfortunately your options and the quality of the programs will depend on where you're incarcerated. The programs and resources available to you will be different based on whether you're incarcerated in a federal prison, state prison, or county jail. In addition, the availability of programs and resources will be different across different facilities.<sup>2681</sup>

In general, the following programs will be available to you:

- If you're in a federal prison, you should have free access to assessment testing, ABE classes (including literacy and ESL), GED programs,<sup>2682</sup> CTE and job readiness programs,<sup>2683</sup> as well as a College Coordinator who can help you enroll in and complete correspondence (mail) courses.<sup>2684</sup>
- If you're in a California state prison, CDCR provides free access to assessment testing, ABE classes (including literacy and ESL), GED programs, high school diploma programs, CTE and job readiness programs, occupational licensing, library services, and tutoring support programs.<sup>2685</sup>
- If you're incarcerated in a California county jail, California law gives individuals counties permission (and resources) to establish education programs in all adult county correctional facilities and to award diplomas and certificates for completion of study in these programs.<sup>2686</sup> However, the law does not require that the counties do so, or control how those programs are to be structured. Therefore, the availability and quality of educational programs varies from county to county.<sup>2687</sup> If you are incarcerated in county jail, you will need to check with your facility to see what programs are available to you.

Read more about the different programs that might be available while you are incarcerated in the section on Learning the Educational Landscape, starting on PG. 856. Even if you don't have access to programs or classes that are right for you while you're incarcerated, there are programs you can complete on your own through correspondence courses or self-study, and other practical steps you can take!

<sup>2680</sup> For example, in Alameda County, "The Big Blue Book" is a comprehensive guide to Alameda County health and human services agencies and organizations. Although the book is not free, it is sold to hundreds of non-profits, government agencies, faith-based organizations, and community organizations. To purchase, visit Big Blue Book, EDEN I&R Inc., <http://www.edenir.org/BigBlueBook.html>.

<sup>2681</sup> Certain programs and resources must be available in correctional facilities according to federal or state law; others are provided according to institutional policies and regulations. See U.S. DEP'T JUSTICE, PROGRAM STATEMENT 1315.07 INMATE LEGAL ACTIVITIES (Nov. 5, 1999).

PRACTICAL TIPS FOR APPLYING TO SCHOOL

The process of pursuing your education—not to mention the larger process of transitioning back into your community—can be rewarding, but also challenging and stressful at times. You’ll be dealing with a lot of forms, applications, and procedures, which can feel overwhelming. Here are some tips for staying on track:

- Gather and organize all the documents you will need for applying to schools and programs, financial aid, and employment (see list on PG. Error! Bookmark not defined.). Keep all your important documents together, and use a large envelope or folder to store them. Keeping these papers clean, safe, and organized will save you lots of time and frustration.<sup>2688</sup> Getting some of these documents may require lots of paperwork, a long application process, or lots of follow-up efforts, so if you are able to gather these documents as soon as possible, take advantage of this and gather them to save you time. (For details about these documents—what they are and how to get them—see the BUILDING BLOCKS OF REENTRY: ID & VOTING CHAPTER, beginning on PG. 22.)
- Take the time to make informed decisions. Before committing to any school or program, get as much information as possible and consider your options carefully. Do background research at the library or on the Internet, ask questions to people who have been through the program or know of its reputation, beware of scams and bogus credentials, and investigate ways to save time and money.
- Ask for help! Get advice from the people who are there to help you. If you are currently incarcerated, talk to the education staff, counselors, and program directors at your facility. Ask friends and family members to do research and gather information for you. If you’re in the community, visit your local public library and look for reentry programs, career centers, and community colleges in your area.

WHAT ARE “IMMUNIZATION/VACCINATION RECORDS” AND WHY DO I NEED THEM?

Your immunization record (also called your vaccination record) is a list of all the vaccines (medicines) you received as a child and as an adult that prevent common diseases like polio, chicken pox and tuberculosis. It is required to register for school, for certain jobs, and/or to travel abroad.

HOW TO LOCATE YOUR IMMUNIZATION/VACCINATION RECORDS

Unfortunately, there is no national database of immunization/vaccination records. The only records that exist are the documents you or your parents were given when you were vaccinated, and the medical records kept by the doctor or clinic where you were vaccinated.<sup>2689</sup> If you need official copies of your immunization/vaccination records, there are several places you can look:<sup>2690</sup>

- Ask a parent or guardian if they kept the records of your childhood immunizations/vaccinations;
- Check with your elementary school, high school and/or college for records of any immunizations (generally, records are kept only for 1-2 years after students leave the school system);
- Check with your correctional facility’s health care services department to see if it has kept records of your immunizations/vaccinations;
- Check with previous employers (including the military) that may have required immunizations/vaccinations;
- Check with your doctor (immunization records are kept at doctors’ offices for a limited number of years);
- Contact your state’s health department. Some states have registries that include adult immunizations/vaccinations.

NOTE: California does have a registry, but it is relatively new (within the last 10 years only), and it is not used by all doctors’ offices. For more information, visit: The California Department of Health at: <http://www.cdph.ca.gov/programs/immunize/PG.s/FindingOldImmunizationRecords.aspx>; or The California Immunization Registry at: <http://www.ca-siis.org/>.

DEP’T OF PUBLIC HEALTH PROGRAMS, Finding Old Immunization Records, <http://www.cdph.ca.gov/programs/immunize/PG.s/FindingOldImmunizationRecords.aspx>.

WHAT SHOULD I DO IF I CAN'T FIND MY IMMUNIZATION/VACCINATION RECORDS?

If you can't find your immunization/vaccination records, you may need to get vaccinated again. While this is not ideal, it is safe to repeat vaccines. Your doctor may also be able to do blood tests to see if you are already immune to certain diseases, so you do not have to repeat those vaccinations.<sup>2691</sup>

II. SETTING YOUR EDUCATIONAL GOALS

WHAT WILL I LEARN?

- How to think about and decide what you want from your education
- How to research jobs and careers to help you choose your educational path
- What resources will help you make important decisions about your education

Setting your educational goals involves asking yourself some important questions about your future. What purpose do you want your education to serve? Is it a way to achieve a specific goal - for example, a way to get a better job? Is it an opportunity for personal growth? Or both?

Going through some of the questions below may make it easier to make a decision and help you get a clear idea of the goals you want to reach. Often there are several answers to a question, so making lists can help you organize your thoughts and priorities.

CREATING A STRONG PLAN FOR YOUR PERSONAL EDUCATIONAL JOURNEY

A strong plan for going back to school will help you develop and stick to your goals, maintain focus, and spend your time and money wisely. Here are seven steps you can take towards setting your education goals:

STEP 1: ASSESS YOUR BACKGROUND, SKILLS AND TALENTS.

Start by taking some time for some big picture goal planning. Ask yourself key questions like:

- Why do you want to go back to school? What motivates you?
- How does school fit into your vision for the future?
- What kind of career do you want?
- What barriers might you encounter in getting the career you want?

STEP 2: DETERMINE WHICH CAREERS MATCH YOUR STRENGTHS AND GOALS

Come up with a list of jobs you may want. Think critically about your strengths and goals for the future. Key questions include:

- Do you have experience from a previous job?
- Do you have a favorite hobby or pastime? For example, do you like connecting with other or do you prefer to be alone?
- Do you find yourself negotiating or debating issues with others?
- Do you prefer to be the team leader?
- Are you particularly neat or organized?

STEP 3: RESEARCH THE QUALIFICATIONS, EDUCATION, LICENSES, AND/OR CERTIFICATES YOUR DESIRED FIELD REQUIRES

Before you jump into a career path, it is important to know the educational and training requirements, including any licenses or certificates you may need.

Here are some online and in-person resources that can help you:

- My Next Move is a national website (not specific to California) that can help you research the educational requirements and skills needed for almost any job or career. Visit: <https://www.mynextmove.org/>
- Five Keys is a free school that offers career planning and guidance in addition to free educational assessments, adult basic education (ABE), and high school diploma equivalency/GED testing, located in the Bay Area and LA area. Find contact information on page 17.
- The Federal Bureau of Labor has some helpful information about the types of jobs that require licenses and certificates here: <https://www.bls.gov/careeroutlook/2016/article/will-i-need-a-license-or-certification.htm>.
- The California Department of Consumer Affairs lists the boards and agencies it governs, with links describing the license and certifications each one requires. You can learn more here: http://dca.ca.gov/about\_dca/entities.shtml. If you are seeking a licensed profession that is not governed by the DCA, please call Root & Rebound's reentry legal hotline for more information.
- CareerOneStop (www.careeronestop.org) is a website with many tools to help you research the jobs you're interested in, such as:

- “Explore Careers”—has descriptions of different careers, including what skills and training you need, what level of education most workers typically have, and the types of tasks and equipment for each job; and will let you to compare different occupations.<sup>2692</sup>
- “License Finder”<sup>2693</sup>—allows you to look up state licensing requirements for any specific job, as well as the name and contact information of any state licensing board for that job.
- “Certification Finder”<sup>2694</sup>—tells you if a job requires certification, as well as the steps to get certified and the names and websites of certifying organizations.
- “Job Search Help for Ex-Offenders”<sup>2695</sup>—is a special section of the CareerOneStop website with information, advice, and tools tailored for people in reentry.
- America’s Service Locator (www.servicelocator.org) helps you find employment and training centers near you where you can get free and low-cost employment services. Phone: 1-877-348-0502.
- America’s Job Center of California (AJCC) (<http://americasjobcenter.ca.gov/>) California’s one-stop access point to employment-related services, including skills assessment. The website offers a finder to locate the AJCC office nearest you and also has links to most of the websites and services listed above.
- National College Transition Network (www.collegeforadults.org) has an “Occupational Exploration” page with resources for adults pursuing new career paths and tips for people in reentry.
- Local job postings can help you see exactly what qualifications employers look for when hiring. Try checking the job board at your local public library or employment center. You can also search online job postings on websites such as Craigslist (<http://www.craigslist.org/about/sites>), Monster (www.monster.com), and indeed (www.indeed.com).
- Industry magazines can be a good source of information on current events, trends, and new developments in your field of interest.
- People who have the job you want, as well as employers in the field, can answer questions about what training or credentials are required to be successful in the field.
- State licensing boards and professional associations can give you a list of requirements for the particular job or career that they oversee.<sup>2696</sup> Their contact information is on the CareerOneStop website (see above) as well as from the California Department of Consumer Affairs (Phone: (800) 952-5210).<sup>2697</sup>
- Finally, you can call Root & Rebound’s reentry legal hotline, any Friday, 9 a.m. - 5 p.m. PST, at 510-279-4662, to get legal information and guidance about how your criminal record impacts your ability to get a specific license or certificate in California.

STEP 4: RESEARCH ANY JOB BARRIERS YOU MAY FACE BECAUSE OF YOUR ARREST OR CONVICTION HISTORY

Some jobs are harder, or maybe even impossible, to get for individuals with certain arrests or convictions on their record. It is important to be hopeful, but also realistic, as you plan for your education and future career. Knowing potential barriers and how to overcome those barriers (if possible) is critical to achieving your goals.

Jobs that give employees access to private or sensitive information (like financial records), vulnerable people (like children, the elderly, patients, or incarcerated people), or high-security locations (like airports or federal buildings) tend to have more barriers for people with conviction histories. Jobs that require a state license or certification also tend to have more barriers for people with criminal records.

Jobs with Legal Restrictions for People with Criminal Records. Although this list is incomplete, below are some examples of jobs that have legal restrictions for people with certain criminal convictions. In general, these are jobs where employees have access to private or sensitive information (like financial records), vulnerable people (like children or the elderly), or high-security places (such as airports) where there is a greater risk of harm to the public.

- Airport security screeners (or anyone with unsupervised access to secure airport areas);<sup>2698</sup>
- Federal law enforcement officers;<sup>2699</sup>
- Defense contractors;<sup>2700</sup>
- Prisoner transportation workers;<sup>2701</sup>

- Bank employees;<sup>2703</sup>
- Insurance employees;<sup>2704</sup>
- Jobs that manage employee benefits plan;<sup>2705</sup>
- Childcare workers in federal facilities or agencies;<sup>2706</sup>
- Working for a school district in a position that requires certification or in a supervisory capacity (if you have been convicted of a felony defined as serious or violent);<sup>2707</sup>

Occupational Licenses. In California, roughly 200 careers require a state license or certificate. There are 50+ licensing boards, agencies, and bureaus that oversee the license application process, and many licensing boards have restrictions about issuing licenses to people with certain convictions (see next question for more information). So even though this information can be difficult and frustrating to learn, it will help you to design the best path for yourself—one that you are passionate about but that is also realistic. Given the laws and barriers in place regarding certain professions and license, this information may be useful to consider when making decisions regarding your educational path. For more information about legal and professional/occupational licensing restrictions, see the EMPLOYMENT CHAPTER, PG. 601.

Applying for a professional/occupational license generally requires submitting your fingerprints, paying various application fees, and proving that you meet certain educational and/or work experience requirements, which are set by the particular licensing board that you're applying to.<sup>2708</sup>

There are over 200 jobs in California that require a professional/occupational license. Here is a list of a few of the most common jobs that require a license:

- Barber
- Cosmetologist
- Security guard
- Child care worker or Family child care provider
- Teacher
- Contractor
- Real estate agent
- Pharmacist or Pharmacy technician
- Nurse or Certified Nursing Assistant (CNA)
- Home health aid (HHA) or Personal care aid (PCA)
- Dentist, Dental assistant, or Registered dental hygienist
- Physical therapist or Physical therapist assistant
- Emergency Medical Technician (EMT) or Paramedic

To find out whether the specific job you want requires a professional/occupational license, contact the Department of Consumer Affairs at (800) 952-5210. You can also ask the DCA for information to contact the specific licensing board that oversees that type of work. To learn more about specific licensing requirements for the job you want, you will need to contact the specific licensing board that oversees that type of work.

STEP 5: SET YOURSELF UP FOR STABILITY AND SUCCESS BY PLANNING FOR PRACTICAL NEEDS

Outside factors and life circumstances can have a huge impact on your educational goals. As an adult student, you may have work and family obligations to juggle. If you're incarcerated or on parole/probation, you may have to work around special restrictions in order to pursue your education.

In light of all this, you'll want to pick an education program that you can balance with your other responsibilities, and that fits your current situation and future goals. For example, you may ask yourself:

- How much time do you have to devote to your education?
- Do you have a family to support and take care of?
- Will you need to work to support yourself while in school?
- Are your options limited because you are still incarcerated or on parole or probation? See PG. 847

STEP 6: GET ASSESSED TO DETERMINE YOUR EDUCATIONAL AND LEARNING NEEDS

If you are not sure where to start in school, an “educational assessment” or “placement test” will help you figure this out. Also, if you have any special learning needs, differences, or disabilities, there are qualified professionals who can assess you and help you make an educational plan. See PG. 853 for more information on how to get an educational assessment.

STEP 7: COLLECT IDENTIFICATION DOCUMENTS AND OTHER RECORDS REQUIRED FOR ATTENDING SCHOOL

Getting identification documents (ID), transcripts, and other important records allows you to enroll in school and apply for jobs. Here are some key items to assemble as you start to plan to go back to school:

- Birth Certificate (certified, authorized copy). A birth certificate is often the first step to obtaining a number of important forms of ID. The fees for birth certificates are different in every county and state. See PG. 31.
- Social Security Number/Card. Your Social Security Number is the second critical form of ID to obtain, as it is required for many elements of schooling, financial aid, employment, and other social services. See PG. 38.
- California State ID or Driver’s License. Your state ID card or driver’s license is an important document because it is an official government-issued photo ID that proves your age and identity, and may prove your legal presence in the U.S. You usually need one of these to apply for jobs (and also to open a bank account and vote). See PG. 43.
- Transcripts. If you completed any college courses inside prison or jail, submit a request for that college to send your transcript to the school you would like to attend. Providing transcripts can help to ensure that you don’t lose any college credits you already earned! Keep in mind, different schools have different rules about the schools and programs from which they accept transfer credits. If you have not taken college-level courses yet, you will still need transcripts from high school (if you completed your high school diploma) or your high school equivalency certificate (like the GED, HiSET, or TASC in California) to apply to and enter a college in California.
- Immunization/Vaccination Records. You will need your immunization/ vaccination records to register for school (and some jobs). These records prove that you received certain vaccines and medicines as a child for diseases like polio, chicken pox, tuberculosis, and MMR (measles, mumps, and rubella). See PG. 840
- References and Letters of Recommendation. Many school programs, colleges, and employers request references with an application. References should be employers, supervisors, teachers, or mentors who can describe your relevant attributes and characteristics in a positive manner. References should be people you know well, but should NOT be family members.
- Selective Service Registration (MALES ONLY). If you are a male between the ages of 18 and 25 and live in the U.S., you are required to register for the Selective Service before your 26th birthday. This program provides the Federal Government with a list of men to enlist for military service in the case of a national emergency. See PG. 73 for more information.
- Criminal Record Information. This is one final suggestion for preparing to go back to school... getting a copy of your criminal record and cleaning it up where possible. This can be an important first step to reduce the effect of your conviction history on your education and career goals. But you don’t have to actually do this before you go back to school— you can do it any time! That said, we recommend looking into record-cleaning while you are in school and well before you apply for jobs, if possible! See the UNDERSTANDING AND CLEANING UP YOUR CRIMINAL RECORDS CHAPTER, starting on PG. 931, for more information.

HELPFUL RESOURCES

When you are exploring your job or career options, consider these resources.

- Your correctional facility’s library or your local public library—Look for career planning guides and vocational handbooks.
- California Career Planning Guide—A career guide published by the California Career Resource Network (CalCRN). You can request the guide in writing from: CalCRN—Order Processing, 1430 N. Street, Suite 4503, Sacramento, CA 95814, or by calling (916) 323-6544. If you have Internet access, the guide is available to read or download for free online at: <http://www.californiacareers.info/ccPG.aspx>.
- America’s Job Centers of California offer “interest inventory” tools that can help you explore what kinds of jobs might be right for you.
- CareerOneStop website (<http://www.careerinfonet.org/>)—Under the “Explore Careers” feature, you can take a self-assessment to learn more about your interests and jobs that might be a good fit. You also can browse jobs in different fields and find out what jobs are more available right now.
- California Career Resource Network website (<http://www.californiacareers.info/index.aspx>)—Provides links to several California-focused career-planning resources.

HELPFUL HINTS

Narrow your Career Interests

Once you have a list of potential jobs and careers that you are interested in, you will need to start narrowing it down. You should start by considering your lifestyle and identifying any factors or circumstances that might conflict with a job you are interested in. For example, criminal convictions, family responsibilities, and travel or mobility restrictions can affect whether a particular job or career is a good fit for you.

Research the Job Market

Know what the job market is like in your desired field, in the region where you live, and for workers with different skill levels and education levels.

Questions to ask:

- How hard is it to get a job in the field with or without an educational degree?
- What do employers look for when hiring?
- Are there many job openings in the field, or is it very difficult to get hired?<sup>2709</sup> Is the field growing and expanding?

Resources to use:

- Talk to people in your field of interest, and browse job-search and career guides such as the Occupational Outlook Handbook.<sup>2710</sup>
- Look online: The California Employment & Development Department (EDD) offers an interactive online job guide, which provides information on hundreds of jobs, available at <http://www.labormarketinfo.edd.ca.gov/OccGuides/>.
- You can also use the tools on the CareerOneStop website (see PG. 842 above), and contact professional associations in your fields of interest.<sup>2711</sup>

---

<sup>2710</sup> The U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics releases the Occupational Outlook Handbook and the Career Guide to Industries every two years. These resources offer information about the nature of work, working conditions, training and education, earnings, and job outlook for hundreds of different occupations.

HOW YOUR CRIMINAL RECORD AND INCARCERATION MAY AFFECT YOUR EDUCATIONAL GOALS

IF I AM STILL INCARCERATED. WHAT BARRIERS MIGHT I FACE IN PURSUING MY EDUCATION?

Thankfully, the Federal Bureau of Prisons (BOP), the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation (CDCR), and the California Department of Education (California DOE) have all recognized that providing educational opportunities to people who are incarcerated is critical to rehabilitation and reducing recidivism.<sup>2712</sup> However, the systems are far from perfect, and it is important for you to be aware of the obstacles you may face when you are pursuing an education while incarcerated. Be patient! There is almost always a way to make it work if you are dedicated to reaching your educational goals.

Next, we go through common issues you may face when pursuing your education while incarcerated, followed by suggestions to help you achieve your goals in spite of these challenges.

The programs I need are just not available.

The quality and availability of programs for different educational needs varies greatly from facility to facility. Additionally, even if your facility offers the program you want, there are often long waitlists to get enrolled.

Suggestion: Try supplementing your coursework with a correspondence course or related self-study. If you are waiting to get into a class, find out what the students are learning about—maybe you can get a head start!

The prison mail system is getting in the way.

If you decide to take a correspondence course, or if you want to create your own self-study program, you may find that the prison mail system is frustrating your efforts. Materials and assignments may be slow in getting to you, and some items may not get to you at all because they are not allowed by your facility. All of this could mean significant delays in your studies or prevent you from completing them at all.

Suggestion: Be patient. There is no time limit on most correspondence courses—you can take as long as you need to complete the coursework. The goal is to learn the materials and pass the class, no matter how long it takes. Slow progress is still progress! If you find that your facility is overly restrictive in what materials it will allow in, try writing to the correspondence course administrator to explain your situation. See if he or she can put the materials into a format that your facility will be less likely to object to. (For a list of schools with a history of successfully offering correspondence courses to incarcerated people, see Appendix D, PG. 898.)

I can't afford the cost of programs and/or materials.

For any program or course that is not offered by the facility directly, you will be responsible for the cost of any necessary books, materials, or course fees. If you cannot afford these expenses, you may be prevented from participating in the program or taking the course.

Suggestion: Try to find someone else at your facility who is taking or has taken the course. See if that person is willing to share materials with you or donate them to you when he or she is done. Look into financial aid options to help with your costs. Some forms of financial aid are available while you are incarcerated, and there are even special scholarships to help incarcerated people afford textbooks and materials. (See Paying for Your Education, PG. 881 for more information about these programs.)

I have limited access to technologies.

Distance Education courses commonly require that you have access to certain technologies (audio/video equipment, computers, the Internet) in order to participate in the program (except for traditional mail-only correspondence courses). If you don't have a way to use the media that contains the course content, you won't be able to take the course.

Suggestion: Shop around for a course that doesn't require the use of equipment that you don't have. Try signing up for a program or activity in your facility that will give you access to the technology you need and will allow you to use it in your spare time (make sure you are authorized to do so!).

I am not eligible for financial aid.

Certain types of financial aid are not available to you while you are incarcerated, and other types are not available if you have certain types of convictions.

Suggestion: Apply for the types of financial aid that are available to you while you are incarcerated. Plus, while you are incarcerated, you can apply for financial aid that you will become eligible for once you are released, so the money will be ready for you when you get out. (For more information about financial aid, see Paying for your Education, PG. 881.)

IF I AM UNDER FEDERAL, STATE, OR COUNTY SUPERVISION, WHAT BARRIERS MIGHT I FACE?

While you are under supervision, your parole or probation officer should fully support your efforts to pursue your education.<sup>2713</sup> However, sometimes even the normal conditions of supervision can get in the way, and make it difficult for you to reach your educational goals. Fortunately, there are ways to work around your restrictions and steps you can take to stay on track even while they are in place.

IMPORTANT: If you find that your parole or probation officer is not supportive of your efforts to get an education, or that the conditions of your supervision are so restrictive that they make it impossible for you to pursue your education, this might be a violation of your rights. You should contact an attorney who can advise you and look into getting your restrictive conditions lifted. (For more information, see the PAROLE & PROBATION CHAPTER, beginning on PG. 125.)

Here are some of the common barriers that you might face when trying to pursue your education while you are under supervision, followed by suggestions that can help you achieve your goals in spite of the challenges:

I can't get to school because I have travel limitations.

While you are on supervision you may have restrictions on how far you can travel, or you may not have reliable transportation, or you may have to rely on public transportation. All of these factors may limit where you can go to school.

Suggestion: Look into local schools and programs that are easily accessible for you and do not involve a long commute. You can also explore Distance Education and correspondence course options. You may even be able to use the computers at your local public library to take these courses. (For information on Distance Education see PG. 876 or for correspondence courses, see PG. 878. For information on resources at your local public library, see PG. 838.)

I can't go to the school I want because I can't move out of the area.

Similar to travel restrictions, while you are under supervision, you probably will not be allowed to move outside of the county or the state. If the school you want to go to is in another county or state, you may not be able to attend it.

Suggestion: Again, local schools and programs are your best bet. If you are located in a rural area where your options are severely limited, get started earning credits through Distance Education and correspondence courses. Once you've completed your term of supervision, you can transfer to the school you want to attend and bring your earned credits with you. (For information on Distance Education see PG. 876 or for correspondence courses, see PG. 878. For information on transferring credits, see PG. 875.)

I can't fit school into my schedule because of restrictions on my time ("passes," curfews, work requirements).

While you are under supervision, you may be restricted in the amount of time you can spend attending classes, or by the hours of the day that you are allowed to be away from home to attend. You may have a curfew imposed on you or you may be required to get a "pass" that is only good for a short period of time in order to leave your residence. You may also be required to work a certain number of hours a day, which leaves little time for school.

Suggestion: If you only have a limited amount of time to attend school each day, consider starting part time instead of full time. Take a class or two, and then build your schedule up when you are able. Also, Distance Education programs and correspondence courses are more flexible and can generally be worked around any schedule.

I AM REQUIRED TO REGISTER AS A SEX OFFENDER. HOW THIS WILL AFFECT GOING BACK TO SCHOOL?

If you are required to register as a sex offender, you should still be able to attend the school or program of your choice, but will face some extra requirements. In addition to fulfilling your section 290 registration requirements, you must also register with the campus police department at your school within five days of enrolling in classes.<sup>2714</sup> If there is no police department at your school, you must register with the police department for the city in which the school is located, or if there is no city police department, the county sheriff.<sup>2715</sup> Depending on your underlying conviction, you may need to comply with sex-offender residency restrictions, which could prevent you from living on or near campus (learn more about residency restrictions in the PAROLE & PROBATION CHAPTER on PG 169). Similarly, your conditions of parole, probation or supervision may affect your ability to attend classes. If this is the case, ask your attorney or parole or probation officer for help adding an exception for attending classes. Until an exception is made, you should comply with your conditions first.

Learn more about requirements for people required to register for sex offenses under California Penal Code section 290 (both if you are on parole or are not on parole) in the PAROLE & PROBATION CHAPTER on PG. 163.

IF I HAVE COMPLETED MY SENTENCE, AND I'M OFF SUPERVISION, WHAT BARRIERS MIGHT I STILL FACE?

Once you have completed your sentence, including any term of supervision, most of the barriers that we have discussed so far will no longer exist for you. Unfortunately, your criminal record may still inhibit or interfere with your educational plans. See PG. 851.

HOW TO CHOOSE THE EDUCATIONAL PATH THAT MEETS YOUR SPECIFIC EDUCATIONAL GOALS

ONCE EVERYTHING IS CONSIDERED, HOW DO I START FINDING THE EDUCATIONAL PROGRAM THAT IS RIGHT FOR ME?

Whatever education level you are currently at and whatever your future education plans are, the general steps you should follow when deciding on a program are the same. Use these steps to help guide you through your decision-making process. Along the way, you can talk to people around you who can help. Your Correctional Counselor, the staff in the Education Department, a school or career center counselor, and family and friends can provide advice and support throughout this process.

STEP 1: FIND PROGRAMS THAT FIT YOUR NEEDS

Obviously, you want to find a program that meets the interests that you identified in the very beginning of this chapter (see “Setting Your Educational Goals,” PG. 842), but in order to find a program that truly fits your needs, must consider the practical factors that will impact your educational experience. You should think through the following questions to help you guide your decision:

- Do you want to study full or part-time?
- Is it more important for you to finish the program quickly or do you need to split your class time with other responsibilities?
- Would you prefer to go to a large school or a smaller school?
- Do you need to be in a classroom at all, or is distance learning a better option for you?
- Do you want to go to a public (state-funded) or private (privately owned) school?

STEP 2: RESEARCH SCHOOL/PROGRAM QUALITY

Evaluate the quality of each school or program by following these steps:<sup>2716</sup>

- Check for “accreditation” and other approval.
  - Find out if the school or program is accredited. Accredited schools have been reviewed by an accrediting organization recognized by the U.S. DEP’T OF EDUC. (USDE) and meet established USDE requirements.<sup>2717</sup>
  - If working in the field requires a license and certification, find out if the school or program is approved by the proper state licensing agency and the professional organization that grants certifications.<sup>2718</sup>
  - Search for a school in the Database of Accredited Postsecondary Institutions & Programs (www.ope.ed.gov/accreditation). If a school is accredited, it will show up in the database.

LARGER SCHOOLS V. SMALLER SCHOOLS

Larger schools tend to have more diverse student populations, and a greater variety of extra-curricular activities and clubs. However, you may feel distracted and overwhelmed in this environment, and class size is larger which means less individual attention from the teacher.

- Find data on how well the school's graduates are doing. Find out if the school has a Gainful Employment Disclosure, which should provide information about overall costs for students, average debt, graduation and job placement rates, and which occupations students are prepared for..<sup>2719</sup>
- Talk to people in the school or program. Ask current students, alumni (former students), and teachers how well the school or program prepares students for their field, and whether it helps students find jobs.<sup>2720</sup>
- Ask employers what they think of the program. Find employers in the field that you would want to work for and ask them to rate the program.

WARNING: BE CAREFUL OF SCHOOLS OR PROGRAMS THAT ARE SCAMS:

- Beware of for-profit schools that are out to take your money -- not to give you a quality education. These schools spend lots of money on recruiting, and little on teaching or career services for students. They also tend to charge higher tuition than public community colleges and are likely to leave you with high debt, poor training, and slim chances of finding a job. Following the research steps above will help you avoid these schools.<sup>2721</sup>
- Similarly, beware of "schools" or "programs" that are fake or out to scam you! There are "diploma mills" -- companies selling diplomas. These companies promise to give you a certificate, diploma, or degree for very little work in a very short time. The credentials they offer have little or no value in the job market.<sup>2722</sup>
- Here are some warning signs that a "school" or "program" may be a scam or a diploma mill:
  - It is not accredited, or it is accredited by an agency that is not nationally recognized;
  - It requires little or no academic work, and involves minimal interaction with teachers;
  - It allows you to earn a certificate in an unusually short period of time;
  - It requires that you pay a flat fee for the credential;
  - Its mailing address is a post office box or suite number;
  - Its website ends in ".com" instead of ".edu".<sup>2723</sup>

Why accreditation is important:

- Employers generally respect credentials from an accredited institution with a good reputation, and view job-seekers with such credentials more favorably.
- Credits from a non-accredited school, generally cannot be transferred to an accredited school.
- You must attend an accredited school to be eligible for government financial aid.

STEP 3: APPLY!

CAN I BE DENIED ACCEPTANCE TO AN EDUCATIONAL PROGRAM OR INSTITUTION BECAUSE OF MY CRIMINAL HISTORY?

Sadly, yes. Over the last decade, more and more colleges and universities across the country have begun to look into applicants' criminal histories as part of the admissions process.<sup>2725</sup> In a recent study, two-thirds of the responding institutions reported collecting criminal history information on prospective students.<sup>2726</sup> Most commonly, institutions ask applicants to self-report their criminal history (answer "yes" and then explain). Some schools do conduct full criminal background checks on prospective students and then use the information to deny admission to people with criminal records, or give them conditional admission with added requirements and restrictions—kind of like "admission on probation."<sup>2727</sup>

Unfortunately, there is nothing illegal about what they're doing, and no real legal way to stop them from doing it. The best defense, however, is a good offense—in other words, be proactive! Take steps to clean up your criminal record, participate in rehabilitation programs, and be prepared with answers to questions about your criminal history. (See the UNDERSTANDING & CLEANING UP YOUR CRIMINAL RECORD CHAPTER, beginning on PG. 931 for information and details on how to "clean up" your record.)

The Good News...

Many colleges and universities will let you appeal a denial based on your criminal record, and will work with you to help you get in. Reach out to the Admissions Office staff and to school advisors to show them that you are serious and dedicated to your future. Take advantage of any opportunity to show that your criminal history is just that—history. You can use your personal essay (part of your application), in-person interview, letters of recommendation, and any other supporting documents to show the admissions committee that you are more than just your record.<sup>2728</sup>

Here are some other facts to keep in mind that work in your favor:

- There are no educational opportunities that you are legally banned from because of your criminal record—no matter what is in it;
- California public community colleges, state colleges, and state universities do not ask prospective students about their criminal history (as a policy);<sup>2729</sup>
- Educational institutions are not authorized under California law to request background checks on people,<sup>2730</sup> (however, there is nothing to stop them from asking self-reporting questions on applications).
- Distance Education programs are not likely to ask about your criminal history because they do not have to worry about campus safety (Although there is no evidence that a student with a criminal history poses an increased safety risk,<sup>2731</sup> this is the main reason schools care about your criminal history).
- Many schools will look at your criminal history only to flag you if you are applying to a program in a career field that you're not allowed to work in anyway because of your criminal history (common in medical schools).<sup>2732</sup> (For more information on licensing and employment restrictions, see EMPLOYMENT CHAPTER, PG. 601.)
- Some colleges collect criminal history information, but never actually use it.<sup>2733</sup>

DO I NEED TO DISCLOSE MY JUVENILE RECORD WHEN APPLYING TO DIFFERENT EDUCATIONAL PROGRAMS?

Maybe. Technically, a juvenile “adjudication” is not a criminal conviction. If your case was heard in a juvenile court, and you received a juvenile adjudication, then you were not “convicted” of a crime. So, if the application asks if you were “convicted of a crime” or if you have any “criminal convictions,” and you only have a juvenile adjudication, you can truthfully answer “no.” You do not have to disclose your juvenile adjudication.<sup>2734</sup> However, some applications ask if you have ever been “arrested” or “adjudicated guilty,”<sup>2735</sup> in which case, your juvenile arrest and adjudication count, and need to be reported. Remember, if you were tried as an adult, even if you were under 18, and you pleaded or were found guilty, then you do have a criminal conviction.

IMPORTANT: Even if you are not directly asked to disclose your juvenile record on an application, you may want to anyway. There is always a chance that the admissions committee will find out about a juvenile arrest or adjudication somehow, and think you were being dishonest in not reporting it.<sup>2736</sup> HOWEVER, when you get your juvenile record sealed in California, it’s as if it never existed.<sup>2737</sup> So, if you got your juvenile record sealed, you do not need to disclose anything in it. (For information on sealing your juvenile record, see the UNDERSTANDING & CLEANING UP YOUR CRIMINAL RECORD CHAPTER, PG. 991.)

III. FIGURING OUT YOUR CURRENT EDUCATIONAL LEVEL

WHAT WILL I LEARN?

- What an educational assessment is and how to get one
- What learning challenges are and how to get tested for them

WHAT IS AN “EDUCATIONAL ASSESSMENT”? WHY DO I NEED ONE?

If you’re not sure how far you got in school, or it’s been so long that you’re not sure what your current education level is, your first step is to get an “educational assessment.” An educational assessment is simply a way to find out what your current ability level is in English, reading, writing and math.

It is important to get an educational assessment before you start any educational program so that you don’t waste time re-learning things you already know or taking classes for which you are not prepared.

HOW DO I GET AN EDUCATIONAL ASSESSMENT?

The easiest way to assess your education level is to take an assessment test (also called a placement test). There are two assessment tests that are often used for adults who wish to continue their education: the TABE and the CASAS.<sup>2738</sup>

Don’t worry, these are not the kind of tests you need to study for! These tests measure what academic skills you’re already good at and which ones you need to work on. They help you determine what classes will be the right fit for your current education level.

WHAT DO TABE AND CASAS STAND FOR?

TABE:
Test of Adult Basic Education

CASAS: Comprehensive Adult Student Assessment Systems

WHERE DO I GO FOR A PLACEMENT TEST?

If you’re currently incarcerated:

- In a federal prison: When you get to the federal facility, the staff will review the information from your county jail assessment to determine your needs. If you do not have an educational assessment on file and you have not earned a high school diploma or GED, the facility’s education department should give you an assessment test.<sup>2739</sup> If you did not receive an educational assessment and you think you need one, or if you have any questions about the process, talk to your case manager or your facility’s education department staff.
- In a California state prison: When you get to the state facility, CDCR staff will review your file from county jail to determine if you need an educational assessment. CDCR requires that you have a TABE score on file. If the county jail that did your assessment did not give you a TABE assessment, you will be required to do one when you get to a state facility (even if the jail gave you an assessment using a different test). If this doesn’t happen, ask your correctional counselor to arrange for you to take the TABE, or submit a request to the Testing Coordinator in your facility’s education department. Based on your TABE results, staff will recommend classes that are appropriate for you.<sup>2740</sup> If you already have a high school diploma or GED, CDCR will not do a TABE assessment for you.<sup>2741</sup>
- In a California county jail—Any county jail that offers educational programs will also offer educational assessments.<sup>2742</sup> If you feel that you need an educational assessment, or have questions about your education level, contact the facility’s education staff.

<sup>2738</sup> TABE stands for Tests of Adult Basic Education; CASAS stands for Comprehensive Adult Student Assessment Systems. See U.S. DEP’T OF EDUC., OFFICE OF VOCATIONAL & ADULT EDUC., TAKE CHARGE OF YOUR FUTURE: GET THE EDUCATION AND TRAINING YOU NEED (2012).

NOTE: When you first got to county jail while your case was pending, you likely were given a comprehensive evaluation, which included an assessment of your physical and mental health, your drug history, and your education history.<sup>2743</sup> Based on your answers to questions about your education history, facility staff decided whether or not to do a full educational assessment on you. If you reported that you already have a high school diploma or GED, the staff may have decided not to give you a full educational assessment because you already meet the minimum education-level requirement.<sup>2744</sup> Information from your county jail assessment will be sent to any facility that you are transferred to in the future.

IMPORTANT: If you are about to be released, talk to your counselor to make sure that you get all of your educational assessment information and any other paperwork relating to any educational courses you completed while you were incarcerated.

If you're formerly incarcerated:

- If you have returned to the community after a period of incarceration, it's likely that you had an educational assessment done while you were inside (see above). If you CAN get this information from your facility, you will NOT need to get another assessment once you are out. Contact the last facility that you were in and ask to have all of your assessment and placement information sent to you.
- If you cannot get your assessment information from your facility, or if it has been a very long time since your last assessment or since you last attended school, you may want to get reassessed.
- Visit or contact your local public library or an adult education program or community college near you to get information about placement testing.<sup>2745</sup> Note: You may have to pay a fee for placement testing, although most schools and programs offer free assessments for students who enroll with them.
- If you have Internet access, check these websites for adult education programs near you that may offer testing:

LEARNING CHALLENGES AND SPECIAL NEEDS

WHAT DOES IT MEAN TO HAVE A LEARNING CHALLENGE OR SPECIAL NEED?

Each of us learns in our own way and at our own speed. However, for many people, their brains have particular trouble receiving, storing, processing, retrieving, or communicating information.<sup>2746</sup> The brain's trouble with these things is called a learning challenge (often called a "learning disability"). Unfortunately, many people have struggled in school their whole lives, but do not realize that their difficulties stem from learning challenges that can be overcome. Many people with learning challenges are able to prosper in school if they get the proper guidance, support, and instruction. The most common learning challenges are:

- Attention Deficit/Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD)—inability to control behavior or pay attention, often accompanied by hyperactivity.
- Dyslexia—difficulty reading, understanding, and processing written words.
- Dyscalculia—difficulty with number values, calculations, and math concepts.

There are many other types of learning challenges, including those related to writing, processing visual or sound information, memory, organization, and attention to detail. If certain subjects—or school in general—always seemed difficult for you, you may suffer from a learning challenge that was not discovered. For more information about learning challenges, visit the Learning Disabilities Association of America at <http://ldaamerica.org/adult-learning-disability-assessment-process/>, or the National Association for Adults with Learning Disabilities at <http://naasln.org/>.

HOW DO I FIND OUT IF I HAVE A LEARNING CHALLENGE?

If you think you may have a learning challenge, the first step is to get a professional assessment. A qualified professional can determine the source of your difficulty, and work with you to figure out what special learning tools may help you overcome it. Additionally, if you are diagnosed with a learning disability, schools and programs are required by law to give you special treatment to allow for your special learning needs. This is called giving you an “accommodation.”

Accommodations can include:

- Giving you extra time to take tests;
- Letting you use a calculator; OR
- Providing you with reading or writing assistance.<sup>2747</sup>

If you are currently incarcerated:

- In a federal prison: Federal law requires that if you do not have a high school diploma or GED, you must try to get one while you are incarcerated. Federal facilities will test you for any learning disabilities that might affect your ability to successfully complete a high school degree program.<sup>2748</sup>
- In a California state prison: CDCR does not specifically test for learning disabilities. However, CDCR assumes that you have a learning disability if you get below a certain score on your TABE test (4.0 or below), or if you tell them that you have a learning disability.<sup>2749</sup>
- In a California county jail: Generally, if you get an educational assessment, your facility’s staff will review your results and should be able to determine if you might need a learning disability assessment also.<sup>2750</sup>

IV. LEARNING THE EDUCATIONAL LANDSCAPE

The results of your educational assessment will tell you what educational level you are currently at. Based on that information, you must choose what the right next step is for you. Depending on what your education level is, the next step may be clear, or you may have to decide between several different possible paths. Here are the different types of educational programs you may encounter.

ADULT BASIC EDUCATION (ABE)

If you never went to high school or took any high school-level classes, you will need to start with Adult Basic Education (ABE) classes.

WHAT IS ABE? HOW CAN IT HELP ME?

- Adult Basic Education (ABE) is for adults who want to gain the basic skills and knowledge needed for school, work, and everyday life. You can find free or low-cost ABE classes at adult schools (also called “adult education programs”) across the country.<sup>2752</sup> ABE programs often offer the following kinds of classes:
  - Basic literacy classes help you learn to read and write for the first time.
  - Reading, writing, and math classes help you improve your English language skills and math skills.
  - Life skills classes build your skills in money management, communication, computer use, etc.
  - Pre-GED classes help you prepare to pass the General Education Development exam.
  - English as a Second Language (ESL) classes improve your fluency in English, if it isn’t your native language.<sup>2753</sup>
- Your assessment test (see PG. 853) will tell you what skills you need to improve, and therefore which ABE classes are right for you.

HOW MUCH DO ABE CLASSES COST?

If you’re currently incarcerated:

In a federal prison,<sup>2754</sup> a California state prison,<sup>2755</sup> or a California county jail,<sup>2756</sup> ABE classes (including necessary books and study materials) are offered at no cost to you.

If you’re formerly incarcerated:

Free or low-cost ABE classes may be available in adult schools or community colleges near you. Many schools provide ABE classes for free, and provide books and materials for free too. Others may charge registration and tuition fees (up to $25-50 per semester or per class) and/or require you to buy your own books and materials. Some schools that charge fees may also offer financial aid to low-income students. You will need to check with the individual school or program about fees and financial aid.<sup>2757</sup>

HOW DO I GET INTO ABE CLASSES?

If you’re currently incarcerated:

- In a federal prison: Soon after you enter prison, your unit team and education department staff should give you an assessment test and recommend classes for you. You should then have access to ABE classes. (In federal facilities, ABE is part of a broader program called Adult Continuing Education or ACE). If your assessment shows that you’re not fluent in English, you must be enrolled in ESL, and if you don’t have a high school degree, you must be enrolled in classes designed to lead to a GED or high school diploma.<sup>2758</sup> If you're not enrolled in these classes for some reason, but you want to be, ask your education advisor about getting placed into these classes.<sup>2759</sup>

- In a California state prison: To enroll in any education program, you must have a TABE score on file. (To learn how to sign up for TABE, see PG. 853.) Once you've done the TABE assessment, you should be able to attend ABE classes that are right for your level.<sup>2760</sup> For example, if you're not fluent in English, you must be enrolled in ESL, and if you're reading below a 6th grade level, you must be enrolled in basic literacy classes.<sup>2761</sup> You may also be able to get extra tutoring support through the Voluntary Education Program (VEP).<sup>2762</sup> If you're not enrolled in these programs, but you want to be, ask your correctional counselor or education department staff.
- In a California county jail: Although educational programs vary by county, if your facility offers educational programming, Adult Basic Education will most likely be part of it.<sup>2763</sup>

If you're formerly incarcerated:

- Visit any public library or community bookstore to find free or low-cost ABE study materials, including books for the classroom and self-study books that you can work through on your own.
- Contact any public library, adult school, or community college to ask about ABE classes near you.<sup>2764</sup>

GED VS. HIGH SCHOOL DIPLOMA

A GED is a high school proficiency test, which may allow you to earn a high school equivalency certificate in a more expedited manner or at your own pace. The test requires you to pass 4 parts in different subjects matters at your own pace. However, An adult high school diploma requires more coursework prior to obtaining your diploma. An Adult High School Diploma requires certain coursework to be completed at your own pace. After all the coursework is completed, you will be required to pass an exit exam called California High School Exit Examination. It is important to note that if you have already completed many high school courses required for a diploma program and have only a few left to take, a high school diploma program may be a faster route than a GED.

HIGH SCHOOL CREDENTIALS

If you are ready for (or already taking) high school-level classes, your next step is to earn your high school degree. As an adult student, your high school degree can be a stepping-stone to a "higher education" degree (see PG. 864) or a better job, or simply an important personal achievement. This chapter will explain how you can earn your high school degree.

I'M READY FOR HIGH SCHOOL-LEVEL WORK. WHAT ARE MY OPTIONS?

There are two ways you can earn your high school degree:

1. Take a General Educational Development test to get your GED, OR
2. Complete a high school diploma program.
  - If you have already completed several high school courses, you might want to earn the rest of the credits in a high school diploma program.
  - If you have not completed many (or any) high school courses, getting a GED may be an easier option.
  - NOTE: Both adult high school programs and GED classes are offered for free in federal prisons,<sup>2765</sup> California state prisons,<sup>2766</sup> and California county jails,<sup>2767</sup> and for low or cost free in adult school programs across the state.<sup>2768</sup> You will need to decide which pathway to a high school degree is best for you.

GENERAL EDUCATIONAL DEVELOPMENT (GED) TESTS

WHAT ARE GED TESTS? HOW CAN THEY HELP ME?

A General Educational Development (GED) test is a high school proficiency test for adults who never completed high school and want to earn a high school equivalency (GED) certificate.<sup>2769</sup>

These tests are administered nationally, but three have been specifically approved by the California Department of Education:

- GED® (GED Testing Service);
- HiSET® (ETS); AND
- TASC™ (CTB-McGraw-Hill).<sup>2770</sup>

If you pass a GED test in California, you'll receive a California High School Equivalency Certificate (CAHSEC) (this is the official name for a GED in California).<sup>2771</sup> This certificate is your official proof that you have high school level academic skills. Once you have this certificate, you can apply to colleges and jobs that require a high school credential.<sup>2772</sup> You will need to take and pass the test for several different subject matters (sometimes called “modules”) in order to get your CAHSEC.

AM I ELIGIBLE TO TAKE A GED TEST TO EARN MY CALIFORNIA HIGH SCHOOL EQUIVALENCY CERTIFICATE (CAHSEC)?

In order to take a GED test to get your California High School Equivalency Certificate, you must:

- Not have completed high school;
- Be a resident of California; AND
- Be 18 years or older (or 17 in very special circumstances).<sup>2773</sup>

HOW LONG WILL IT TAKE TO EARN MY CAHSEC?

It depends. Specifically, it will depend on your current skills, pace of study, and individual circumstances. You may choose to study on your own, at your own pace; or you may take one or more GED test preparation classes, which may be designed to get you ready by a specific date.

Compared to a high school diploma program, which may require a longer list of classes, the GED can be a “fast track” to a high school credential (for more information on high school diploma programs, see PG. 861). However, this may or may not be the best fit for you, depending on your needs and learning preferences.<sup>2774</sup>

HOW MUCH WILL IT COST TO EARN MY CAHSEC?

If you're currently incarcerated

in a federal prison,<sup>2775</sup> a California state prison,<sup>2776</sup> or a California county jail,<sup>2777</sup> you should be able to register for a GED test, take GED preparation classes, and get your CAHSEC at no cost to you.

GED VS. CHSPE

The California High School Proficiency Examination is another high school proficiency test that is similar to the GED because it allows people to earn a high school proficiency certificate. However, the CHSPE is intended for minors (people under 18 years old) who are still in high school but wish to finish early in order to go to college or enter the workforce.

NOTE: While GED programs and testing are generally offered at no cost, if you have a high balance in your trust account, your facility may decide to deduct some or all of the costs for certain programs or testing from your account.<sup>2778</sup>

If you're formerly incarcerated:

- When you sign up for a GED test, you must pay a $35 fee for each module (subject-matter tests) you're scheduling. That adds up to a $140 fee if you register for all 4 modules at once.<sup>2779</sup>
- When you pass the test (all 4 modules), you'll get your certificate and official test results by mail at no cost.<sup>2780</sup>
- Studying for the GED might require paying for classes and books, but this could cost little or nothing.

NOTE: Many adult schools and community colleges provide GED classes for free, and provide study materials for free as well. Others may charge registration and tuition fees (up to $25-50 per semester or class). Some schools that charge fees offer financial aid to low-income students. Check with each school about fees and financial aid.<sup>2781</sup>

HOW DO I PREPARE FOR THE GED TEST?

FIRST: Learn as much as you can about the GED test. You should know: What subjects and skills does the test cover? How long does the test take? What do the questions look like? You can get information by contacting the GED Testing Service (see PG. 860 for contact information), by asking teachers or tutors in a GED program, and by looking at GED practice tests and study materials (see below for tips on finding GED programs and study materials). Here is some general information to start with:

- The GED test has 4 modules (subject-matter tests): language arts, math, social studies, and science. You can take all 4 modules on the same day, which takes 7+ hours; or you can schedule them for separate dates.<sup>2782</sup>
- As of January 1, 2014, the GED test is computer-based; but if you're in a prison or jail that doesn't have computers set up, you might be taking the test with a pencil and paper.<sup>2783</sup> To find out which version of the test you'll take, ask your facility's education department staff.

SECOND: Learn as much as possible about your readiness for the test. You should know:

- Which subjects or skills do you feel confident about, and which ones should you focus on improving?
- How comfortable do you feel with the test format?
- Do you need to practice answering test questions more quickly?
- What study methods are best for your current skills and learning style?
- You can get a sense of how ready you are by taking practice GED tests on your own, and/or by working with teachers or tutors in a GED program who can give you feedback about your skills (see below for tips on finding GED programs and study materials, including practice tests).

THIRD: Make use of teaching, tutoring, and study materials that are available to you. Below is general information about potential resources that you may be able to use:

If you're currently incarcerated:

- In a federal prison: When you get to your federal facility, staff will review your county jail assessment information. If you don't have a high school degree, you will be enrolled in classes designed to lead up to a GED or a high school diploma (unless they decide that you must take Adult Basic Education classes first).<sup>2784</sup> Ask your education advisor if you have questions about enrollment.

<sup>2779</sup> You can get a fee discount when you register to retake parts of the GED test. You get up to 2 discounted retakes for each subject module. For details, visit GED TESTING SERV., 2014 California, www.gedtestingservice.com/testers/policy\_ca#price.

However, you will have to pay for additional copies of your results (called GED transcripts). - In a California state prison: If you don't have a high school credential, you can enroll in GED classes if your TABE scores qualify you.<sup>2785</sup> You may also be able to get extra tutoring support through the Voluntary Education Program (VEP).<sup>2786</sup> Ask your correctional counselor or education department staff about enrolling in GED classes or VEP. (Remember, before you enroll in GED or VEP, you must have a TABE score on file.<sup>2787</sup> See PG. 853 for information about the TABE and getting an educational assessment).
- In a California county jail: If your educational assessment scores qualify you for GED courses, your facility should enroll you if they offer these courses.<sup>2788</sup> If not, you can contact community service organizations to request materials. See Appendix B, PG. 891 for a list of organizations that provide GED materials.

IMPORTANT: If you are in county jail awaiting transfer to a federal or state facility, you will NOT be allowed to take anything with you, including any books or other materials related to your educational programming, when you are transferred. You will need to gather all of your materials ahead of time and mail them to someone on the outside before you are transferred. That person can then mail your materials back to you at your new facility.<sup>2789</sup>

NOTE: Even though most facilities in California at the federal, state, and county level offer GED classes, often there are long waiting lists to get in, or they are offered in “cycles” (which means that if you miss the beginning of the cycle, you cannot enroll until the next one). If you cannot enroll in a GED class for any reason, you should try to begin studying on your own. Check your facility’s library for GED “prep” books and materials. These resources will walk you through lesson plans, and usually contain sample questions and practice tests.<sup>2790</sup> They can also be ordered through most book distributors. Check with your facility for a list of book distributors that are approved to send materials to inmates. There are also a number of community adult literacy programs and other service organizations that will send books and materials to incarcerated people for free. You can contact these organizations to request the study materials you need. For a list of organizations that provide books and materials to incarcerated people, visit Urbana Campaign to Prisoners at <http://www.books2prisoners.org/partnerships.php> or see Appendix B, PG. 891.

If Your Release Date Interferes with your GED Program in Prison or Jail:

If you are preparing for a GED test while incarcerated and find out that you will be released before you finish your class or program, ask your GED teacher for a “progress report.” This report will show exactly where you are in the process, so that you can pick up your studies in the same place after your release.<sup>2791</sup>

If you're formerly incarcerated:

- Visit your local America's Job Center of California for information on GED programs in your area (see PG. 838 for information on finding your local America's Job Center of California).
- Contact your local public library, adult school, or community college to ask about free or low-cost GED classes near you.<sup>2792</sup>
- If you have Internet access, search online for GED programs near you. Try these resources to start:
  - California Adult Schools: www.californiaadultschools.org/cas/
  - California Adult Education Provider Directory: www.otan.us/caeproviders/
  - California Community College Finder at www.californiacommunitycolleges.cccco.edu/maps/map.asp
- Contact the GED Testing Service for information and resources:
  - Call 1-800-626-9433 to get information about GED classes or test centers near you; or to request a practice test that you can score by yourself.
  - Call 1-877-392-6433 if you have specific questions about how the computer-based test works.<sup>2793</sup>
  - Visit <http://www.gedtestingservice.com/ged-testing-service>.

I'M READY TO TAKE A GED TEST. HOW DO I SIGN UP?

If you're currently incarcerated:

- In a federal prison: Ask your education advisor to sign you up. You should be able to take the test if the education staff thinks you're ready based on your most recent assessment and/or your current work in class.<sup>2794</sup>
- In a California state prison: First, sign up with your facility's testing coordinator to take a GED predictor test. Depending on your score, you may be scheduled for the next available GED test date at your facility, or you may be enrolled in a GED preparation program for further study.<sup>2795</sup> Ask your correctional counselor or education department staff if you have questions about GED classes, VEP, or the GED predictor test.
- In a California county jail: Ask the education staff at your facility to sign you up to take the test the next time it is offered (if it is offered at your facility).

If you're formerly incarcerated:

- Create an online account at www.ged.com, and then sign up for a specific test date at a specific GED test center. To complete your registration, you must pay the fee ($35 per test module) using a credit card.
- To find out what GED test centers are near you, call the GED Testing Service at 1-800-626-9433.<sup>2796</sup> If you have Internet access, you can also use the search tool on the GED Testing Service website,<sup>2797</sup> or visit the GED test center directory on the California Department of Education website at <http://www.cde.ca.gov/ta/tg/gd/gedtestcntrs.asp>.<sup>2798</sup>

GENERAL TIPS

- You may want to register for just 1 or 2 test modules at a time if you can't afford the full fee or if you want to give yourself time off between studying for the different subjects.<sup>2799</sup>
- To take the test in California, you must provide state-issued ID<sup>2800</sup> and proof of California residency.<sup>2801</sup> Before registering, ensure that you will have these documents on your test date. (You do not have to be a U.S. citizen or have a SSN to take the GED.<sup>2802</sup>)
- If you have more questions, contact the GED office at (916) 445-9438 or gedoffic@cde.ca.gov. If you have Internet access, you can also find information posted online by the California Department of Education<sup>2803</sup> and the GED Testing Service.<sup>2804</sup>

GED VS. HIGH SCHOOL DIPLOMA

Compared to a GED program, which may focus on preparing you to answer test questions quickly, a high school diploma program requires you to complete many classes that are part of a high school education. Required course subjects include: English (reading, writing, literature); math (algebra, geometry); natural science (biology, ecology, physics); social science (history, civics, economics); humanities (art, religion); and electives (health, media literacy).

ADULT HIGH SCHOOL DIPLOMA PROGRAMS

This section will help you decide whether an adult high school diploma program is a good option for you. You'll also learn how to locate and sign up for an adult high school diploma program that meets your needs.

<sup>2794</sup> If you don't have a high school credential, you must be enrolled in a literacy class; and you must participate until you've spent 240 hours in class or until you earn your GED, whichever comes first. 28 C.F.R. § 544.70-75; see U.S. DEP'T JUSTICE FED. ## WHAT IS AN ADULT HIGH SCHOOL DIPLOMA PROGRAM? HOW CAN IT HELP ME?

These diploma programs are for adults who didn't finish high school, and who want to complete the courses normally required for high school graduation (instead of taking a GED or high school equivalency test).<sup>2805</sup> High school diploma programs are offered in most jails and prisons, and in adult schools and community colleges throughout California.<sup>2806</sup>

In most adult high school diploma programs, you can choose to enroll in traditional classes, or to complete courses at your own pace through individual study and regular check-ins with teachers.<sup>2807</sup> In addition, some programs also allow you to complete correspondence courses through mail or email with teachers (for details on distance learning, see PG. 876; for correspondence programs, see PG. 878). After completing all of the required courses, you will have to pass an "exit" exam, called the California High School Exit Examination (CAHSEE) to receive your high school diploma.<sup>2808</sup> All students in California public schools must pass the CAHSEE before they are awarded a high school diploma. This includes people who earn their diploma while incarcerated.

HOW MUCH TIME WILL IT TAKE TO EARN MY HIGH SCHOOL DIPLOMA?

It depends. Specifically, it will depend on your current skills, pace of study, life circumstances, and learning preferences. Depending on the program you enroll in, you might work toward your diploma individually, at your own pace; or you might work with a teacher who creates assignment deadlines and a long-term schedule for you.<sup>2809</sup>

GENERAL TIPS

If you've already completed many of the courses required for a diploma program and have only a few left to take, an adult high school diploma program is likely a faster route for you than the GED.

If you haven't completed many high school courses, the GED will probably be a faster path to your high school equivalency certificate.

But consider, if you have not taken many high school courses yet, and you have some time to spend on your high school education, you might prefer a diploma program because it can be an opportunity to explore new subjects and skills that you won't learn in a GED program.<sup>2810</sup>

WARNING: Watch out for scam programs, which will try to charge you money for a fake diploma. See PG. 863 for details.

HOW MUCH MONEY WILL IT COST TO EARN MY HIGH SCHOOL DIPLOMA THROUGH A PROGRAM?

If you're currently incarcerated:

- In a federal prison: As part of the Literacy Program, high school level classes should be available at no cost to you. However, not all facilities offer a high school diploma program; some offer GED study courses instead.<sup>2811</sup>
- In a California state prison: A high school diploma program should be available at no cost to you.<sup>2812</sup>
- In a California county jail: If your facility offers a high school diploma program, it should be available at no cost to you.<sup>2813</sup>

NOTE: While high school diploma programs are generally offered at no cost, if you have a high balance in your trust account, your facility may decide to deduct some or all of the cost for some programs from your account.<sup>2814</sup>

If you're formerly incarcerated:

Adult high school diploma programs may be available in adult schools or community colleges near you for free or at low cost. Many schools provide adult high school classes for free, and provide books and materials for free as well. Others may charge registration and tuition fees. (However, schools that charge fees may also offer financial aid to low-income students. Check with each school about fees and financial aid.)<sup>2815</sup> Also, community adult literacy programs may offer high school diploma courses and tutoring for free. (For a list of organizations that may offer this service, see Appendix A, PG. 890.)

If you choose a distance learning or correspondence program, regardless of whether you're incarcerated or in the community, you may need to pay program fees and buy your own materials (for details about distance learning programs in general, see PG. 876.)

WARNING: Be careful when choosing a high school diploma program. In recent years, the federal government has shut down several degree programs that were charging money for fake diplomas.<sup>2816</sup> These programs are scams. To avoid being scammed by a fake diploma program, watch out for the following clues<sup>2817</sup>:

- If a program lets you get a diploma without taking classes or tests, it is probably fake.
- The program offers free tests or classes, but charges for the diploma itself. This is a dead giveaway that the program is illegitimate.
- The program claims to be affiliated with the federal government. The federal government does not offer high school diploma programs. Only the states approve such programs.

HOW DO I FIND AND ENROLL IN A HIGH SCHOOL DIPLOMA PROGRAM?

If you're currently incarcerated:

- In a federal prison: Soon after you enter prison, your Unit Team or Education Staff should review your assessment (from county jail, see PG. 853) and recommend classes for you. If you don't have a high school credential, the facility will enroll you in literacy classes designed to lead up to a high school diploma (or a GED, if your facility offers a GED program).<sup>2818</sup> Ask your Education Advisor if you have questions about enrolling in classes.
- In a California state prison: If you've completed some high school in the past, and if your current skills are at a high school grade level (9-12), you should be enrolled in the high school diploma program at your facility. Education Department staff will review your high school transcript (if you have one) and TABE scores and decide whether you can enroll.<sup>2819</sup>
- In a California county jail: Check with your jail's education staff to find out whether high school diploma courses are offered and how to enroll.<sup>2820</sup>

NOTE: If you are in a California state facility you may be able to get extra tutoring support through the Voluntary Education Program (VEP). Ask your Correctional Counselor or Education Department staff if you have questions about the diploma program or VEP. Remember, to enroll in any education program, you must have a TABE score on file (see PG. 853).

If you're formerly incarcerated:

- Visit any public library or community bookstore to find free or low-cost high school level study materials, including books you may need for classes, as well as lessons you can work through on your own.
- Contact any public library, adult school, or community college to ask about free or low-cost adult high school diploma programs near you.<sup>2821</sup>

Finding a High School Diploma Program

- TIP 1: Many community colleges offer dual enrollment programs or continuing education programs, which allow you to earn an adult high school diploma or equivalency certificate AND get started on earning college credits at the same time.<sup>2822</sup>
- TIP 2: If you have meaningful school, work, or life experience, find out if you can make it count toward your diploma. Some adult schools or programs might give you credit for past high school work, job training, work experience, community service, military service, or self-study. Ask the individual school or program if it will do this.<sup>2823</sup>

HIGHER EDUCATION OVERVIEW

Once you’ve earned your high school credential, what’s next? It’s time to revisit your long-term educational and career goals. Do you need a certain skill-set or type of training for your desired career field? Do you have to earn a specific degree to practice in your chosen profession? If so, “higher education” might be right for you.

WHAT IS HIGHER EDUCATION?

“Higher education” refers to additional schooling that you take beyond the high school-level, that leads to a professional certification or academic degree, such as a Career and Technical Education (CTE) certificate, associate degree, bachelor’s degree, or graduate or professional degree. If you plan on continuing your education beyond the high school-level, you will need to determine which higher education path fits your needs and goals.

CAREER & TECHNICAL EDUCATION (CTE) PROGRAMS

WHAT IS CAREER AND TECHNICAL EDUCATION?

If you want a skills-based job in a particular career field, you may want to enroll in a CTE program where you focus on learning to do a specific type of work in that field. CTE programs are also called “certificate” or “vocational training” programs.<sup>2824</sup> This chapter will help you think about whether a CTE program is a good choice for you; and, if so, what type of CTE program might be right for you.

TUTORING HELP

Most CTE programs lead to a certificate, but some lead to a college degree. This section focuses on CTE programs that lead to a certificate. If you’re interested in enrolling in a CTE program that leads to a college degree, you will find more helpful information in the following section on college degrees (PG. 867).

HOW CAN A CTE PROGRAM HELP ME?

In California, CTE programs are offered at community colleges, technical colleges, trade schools, vocational schools, at some 4-year colleges—and in many CDCR facilities and county jails. A CTE certification program can be a good path for you if the occupation you want requires a certificate, or if you want to gain practical skills and get into the workforce more quickly. Most CTE certificate programs are designed to get you certified, licensed, and hired in your chosen field directly and efficiently. A certificate can also be a stepping-stone toward a college degree, as some colleges accept certificate program credits and count them as progress toward a college degree.<sup>2825</sup>

WHAT TYPE OF VOCATIONAL PROGRAMS ARE AVAILABLE?

CTE programs commonly cover fields such as: agriculture and natural resources, arts and media, building and construction, education and child/family services, energy and utilities, fashion and design, finance and business, health science and medical technology, hospitality and tourism, information technology, manufacturing and product development, marketing and sales, public services, or transportation services.

IMPORTANT: A certificate is NOT a degree. It's an award that shows you completed an educational or training program after high school. A certificate is also NOT an occupational license or certification, which you may need to do your job, depending on what your field is and where you live.

The cost of earning a certificate through a CTE program may not be worth it in certain fields where jobs are low-wage, unstable, and difficult to get. Also, if employers in your desired field don't always require a certificate, you might consider going straight into the workforce. If employers in your field like to see qualifications other than a certificate, such as hands-on experience or some kind of degree, you might want to pursue those qualifications instead.<sup>2826</sup> For more information on researching the job market in your career field, see EMPLOYMENT CHAPTER, beginning on PG. 832.

NOTE: Usually, community or technical colleges require that you have a high school credential before you begin a CTE program. However, even if you don't have one, you still may be able to enroll. Most community and technical colleges will have classes and support to help you earn your high school credential as well as your CTE certificate. If the CTE program you are interested in is offered at a four-year college or university, you will need to have a high school credential to apply.

HOW MUCH TIME WILL IT TAKE TO EARN A CTE CERTIFICATE?

Many certificate programs can take less than a year to complete, and most are designed to take less than 2 years. However, your total time in a program will depend on the specific program and school you choose and whether you enroll part-time or full time.

HELPFUL HINT CERTIFICATES, LICENSES, AND CERTIFICATIONS

A certificate is not the same as an occupational license or a professional certification. A certificate shows that you have completed a course of study and training in a particular field. Certificates are awarded by CTE programs and many certificate programs can take less than a year to complete, and most are designed to take less than 2 years.<sup>2827</sup> However, your total time in a program will depend on the specific program and school you choose, and whether you enroll part-time or full time in school. After earning a certificate, you may also need to get a license from the state or a certification from the professional organization that regulates your job field.

A license shows that you have the government's permission to practice your occupation. State and local boards and agencies issue licenses.

A certification means that you have demonstrated that you're skilled enough to practice your occupation, usually by passing evaluations and/or documenting a certain amount of work experience. Professional or industry organizations issue certifications.<sup>2828</sup>

HOW MUCH MONEY WILL IT COST TO EARN A CTE CERTIFICATE?

If you're currently incarcerated:

In a federal prison,<sup>2829</sup> California state prison,<sup>2830</sup> or California county jail,<sup>2831</sup> any CTE programs available should be provided at no cost to you (including necessary materials and credentialing fees).

NOTE: While CTE programs are generally offered at no cost, if you have a high balance in your trust account, your facility may decide to deduct some or all of the cost of the program from your account.<sup>2832</sup>

If you're formerly incarcerated:

Your costs will vary based on your school, program, and course load. If you're a resident of the state where you enroll, the cheapest options will likely be programs offered at community colleges or technical colleges, which are public schools. Average tuition and fees per year are about $4,000 for in-state students at public 2-year

HOW DO I FIND CTE PROGRAMS?

If you're currently incarcerated...

In a federal prison: Every federal prison offers a different range of Occupational Education (OE) programs, which may include certificate programs as well as programs leading to associate's degrees.<sup>2835</sup> Soon after you enter prison, your Unit Team and Education Staff should give you an assessment and recommend programs for you. If you have no stable work history or training record, you may be assigned to an OE program.<sup>2836</sup> If you haven't been assigned to an OE program and would like to be, ask your Unit Team to place you in one. Your Unit Team will decide what OE course(s) may be right for you.<sup>2837</sup>

Notes on eligibility & timing: Certain OE programs may be open to you only if you have a high school credential or are working toward one.<sup>2838</sup> Also, if you need job training but spaces are limited, you might not be placed in an OE program until the last several months of your sentence, to ensure that your training is current when you're released.<sup>2839</sup>

In a California state prison: Every CDCR facility provides a different range of CTE programs, all accredited by a nationally recognized agency. (For information on accreditation, see PG. 849.) Since these CTE programs are properly accredited, you should be able to transfer credits from these programs to a college degree program. (For information on transferring credits, see PG. 875.) There are no eligibility or testing requirements for CTE programs in CDCR facilities, but you will be limited by what programs your facility has available.<sup>2840</sup> Ask your Correctional Counselor about what CTE programs are offered and how you can sign up.

NOTE ON THE TRANSITIONS PROGRAM: Some CDCR facilities offer the Transitions Program, which is a 4-5 week program that provides job readiness and money management skills, information about community programs, and connections to social services in the county where you'll be living. If your facility has this program and you're eligible, you may be assigned to participate at some point during the last 6 months before your release.<sup>2841</sup>

In a California county jail: Because programs vary greatly across county facilities, you will need to check with your facility's education department to see if CTE programs are available.

If you're formerly incarcerated

CTE programs are offered at community and technical colleges as well as four-year colleges. To find CTE programs in your area:

HOW DO I CHOOSE A CTE PROGRAM?

If you want to make an informed decision, it's important to research the qualifications required for the jobs you want, the quality of the schools you're considering, and the current state of the job market.<sup>2842</sup> (For tips on researching the qualifications you need for the specific job(s) you want, see Setting Your Goals, PG. 842.) When you know what skills and training you need, you can begin evaluating individual CTE programs to find the one that is right for you. If you have decided that a CTE program is the best path for you, see Choosing Your Education Path, PG. 849, for tips on evaluating and choosing a program.

HOW DO I ENROLL IN A CTE PROGRAM?

Generally, to enroll in a CTE program at a community or technical college, you just need to fill out the paperwork and register for classes. Most programs have "open admissions," meaning that if you meet the educational requirements, you will be admitted automatically, if space is available. For programs that are very popular, you may have to submit an application and be accepted to the program before you can enroll (admission is not automatic). To learn more about program requirements and enrollment policies, you can call the admissions office of the school you are interested in. This information is also usually available on the school's website.

Four-year colleges generally require you to submit an application for admission and be accepted to the school before you can enroll and register for classes. Applications often are available online (and can be submitted online), or you can call the school's admissions office and ask them to send you an application by regular mail or email. There is usually a nonrefundable fee for applying, but you may be able to get the fee waived.

Other Options for Career and Technical Training:

- Apprenticeships: These are usually offered through trade unions that pay you a salary while you learn a specific trade or profession. Apprenticeships allow you to gain knowledge and hands-on experience in your chosen field, under the guidance of more experienced employees.<sup>2843</sup> Many federal and state facilities offer apprenticeships through contracts with colleges and technical schools, and many are registered through the Department of Labor's Office of Apprenticeship.<sup>2844</sup> For more information on apprenticeship programs, check these resources:
  - U.S. Department of Labor's Office of Apprenticeship at <http://www.doleta.gov/oa/>;
  - CareerOneStop at <http://www.careeronestop.org>.
- Job Corps: Job Corps offers young people aged 16-24 the chance to get a free education and skills training while being paid a monthly allowance. Usually Job Corps participants live at a Job Corps residence while getting their training. To learn more about Job Corps and find the Job Corps center near you, call 1 (800) 733-5627 or go to <http://www.jobcorps.dol.gov>.

COLLEGE & UNIVERSITY ACADEMIC DEGREES

If you have the desire, time, and financial resources to explore a wider range of academic subjects and skills, you may want to pursue a college degree. In college you can study a diverse range of topics, instead of focusing only on the skills you need for one type of job; and you can develop a broad foundation of writing and critical thinking skills to sharpen your mind and prepare you for a wide variety of careers.<sup>2845</sup> A college degree also may help you qualify for more secure, higher-status, and better-paying jobs.<sup>2846</sup>

If you're currently incarcerated:

You likely do not have access to in-person college programs, but you may be able to pursue a college degree through Distance Education. (See PG. 876 for information on Distance Education programs.)

If you're formerly incarcerated:

You can pursue a college degree at a community or junior college, a technical school, or 4-year college or university. While college can be expensive,<sup>2847</sup> there are ways to reduce and supplement the expense (see Paying for College, PG. 881).<sup>2848</sup>

Depending on your career goals, your life situation, and your access to resources like financial aid, college may or may not be the best option for you now. The following sections of this chapter will provide details about the different types of college degree programs so that you can make an informed decision.

WHAT ARE THE DIFFERENT KINDS OF ACADEMIC DEGREES?

There are three main categories of college degrees:

- Associate degrees
- Bachelor's degrees
- Graduate Academic and Professional degrees.

Different degrees are awarded in different subject and career areas, and they all have different requirements. For some degrees you have to earn another degree first, before you can pursue them. The various degrees are discussed in detail below.

ASSOCIATE DEGREE PROGRAMS

WHAT IS AN ASSOCIATE DEGREE?

An associate degree (sometimes called a “two-year” degree) is an undergraduate college degree that is awarded by community and junior colleges (sometimes called “two-year colleges”), technical schools, and some four-year colleges and universities. Associate degree programs are designed to take two years of full-time study to complete (but part-time students may take longer), and generally require students to take various general education courses like English, math, and science. An associate degree can be a stepping-stone toward earning a bachelor's degree or can prepare you to enter the workforce directly.<sup>2850</sup>

WHAT ARE SOME OF THE ADVANTAGES OF PURSUING AN ASSOCIATE DEGREE?

An Associate Degree is a great option for many people because:

- It can be earned in only 2 years;
- It costs less than a 4-year degree;
- It gets you into the workforce faster;
- The programs are more flexible, and can be scheduled around work or other obligations;
- It can be a low-cost stepping stone to a 4-year college or university, if you transfer credits (see PG. 875 for more information on transferring credits).

WHAT TYPES OF ASSOCIATE DEGREES ARE THERE?

There are two categories of associate degrees:

- Associate of Arts (AA)/Associate of Science (AS)
- Associate of Applied Arts (AAA)/Associate of Applied Science (AAS).

AA and AS degree programs tend to be designed for students who eventually want to earn a bachelor's degree at a four-year college or university. Therefore, these programs focus more on preparing students for higher levels of academic study. The courses offered and credits earned in an AA or AS program are meant to be easily transferred to a four-year college. (See PG. 875 for information on transferring credits.)

The “Applied” degrees (AAA and AAS), on the other hand, are more geared toward preparing students for a particular career. Therefore, these programs emphasize more technical and vocational skills. AAAs and AASs are the college degree equivalent of CTE certificates.<sup>2851</sup>

HOW CAN I DECIDE IF AN ASSOCIATE DEGREE IS RIGHT FOR ME, AND WHICH TYPE I SHOULD GET?

An AA or AS degree may be a good choice if your main priority is not just to gain practical job skills, but also to sharpen your academic skills, explore diverse areas of study, and engage in critical analysis. They may also be a good choice if you intend to continue on to get your bachelor's degree, but you want to save on costs. When you transfer your AA or AS credits to a four-year college, you can get up to half of the required credits for your bachelor's degree at a fraction of the cost.<sup>2852</sup>

An AAA or AAS degree may be a good choice for you if you want to learn technical skills for a specific occupation, but you also want to have a college degree (not just a certificate). These degrees are also good for you if you want the technical, practical skills to work now, but you think that you might eventually want to get a higher college degree.<sup>2853</sup>

NOTE: In California, all public (state-funded) universities are required to guarantee a number of openings for students transferring from California Community Colleges (one transfer student for every two freshman admitted). This means that you have a good chance of getting into a California State University or a University of California school if you transfer in from a community college.<sup>2854</sup>

HOW MUCH WILL IT COST TO EARN AN ASSOCIATE DEGREE?

Comparing Types of Associate Degrees:
AA/AS may be right for you if...	AAA/AAS may be right for you if...
You want to go on to earn a bachelor's degree;	You want a college degree;
You want to transfer your credits to a 4-year college or university;	You want a college degree;
You want to sharpen your academic skills;	You want to get into the workforce sooner;
You want to get into the workforce sooner	You want to get into the workforce

The cost of earning an Associate degree varies greatly depending on the institution that you enroll in.

- In California, public community colleges are among the most economical choices for earning a college degree. Technically, there is no tuition, however, there are enrollment fees that are charged per credit-unit that you take.
  - At the time of publication, the enrollment fee for California residents is $46 per credit-unit.<sup>2855</sup>
  - This per-unit enrollment fee is for California residents and is the same for all public community colleges across the state.
  - Full-time enrollment is generally 12 credit-units per week (1 credit-unit = 1hour of class time), but you can take more or less if you like. (You may be eligible for a waiver of this fee, see PG. 886 for information on waiving community college enrollment fees.)
- Private community colleges and four-year colleges are the most expensive options (costs vary greatly, but may be several thousands of dollars).

IMPORTANT: Tuition or per-unit fees do not include other costs associated with enrolling in a college program such as books, school supplies, and transportation.

HOW DO I FIND AN ASSOCIATE DEGREE PROGRAM?

If you're currently incarcerated:

In a federal prison: Federal correctional facilities offer Associate degrees through the Occupational Education Program.<sup>2856</sup> Programs vary by facility, so check your Unit Team to find out what Associate degree programs are available in your facility.<sup>2857</sup>

In a California state prison: Currently, San Quentin State Prison is the only CDCR facility that offers an in-facility Associate degree program.<sup>2858</sup> If you are housed in any other facility, your only options may be Distance Education (see PG. 876 for more information) or correspondence courses (see PG. 878 for more information).

In a California county jail: Education programs vary greatly across county facilities. You will need to check with your facility's education department to see if any Associate degree programs are offered. (Note: Because of the time commitment required by college degree programs, many county jail facilities, which generally house people only for limited periods of time, may not offer them. However, this may be changing as people who are sentenced under realignment find themselves serving more extended county jail sentences.)

If you're formerly incarcerated:

- Research schools and programs at your local public library
- Visit an America's Job Center of California (see PG. 838 for information on America's Job Centers).
- Search for your local community college on the Internet:
  - California Community Colleges Chancellor's Office at <http://www.cccco.edu/>.
  - American Association of Community Colleges at <http://www.aacc.nche.edu>.

BACHELOR'S DEGREE PROGRAMS

WHAT IS A BACHELOR'S DEGREE? HOW CAN IT HELP ME?

Bachelor's degrees are offered by four-year colleges and universities. Bachelor's degree programs are designed to take four years of full-time study to complete, however, many students choose to complete them in five years, and part-time students may take even longer. Students are required to take a variety of general education courses, plus several courses in a specific area of study called a major, that the student chooses. A bachelor's degree can be a stepping-stone toward earning a graduate or professional degree, and is required for many high-salary, high-status jobs.<sup>2859</sup>

WHAT TYPES OF BACHELOR’S DEGREES ARE THERE?

There are two main kinds of Bachelor’s degrees: Bachelor of Arts (BA) degrees and Bachelor of Science (BS) degrees.<sup>2860</sup> BAs are awarded for programs of study that focus on areas within the liberal arts, humanities, or social studies (such as English, Psychology, or History). BSs are awarded for programs of study that focus on areas within the “hard” sciences, such as Math, Biology, Chemistry, or Physics.<sup>2861</sup>

HOW MUCH WILL IT COST TO EARN A BACHELOR’S DEGREE?

Bachelor’s degrees from four-year colleges and universities are expensive. They can cost in the hundreds of thousands of dollars. Most people require financial assistance from federal or state student aid programs, or from private organizations to pay their tuition. (For information on Paying for College, see PG. 881.)

A NOTE ON PUBLIC VS. PRIVATE SCHOOLS

Both public and private colleges and universities offer Bachelor’s degree programs. Public schools are partially funded by government taxes and usually charge lower tuition (especially for in-state residents). They tend to have a larger student population and larger class sizes. Private schools are generally more expensive, and tend to focus on keeping classes small and exposing students to many different subjects.<sup>2862</sup>

A NOTE ABOUT IN-STATE TUITION: Most schools require that you have lived in California for a certain period of time in order to get the discounted “resident” or “in-state” tuition rate.<sup>2863</sup> Some schools will consider time that you spent incarcerated in California towards this requirement. Check with your school’s admissions and financial aid offices to find out if your period of incarceration qualifies you as a California resident under that school’s policy.

HOW DO I FIND A BACHELOR’S DEGREE PROGRAM?

If you’re currently incarcerated

- Earn college credits. Unfortunately, at the time of this publication, there currently are no four-year Bachelor’s degree programs offered in federal, state, or county correctional facilities in California, and correspondence courses that advertise four-year degrees should not be trusted. However, you can earn college credits while you are incarcerated which can be applied toward a four-year degree after you are released. (For information on how to earn college credits while you are incarcerated, see Associate Degree Programs, PG. 868, and Distance Education, PG. 876. For information on how to transfer college credits that you earn while you are incarcerated, see PG. 875. For information on how to tell if a school or program is a scam, see PG. 849.)
- Plan and Prepare. There is plenty you can do to plan and prepare for your post-release education while you are still incarcerated. You can research schools (see PG. 864), complete applications (see PG. 856), take placement tests (see PG. 853), and apply for financial aid (see PG. 881)

<sup>2860</sup> Most Bachelor’s degrees fall into one of these two categories, however there are a number of specialized Bachelor’s degrees such as Bachelor’s of Fine Arts and Bachelor’s of Architecture.

COLLEGE PROGRAMS FOR FORMERLY INCARCERATED STUDENTS

Project Rebound is an academic support program that helps currently and formerly incarcerated people enroll and stay in college. Originally founded at San Francisco State University, it has since expanded to eight California State University campuses.<sup>2864</sup> Project Rebound answers letters from people incarcerated across California and helps them apply to college before they're released. Once people enroll in college, Project Rebound connects them to supportive resources on campus and in the community.<sup>2865</sup>

APPLYING TO COLLEGE

If you have decided that you want to apply to a four-year college or university, there are several documents you will need to gather or prepare, as well as other tasks you will need to complete before you apply.<sup>2867</sup>

WHAT WILL I NEED TO APPLY FOR COLLEGE?

You will need the following important documents:

- The Application (see PG. 874)
- Fee Payment or Fee Waiver Form (see PG. 874)
- High School Credential (see PG. 857)
- Transcripts for any high school or college coursework you've done (see PG. 857)
- Letters of Recommendation and personal references (see PG. 875)
- College Admissions Test Scores (see PG. 874)
- Immunization/Vaccination Records (see PG. 840)

The Application:

Depending on the program and the school you are applying to, there may be a formal school-specific application you must complete or there may be a general application that is good for several schools. This will depend on the school you are applying to, so be sure to ask whether there is a specific application you must complete or if there is a general application available.

Fee Payment or Fee Waiver:

Almost all schools require a payment in order to process your application. This fee may range anywhere from $20–80. But don't be discouraged! Many schools also offer fee waivers. To see whether or not you qualify for a fee waiver, first look at the school's website and see if you can find information as to how to apply for a fee waiver. You may also call the school's admission office and ask for one directly. But be sure to do this EARLY as many schools may run out of the number of fee waivers they can provide to students. If you receive a fee waiver, you do not have to pay this application fee but instead will include proof of the waiver with your application.

College Admissions Tests:

SAT & ACT. The SAT and ACT are standardized college admissions tests. Almost everyone who applies to a four-year college or university must take one of these tests. Schools use applicants' scores on these exams to make admissions decisions. The SAT covers math, reading, and writing, and focuses more on vocabulary and how well you can reason. It's more popular with private schools, and with schools on the East and West coasts.<sup>2868</sup> The ACT covers math, English, science, and reading, and focuses more on how much you know about the subjects being tested. It's more popular with public schools, and with schools in the South and the Midwest. (See Appendix C, PG. 893, for more details on ACT policies.)<sup>2869</sup>

HOW MUCH DOES IT COST TO TAKE THESE TESTS?

The registration fee for the 2015-2016 SAT is $54.50 for the full test, and $43.00 if you do not take the essay portion.<sup>2870</sup> The registration fee for the ACT is $54.50 for the full test, and $38 if you do not take the writing portion.<sup>2871</sup> Before you sign up for either test, confirm which test the school you are applying to accepts, and whether it requires you to take the full test.

HOW DO I SIGN UP FOR THESE TESTS?

If you're currently incarcerated:

- The SAT has no established procedure for allowing people who are incarcerated to take the test. You should check with your facility's Education Department to see if you can arrange to take the SAT.<sup>2872</sup> On the other hand, the ACT specifically allows people who are incarcerated to register for and take the test. This is called "arranged testing." To ask for arranged testing, you will need to get and submit

WHAT IF I CAN'T TAKE IT BECAUSE I AM INCARCERATED?

If you are unable to take the SAT or ACT while you are incarcerated, you can still study and prepare for either test so that you are ready to be tested as soon as you are released.

HOW DO I PREPARE FOR THE SAT OR THE ACT?

If you're currently incarcerated:

- Check your facility's library for SAT and ACT test preparation guides and materials.
- The College Board (the company that makes the SAT) offers free sample tests and questions for study preparation. You can request these materials by writing to: College Board SAT Program, P.O. Box 025505, Miami, FL 33102 or by calling SAT Program Customer Service at (866) 756-7346.
- ACT offers a free guide for preparing for the test. You can request a copy by writing to: ACT Student Services, 2727 Scott Blvd., minizip 46, P.O. Box 414, Iowa City, IA 52243-0414 or by calling ACT at (319) 337-1270.
- You can purchase test preparation guides and materials for both tests from approved online vendors such as amazon.com and Barnes & Noble.

If you're formerly incarcerated:

- Check your local library for SAT and ACT test preparation guides and materials.
- You can also buy these guides at almost any bookstore and from online retailers such as amazon.com. You can also check used bookstores that may sell previous versions of these guides at a discount. (NOTE: These tests are constantly changed and updated. To make sure that you're studying the right material, do not buy guides that are more than a couple of years out of date.)
- Free SAT resources, including practice tests and questions, are available online at www.sat.collegeboard.org/practice/.
- ACT's free test preparation guide is available online at <http://www.actstudent.org/testprep/>.

LETTERS OF RECOMMENDATION

Letters of recommendation positively describe your character traits, accomplishments, and qualifications, and recommend that you be accepted to a program, school, or job. They can be written by past employers, case managers, supervisors, community leaders, or teachers (but not your family members). They should include each person's relationship to you, company name and job title, and contact information.<sup>2877</sup>

EARNING & TRANSFERRING COLLEGE CREDITS—GOOD OPTIONS IF YOU ARE INCARCERATED

If you completed any Career & Technical Education (CTE) or college-level courses, whether before, during or after your incarceration, you may be able to apply the credit you earned from those courses toward a CTE certificate or a college degree. This is called "transferring" credits.<sup>2878</sup> The new school you enroll in recognizes the work you did previously (either while incarcerated or at your previous school), and does not make you retake those classes in order to earn your degree.<sup>2879</sup>

Generally, CTE programs and community colleges will accept credit from correspondence courses or other programs you completed while incarcerated. Four-year colleges and universities may accept some of these credits, depending on the program. Four-year colleges generally accept transfer credits earned at community colleges. Each school will have a different policy for applying transfer credits toward a certificate or degree program.

NOTE: Generally, you must have completed the course within the last 10 years and earned a C or better for a school to give you credit for it. Also, you cannot transfer credits from a non-accredited program to an accredited program. (See PG. 856 for information on “accreditation.”)

HOW CAN I FIND OUT IF MY CREDITS WILL TRANSFER?

The best way to make sure that your credits will transfer to your new school is to call or write to the new school’s Registrar Office directly and ask. There are also online resources that may help you find out if and where you can transfer your credits. These include:

- ASSIST (<http://www.assist.org/>)—shows how credits earned at one public California college can be applied when transferred to another.
- CollegeTransfer.net (<https://www.collegetransfer.net/>)—walks you through transfer options at all education levels.

HOW DO I TRANSFER MY CREDITS?

Once you make sure that your credits will transfer to the school you want to attend, the transfer process is simple. When you are applying to your new school, you will need to request your official transcripts from any college or program that you attended in the past, and have them sent to your new school.<sup>2880</sup> You must request your official transcripts—the official record of your grades from the school’s administration records. To find out how to request your official transcripts, contact the admissions and records office of the school you attended.

NOTE: If you earned college credit while incarcerated, you will need to contact the school that provided the course or program to request a copy of your official transcripts. You do not get them from the facility where you were incarcerated.<sup>2881</sup>

DISTANCE EDUCATION

WHAT IS DISTANCE EDUCATION?

Distance Education (also called Distance Learning) is an education program that uses various technologies to deliver instruction to students who are separated from the teacher. It is a way for students to take a formal course of study (high school, vocational, or college-level) without having to travel to the classroom. Although the students and the teachers are separated, the hallmark of Distance Education is regular and substantial interaction between them.<sup>2882</sup> Distance Education courses usually incorporate multiple forms of media, including printed materials, CDs or DVDs, audio recordings, telephone communication, audio or video conferencing, email, and Web-casts and Internet streaming. There are two types of Distance Education interaction modes: “synchronous” and “asynchronous” instruction.<sup>2883</sup>

HOW DO THE TWO TYPES OF DISTANCE EDUCATION WORK?

Synchronous instruction means that all of the students and the instructor(s) participate in the class at the same time, even though they are not in the same place. This is usually done through “live” teleconferencing, video conferencing web conferencing, or Internet chats. The class is given at a set time, and everyone calls or logs in at that time to participate. Synchronous courses can offer a level of interactivity similar to that of a traditional face-to-face class.<sup>2884</sup>

Asynchronous instruction does not require that the student(s) and the instructor(s) participate at the same time. Students choose when they want to study the course materials or interact with the instructor(s). Asynchronous instruction is more flexible than synchronous instruction, but offers less interactivity because it is not “live.” In asynchronous instruction, course materials and communications are often delivered via CDs or DVDs, by traditional mail correspondence, or through e-mails, listservs and Internet downloads.<sup>2885</sup>

ARE THERE BENEFITS TO DISTANCE EDUCATION?

PROS:	CONS:
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Classes and programs are available to students who cannot attend in person</li> <li>• Saves students time because they don't have to travel to classes</li> <li>• Often cheaper than location-based classes</li> <li>• Often offers more flexible scheduling</li> <li>• Less likely to be subject to class-size restrictions (i.e. classes available to more students)</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Less interactivity and support than traditional classroom learning</li> <li>• Students must be self-motivated and self-directed</li> <li>• Most programs require knowledge of and access to computers, Web browsers, email, and word-processing programs</li> <li>• Some programs require continuous access to the Internet</li> <li>• Students miss out on benefits of classroom attendance, such as getting to know the instructor/ other students, and group discussions of views and opinions<sup>2886</sup></li> </ul>

BEWARE: Distance Education programs can vary in quality and legitimacy (quality of instruction can be low, credits/degrees may not be recognized by other schools or programs). Some programs are outright scams. (For information on how to tell if a program is a scam, see Choosing Your Educational Path, PG. 849).

WHAT CREDENTIALS CAN I EARN THROUGH DISTANCE EDUCATION?

Thanks to the Internet, you can earn pretty much any credential through a Distance Education program that you can earn through a traditional educational program.<sup>2887</sup> This includes high school degrees and equivalency certificates, CTE certificates and degrees, associate and bachelor's degrees, and even graduate academic and professional degrees. Distance Education programs are offered in most major CTE and college degree program areas. Program quality does vary greatly, however.

WARNING: While many accredited, reputable schools offer credential programs through Distance education, there are also plenty of scam programs that will take your money and leave you with a useless piece of paper. (For more information on spotting Distance Education scam programs, see Choosing Your Educational Path, PG. 849.)

HOW DO I FIND AND ENROLL IN A DISTANCE EDUCATION PROGRAM?

If you're currently incarcerated:

- Ask your Correctional Counselor, or the staff of your facility's education department for information on available programs (Note: Because of the technology requirements of Distance Education programs, they may not be available at your facility);
- Request information on accredited Distance Education programs that may be available to people incarcerated in California facilities by writing to the California Department of Education, Adult Education Office, 1430 N Street, Suite 4202, Sacramento, CA 95814 or by calling (916) 322-2175.

If you're formerly incarcerated:

- Check your local public library for information on schools that offer Distance Education programs (these programs have become very popular and are offered to some extent at most schools).
- Check with local community colleges to see if they offer courses through Distance Education.
- Visit your local America's Job Centers of California for information on Distance Education programs and the institutions that offer them.
- Check these online resources:
  - California Virtual Campus (<http://www.cvc.edu/students/>)—offers a step-by-step guide to Distance Education in California;
  - California Department of Education, Adult Education (<http://www.cde.ca.gov/sp/ae/>)

<sup>2887</sup> See ONLINE COLLEGE EDUCATION NETWORK (OCEN), <http://www.ocen.org/online-college-programs.html>.

HELPFUL HINT
ACCREDITATION OF DISTANCE EDUCATION PROGRAMS

There are numerous commercial websites that advertise hundreds of Distance Education programs and schools in the U.S. and abroad. However, keep in mind that schools and programs pay to be listed on these websites. This means that when you search these sites, only those that have paid will come up—you will not see the rest of the schools and programs out there, so the results of your search will be limited. Also, many of these websites claim that they only list “accredited” schools and programs, however, you should always do your own research to make sure that a school or Distance Education program is 1) legitimate and 2) recognized by an approved accrediting agency.<sup>2888</sup> (For more information on accreditation and scam programs, see Choosing Your Educational Path, PG. 849.)

HOW MUCH DO DISTANCE EDUCATION PROGRAMS COST?

The cost of Distance Education programs varies based on the type of program, the delivery media, and the institution that it is offered through. Programs offered through four-year colleges and more prestigious schools will be more expensive than those offered through local community colleges.

TWO IMPORTANT THINGS TO NOTE ABOUT PAYING FOR DISTANCE EDUCATION:

1. Distance Education and Fee Waivers

Distance Education programs offered through California community colleges may qualify for an enrollment fee waiver through the California Community Colleges Board of Governor’s Fee Waiver program. (For more information on this program and how to qualify, see Paying For Your Education, PG. 881.)

2. Distance Education and Financial Aid

You may be able to get financial aid to help you pay for your Distance Education courses. Only accredited Distance Education institutions are allowed to participate in federal financial aid programs. Even if a school or program is eligible to participate, it must choose to do so. To find out if financial aid is available for a particular school or program, check with that institution’s financial aid office (For more information on financial aid, see Paying For Your Education, PG. 881).

CORRESPONDENCE COURSES

A correspondence course is a course offered by a school or program, where the student is separated from the teacher and course materials are provided through the mail or over the Internet. There is very little interaction between the student and the teacher, communication is usually initiated by the student (whenever the student wants), and students work at their own pace. Although there are some similarities, correspondence courses are not considered a type of distance education under federal law (see the table below for key differences).<sup>2889</sup>

THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN DISTANCE EDUCATION AND CORRESPONDENCE COURSES

Although these two terms seem similar and are often confused, they refer to two different learning situations. Distance Education is generally an option that requires Internet access. Although Distance Education is one option to earn credit, due to the need of media/ Internet access, it may not be a possible option for an individual who is currently incarcerated.

Distance Education Courses	Correspondence Courses
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Uses multiple media to deliver content &amp; feedback</li> <li>• Interaction can be synchronous or asynchronous</li> <li>• Interaction between student and teacher is regular and substantial</li> <li>• Courses and assignments follow a set schedule</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Instruction is usually through a single medium</li> <li>• Interaction is only asynchronous</li> <li>• Interaction between student and teacher is limited</li> <li>• Courses and assignments are “self-paced”</li> </ul>

WHAT CREDENTIALS CAN I EARN THROUGH CORRESPONDENCE COURSES?

Like with Distance Education programs, you can earn pretty much any credential that you can earn through traditional schooling through a correspondence course. This includes high school degrees and equivalency certificates, CTE certificates and degrees, associate and bachelor's degrees, and even graduate academic and professional degrees.

<sup>2888</sup> See DISTANCE LEARNING PORTAL, <http://www.distancelearningportal.com>; see also ONLINE DEGREES PROGRAM, <http://www.onlinedegreeprograms.com>, see also ALLONLINESCHOOLS, <http://www.allonlineschools.com>.

Program quality does vary greatly, however. While many accredited schools offer credential programs through correspondence courses, this is where you are most likely to see scam programs offering bogus higher education degrees. (For more information on spotting correspondence course scams, see Choosing Your Educational Path, PG. 849).

ARE CORRESPONDENCE COURSES RIGHT FOR ME?

PROS:	CONS:
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• They are completely flexible and can be worked around any schedule</li> <li>• They are a great way to get a head start on a CTE or college degree by earning college course credits while you are incarcerated</li> <li>• They can be accessed from anywhere, Internet access is not necessary, so they allow you to be less dependent on what your facility offers</li> </ul>	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• You must be entirely self-motivated and self-directed, or you may find it difficult to keep up your momentum and finish the program</li> <li>• You miss out on the benefits of regular interaction with instructors and other students</li> <li>• There is limited support if you are having trouble with a course</li> </ul>

HOW DO I FIND AND ENROLL IN A CORRESPONDENCE PROGRAM?

If you're currently incarcerated:

If you are interested in taking a correspondence course while you are incarcerated, your facility's education department should be able to provide information and guidance.<sup>2890</sup>

Two great resources for researching correspondence programs from inside are:

- Prisoners' Guerrilla Handbook to Correspondence Programs in the United States and Canada by Jon Marc Taylor. This is a comprehensive guide to correspondence courses available to incarcerated people, providing detailed program overviews and contact information. At the time of this publication, the handbook is in its 3rd edition, published in 2009 (ISBN: 978-0981938509). Check your facility's library or education department. It is also available from <http://www.amazon.com> and Barnes & Noble (both are CDCR approved vendors). You can also write to the publisher for information on ordering the book: Biddle Publishing Company and Audenreed Press, P.B.M. 103, Box 1305, Brunswick, ME 04011.
- Prison Education Guide by Christopher Zoukis and edited by Susan Schwartzkopf (through Prison Legal News Publishing). This is a comprehensive guide to correspondence programs for prisoners that it includes a detailed analysis of the quality, cost, and course offerings of all college correspondence programs available to prisoners. The publication costs $49.95, and will be available beginning March 1, 2016 (taking pre-orders now online at <https://www.prisonlegalnews.org/store/products/prison-education-guide/>). It is also available from <http://www.amazon.com> (a CDCR-approved vendor). You can also write to the publisher for information on ordering the book: Prison Legal News Publishing, P.O. Box 1151, 1013 Lucerne Ave., Lake Worth, FL 33460.
- Also, see Appendix D, PG. 898 for a list of schools that have a history of successfully offering correspondence courses to incarcerated individuals (working within correctional facility restrictions).

HELPFUL HINT

Student Responsibilities for Correspondence Courses

If you enroll in a correspondence course while you are incarcerated, you will be responsible for getting all of the required textbooks and materials yourself. You may also be responsible for finding a "proctor" at your institution to administer any midterm or final exams. A proctor is someone who watches over you while you take your exam to make sure that you are the one actually taking the exam, and that you do not cheat.

If you're formerly incarcerated:

- See Appendix D, PG. 898 for a list of schools known to offer correspondence courses;
- Check your local public library for information on schools that offer correspondence courses;
- Visit your local America's Job Centers of California and ask about correspondence programs.

<sup>2890</sup> U.S. Dep't of Educ. Office of Vocational and Adult Educ., Take Charge of Your Future: Get the Education and Training You Need (2012).

NOTE: Once you have returned to the community, you will have access to more resources, including the Internet, than when you were incarcerated. We recommend that you take advantage of interactive Distance Education programs or traditional face-to-face programs, as these tend to offer a richer and more integrated educational experience than correspondence courses.

HELPFUL HINT

Paying for Correspondence Course

You may be eligible to receive financial aid to pay for your correspondence study, but it depends on the school you are taking courses through. Because of federal regulations, schools that offer primarily correspondence courses are not eligible to participate in federal financial aid programs. If more than 50% of the courses the institution offers are correspondence courses, or more than 50% of the students enrolled are taking correspondence courses, then the school is not eligible for federal financial aid. Additionally, a school is not eligible if more than 25% of its students are incarcerated.<sup>2891</sup> (For more information on financial aid, see Paying For Your Education, PG. 881.)

GRADUATE ACADEMIC AND PROFESSIONAL DEGREE PROGRAMS

These degrees are offered at four-year colleges and universities and at graduate academic and professional schools. You must have a Bachelor's degree before you can move on to pursue a graduate academic or professional degree. Students studying to earn one of these degrees must take highly advanced and specialized courses in a specific academic or professional field. It generally takes two years of full-time study for a master's degree, and three to four years of full-time study for a doctorate degree.

- Graduate academic degree programs require advanced study in an academic field. They emphasize theory, as opposed to practical application, with the goal of contributing to the body of knowledge on a subject. Master of Arts (M.A.) and Doctor of Philosophy (Ph.D.) are examples of graduate academic degrees.
- Graduate professional degree programs require advanced study in a professional or vocational field. They emphasize the practical application of knowledge to a professional practice, and are usually required in order to get a license to work in that profession.<sup>2892</sup> Master of Engineering (M.E.) and Doctor of Medicine (M.D.) are examples of graduate professional degrees.

WHERE CAN I FIND INFORMATION ABOUT GRADUATE PROGRAMS?

Your local public library should have various books and guides about graduate academic and professional schools and the programs they offer. These are also available from most book-sellers. You can also contact the alumni services center of the college where you got your undergraduate degree for information and help on searching for and applying to graduate academic and professional schools.

V. PAYING FOR YOUR EDUCATION

HOW WILL I PAY FOR MY EDUCATION?

Here are some things to consider:

- How much money will it take to reach your goals?
- What are the various costs involved, and how can you reduce them?
- What extra challenges might you face because of your criminal history, and how can you address them?
- This chapter will help you think practically about these questions. As the following sections explain, even if you have limited resources, there are ways you can reduce your costs and get help covering your educational expenses.

WHAT IS FINANCIAL AID?

“Financial aid” is the general term for any type of funding intended to help students pay for educational expenses. This is the most common way that people fund their education.

WHAT KINDS OF FINANCIAL AID ARE THERE?

There are many different types of financial aid, available from different places. The basic categories are:<sup>2893</sup>

- Borrowed aid—federal government and private loans;
- Gift aid—federal and state grants, waivers and scholarships;
- Self-help aid—federal work study, earned service benefits, other work during school;
- Specialty aid programs—military & veteran programs, tax benefits, community service awards, foster care youth aid, etc.<sup>2894</sup>

WHERE DOES FINANCIAL AID COME FROM?

The federal government, state governments, organizations, businesses, and agencies offer financial aid of one or more types. Generally, financial aid providers fall into the following broad categories:<sup>2895</sup>

- The Federal Government—Grants, loans, work-study;
- The State (California)—Grants, loans and loan forgiveness for residents’ in-state education expenses;
- Individual Schools or Programs—Grants, loans, & Scholarships from the educational institution itself;
- Nonprofit or Private Organizations—Scholarships & awards based on many factors, such as merit, achievements, or membership to the group or organization.

These categories of aid are discussed in detail below.

FEDERAL STUDENT AID

WHAT KINDS OF FEDERAL STUDENT AID MIGHT BE AVAILABLE TO ME?

Federal student aid is probably the most common type of financial aid that people rely on to help them pay for school. Most federal student aid is offered through the Department of Education.<sup>2896</sup> (For detailed information on federal student aid, visit the Federal Student Aid website at: <https://studentaid.ed.gov/>.) Federal student aid includes:

Federal Grants—Grants do not have to be repaid unless 1) you drop out of school, or 2) your GPA falls below a certain minimum (usually specified in the grant).

- Federal Pell Grant—This is the largest grant program available in the United States. Grants are awarded based on financial need.
- Federal Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant (FSEOG)—This grant is a supplement to the Pell Grant. It is reserved only for those students who already received a Pell Grant, but need more aid. The government gives a set amount of money to the schools that want to participate in the program, and the schools then give this grant to the students who have the most financial need. You must have been offered a Pell Grant to be eligible for this grant.<sup>2897</sup>

Federal Loans—These are loans made to you by the federal government. They usually have lower interest rates and more flexible repayment options than regular loans. The amount you are allowed to borrow depends on the cost of the school you want to go to, your financial need, and what other aid you get. Since these are loans, you will have to pay the money back!

- Direct Loan—The U.S. DEP'T OF EDUC. lends you the money directly.
- Federal Perkins Loan—A school-based loan program where the school lends you money if you show exceptional financial need.<sup>2898</sup>

Federal Work-Study—Work-study allows you to earn money through part-time employment (on or off campus) while you are in school. If you are awarded work-study aid, you are guaranteed to earn a certain amount of work-study funds as long as you have a work-study approved job (however, you cannot earn more than that amount).<sup>2899</sup>

Other federal student aid programs outside of the Department of Education include:

- Aid for serving in the military or for being the spouse or child of a veteran;
- Tax benefits for education;
- Education Award for community service with AmeriCorps;
- Education and Training Vouchers for current and former foster care youth;
- Scholarships and loan repayment through the Department of Health and Human Services;
- Indian Health Service;
- National Institutes of Health;
- National Health Services Corp.<sup>2900</sup>

WILL MY CRIMINAL HISTORY AFFECT MY ABILITY TO GET FEDERAL STUDENT AID?

Maybe. It depends on the circumstances of your offense, the type of aid you are applying for, and your incarceration status.<sup>2901</sup> The following is a summary of the possible implications of a criminal record on your federal student aid eligibility.

Drug Convictions:

If you were convicted of possession or sale of a controlled substance (felony or misdemeanor) while you were already receiving federal student aid, you will be ineligible to receive federal student aid funds for a specified period of time.<sup>2902</sup> The length of time you are ineligible depends on the type and number these convictions you have, and whether or not you have fulfilled any rehabilitation requirements.<sup>2903</sup> (For detailed information on federal student aid and drug convictions, see Appendix E, PG. 905.)

Sex Offense Convictions:

If you have been convicted of a forcible or non-forcible sex offense and you are subject to an involuntary civil commitment after your incarceration for that offense, you are ineligible to receive a Federal Pell Grant.<sup>2904</sup> However, you are still eligible for other types of federal student aid.

Currently Incarcerated:

Unfortunately, while you are incarcerated, you are directly prohibited from getting certain kinds of federal aid (by law), and indirectly banned from some of the others (by logistics). However, once you are released, most of these restrictions are lifted and you become eligible to receive all forms of federal aid. You can even apply before your release so that your aid will be ready by the time you start school.<sup>2905</sup>

Selective Service:

You are not eligible for federal or state financial aid if you did not register for the Selective Service, unless you fall into one of the exceptions.<sup>2906</sup> See Pg. 73 to figure out whether you are (or were) required to register; how to register now (if you are between 18 and 25 years old and required to register); and how to request an excuse (in a “Status Information Letter”) for not having registered before (if you are 26 or older, never registered, and do not fall into one of the exceptions).

IMPORTANT: If you're incarcerated, do not fill out the FAFSA unless you know you are going to be released in time to attend school that same year. FAFSA information is only good for one year. (Everyone who applies for federal student aid must complete a new FAFSA every year.)

On Parole or Probation

You are free to apply for all forms of federal student aid, including those you couldn't get while you were incarcerated. However, the drug and sex offense restrictions still apply (see above).<sup>2907</sup>

CAN I GET FEDERAL STUDENT AID WHILE I'M INCARCERATED?

It depends on what institution you are in, and what it offers,<sup>2908</sup> so keep reading this section to better understand your eligibility for federal grants and federal loans. Most of the educational programs available to you while you are incarcerated are either free or do not qualify for financial aid in the first place. But remember, while you cannot receive most financial aid while you are incarcerated, you can still apply for financial aid so that the money is waiting for you when you get out.<sup>2909</sup>

AM I ELIGIBLE FOR FEDERAL GRANTS WHILE I'M INCARCERATED?

Maybe, It depends on where you are confined.<sup>2910</sup> In 2015, the U.S. Department of Education (U.S. DOE) launched a new federal program called the “Second Chance Pell Pilot Program,” which allows some incarcerated people to receive federal Pell Grants to cover many of the costs of college (tuition, fees, books, and supplies) while incarcerated.<sup>2911</sup> Before this announcement, currently incarcerated people in state and federal facilities were NOT able to receive Federal Pell Grants.

The “Second Chance Pell Pilot Program” focuses on those who are eligible for release, especially students who are likely to be released within five years of getting their college education. The program is available only at certain state and federal correctional facilities that have applied to participate. More than 100 correctional facilities across the country are currently participating in the program, in partnership with 67 colleges and universities.<sup>2912</sup> As of the publishing of this guide, the following California institutions are participating: California State Prison, Los Angeles County; California Institution for Women; Sierra Conservation Camp; and Richard J. Donovan Correctional Facility.<sup>2913</sup> BUT NOTE: If you are committed to a juvenile detention facility, and you otherwise meet the requirements, you ARE eligible for a federal Pell Grant.

NOTE: In order to be eligible for the Federal Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant (FSEOG) you must have already received a Pell Grant. Therefore, if your institution does not offer one of the “Second Chance Pell Pilot Grants” because you are incarcerated, then by default, you are also not eligible for a FSEOG.

AM I ELIGIBLE FOR FEDERAL STUDENT LOANS WHILE I AM INCARCERATED?

It depends where you are incarcerated. Anyone who is considered “incarcerated” in a federal or state facility cannot receive federal student loans.<sup>2914</sup>

Unfortunately, here, you are considered “incarcerated” if you are serving a sentence in a penitentiary, prison, jail, reformatory, work farm, or similar correctional institution, whether it is operated by the government or a private contractor. You are also considered to be incarcerated if you have been committed to a juvenile detention facility.

You are NOT considered incarcerated if you are in a halfway house, on home detention, sentenced to serve only on weekends, or if you are confined while your case is still pending (such as while you are awaiting trial).

THE FOLLOWING CHART SUMMARIZES WHETHER OR NOT YOU CAN RECEIVE FEDERAL STUDENT GRANTS AND/OR FEDERAL STUDENT LOANS WHILE YOU ARE INCARCERATED.

IF YOU ARE IN A FEDERAL OR STATE INSTITUTION :	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• Generally speaking, you CANNOT get a Federal Pell Grant or federal student loans while incarcerated, unless your institution participates in the “Second Chance Pell Pilot Program” (see below). But it depends on where you are confined.<sup>2915</sup> <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>○ As of September 2015, under a new federal program by the U.S. Department of Education (U.S. DOE) called the “Second Chance Pell Pilot Program,” you MAY be able to receive federal Pell Grants to cover many of the costs of college (tuition, fees, books, and supplies) while incarcerated.<sup>2916</sup> Before this announcement, currently incarcerated people in state and federal facilities were NOT able to receive Federal Pell Grants.</li> </ul> </li> <li>• You can get a Federal Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant (FSEOG) and Federal Work-Study (FWS), but it is unlikely unless your institution is one of the state or federal facilities that is approved for the “Second Chance Pell Pilot Program.” This is because priority for FSEOGs must be given to those students who also will receive a Federal Pell Grant (for which most incarcerated people still will not be eligible), and because the logistical difficulties of performing an FWS job while incarcerated would likely be too great for you to be awarded FWS funds.</li> </ul>
IF YOU ARE IN AN INSTITUTION OTHER THAN A FEDERAL OR STATE ONE:	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>• You CANNOT get federal student loans.</li> <li>• You can get a Federal Pell Grant.</li> <li>• You can get FSEOG and FWS, but you probably won’t because schools are limited in the amount of FSEOG funds available, and because the logistical difficulties of performing an FWS job while incarcerated would likely be too great for you to be awarded FWS funds.</li> </ul>

Once you’re released, most eligibility limitations will be removed. In fact, you may apply for aid before you’re released so your aid is processed in time for you to start school. However, if your incarceration was for a drug-related offense or if you are subject to an involuntary civil commitment for a sexual offense, your eligibility may be limited.

REMEMBER: Even though you are not eligible to receive federal student loans while you are incarcerated, you can still apply for them so that your application can be processed and they will be available in time for you to start school once you are released.<sup>2917</sup> (For information on applying for federal student aid, see PG. 885. The application process is the same whether you are incarcerated or not.)

IMPORTANT: If you’re incarcerated, you should not fill out the FAFSA unless you know you are going to be released in time to attend school that year. FAFSA information is only good for one year. Everyone who applies for federal student aid must complete a new FAFSA every year. This means that if you were receiving federal financial aid before you were incarcerated, you will likely need to reapply, unless you will be released before that school year ends.

AM I ELIGIBLE FOR FEDERAL WORK-STUDY (FWS) WHILE I AM INCARCERATED?

Technically, yes, but in reality, no. While you are technically eligible for FWS while you are incarcerated, logistics alone will likely prevent you from being awarded this type of aid. It is difficult, if not impossible, for you to perform a FWS job while incarcerated.<sup>2918</sup>

CAN I GET FEDERAL STUDENT AID WHILE I AM ON PAROLE OR PROBATION?

Once you are released, you become fully eligible for federal student aid again. Your status on parole, probation, or under any other type of supervision does not affect your eligibility. However, any general restrictions based on your conviction history (drug/sex offenses) still apply.<sup>2919</sup>

<sup>2916</sup> The Pell Grants can only be used to pay for tuition, fees, books and supplies required by education program. Incarcerated individuals will not be eligible to receive other types of Federal student aid under this pilot program. See U.S. DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, “U.S. Department of Education Launches Second Chance Pell Pilot Program for Incarcerated Individuals,” (Jul. 31. 2015), <http://www.ed.gov/news/press-releases/us-department-education-launches-second-chance-pell-pilot-program-incarcerated-individuals>.

CAN I GET FEDERAL STUDENT AID WHILE I LIVE IN SUBSIDIZED HOUSING?

Probably not. For one thing, the federal government limits ALL students' ability to receive section 8 housing unless they meet certain exceptions, such as having a disability or living with parents who are otherwise eligible for public housing.<sup>2920</sup> In addition, financial assistance – including federal student aid – that exceeds the cost of tuition is considered income for purposes of evaluating a person's eligibility for subsidized housing.<sup>2921</sup> The amount of aid you receive may place you outside of the income bracket necessary for section 8 homes.

HOW DO I APPLY FOR FEDERAL STUDENT AID?

Everyone who applies for federal student financial aid must start by filling out the Free Application for Student Aid (FAFSA). Not only does the FAFSA give you access to federal student aid (the largest source of financial aid), but most states and individual schools also use the FAFSA to determine what state or school-based financial aid you may be eligible for.

- If you have internet access, you can fill out the FAFSA online at: <https://studentaid.ed.gov/>;
- If you want to fill out the paper version, you can get the form from most local public libraries or from the financial aid office of the school you want to attend. (There is a sample version of the 2015-2016 FAFSA provided in Appendix F, PG. 906);
- You can also call the Federal Student Aid Information Center (FSAIC): 1 (800) 4-FED-AID (1-800-433-3243) to request a copy

WHAT INFORMATION WILL I NEED TO FILL OUT THE FAFSA?

The FAFSA asks you for personal information such as your name, date of birth, and address, as well as for information about your financial situation. Some of the information and documents you may need are:<sup>2922</sup>

- Your social security number;
- Your driver license number (if you have one);
- Your Alien Registration number if you are not a U.S. citizen (For a full list of eligible noncitizens, visit <https://fafsa.ed.gov/help/fotw15a.htm>, and learn more on PG. 1119);
- Federal tax information or tax returns including IRS W-2 information;
- Records of any untaxed income, such as child support received, interest income, and veterans non-education benefits that you received in the last year;
- Information on cash; savings and checking account balances; investments, including stocks and bonds and real estate (but not the home you live in); and business and farm assets.

WHEN SHOULD I APPLY FOR FEDERAL FINANCIAL AID?

The FAFSA must be filled out at the beginning of the year in which you intend to start school. It becomes available on January 1, and although technically there is no deadline, try to fill it out as soon as possible after that date. Each state and every individual school has its own deadline by which it must receive FAFSA information in order to include federal funds in the financial aid package that it offers you.

IMPORTANT: If you're incarcerated, you should not fill out the FAFSA unless you know you are going to be released in time to attend school that year. FAFSA information is only good for one year. (Everyone applying for federal student aid must complete a new FAFSA yearly.)

I ALREADY HAVE STUDENT LOANS, CAN MY STUDENT LOANS BE DEFERRED WHILE I AM INCARCERATED?

Yes, you can have your loans deferred, but you must apply for a deferment. Deferment is a process that permits you to temporarily put your loan payments on hold for up to three years, depending on your loan provider and circumstances.

- If you have: Federal Perkins Loans then contact the school that made your loan or the school's servicing agent.

WHAT IS THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN FOREBEARANCE AND DEFERMENT?

A forbearance is a request to stop payments completely for a year. All people whose loan payments are equal to or greater than 20 percent of their monthly income qualify for a forbearance. This means incarcerated individuals would likely qualify automatically.

Deferment is similar to forbearance in that it stops payments for a year. Unlike forbearance, the loan continues to accrue interest during that period, which makes it more expensive in the longrun. Either option is better than defaulting.

- If you have: Direct Loans or Direct PLUS Loans then contact the Direct Loan Servicing Center at 1-800-848-0979 or online at www.dl.ed.gov.
- If you have FFEL Loans (includes FFEL PLUS Loans) then contact the lender or agency holding your loan. For the phone number of the agency in your state, contact FSAIC at 1-800-4-FED-AID.<sup>2923</sup>

If you cannot get in touch with your student loan provider, you can ask a trusted person on the outside to send you the necessary forms for deferment from your loan provider. Ask the prison staff for proof of your incarceration so you can provide that to the loan providers along with the other paperwork.

NOTE: If you took out student loans so that you could attend WyoTech, Everest College, or Heald College, you may be able to discharge any associated student loan debt. Following the closure of all 28 Heald, Everest, and WyoTech campuses in California, the Department of Education created an expedited process for former students of these schools to discharge their debt based on defense to repayment. For more information, go to <https://oag.ca.gov/corinthian>.

I WAS RECEIVING FEDERAL FINANCIAL AID WHEN I WAS INCARCERATED, MY LOANS WENT INTO DEFAULT. WHAT CAN I DO?

Start by calling your federal loan provider. A representative may be able to talk through your options. Most likely, you will have to rehabilitate your loan, which requires you to make nine consecutive monthly payments.<sup>2924</sup> If you are currently incarcerated, that payment may be as low as $5.<sup>2925</sup>

Once you have successfully rehabilitated your loan, you can apply for an income-driven repayment plan, which lets you pay off your loans using a portion of your income. If you are currently incarcerated, you may not have any monthly payments at all.<sup>2926</sup>

CALIFORNIA STATE STUDENT AID

WHAT KINDS OF STATE-BASED STUDENT AID MIGHT BE AVAILABLE TO ME?

- Cal Grant—This is a group of several grants awarded by the California Student Aid Commission. They are based on financial need, GPA, and educational objectives. Cal Grants are the largest source of California state funded student financial aid.<sup>2927</sup>
- California Community Colleges Board of Governor’s Fee Waiver—This program waives the $46-per-credit-unit enrollment fee that all California community colleges charge.
- Chafee Grant—This is a special financial aid grant for people who are or were in foster care. For more information on this grant, visit the California Student Aid Commission website at: <https://www.chafee.csac.ca.gov/default.aspx>.
- California Dream Act—This allows eligible undocumented and nonresident documented students apply for and receive private scholarships funded through public universities, state-administered financial aid, university grants, community college fee waivers, and Cal Grants. For more information, visit the California Student Aid Commission website at: http://www.csac.ca.gov/dream\_act.asp.

CAL GRANTS

The Cal Grant program is the largest source of student financial aid in California. If you are a California graduating high school student, a recent graduate, or you just got your GED, and you meet academic, financial and eligibility requirements, then you may qualify for a Cal Grant for college or career/technical school.

AM I ELIGIBLE FOR A CAL GRANT?

There are several grants offered within the Cal Grant program, and each has its own specific requirements, but there are some general requirements that they all share. For example, you must:

- Submit the FAFSA or California Dream Act Application at http://www.csac.ca.gov/dream\_act.asp and your current GPA;
- Be a U.S. citizen or eligible noncitizen or meet California Dream Act criteria;
- Be a California resident or meet California Dream Act criteria;

<sup>2926</sup> 20 C.F.R. § 1098E.

- Attend a qualifying California college and be enrolled at least half time;
- Have financial need based on your income and college costs;
- Maintain a minimum GPA.<sup>2928</sup>

NOTE: If you don't have a GPA to submit, the California Student Aid Commission will use your GED, ACT or SAT test scores instead to determine if you qualify for a Cal Grant.<sup>2929</sup>

For more information on Cal Grants, visit the California Student Aid Commission's Cal Grants website at: www.calgrants.org, or Appendix G, PG. 917. You can also call the Commission at (888) 224-7268 or write to: California Student Aid Commission, Attn: Cal Grants, P.O. Box 419026, Rancho Cordova, CA 95741-9026.

CALIFORNIA COLLEGE PROMISE GRANT (FORMERLY THE BOARD OF GOVERNOR'S FEE WAIVER): FREE ENROLLMENT FOR LOW-INCOME STUDENTS TO CALIFORNIA COMMUNITY COLLEGES

The California College Promise Grant removes enrollment fees for qualified low-income students applying to California's Community Colleges. If you qualify for this grant, you can go to community college for free (NOTE: you will still have to pay for other education expenses, such as books and supplies). If you are taking a correspondence course through a California Community College while you are incarcerated, you may qualify for this grant—keep reading to learn more.

HOW DO I KNOW IF I QUALIFY FOR THE CALIFORNIA COLLEGE PROMISE GRANT?<sup>2930</sup>

First, to qualify for the the California College Promise Grant, you must be a California resident. If you are a CA resident, you must also qualify based on one of several other criteria, for example, if you receive government benefits or fall into an eligible income bracket. (For a full list of California College Promise Grant qualifications, see Appendix H, PG. 918; for a 2018-2019 California College Promise Grant Application, see Appendix I, PG. 919.)

WILL MY CRIMINAL HISTORY DISQUALIFY ME FROM STATE-BASED STUDENT AID?

Maybe. If you are still incarcerated, you are disqualified from receiving any type of Cal Grant financial aid.<sup>2931</sup> Additionally, certain drug convictions may make you ineligible for a California College Promise Grant (formerly known as the Board of Governors Fee Waiver<sup>2932</sup>).

HOW DO I APPLY FOR STATE-BASED STUDENT AID?

In order to apply for California-based financial aid, you will need to fill out either the FAFSA (see above) or the California Dream Act application, and submit your certified GPA to the Student Aid Commission. For detailed instructions on how to apply for state-based financial aid in California, visit the California Student Aid Commission website at: <http://consumerfinance.gov/>, or speak to a counselor in your school's financial aid office.

SCHOOL-BASED FINANCIAL AID

WHAT KINDS OF SCHOOL-BASED AID MIGHT BE AVAILABLE TO ME?

Many colleges and universities have their own financial aid programs and may offer scholarships, grants, loans, or work-study programs directly. Eligibility for school-based aid programs can be based on financial need, merit, or a variety of other qualifications. You should contact the financial aid offices of the schools you are interested in to find out what financial aid might be available from the individual schools. Some schools have more financial aid funding available and may be able to offer you a more substantial award. This may be an important factor in your decision about which school you want to attend.

NOTE ABOUT CHANGE IN LAW FOR TANF/CALWORKS:

If you were qualified for TANF/Calworks but found ineligible because of a drug conviction, your criminal history would have previously disqualified you from the CA College Promise Grant program (see PUBLIC BENEFITS CHAPTER, PG. 449, for details about TANF/CalWORKS eligibility). However, this law changed on April 1, 2015. After that date, your conviction history no longer makes you ineligible for TANF/CalWORKS benefits, so you may be able to qualify for program now.

WILL MY CRIMINAL HISTORY DISQUALIFY ME FROM SCHOOL-BASED AID?

Again, policies for receiving school-based financial aid vary by school. Each school has its own requirements for the different types of aid it offers. Remember, even if your criminal history disqualifies you for some types of aid, you may still be eligible for others, so it is important to ask.

SCHOLARSHIPS

WHAT KINDS OF SCHOLARSHIPS MIGHT BE AVAILABLE TO ME?

Many private organizations offer scholarships, usually to students meeting certain qualifications or having certain characteristics. Such scholarships may be need-based or merit-based (e.g., requiring high GPA or test scores). They may also be based on cultural, religious, ethnic, racial, national identity, political, religious, or other beliefs, or based on your chosen academic or career field.

HOW DO I FIND AND APPLY FOR SCHOLARSHIPS?

The best place to start is the financial aid office at the school you plan on attending. The financial aid counselors on staff can help you search for scholarships that you may qualify for.

Other resources for information on scholarships include:

- Catalogs, such as Scholarships, Fellowships, and Loans and Peterson’s Scholarships and Loans for Adult Learners, which can be found at your public library.
- The following websites offer information on many types of scholarships:
  - U.S. DEP’T OF EDUC.: <https://studentaid.ed.gov>
  - College Board: <https://bigfuture.collegeboard.org>
  - CollegeNet: <http://www.collegenet.com>
  - CollegeToolkit.com: <http://www.collegetoolkit.com>
  - Fastweb: <http://www.fastweb.com>
  - FinAid: <http://www.finaid.org>
  - Go College: <http://www.gocollege.com>
  - Sallie Mae Scholarship Service: <http://www.salliemae.com>
  - Scholarships.com: <https://www.scholarships.com>

NOTE ON SCHOLARSHIPS: Be creative when you search for scholarships. They are awarded for all kinds of reasons and can be based on almost any criteria. Often funders do not even advertise that they offer them. You may even find scholarships specifically targeted at helping currently and formerly incarcerated people pursue higher education!<sup>2933</sup>

WILL MY CRIMINAL HISTORY DISQUALIFY ME FROM SCHOLARSHIPS?

Not necessarily. Most scholarship applications do not ask for criminal history information. So, as long as you qualify for the scholarship otherwise, your criminal record should not be a factor in whether or not you can get it. If a scholarship application does ask for your criminal history, there’s usually no harm in applying anyway, and it won’t affect any other scholarships you apply for

VI. CONCLUSION

Getting an education is probably the single-most important gift you can give yourself. It will open doors for you and help secure a future that is stable and rewarding—both financially and personally. In this chapter, we hope you learned practical steps that can help you along your educational path. We hope that we have inspired you to step onto that path with confidence and enthusiasm!

<sup>2933</sup> For example, an organization called the Transcending Through Education Foundation (TTF) in Rhode Island offers $1,000 scholarships for people who are currently incarcerated or recently released from Rhode Island DEP’T of Corrections facilities to pursue a higher education degree. See TRANSCENDING THROUGH EDUC., Incarcerated Students Encouraged to Apply for TTEF’s College Scholarship, <http://transcendingthrougheducation.wordpress.com>.

Policies for ACT Testing

See next page.

2016-2017 TERMS AND CONDITIONS: TESTING RULES AND POLICIES FOR THE ACT® TEST

These Terms and Conditions are an agreement between the person who will take the ACT® test (“you”) and ACT, Inc. (“ACT”). They apply to every administration of the ACT test except where, and only to the extent that, you are provided with different terms or conditions by ACT, Inc. Please read these Terms and Conditions carefully. By registering for and/or taking the ACT test, you are agreeing to these Terms and Conditions.

By registering for and/or taking the ACT test, you represent and warrant the following to ACT: (1) the information you have provided to ACT is true; (2) you agree to be bound by, and will comply with, these Terms and Conditions and other ACT policies for the ACT test; (3) you will not engage in any prohibited behaviors; (4) you will cooperate with any test security investigation; and (5) you are not working for or on behalf of any test preparation provider(s).

Special instructions for the ACT test taken online: All references to answer sheets or answer documents in these Terms and Conditions refer to your responses on the ACT test taken online, and all references to test booklets and test-related documents include the ACT test taken online and all related test materials provided in paper or electronic form.

These Terms and Conditions do not create a third-party beneficiary relationship between ACT and any individual or entity other than you.

Privacy Policy and Notice of Collection of Personally Identifying Information

ACT collects personally identifying information when you register for or take one of our tests. Our processing of such information, including collection, use, transfer and disclosure, is described in the ACT Privacy Policy (www.act.org/privacy.html).

By registering for or taking an ACT test, you provide personally identifying information to us, some of which is mandatory. If you do not provide mandatory personally identifying information, such as name, gender, address and date of birth, you may not be able to register for or take the ACT test.

We share personally identifiable information consistent with your choices. For example, we send score reports to the colleges you choose. Please note that when you send a report to a college that is part of a school system, the college may share your score with other colleges in that system. In addition, ACT provides your score report (including your photo) to your high school. In certain situations described in the Automatic Score Reporting for Scholarship Purposes section, ACT will also automatically report your scores for scholarship purposes.

When you register for or take an ACT test, you consent to the ACT Privacy Policy, which is incorporated into these Terms and Conditions: Testing Rules and Policies for the ACT® Test by reference, including consenting to the collection of personally identifying information and its use and disclosure as provided in the ACT Privacy Policy.

Notice to International Examinees: You are voluntarily providing personally identifying information to us. Your personally identifying information may be transferred outside of your home country to the United States to ACT or a third party service provider for processing and will be subject to use and disclosure under the laws of the United States. It may also be accessible to law enforcement and national security authorities in the United States.

Any questions about the ACT Privacy Policy or this notice should be directed to our Data Protection Official at DPO@act.org.

Automatic Score Reporting for Scholarship Purposes*

Some state/federal scholarship programs or education departments use ACT scores as one source of information to recognize student achievement. ACT reports test scores and other information about you for this purpose without requiring you to use one of your college choices, and at no cost to you. If your mailing address or high school is in one of the states or other categories listed below, your test scores and other information about you will be reported automatically for consideration unless you specifically direct ACT, in writing, not to do so.

To direct ACT not to automatically report your scores for scholarship purposes, send a letter postmarked by the Monday immediately after the applicable test date for which you do not want your scores reported. Address your letter to: ACT Customer Care, P.O. Box 168, Iowa City, IA 52243-0168.

NOTE: This will not affect any other uses of your scores, such as the reporting of scores to the colleges you listed or to your high school, or sending information about you to Educational Opportunity Service recipients if you opted in.

State scholarship programs**: Alaska, Arizona, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Michigan, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Washington, West Virginia.

US Presidential Scholars Program: All states, District of Columbia, US territories, Puerto Rico, and US citizens abroad.

*This section does not apply to Residual testing.

**State scholarship program participants may change at any time, and these Terms and Conditions may not always reflect the most current information.

Photo Submission Requirement for Registration (National Testing Only)

During test registration, you must submit a photo to ACT that meets ACT photo requirements. Your photo will be used for test security purposes such as verifying your identity. ACT will place your photo on your registration ticket, provide it to test center staff, and include it on the score report that is automatically sent to your high school. You must have the right to submit the photo to ACT, either because you took it or because you have permission to submit it from the person who took it, and you agree that ACT may use your photo for all of the purposes listed in this paragraph and in ACT photo requirements. See the Photo Requirements (www.act.org/the-act/photo-requirements.html) page for information about providing your photo.

ACT may cancel your test registration and release your seat if you fail to provide a required photo by the deadline for that test date. If you fail to provide a required photo by the deadline, you will be subject to all test date change policies and fees. You must provide a photo by the photo deadline for the new test date. See Photo Upload Deadlines at (www.act.org/the-act/photo-requirements.html). If you do not request a test date change, your original registration fee will not be refunded.

NOTE: Examinees who are 12 years old or younger do not have to submit a photo for registration, but must bring acceptable identification to the test center.

Capturing Images or Voice Recordings at Test Centers

ACT may capture images and voice recordings of you at test centers. ACT may retain and analyze all such images and voice recordings for the purpose of protecting the integrity and security of the testing process.

Acceptable Identification

Unless otherwise stated in these Terms and Conditions, ACT generally requires that you show both (1) an admission ticket or a standby ticket, and (2) acceptable identification, to be admitted to a test center. You are responsible for understanding ACT requirements for acceptable identification (www.act.org/the-act/taking-the-test-identification) and having acceptable identification with you on test day. ACT policies are updated from time to time, so make sure that you check for any updates to our identification requirements before the day of testing. You should contact ACT Student Services (www.act.org/the-act/help-contactus) before the day of testing with any questions about acceptable identification. Test administration staff has sole discretion on test day for determining whether your identification is acceptable. If there is evidence, however, that another individual has taken the test for you, your score may be challenged and subsequently cancelled regardless of a staff decision to accept your identification and admit you to the test center.

Special Instructions for State and District testing, Special testing, Arranged testing, and Residual testing: ACT requires that you show acceptable identification on the test day, unless testing staff personally recognize you.

Test Security

In addition to any other remedies provided below or otherwise available to ACT, ACT may prohibit you from taking the ACT test, even if you have already registered, if ACT believes: (1) you may have engaged in prohibited behavior in connection with a prior administration of the ACT test, (2) you may intend to engage in prohibited behaviors in the future, (3) you may have provided false or misleading information to ACT, or (4) you may be working for test preparation providers.

A. Prohibited Behavior at the Test Center

The following behaviors are prohibited. You may be dismissed and/or your answer document may not be scored, at ACT's sole discretion, if you are found:

- Filling in or altering responses on your answer sheet or continuing to write the essay after time has been called on that test section. This means that you cannot make any changes to a test section outside of the designated time for that section, even to fix a stray mark or accidental keystroke.
- Looking back at a test section on which time has already been called.
- Looking ahead in the test booklet.
- Looking at another person's test booklet or answer document.
- Giving or receiving assistance by any means.
- Discussing or sharing test content, test form identification numbers, or answers during test administration, during breaks, or after the test.
- Using a prohibited calculator (www.act.org/calculator-policy.html).
- Using a calculator on any test section other than mathematics.
- Sharing a calculator with another person.
- Using a watch with recording, internet, or communication capabilities.
- Using any electronic device at any time during testing or during break other than an approved calculator or watch. All other electronic devices, including cell phones and wearable devices, must be turned off and placed out of reach from the time you are admitted to test until you are dismissed after testing concludes.
- Attempting to photograph, copy, or memorize test-related information or remove test materials, including questions or answers, from the test room in any way.
- Using highlight pens, colored pens or pencils, notes, dictionaries, or other aids.

- Using scratch paper (unless an exception applies).
  - Specific instructions will be provided on test day if ACT authorizes you to use scratch paper, including the section(s) on which ACT has authorized its use.
  - If you are permitted to use scratch paper, you may only use paper that ACT has authorized and/or provided to you.
- Not following instructions or abiding by the rules of the test center.
- Exhibiting confrontational, threatening, or unruly behavior; or violating any laws. If ACT suspects you are engaging in criminal activities, such activities will be reported to law enforcement agencies.
- Allowing an alarm to sound in the test room or creating any other disturbance.

All items brought into the test center, such as hats, purses, backpacks, cell phones, calculators, and other electronic devices may be searched at the discretion of ACT and its testing staff. ACT and its testing staff may confiscate and retain for a reasonable period of time any item suspected of having been used, or capable of being used, in violation of these prohibited behaviors. ACT may also provide such items to and permit searches by third parties in connection with an investigation conducted by ACT or others. ACT and its testing staff shall not be responsible for lost, stolen, or damaged items that you bring to a test center.

Consequences for Prohibited Behavior: ACT has sole authority for determining whether to take action regarding prohibited behavior observed or suspected on test day, and its decisions are final. If ACT takes action due to prohibited behavior observed or suspected on test day, the individuals who engaged in the prohibited behavior will not have their answer documents scored; will forfeit their registration for that test date; and will have no right to refunds or appeals.

B. Individual Score Reviews

If ACT discovers reason to believe your score may be invalid – such as evidence of unusual similarities in the answers of you and another examinee, evidence that you may have falsified your identity or impersonated someone else, evidence of possible advance access to test questions or answers, or other indicators the test scores may not accurately reflect your level of educational achievement – ACT may conduct an Individual Score Review. ACT reserves the right to cancel test scores when there is reason to believe the scores are invalid. Proof of misconduct is not required to cancel scores.

ACT will take steps to notify you if ACT decides to conduct an Individual Score Review. The notice includes information about why ACT has started the Individual Score Review and options available for resolving it. If the scores that are the subject of the Individual Score Review have not yet been reported by ACT, ACT reserves the right to hold those scores pending the outcome of the review process, including any appeal. More information regarding the review process will be provided to you if ACT opens an Individual Score Review regarding your score.

For Individual Score Reviews, the final and exclusive remedy available for you to appeal or otherwise challenge a decision by ACT to cancel your test score is binding arbitration. The arbitration will be conducted through written submissions to the American Arbitration Association (“AAA”), unless both you and ACT agree to submit the matter to an alternative arbitration forum. By agreeing to arbitration in accordance with these Terms and Conditions, you are waiving your right to have your dispute heard by a judge or jury. If you choose to appeal a decision by ACT to cancel your test scores by exercising your right to seek arbitration of that decision, you must pay a nonrefundable filing fee of $200 to the AAA (or alternate forum) as your share of the filing fee, and ACT will pay the remainder of the filing fee. Your share of the filing fee is payable in full when a request for arbitration is filed with the AAA, but will be reimbursed by ACT if you prevail in arbitration and your scores are not cancelled. The only issue for arbitration will be whether ACT acted reasonably and in good faith in deciding to cancel the scores. No damages may be awarded by the arbitrator and each party is responsible for its own fees and expenses, including attorneys’ fees, except as otherwise expressly provided in these Terms and Conditions. No arbitration involving the outcome of an Individual Score Review may be maintained as a class action, and the arbitrator shall not have the authority to combine or aggregate the disputes of more than one individual, conduct any class proceeding, make any class award, or make an award to any person or entity not a party to the arbitration.

C. Compromises/Disruptions in the Testing Process– Limitation of Remedies

ACT takes steps that are intended to ensure that test registrations are correctly processed, tests are properly administered, tests and answer documents are properly handled and scored, and scores are properly reported. In the unlikely event there is an error or other occurrence that compromises or disrupts the testing process, ACT will examine the situation and determine whether it needs to take action, including not scoring answer documents or cancelling scores. Compromises or disruptions that could cause ACT to take action under this paragraph include, but are not limited to, errors in the registration process; errors in preparing, handling, shipping, processing, or scoring answer documents; errors in reporting scores; deviations from standard testing procedures such as events that cause testing at a test center to be cancelled or interrupted, or a mistiming on any part of the test; events or information that raise concerns about possible prohibited behavior, advance access to test content by anyone taking the test, or possible invalid scores; unusual data from a test center such as unusual similarities in the answers of people at the same test center; or any events that otherwise disrupt or compromise the testing process. If ACT determines that it needs to take action in response to any such error or disruption in the testing process, ACT will in its sole discretion (1) correct the error (if an error occurred and ACT believes correction is feasible), (2) not score answer documents or cancel scores and offer each affected person the option to retest at no additional fee (normally on a future National test date), or (3) not score answer documents or cancel scores and offer a refund. To take such action, ACT shall not be required to conduct an Individual Score Review or otherwise demonstrate that a compromise or disruption invalidated your specific score. Decisions made by ACT regarding such compromises or disruptions in the testing process are final. If ACT offers a retest and you select that option (or it is selected for you in State and District testing), you must retake all four multiple-choice tests to produce a valid Composite score. If you took the writing test on the original test date, you may also need to retake the writing test in addition to the four multiple-choice tests to produce a valid English Language Arts score.

For State and District testing: In the event of compromises/disruptions in the testing process, ACT may offer the option to retest at no additional fee or it may cancel the test event without an option for retest.

It is important that ACT ensure that reported scores are not affected by an irregularity, and that ACT inform anyone who has received a score report that the score may not accurately reflect a person’s academic achievement and skills. You therefore agree that ACT may notify score recipients if there is an investigation into the validity of your reported test score and if your score is cancelled. You also agree that ACT may disclose details about a test security investigation to score recipients and to anyone who may be able to assist with an investigation conducted by ACT, such as law enforcement, state departments of education, and local school officials. You agree that ACT will have no liability for exercising any of these rights.

The remedies listed above are the exclusive remedies available for any examinee who experiences an irregularity in the testing process. In no event shall ACT be liable to an examinee for any special, indirect, consequential, exemplary, or punitive damages.

Arbitration of Disputes with ACT

All disputes – other than disputes involving “Individual Score Reviews” (described above) or infringement of ACT’s intellectual property rights – that relate in any way to registering for or taking the ACT test, requesting or receiving accommodations on the ACT test, the reporting of ACT test scores or the use or disclosure of personal information by ACT, shall be resolved by a single arbitrator through binding arbitration administered by the American Arbitration Association (“AAA”), under the AAA Consumer Rules (“AAA Rules”) in effect at the time a request for arbitration is filed with the AAA. Copies of the AAA Rules can be located at www.adr.org. No arbitration may be maintained as a class action, and the arbitrator shall not have the authority to combine or aggregate the disputes of more than one individual, conduct any class proceeding, make any class award, or make an award to any person or entity not a party to the arbitration. By agreeing to arbitration in accordance with these Terms and Conditions, you are waiving your right to have your dispute heard by a judge or jury.

Each party will be responsible for its own fees and expenses incurred in connection with the arbitration, regardless of the outcome of the arbitration, except as otherwise expressly provided in these Terms and Conditions. In no event shall ACT be liable to an examinee for any special, indirect, consequential, exemplary, or punitive damages.

NOTE: Separate procedures apply to arbitration proceedings involving Individual Score Reviews. Those procedures are discussed above, under the heading “Individual Score Reviews.”

Retest Restriction

You may take the ACT no more than 12 times total. This restriction applies even if your scores from a test date are cancelled by you or by ACT.

ACT may cancel your registration, rescind your admission ticket, or take any other steps necessary to enforce this policy. If you violate this restriction, your scores will not be reported or will be cancelled and your fees will not be refunded.

In calculating the 12-test total, ACT makes exceptions for testing required by your district or your state’s Department of Education and tests taken as part of an academic talent search. Other exceptions will be considered only if you submit a request via our online Retest Exception Request Form no later than the regular registration deadline for the test date you would like to be your 13th test date. Exceptions are within ACT’s sole discretion.

ACT Intellectual Property Rights

All ACT tests, test-related documents and materials, and test preparation materials are copyrighted works owned by ACT and protected by the laws of the United States and other countries. Secure (i.e., not made available by ACT to the general public) tests and test questions may not be copied or disclosed at any time. Test-related materials that ACT has made available to the general public, such as materials designated by ACT as sample tests, may not be copied, duplicated or used in any other works, in whole or in part, without the prior written approval of ACT. ACT may pursue all available civil and criminal remedies if its intellectual property rights are violated, including seeking damages and injunctive relief in a court of law and referring such violations to law enforcement authorities for criminal prosecution.

ACT owns all answers and answer sheets you submit, including all essay responses, as well as all score-related data maintained by ACT. The score reports from ACT are your property. However, score reports may not be altered by you or others so as to convey inaccurate or misleading information, and, if ACT cancels the scores reflected on such score reports, those scores may not be provided to third parties.

Changes to These Terms and Conditions

These Terms and Conditions are subject to change. ACT will provide notice of such changes by posting the revised Terms and Conditions on its website. The Terms and Conditions that are posted on ACT’s website when you register to test will apply to you with respect to that test date, along with any changes that may be reflected in revised Terms and Conditions posted to ACT’s website at least forty-eight hours prior to your testing date. The current version of these Terms and Conditions is available at www.act.org/the-act/terms, and you agree to check for revised Terms and Conditions prior to taking the ACT.

All ACT policies referenced in these Terms and Conditions, including the ACT Privacy Policy, are part of these Terms and Conditions and are binding on you, so you should review them carefully. Any questions should be directed to ACT Student Services (www.act.org/the-act/help-contactus) in advance of registering for or taking the test.

Accessibility of These Terms and Conditions to Disabled Individuals

If you have any difficulty accessing these Terms and Conditions because of an impairment, please contact ACT Student Services (www.act.org/the-act/help-contactus) in advance of registering for or taking the ACT test. ACT would be happy to provide these Terms and Conditions in an alternative format, or to assist you in some other manner as reasonably necessary to enable you to access these Terms and Conditions.

Additional Information for South Carolina Testing Program Participants Only

You are taking the ACT test as part of a contract between your state, school district, or school and ACT. To the extent there is any conflict between these Terms and Conditions or the ACT Privacy Policy and the express terms of the contract between your state, school district, or school, and ACT, the terms of that contract shall control.

APPENDIX E

More Information about Eligibility for Federal Student Aid and Drug Convictions

If you were convicted of possession or sale of a controlled substance while you were already receiving federal student aid, you will be ineligible to receive federal student aid for a specified period of time.<sup>2934</sup> This is true whether your conviction was a felony or a misdemeanor. The length of time you are ineligible depends on the type and number of convictions you have had for these offenses committed while you were receiving aid. The law differentiates between “possession of illegal drugs” and “sale of illegal drugs.” The table below lists the period of ineligibility by type of conviction, either possession or sale of a controlled substance and number of offenses:<sup>2935</sup>

OFFENSE	POSSESSION OF ILLEGAL DRUGS	SALE OF ILLEGAL DRUGS
FIRST	1 year of ineligibility from date of conviction	2 years of ineligibility from date of conviction
SECOND	2 years of ineligibility from date of conviction	Indefinite period of ineligibility *
THREE OR MORE	Indefinite period of ineligibility*	Indefinite period of ineligibility *

* An indefinite period of ineligibility continues unless your conviction is overturned or otherwise rendered invalid, or you meet one of the two early reinstatement requirements (see below).

YOU CAN SHORTEN YOUR PERIOD OF INELIGIBILITY BY:<sup>2936</sup>

- Successfully completing an approved drug rehabilitation program that includes passing two unannounced drug tests; or
- Passing two unannounced drug tests administered by an approved drug rehabilitation program; or
- Having the conviction expunged, reversed, set aside, or otherwise rendered invalid (learn more about expungement in the UNDERSTANDING & CLEANING UP YOUR CRIMINAL RECORD CHAPTER, beginning on PG. 931).

HOW ELIGIBILITY IS DETERMINED:

The application for federal student aid asks whether you have been convicted of possession or sale of a controlled substance while receiving federal student aid.<sup>2937</sup> If you answer yes, or leave this question blank, you will be sent an additional worksheet that you must fill out.<sup>2938</sup> This worksheet will yield one of three results:

1. You are currently eligible for federal student aid;
3. You are not eligible for federal student aid for part of the current school year; OR
4. You are not eligible for federal student aid for the entire current school year.<sup>2939</sup>

REMEMBER: Even if you are not currently eligible for federal student aid (either for part or all of the current school year), you can become eligible if you complete an acceptable drug rehabilitation program OR pass two random (unannounced) drug tests administered by an authorized program.<sup>2940</sup>

Free Application for Student Aid (FAFSA)

FAFSA®

FREE APPLICATION for FEDERAL STUDENT AID

July 1, 2015 – June 30, 2016

Federal Student Aid

An OFFICE of the U.S. DEPARTMENT of EDUCATION

PROUD SPONSOR of the AMERICAN MIND®

Use this form to apply free for federal and state student grants, work-study, and loans.

Or apply free online at www.fafsa.gov.

Applying by the Deadlines

For federal aid, submit your application as early as possible, but no earlier than January 1, 2015. We must receive your application no later than June 30, 2016. Your college must have your correct, complete information by your last day of enrollment in the 2015-2016 school year.

For state or college aid, the deadline may be as early as January 2015. See the table to the right for state deadlines. You may also need to complete additional forms.

Check with your high school guidance counselor or a financial aid administrator at your college about state and college sources of student aid and deadlines.

If you are filing close to one of these deadlines, we recommend you file online at www.fafsa.gov. This is the fastest and easiest way to apply for aid.

Using Your Tax Return

We recommend that you complete and submit your FAFSA as soon as possible on or after January 1, 2015. If you (or your parents) need to file a 2014 income tax return with the Internal Revenue Service (IRS), and have not done so yet, you can submit your FAFSA now using estimated tax information, and then you must correct that information after you file your return.

The easiest way to complete or correct your FAFSA with accurate tax information is by using the IRS Data Retrieval Tool through www.fafsa.gov. In a few simple steps, most students and parents who filed a 2014 tax return can view and transfer their tax return information directly into their FAFSA.

Note: Both parents or both the student and spouse may need to report income information on the FAFSA if they did not file a joint tax return for 2014. For assistance with answering the income information questions in this situation, call 1-800-4-FED-AID (1-800-433-3243).

Filling Out the FAFSA®

If you or your family experienced significant changes to your financial situation (such as loss of employment), complete this form to the extent you can and submit it as instructed. Consult with the financial aid office at the college(s) you applied to or plan to attend.

For help in filling out the FAFSA, go to www.studentaid.gov/completfafsa or call 1-800-433-3243. TTY users (for the hearing impaired) may call 1-800-730-8913.

Fill the answer fields directly on your screen or print the form and complete it by hand. Your answers will be read electronically; therefore if you complete the form by hand:

• use black ink and fill in circles completely:

Correct ● Incorrect ⊗ ✓

• print clearly in CAPITAL letters and skip a box between words:

1 5 E L M S T

• report dollar amounts (such as $12,356.41) like this:

$ 1 2 3 5 6 no cents

Yellow is for student information and purple is for parent information.

Mailing Your FAFSA®

After you complete this application, make a copy of pages 3 through 8 for your records. Then mail the original of pages 3 through 8 to:

Federal Student Aid Programs, P.O. Box 7002, Mt. Vernon, IL 62864-0072.

After your application is processed, you will receive a summary of your information in your Student Aid Report (SAR). If you provide an e-mail address, your SAR will be sent by e-mail within three to five days. If you do not provide an e-mail address, your SAR will be mailed to you within three weeks. If you would like to check the status of your FAFSA, go to www.fafsa.gov or call 1-800-433-3243.

Let's Get Started!

Now go to page 3 of the application form and begin filling it out. Refer to the notes as instructed.

STATE AID DEADLINES

Notes for question 8 (page 3)

Enter your Social Security Number (SSN) as it appears on your Social Security card. If you are a resident of the Freely Associated States (i.e., the Republic of Palau, the Republic of the Marshall Islands, or the Federated States of Micronesia) and were issued an identification number beginning with “666” when submitting a FAFSA previously, enter that number here. If you are a first-time applicant from the Freely Associated States, enter “666” in the first three boxes of the SSN field and leave the remaining six positions blank and we will create an identification number to be used for federal student aid purposes.

Notes for questions 14 and 15 (page 3)

If you are an eligible noncitizen, write in your eight- or nine-digit Alien Registration Number. Generally, you are an eligible noncitizen if you are (1) a permanent U.S. resident with a Permanent Resident Card (I-551); (2) a conditional permanent resident with a Conditional Green Card (I-551C); (3) the holder of an Arrival-Departure Record (I-94) from the Department of Homeland Security showing any one of the following designations: “Refugee,” “Asylum Granted,” “Parolee” (I-94 confirms that you were paroled for a minimum of one year and status has not expired), T-Visa holder (T-1, T-2, T-3, etc.) or “Cuban-Haitian Entrant;” or (4) the holder of a valid certification or eligibility letter from the Department of Health and Human Services showing a designation of “Victim of human trafficking.”

If you are in the U.S. and have been granted Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA), an F1 or F2 student visa, a J1 or J2 exchange visitor visa, or a G series visa (pertaining to international organizations), select “No, I am not a citizen or eligible noncitizen.” You will not be eligible for federal student aid. If you have a Social Security Number but are not a citizen or an eligible noncitizen, including if you have been granted DACA, you should still complete the FAFSA because you may be eligible for state or college aid.

Notes for questions 16 and 17 (page 3)

Report your marital status as of the date you sign your FAFSA. If your marital status changes after you sign your FAFSA, check with the financial aid office at the college. Consistent with the Supreme Court decision holding Section 3 of the Defense of Marriage Act (DOMA) unconstitutional, same-sex couples must report their marital status as married if they were legally married in a state or other jurisdiction (foreign country) that permits same-sex marriage, without regard to where the couple resides.

Notes for questions 21 and 22 (page 3)

To be eligible for federal student aid, male citizens and male immigrants residing in the U.S. aged 18 through 25 are required to register with the Selective Service System, with limited exceptions. This requirement applies to any person assigned the sex of male at birth. The Selective Service System and the registration requirement for males preserve America’s ability to provide resources in an emergency to the U.S. Armed Forces (Army, Navy, Air Force, Marines, or Coast Guard). For more information about the Selective Service System, visit www.sss.gov. Forms are available at your local U.S. Post Office.

Notes for questions 33 (page 4) and 81 (page 6)

If you filed or will file a foreign tax return, a tax return with Puerto Rico, another U.S. territory (e.g., Guam, American Samoa, the U.S. Virgin Islands, Swain’s Island or the Northern Marianas Islands) or one of the Freely Associated States, use the information from that return to fill out this form. If you filed a foreign return, convert all monetary units to U.S. dollars, using the exchange rate that is in effect today. To view the daily exchange rate, go to www.federalreserve.gov/releases/h10/current.

Notes for questions 35 (page 4) and 83 (page 6)

In general, a person is eligible to file a 1040A or 1040EZ if he or she makes less than $100,000, does not itemize deductions, does not receive income from his or her own business or farm and does not receive alimony. A person is not eligible to file a 1040A or 1040EZ if he or she makes $100,000 or more, itemizes deductions, receives income from his or her own business or farm, is self-employed, receives alimony or is required to file Schedule D for capital gains. If you filed a 1040 only to claim the American Opportunity Tax Credit or Lifetime Learning Tax Credit, and you would have otherwise been eligible to file a 1040A or 1040EZ, answer “Yes” to this question. If you filed a 1040 and were not required to file a tax return, answer “Yes” to this question.

Notes for questions 38 (page 4)

and 87 (page 7) — Notes for those who filed a 1040EZ

On the 1040EZ, if a person didn’t check either box on line 5, enter 01 if he or she is single or has never been married, or 02 if he or she is married. If a person checked either the “you” or “spouse” box on line 5, use 1040EZ worksheet line F to determine the number of exemptions ($3,950 equals one exemption).

Notes for questions 42 and 43 (page 4), 45j (page 5), and 91 and 92 (page 7)

Net worth means current value minus debt. If net worth is negative, enter 0.

Investments include real estate (do not include the home in which you live), rental property (includes a unit within a family home that has its own entrance, kitchen, and bath rented to someone other than a family member), trust funds, UGMA and UTMA accounts, money market funds, mutual funds, certificates of deposit, stocks, stock options, bonds, other securities, installment and land sale contracts (including mortgages held), commodities, etc.

Investments also include qualified educational benefits or education savings accounts (e.g., Coverdell savings accounts, 529 college savings plans and the refund value of 529 prepaid tuition plans). For a student who does not report parental information, the accounts owned by the student (and/or the student’s spouse) are reported as student investments in question 42. For a student who must report parental information, the accounts are reported as parental investments in question 91, including all accounts owned by the student and all accounts owned by the parents for any member of the household.

Money received, or paid on your behalf, also includes distributions to you (the student beneficiary) from a 529 plan that is owned by someone other than you or your parents (such as your grandparents, aunts, uncles, and non-custodial parents). You must include these distribution amounts in question 45j.

Investments do not include the home you live in, the value of life insurance, retirement plans (401[k] plans, pension funds, annuities, non-education IRAs, Keogh plans, etc.) or cash, savings and checking accounts already reported in questions 41 and 90.

Investments also do not include UGMA and UTMA accounts for which you are the custodian, but not the owner.

Investment value means the current balance or market value of these investments as of today. Investment debt means only those debts that are related to the investments.

Business and/or investment farm value includes the market value of land, buildings, machinery, equipment, inventory, etc. Business and/or investment farm debt means only those debts for which the business or investment farm was used as collateral.

Business value does not include the value of a small business if your family owns and controls more than 50 percent of the business and the business has 100 or fewer full-time or full-time equivalent employees. For small business value, your family includes (1) persons directly related to you, such as a parent, sister or cousin, or (2) persons who are or were related to you by marriage, such as a spouse, stepparent or sister-in-law.

Investment farm value does not include the value of a family farm that you (your spouse and/or your parents) live on and operate.

Step Five (Student): Complete this step only if you (the student) answered "Yes" to any questions in Step Three.

95. How many people are in your household?

- Include:
- yourself (and your spouse),
  - your children, if you will provide more than half of their support between July 1, 2015 and June 30, 2016, and
  - other people if they now live with you, you provide more than half of their support and you will continue to provide more than half of their support between July 1, 2015 and June 30, 2016.

--	--

96. How many people in your (and your spouse's) household (from question 95) will be college students between July 1, 2015 and June 30, 2016? Always count yourself as a college student. Include others only if they will attend, at least half-time in 2015-2016, a program that leads to a college degree or certificate.

--

In 2013 or 2014, did you (or your spouse) or anyone in your household (from question 95) receive benefits from any of the federal programs listed? Mark all that apply. Answering these questions will not reduce eligibility for student aid or these programs. TANF may have a different name in your state. Call 1-800-433-3243 to find out the name of the state's program.

97. Supplemental Security Income (SSI)     98. Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP)     99. Free or Reduced Price Lunch     100. Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF)     101. Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants, and Children (WIC)

102. As of today, are you (or your spouse) a dislocated worker? See Notes page 9.    Yes     No     Don't know

Step Six (Student): Indicate which colleges you want to receive your FAFSA information.

Enter the six-digit federal school code and your housing plans. You can find the school codes at www.fafsa.gov or by calling 1-800-433-3243. If you cannot obtain the code, write in the complete name, address, city and state of the college. The information you report on the FAFSA is sent to each college listed, including the names of the other colleges listed. If you do not want this information sent to a particular college, do not list that school. For federal student aid purposes, it does not matter in what order you list your selected schools. For state aid, you may want to list your preferred college first. To find out how to have more colleges receive your FAFSA information, read What is the FAFSA? on page 10.

Step Seven (Student and Parent): Read, sign and date.

If you are the student, by signing this application you certify that you (1) will use federal and/or state student financial aid only to pay the cost of attending an institution of higher education, (2) are not in default on a federal student loan or have made satisfactory arrangements to repay it, (3) do not owe money back on a federal student grant or have made satisfactory arrangements to repay it, (4) will notify your college if you default on a federal student loan and (5) will not receive a Federal Pell Grant from more than one college for the same period of time.

If you are the parent or the student, by signing this application you certify that all of the information you provided is true and complete to the best of your knowledge and you agree, if asked, to provide information that will verify the accuracy of your completed form. This information may include U.S. or state income tax forms that you filed or are required to file. Also, you certify that you understand that the Secretary of Education has the authority to verify information reported on this application with the Internal Revenue Service and other federal agencies. If you sign any document related to the federal student aid programs electronically using a personal identification number (PIN), username and password, and/or any other credential, you certify that you are the person identified by that PIN, username and password, and/or other credential, and have not disclosed that PIN, username and password, and/or other credential to anyone else. If you purposely give false or misleading information, you may be fined up to $20,000, sent to prison, or both.

Notes for question 53 (page 5)

Answer “Yes” if at any time since you turned age 13:

- You had no living parent, even if you are now adopted; or
- You were in foster care, even if you are no longer in foster care today; or
- You were a dependent or ward of the court, even if you are no longer a dependent or ward of the court today. For federal student aid purposes, someone who is incarcerated is not considered a ward of the court.

The financial aid administrator at your school may require you to provide proof that you were in foster care or a dependent or ward of the court.

Notes for questions 54 and 55 (page 5)

The definition of legal guardianship does not include your parents, even if they were appointed by a court to be your guardians. You are also not considered a legal guardian of yourself.

Answer “Yes” if you can provide a copy of a court’s decision that as of today you are an emancipated minor or are in legal guardianship. Also answer “Yes” if you can provide a copy of a court’s decision that you were an emancipated minor or were in legal guardianship immediately before you reached the age of being an adult in your state. The court must be located in your state of legal residence at the time the court’s decision was issued.

Answer “No” if you are still a minor and the court decision is no longer in effect or the court decision was not in effect at the time you became an adult.

The financial aid administrator at your college may require you to provide proof that you were an emancipated minor or in legal guardianship.

Notes for questions 56–58 (page 5)

Answer “Yes” if you received a determination at any time on or after July 1, 2014, that you were an unaccompanied youth who was homeless or at risk of being homeless.

- “Homeless” means lacking fixed, regular and adequate housing. You may be homeless if you are living in shelters, parks, motels or cars, or are temporarily living with other people because you have nowhere else to go. Also, if you are living in any of these situations and fleeing an abusive parent you may be considered homeless even if your parent would provide support and a place to live.
- “Unaccompanied” means you are not living in the physical custody of your parent or guardian.
- “Youth” means you are 21 years of age or younger or you are still enrolled in high school as of the day you sign this application.

Answer “No” if you are not homeless or at risk of being homeless, or do not have a determination. You should contact your financial aid office for assistance if you do not have a determination but believe you are an unaccompanied youth who is homeless or are an unaccompanied youth providing for your own living expenses who is at risk of being homeless.

The financial aid administrator at your college may require you to provide a copy of the determination if you answered “Yes” to any of these questions.

Notes for students unable to provide parental information on pages 6 and 7

Under very limited circumstances (for example, your parents are incarcerated; you have left home due to an abusive family environment; or you do not know where your parents are and are unable to contact them), you may be able to submit your FAFSA without parental information. If you are unable to provide parental information, skip Steps Four and Five, and go to Step Six. Once you submit your FAFSA without parental data, you must follow up with the financial aid office at the college you plan to attend, in order to complete your FAFSA.

Notes for Step Four, questions 59–94 (pages 6 and 7)

Review all instructions below to determine who is considered a parent on this form:

- If your parent was never married and does not live with your other legal parent, or if your parent is widowed or not remarried, answer the questions about that parent.
- If your legal parents (biological, adoptive, or as determined by the state [for example, if the parent is listed on the birth certificate]) are not married to each other and live together, select “Unmarried and both parents living together” and provide information about both of them regardless of their gender. Do not include any person who is not married to your parent and who is not a legal or biological parent. Contact 1-800-433-3243 for assistance in completing questions 80-94.
- If your legal parents are married, select “Married or remarried.” Consistent with the Supreme Court decision holding Section 3 of the Defense of Marriage Act (DOMA) unconstitutional, same-sex couples must be reported as married if they were legally married in a state or other jurisdiction (foreign country) that permits same-sex marriage, without regard to where the couple resides. If your legal parents are divorced but living together, select “Unmarried and both parents living together.” If your legal parents are separated but living together, select “Married or remarried,” not “Divorced or separated.”
- If your parents are divorced or separated, answer the questions about the parent you lived with more during the past 12 months. (If you did not live with one parent more than the other, give answers about the parent who provided more financial support during the past 12 months or during the most recent year that you actually received support from a parent.) If this parent is remarried as of today, answer the questions about that parent and your stepparent.
- If your widowed parent is remarried as of today, answer the questions about that parent and your stepparent.

Notes for questions 84 (page 6) and 102 (page 8)

In general, a person may be considered a dislocated worker if he or she:

- is receiving unemployment benefits due to being laid off or losing a job and is unlikely to return to a previous occupation;
- has been laid off or received a lay-off notice from a job;
- was self-employed but is now unemployed due to economic conditions or natural disaster; or
- is the spouse of an active duty member of the Armed Forces and has experienced a loss of employment because of relocating due to permanent change in duty station; or
- is the spouse of an active duty member of the Armed Forces and is a displaced homemaker (as described below); or
- is a displaced homemaker. A displaced homemaker is generally a person who previously provided unpaid services to the family (e.g., a stay-at-home mom or dad), is no longer supported by the spouse, is unemployed or underemployed, and is having trouble finding or upgrading employment.

Except for the spouse of an active duty member of the Armed Forces, if a person quits work, generally he or she is not considered a dislocated worker even if, for example, the person is receiving unemployment benefits.

Answer “Yes” to question 84 if your parent is a dislocated worker. Answer “Yes” to question 102 if you or your spouse is a dislocated worker.

Answer “No” to question 84 if your parent is not a dislocated worker. Answer “No” to question 102 if neither you nor your spouse is a dislocated worker.

Answer “Don’t know” to question 84 if you are not sure whether your parent is a dislocated worker. Answer “Don’t know” to question 102 if you are not sure whether you or your spouse is a dislocated worker. You can contact your financial aid office for assistance in answering these questions.

The financial aid administrator at your college may require you to provide proof that your parent is a dislocated worker, if you answered “Yes” to question 84, or that you or your spouse is a dislocated worker, if you answered “Yes” to question 102.

What is the FAFSA® ?

Why fill out a FAFSA?

The Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) is the first step in the financial aid process. You use the FAFSA to apply for federal student aid, such as grants, work-study, and loans. In addition, most states and colleges use information from the FAFSA to award nonfederal aid.

Why all the questions?

The questions on the FAFSA are required to calculate your Expected Family Contribution (EFC). The EFC measures your family's financial strength and is used to determine your eligibility for federal student aid. Your state and the colleges you list may also use some of your responses. They will determine if you may be eligible for school or state aid, in addition to federal aid.

How do I find out what my Expected Family Contribution (EFC) is?

Your EFC will be listed on your Student Aid Report (SAR). Your SAR summarizes the information you submitted on your FAFSA. It is important to review your SAR to make sure all of your information is correct and complete. Make corrections or provide additional information, as necessary.

How much aid will I receive?

Using the information on your FAFSA and your EFC, the financial aid office at your college will determine the amount of aid you will receive. The college will use your EFC to prepare a financial aid package to help you meet your financial need. Financial need is the difference between your EFC and your college's cost of attendance (which can include living expenses), as determined by the college. If you or your family have unusual circumstances that should be taken into account, contact your college's financial aid office. Some examples of unusual circumstances are: unusual medical or dental expenses or a large change in income from last year to this year.

When will I receive the aid?

Any financial aid you are eligible to receive will be paid to you through your college. Typically, your college will first use the aid to pay tuition, fees and room and board (if provided by the college). Any remaining aid is paid to you for your other educational expenses. If you are eligible for a Federal Pell Grant, you may receive it from only one college for the same period of enrollment.

How can I have more colleges receive my FAFSA information?

If you are completing a paper FAFSA, you can only list four colleges in the school code step. You may add more colleges by doing one of the following:

1. After your FAFSA has been processed, go to FAFSA on the Web at www.fafsa.gov. Click the "Login" button on the home page to log in to FAFSA on the Web, then click "Make FAFSA Corrections."
2. Use the Student Aid Report (SAR), which you will receive after your FAFSA is processed. Your Data Release Number (DRN) verifies your identity and will be listed on the first page of your SAR. You can call 1-800-433-3243 and provide your DRN to a customer service representative, who will add more school codes for you.
3. Provide your DRN to the financial aid administrator at the college you want added, and he or she can add their school code to your FAFSA.

Note: Your FAFSA record can only list up to ten school codes. If there are ten school codes on your record, any new school codes that you add will replace one or more of the school codes listed.

Where can I receive more information on student aid?

The best place for information about student financial aid is the financial aid office at the college you plan to attend. The financial aid administrator can tell you about student aid available from your state, the college itself and other sources.

- You can also visit our web site StudentAid.gov.
- For information by phone you can call our Federal Student Aid Information Center at 1-800-433-3243. TTY users (for the hearing impaired) may call 1-800-730-8913.
- You can also check with your high school counselor, your state aid agency or your local library's reference section.

Information about other nonfederal assistance may be available from foundations, religious organizations, community organizations and civic groups, as well as organizations related to your field of interest, such as the American Medical Association or American Bar Association. Check with your parents' employers or unions to see if they award scholarships or have tuition payment plans.

Information on the Privacy Act and use of your Social Security Number

We use the information that you provide on this form to determine if you are eligible to receive federal student financial aid and the amount that you are eligible to receive. Sections 483 and 484 of the Higher Education Act of 1965, as amended, give us the authority to ask you and your parents these questions, and to collect the Social Security Numbers of you and your parents. We use your Social Security Number to verify your identity and retrieve your records, and we may request your Social Security Number again for those purposes.

State and institutional student financial aid programs may also use the information that you provide on this form to determine if you are eligible to receive state and institutional aid and the need that you have for such aid. Therefore, we will disclose the information that you provide on this form to each institution you list in questions 103a - 103h, state agencies in your state of legal residence and the state agencies of the states in which the colleges that you list in questions 103a - 103h are located.

If you are applying solely for federal aid, you must answer all of the following questions that apply to you: 1-9, 14-16, 18, 21-23, 26, 28-29, 32-37, 39-59, 61-68, 70, 73-86, 88-102, 104-105. If you do not answer these questions, you will not receive federal aid.

Without your consent, we may disclose information that you provide to entities under a published "routine use." Under such a routine use, we may disclose information to third parties that we have authorized to assist us in administering the above programs; to other federal agencies under computer matching programs, such as those with the Internal Revenue Service, Social Security Administration, Selective Service System, Department of Homeland Security, Department of Justice and Veterans Affairs; to your parents or spouse; and to members of Congress if you ask them to help you with student aid questions.

If the federal government, the U.S. Department of Education, or an employee of the U.S. Department of Education is involved in litigation, we may send information to the Department of Justice, or a court or adjudicative body, if the disclosure is related to financial aid and certain conditions are met. In addition, we may send your information to a foreign, federal, state, or local enforcement agency if the information that you submitted indicates a violation or potential violation of law, for which that agency has jurisdiction for investigation or prosecution. Finally, we may send information regarding a claim that is determined to be valid and overdue to a consumer reporting agency. This information includes identifiers from the record; the amount, status and history of the claim; and the program under which the claim arose.

State Certification

By submitting this application, you are giving your state financial aid agency permission to verify any statement on this form and to obtain income tax information for all persons required to report income on this form.

The Paperwork Reduction Act of 1995

According to the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1995, no persons are required to respond to a collection of information unless such collection displays a valid OMB control number. The valid OMB control number for this information collection is 1845-0001. Public reporting burden for this collection of information is estimated to average two hours per response, including time for reviewing instructions, searching existing data sources, gathering and maintaining the data needed, and completing and reviewing the collection of information. The obligation to respond to this collection is voluntary. If you have comments or concerns regarding the status of your individual submission of this form, please contact the Federal Student Aid Information Center, P.O. Box 84, Washington, D.C. 20044 directly. [Note: Please do not return the completed form to this address.]

We may request additional information from you to process your application more efficiently. We will collect this additional information only as needed and on a voluntary basis.

APPENDIX G

Cal Grant Eligibility (California Education Code section 69422.8 (Text))

IMPLEMENTATION OF Assembly Bill 1899: Victims of Trafficking, Domestic Violence and other Serious Crimes

AB 1899, chaptered in September of 2012, provides for a non-resident enrollment fee exemption for "Victims of trafficking, domestic violence and other serious crimes". In addition, the legislation allows these students to apply for and, if eligible, receive financial aid from programs administered by public postsecondary institutions or the state of California. Finally, the legislation provides that enrollment fees shall be waived for these students who apply for and are eligible to receive Board of Governor enrollment fee waivers.

This PROMISE GRANT application is for California residents, students eligible under AB 540 and under AB 1899 as determined by the Admissions or Registrar's Office, and for homeless youth as determined by the Financial Aid Office. If you have not had your California residency or eligibility status determined by the Admissions or the Registrar or homeless status determined by the Financial Aid Office, see one of those offices to obtain the determination. Promise Grant eligibility cannot be determined until your status has been verified.

Has the Admissions or Registrar's Office determined that you are a California resident?  Yes  No

If no, has the Admissions/Registrar's Office determined you are eligible for a non-resident tuition exemption as an AB 540 student?  Yes  No

If no, has the Admissions or Registrar's Office determined that you are eligible for a non-resident tuition exemption granted as a result of you residing in the United States with a "T" or "U" visa (immigration status under Section 1101(a)(15)(T)(i) or (ii), or Section 1101 (a)(15)(U)(i) or (ii), of Title 8 of the United States Code)?  Yes  No

Has the Financial Aid Office verified that you have been without a residence in the last 24 months (homeless)?
If you have been homeless but not verified, check "Yes" and contact the Financial Aid Office.  Yes  No

IMPLEMENTATION OF THE CALIFORNIA DOMESTIC PARTNER RIGHTS AND RESPONSIBILITIES ACT

The California Domestic Partner Rights and Responsibilities Act extends rights, benefits, responsibilities and obligations to individuals in domestic partnerships registered with the California Secretary of State under Section 297 of the Family Code. If you are in a Registered Domestic Partnership (RDP), or legal same sex marriage, you will be treated as an Independent married student to determine Enrollment Fee Waiver eligibility and will need to provide income and household information for your domestic partner. If you are a dependent student and your parent is in a Registered Domestic Partnership, or legal same sex marriage, you will be treated the same as a student with married parents and income and household information will be required for the parent's domestic partner.

Note: These provisions apply to state student financial aid ONLY, and not to federal student financial aid.

Are you or your parent in a Registered Domestic Partnership with the California Secretary of State under Section 297 of the Family Code? (Answer "Yes" if you or your parent are separated from a Registered Domestic Partner but have NOT FILED a Notice of Termination of Domestic Partnership with the California Secretary of State's Office.)  Yes  No

If you answered "Yes" to the question above, treat the Registered Domestic Partner as a spouse. You are required to include your domestic partner's income and household information or your parent's domestic partner's income and household information in Questions 4, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17.

Student Marital Status

Single  Married  Divorced  Separated  Widowed  Registered Domestic Partnership

DEPENDENCY STATUS

The questions below will determine whether you are considered a Dependent student or Independent student for fee waiver eligibility and whether parental information is needed. If you answer "Yes" to ANY of the questions 1-10 below, you will be considered an INDEPENDENT student. If you answer "No" to all questions, you will be considered a Dependent student thereby reporting parental information and should continue with Question 11.

1. Were you born before January 1, 1995?  Yes  No
2. As of today, are you married or in a Registered Domestic Partnership (RDP)? (Answer "Yes" if you are separated but not divorced or have not filed a termination notice to dissolve partnership.)  Yes  No
3. Are you a veteran of the U.S. Armed Forces or currently serving on active duty for purposes other than training?  Yes  No
4. Do you have children who will receive more than half of their support from you between July 1, 2018- June 30, 2019, or other dependents who live with you (other than your children or spouse/RDP) who receive more than half of their support from you, now and through June 30, 2019  Yes  No
5. At any time since you turned age 13, were both your parents deceased, were you in foster care, or were you a dependent or ward of the court?  Yes  No
6. Are you or were you an emancipated minor as determined by a court in your state of legal residence?  Yes  No
7. Are you or were you in legal guardianship as determined by a court in your state of legal residence?  Yes  No
8. At any time on or after July 1, 2017, did your high school or school district homeless liaison determine that you were an unaccompanied youth who was homeless  Yes  No
9. At any time on or after July 1, 2017, did the director of an emergency shelter or transitional housing program funded by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development determine that you were an unaccompanied youth who was homeless?  Yes  No
10. At any time on or after July 1, 2017, did the director of a runaway or homeless youth basic center or transitional living program determine that you were an unaccompanied youth who was homeless or were self-supporting and at risk of being homeless?  Yes  No

- If you answered "Yes" to any of the questions 1 - 10, you are considered an INDEPENDENT student for enrollment fee waiver purposes and must provide income and household information about yourself (and your spouse or RDP if applicable). Skip to Question #13.

- If you answered "No" to all questions 1 - 10, complete the following questions:

11. If your parent(s) or his/her RDP filed or will file a 2016 U.S. Income Tax Return, were you, or will you be claimed on their tax return as an exemption by either or both of your parents?  Will Not File  Yes  No
12. Do you live with one or both of your parent(s) and/or his/her RDP?  Yes  No

- If you answered "No" to questions 1 - 10 and "Yes" to either question 11 or 12, you must provide income and household information about your PARENT(S)/RDP. Please answer questions for a DEPENDENT student in the sections that follow.

- If you answered "No" or "Parent(s) will not file" to question 11, and "No" to question 12, you are a dependent student for all student aid except this enrollment fee waiver. You may answer questions as an INDEPENDENT student on the rest of this application, but please try to get your PARENT information and file a FAFSA so you may be considered for other student aid. You cannot get other student aid without your parent(s)' information.

13. Are you (the student ONLY) currently receiving monthly cash assistance for yourself or any dependents from:
- TANF/CalWORKs?  Yes  No
- SSI/SSP (Supplemental Security Income/State Supplemental Program)?  Yes  No
- General Assistance?  Yes  No
14. If you are a dependent student, are your parent(s)/RDP receiving monthly cash assistance from TANF/CalWORKs or SSI/SSP as a primary source of income?  Yes  No

If you answered "Yes" to question 13 or 14 you are eligible for a CALIFORNIA COLLEGE PROMISE GRANT. Sign the Certification at the end of this form. You are required to show current proof of benefits. Submit application and documentation to the financial aid office.

METHOD B PROMISE GRANT QUESTIONS

15. DEPENDENT STUDENT: How many persons are in your parent(s)/RDP household? (Include yourself, your parent(s)/RDP, and anyone who lives with your parent(s)/RDP and receives more than 50% of their support from your parents/RDP, now and through June 30, 2019.) _____

The Financial Aid Office will review your income and let you know if you qualify for a CALIFORNIA PROMISE GRANT under Method B. Submit application and documentation to the financial aid office.

If you do not qualify using Method A or Method B, you should file a FAFSA (for U.S. citizens or eligible non-citizens) or the California Dream Application (for undocumented AB 540 students). The FAFSA is available at www.fafsa.gov and the Dream Application is available at <https://dream.csac.ca.gov/>. Contact the Financial Aid Office for more information.

SPECIAL CLASSIFICATIONS ENROLLMENT Fee Waivers

18. Do you have certification from the CA Department of Veterans Affairs that you are eligible for a dependent's fee waiver? Submit certification.  Yes  No
19. Do you have certification from the National Guard Adjutant General that you are eligible for a dependent's fee waiver? Submit certification.  Yes  No
20. Are you eligible as a recipient of the Congressional Medal of Honor or as a child of a recipient? Submit documentation from the Department of Veterans Affairs.  Yes  No
21. Are you eligible as a dependent of a victim of the September 11, 2001, terrorist attack? Submit documentation from the CA Victim Compensation and Government Claims Board.  Yes  No
22. Are you eligible as a dependent of a deceased law enforcement/fire suppression personnel killed in the line of duty? Submit documentation from the public agency employer of record.  Yes  No

- If you answered "Yes" to any of the questions from 18-22, you are eligible for an ENROLLMENT FEE WAIVER and perhaps other fee waivers or adjustments. Sign the Certification below. Submit application and documentation to the financial aid office. Contact the Financial Aid Office if you have questions.

CERTIFICATION FOR ALL APPLICANTS: READ THIS STATEMENT AND SIGN BELOW

I hereby swear or affirm, under penalty of perjury, that all information on this form is true and complete to the best of my knowledge. If asked by an authorized official, I agree to provide proof of this information, which may include a copy of my and my spouse/registered domestic partner and/or my parent's/registered domestic partner's 2016 U.S. Income Tax Return(s). I also realize that any false statement or failure to give proof when asked may be cause for the denial, reduction, withdrawal, and/or repayment of my waiver. I authorize release of information regarding this application between the college, the college district, and the Chancellor's Office of the California Community Colleges.

I understand the following information (please check each box):

- Federal and state financial aid programs are available to help with college costs (including enrollment fees, books & supplies, transportation and room and board expenses). By completing the FAFSA or the California Dream Application, additional financial assistance may be available in the form of Cal Grants, Pell and other grants, work study and other aid.
- I may apply for and receive financial assistance if I am enrolled, either full time or part time, in an eligible program of study (certificate, associate degree or transfer).
- Financial aid program information and application assistance is available in the college financial aid office.

CALIFORNIA INFORMATION PRIVACY ACT

State and federal laws protect an individual's right to privacy regarding information pertaining to oneself. The California Information Practices Act of 1977 requires the following information be provided to financial aid applicants who are asked to supply information about themselves. The principal purpose for requesting information on this form is to determine your eligibility for financial aid. The Chancellor's Office policy and the policy of the community college to which you are applying for aid authorize maintenance of this information. Failure to provide such information will delay and may even prevent your receipt of financial assistance. This form's information may be transmitted to other state agencies and the federal government if required by law. Individuals have the right of access to records established from information furnished on this form as it pertains to them.

The officials responsible for maintaining the information contained on this form are the financial aid administrators at the institutions to which you are applying for financial aid. The SSN may be used to verify your identity under record keeping systems established prior to January 1, 1975. If your college requires you to provide an SSN and you have questions, you should ask the financial aid officer at your college for further information. The Chancellor's Office and the California community colleges, in compliance with federal and state laws, do not discriminate on the basis of race, religion, color, national origin, gender, age, disability, medical condition, sexual orientation, domestic partnership or any other legally protected basis. Inquiries regarding these policies may be directed to the financial aid office of the college to which you are applying.

Vera Institute Fact Sheet on Building Effective Partnerships for High-Quality Postsecondary Education in Correctional Facilities

Building Effective Partnerships for High-Quality Postsecondary Education in Correctional Facilities

JANUARY 2016

FACT SHEET

In 2015, the United States Department of Education announced the Second Chance Pell Pilot Program, aimed at supporting postsecondary education programs for people in prison. The success of such programs and the students they serve depends on the quality of partnerships between colleges and corrections agencies. To support the implementation of new partnerships and strengthen existing ones, this fact sheet shares lessons learned from the development and implementation of Vera's Unlocking Potential: Pathways from Prison to Postsecondary Education demonstration project, launched in 2012.

Pell Grants for Incarcerated Students

Starting in 1972, the federal Pell Grant provided need-based grants to low-income undergraduate students, including students who were incarcerated. However, in the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994, eligibility for students incarcerated in state and federal prisons was revoked. Twenty years later, the Second Chance Pell Pilot Program aims to once again open Pell Grant eligibility to incarcerated students, making college a possibility for thousands of students in prisons across the country. To date, over 200 postsecondary institutions have applied to participate. In spring 2016, the Department of Education will select a limited number of postsecondary education institutions, in partnership with correctional facilities, to participate in this initiative. Students in local jails and juvenile facilities continue to be eligible for Pell Grants.

WHY POSTSECONDARY EDUCATION FOR INCARCERATED PEOPLE MATTERS

- > Incarcerated people need educational opportunities. From 1972 to 2010, the number of people incarcerated in prison increased 700 percent, from 174,379 to 1,403,091. A significant proportion of this increase was concentrated among people with no college education<sup>1</sup>
- > Postsecondary education promotes safer communities. Incarcerated people who participate in prison education programs are 43 percent less likely to recidivate than those who do not.<sup>2</sup>
- > Postsecondary education is cost-effective. It offers a 400 percent return on investment over three years for taxpayers, or $5 saved for every $1 spent.<sup>3</sup>
- > Postsecondary education improves the quality of life for individuals, families, and communities. Those who participate while in prison experience increased opportunities for employment and earnings, increased intergenerational educational achievement, and more frequent and meaningful civic engagement.<sup>4</sup>
- > Postsecondary education in prison improves safety.<sup>5</sup> Facilities with college programs report fewer conduct issues and less violence, making the prison safer for staff and incarcerated people alike.

DEVELOPING COLLEGE-CORRECTIONS PARTNERSHIPS

To ensure growth and success, partnerships between institutions of higher education and corrections agencies should have clear and purposeful guidelines in place. These partnerships should aim to:

- > Develop a shared understanding of what is needed programmatically and logistically to support a high-quality postsecondary education program.
- > Be clear, intentional, and honest about what can be done—don't overpromise or oversell deliverables.
- > Develop and execute a written agreement that details shared goals, a commitment to partnering, and each institution's roles and responsibilities integral to the success of the program. This agreement should be reviewed and updated annually based on actual implementation experience.
- > Develop and update policies, procedures, and processes that promote and strengthen the efficacy of the partnership in supporting postsecondary education programs. These policies should identify the specific needs of the correctional facility and participating college and corrections organizations. (See "Teaching in Prison.")
- > Implement and maintain regularly scheduled meetings between college and corrections representatives to foster relationship- and trust-building, engage in ongoing planning, and troubleshoot emerging issues and challenges.
- > Innovate, but learn from prior and existing efforts so as to avoid repeating unnecessary mistakes in implementation and execution.

Only 35 to 42 percent of state prison facilities report providing college courses to incarcerated individuals.<sup>6</sup>

Teaching in Prison

Teaching in prison can come with unexpected challenges. For example, faculty will need to get security clearance to enter the facility, which may take weeks and require corrections trainings. Once clearance is acquired, both students and faculty members may still require escorts from corrections officers to reach their classrooms. Because students in a classroom may not be allowed to wait unsupervised for the instructor to arrive, even slight delays in arriving at the facility can wreak havoc on corrections schedules. This may result in the facility cancelling the day's class, leading to frustration for all parties involved.

College program administrators should also take into account facility transfers. People in prison do not typically serve their full sentence in a single facility and transfers to other facilities can occur at any time during the academic year. Transfers to facilities without college programs or that inhibit instructors from reaching their students to complete coursework can stall or end academic progress, wasting program dollars or student financial aid. Pending transfers are often kept confidential for security reasons, even from facility staff. Those planning college programs should work with corrections partners to plan for the eventuality of facility transfers well in advance. Where feasible, transfer "holds" should be utilized for enrolled students.

In addition, classroom space is often at a premium in facilities, where many educational and therapeutic courses may be running at a given time. Scheduling class times can be challenging and should begin well in advance of the semester start. The development of course schedules should also consider students' work schedules, as their limited wages are necessary to purchase food and other supplies, as well as to save money in advance of release.

ENSURING QUALITY IN POSTSECONDARY EDUCATION PROGRAMS

To ensure that students are better able to seek admission to college programs post-release, transfer credits, or be competitive with college graduates in the community, the quality and content of college programming should be in all material ways equivalent to that offered to students on campuses in the community. Thus, college faculty must view the classroom in prison as an important space where students are challenged to think, question, learn, and grow, just as they would in a classroom on any college campus in the community. To achieve this, corrections and higher education partners should aim to:

- > Incorporate the students' voices in program planning and as an important component of continuous program improvement. This can be accomplished, for example, through student advisory boards or councils.
- > Offer only credit-bearing courses that are transferable to colleges in the communities to which incarcerated students return, and/or developmental courses (ideally accelerated) that directly prepare students for credit-bearing work. Moving students to credit-bearing coursework faster minimizes the risk of students giving up out of frustration or being removed from the program because of release or transfer prior to earning college credits. It also ensures that scarce program dollars go to transferable, credit-bearing coursework that can be used toward a degree or other credential.
- > Establish clear articulation agreements ensuring credits can be transferred from in-prison courses to community-based postsecondary institutions.
- > Plan courses that offer credits that build progressively (i.e., "stackable credentials") so that students may attain certificates and associate's and bachelor's degrees using placement tests and transcript reviews. For career and technical education, consider workforce demands in the localities to which students will return in determining course offerings.
- > Recruit instructors with equivalent credentials and experience as those on campuses in the community. Whether adjunct or full-time, professors must have the experience and knowledge necessary to ensure students in prison have equitable opportunities for education.
- > Develop a plan to provide academic support to students in prison, such as access to computers and Internet research technology, access to library and other research materials, tutoring, and dedicated times or places for study.
- > Plan graduation and student achievement ceremonies well in advance, including a review of all relevant academic and prison policies and procedures. Discuss expectations regarding event procedures and requirements in detail.

In the academic year 2009 to 2010, fewer than 71,000 prisoners in 43 states participated in postsecondary education programs—just six percent of the total state prison population in the United States.<sup>7</sup>

SUPPORTING EDUCATION POST-RELEASE

Academic support is imperative for students to continue their college education after they are released from prison. Stressors related to transitioning from life in confinement to life in the community complicate the other barriers students face—such as academic preparedness, financial challenges, and a lack of social support. Corrections and higher education partners should aim to:

- > Counsel students about enrolling in and transferring credits to postsecondary institutions following release from prison, including assistance in filing college admissions applications, financial aid forms, and links to post-release student support services on campus, such as tutoring and scholarship information.
- > Connect students to post-release reentry or basic needs support, such as substance abuse treatment, health, housing, transitional jobs, etc. This should include identifying specific staff at colleges or reentry organizations that can ensure the continuity of transition support.

- > Explain partnership goals to the relevant community-corrections staff, addressing curfews that interfere with evening class times, work requirements that supersede educational goals, supervision meetings that occur during class times, and other rules that can negatively impact academic persistence and success. (For example, rules that prohibit formerly incarcerated students from interacting with each other discount proven research that peer support is vital to adjusting to and successfully navigating the post-release college environment.)
- > Explain partnership goals to the relevant community-based college staff and identify champions on campus who can mentor post-release students.
- > Develop peer networks for formerly incarcerated students on college campuses to affirm identity and provide a means to connect with others who have faced similar challenges in returning home and continuing their education.

For More Information

The Vera Institute of Justice is an independent nonprofit organization that combines research, demonstration projects, and technical assistance to help leaders in government and civil society improve the systems people rely on for justice and safety.

Through the Unlocking Potential: Pathways from Prison to Postsecondary Education Project, Vera is providing three competitively selected states—Michigan, New Jersey, and North Carolina—with incentive funding and technical assistance to expand access to higher education for people in prison and those recently released.

For all college programs and their corrections partners working with justice-involved communities, Vera provides an online resource center, available through the Expanding Access to Postsecondary Education Project. There, policymakers and practitioners interested in developing or enhancing high-quality postsecondary education programs in corrections facilities and in the community can access technical assistance tools, publications, and webinars. Find resources and more at www.vera.org/project/expanding-access-postsecondary-education.

This project is supported by Grant No. 2014-DP-BX K006, awarded by the Bureau of Justice Assistance. Points of view or opinions in this document are those of the authors and do not necessarily represent the official position or policies of the U.S. Department of Justice.

APPENDIX K

IDEAS ON WHERE TO GO FOR SUPPORT - FROM ROOT & REBOUND'S TOOLKIT: MY EDUCATION, MY FREEDOM

ONE OF THE COMMON CONCERNS that formerly incarcerated students raised in the creation of this Toolkit was the importance of finding social support on campus—people and groups who can relate to you and who you can trust for advice.

Below are groups and people that can support you on your educational journey.

Five Keys: Free school that offers educational assessments, adult basic education (ABE), and GED/High School Equivalency test preparation. Find out where they are located and contact information on page 17.

Campus Groups for Formerly Incarcerated Students: Many community colleges and an increasing number of four-year colleges and universities in California have formed groups specifically for system-impacted and formerly incarcerated students on campus. For a complete list of these programs, visit the website: www.correctionstocollegeca.org.

EOPS, EOP, and Puente: Offered on some California public college campuses, these programs provide students from disadvantaged backgrounds additional resources, mentorship, academic counseling, and sometimes financial assistance. While not everyone who applies can join these programs, their staff will likely have a lot of helpful information and advice for system-impacted and formerly incarcerated students.

College campus groups for first-generation students: If you are the first person in your family to attend college or graduate school, seek out any groups for first-generation students.

The Way-Pass program serves formerly incarcerated women attending City College of San Francisco. It serves as a bridge for women transitioning from incarceration to education and strives to increase retention and educational completion rates among formerly incarcerated women at CCSF. For more information please call 415-452-4889 or email waypass@gmail.com.

Project Rebound: Project Rebound is a special admissions program that helps formerly incarcerated individuals enter the California State University system. It is currently available at SFSU, San Bernardino, Bakersfield, Fullerton, Pomona, Sacramento, Fresno, and San Diego. The program offers special admissions for men and women who might not normally qualify for university acceptance because of application deadlines and minor academic deficiencies. This program is supported by the Associated Students and many other departments in the California state system.

Academic, financial aid, and career counselors: Most schools have academic, financial aid, and career counselors, who know the requirements to get through that specific school very well. Reach out to these advisors often. (One thing to keep in mind is that campus career counselors are not lawyers, so if you have a question specifically about how your conviction or arrest record will affect your ability to get a specific job or license/certificate, it is a good idea to talk to a reentry lawyer.)

Community-Based Organizations and Nonprofits: Look for organizations in your city or county that serve people in reentry and people impacted by the criminal justice system.

Root & Rebound: Root & Rebound provides free legal resources, education, and assistance to people with criminal records and those who support them. Call 510-279-4662 for more information.

211 for Referrals: You can call 211 in most counties to get a referral for any need that comes up for you while in school (for example, health care, public benefits, child care, food, legal services, reentry support, etc.) This map shows you which counties 211 operates in (in dark gray).

UNDERSTANDING & CLEANING UP YOUR CRIMINAL RECORD

In the UNDERSTANDING & CLEANING UP YOUR CRIMINAL RECORD CHAPTER, you will first learn the importance of understanding your records—where that information exists in the world, and how to fix mistakes in your record early on in reentry.

In the second part of the Chapter, you will learn that you may be able to “clean up” your criminal record through different kinds of “expungement” in California. Expungement helps to protect your criminal history information and keep it out of sight for certain people. In most cases, “cleaning up” your criminal record WON’T completely erase it, but it CAN make past convictions and other criminal history less visible to many, which has many benefits in different areas of your life, including applying to housing, jobs, and more.

DISCLAIMER - YOUR RESPONSIBILITY WHEN USING THIS GUIDE: When putting together the Roadmap to Reentry: A California Legal Guide, we did our best to give you useful and accurate information. However, the laws change frequently and are subject to differing interpretations. We do not always have the resources to make changes to this informational material every time the law changes. If you use information from the Roadmap to Reentry legal guide, it is your responsibility to make sure that the law has not changed and applies to your particular situation. If you are incarcerated, most of the materials you need should be available in your institution’s law library. The Roadmap to Reentry guide is not intending to give legal advice, but rather legal information. No attorney-client relationship is created by using any information in this guide. You should always consult your own attorney if you need legal advice specific to your situation.

I. INTRODUCTION

This UNDERSTANDING & CLEANING UP YOUR RECORD CHAPTER is broken up into the following subjects:

- Key Concepts For Understanding Your Criminal Record & Fixing Errors (PG. 937), which explains the different types of criminal records that you may have, what information can (and can't) be included in your criminal records and on background checks, and why it's important to review and understand your own criminal records.
- Who Can See Your Criminal Record (PG. 948), which gives you the different rules for who CAN and CAN'T see your criminal records and/or run a background check on you (like employers, law enforcement agencies, licensing agencies, and landlords), and how they can use the information they get about you.
- How to Get Your Criminal Records (PG. 950), which tells you how to get copies of the different types of criminal records you may have. You will need these in order to decide the best way to clean up your record.
- How to Clean Up Your Record (PG. 953), which explains the different options, or "remedies," available for cleaning up your record. It helps you figure out whether you and your offense are eligible for them, and walks you through how to do each one.

If you are recently released from prison or jail, or earlier in the reentry journey, the sections about key concepts in understanding your record and fixing errors, learning who can and cannot see your criminal record information, and how you can get copies are the most important early on.

If you are later in your reentry journey, cleaning up your record will become more important to you over time, as many of these "expungement" options are only available to people off supervision or those who are able by law to ask to get off supervision early.

II. KEY CONCEPTS FOR UNDERSTANDING YOUR CRIMINAL RECORD & FIXING ERRORS—EARLY IN REENTRY

This is one of the most important sections for people early in their reentry journey—to better understand your criminal record, learn how to fix errors, and be prepared for what others can and cannot find out about you and your record.

WHAT IS A CRIMINAL RECORD?

Your "criminal record" is the broad term we use to include ALL of the information created about any contact you've had with law enforcement, the courts, or another part of the criminal justice system. Your "criminal record" includes arrests, charges filed against you, convictions, pleas, acquittals, dismissals, sentences, and any other contact you have had with law enforcement and/or the criminal justice system that was documented (written down).

Here are some examples of how your contact with law enforcement or the criminal justice system can get documented. All of this information is considered part of your criminal record (but note that much of it may be PROTECTED from being seen):

- You were pulled over while driving and arrested for a DUI;
- You received a citation for public disorderliness or having an open container in public;
- You were arrested, and the police wrote up an arrest record;
- You were taken to jail, booked into the system, and fingerprinted;
- You were charged with a crime;
- You were arraigned (appeared before a judge) in court and pleaded guilty or not guilty;
- You were convicted of a crime and sentenced to prison or jail, and the judge wrote a sentencing order;
- You were acquitted of the charges after a trial;
- You agreed to a plea bargain with the prosecutor. In exchange, the prosecutor dismissed some of the charges against you;
- You violated your probation or parole and had your supervision revoked;
- You had your conviction dismissed or expunged

IMPORTANT PROTECTIONS TO KNOW ABOUT: A lot of this information CANNOT be included in a regular background check. For more information about what information can and can't be included in your background check, see PG. 943.

WHY IS IT IMPORTANT TO UNDERSTAND MY CRIMINAL RECORD?

It's important to know what will show up in your criminal records so that you can make sure it's accurate, that information that shouldn't be disclosed stays protected, and so that you can better prepare to deal with your record coming up when you're trying to get a job, find housing, reunite with your family, apply for public benefits, or go back to school. Furthermore, California has laws that allow you to "clean up" some of your record LATER in the reentry process.

TYPES OF CRIMINAL RECORDS

RAP SHEETS

WHAT IS A RAP SHEET AND WHY IS IT IMPORTANT?

A RAP sheet (Record of Arrest and Prosecution) is the government's official version of your criminal history, as recorded by local, state, and federal government agencies (such as courts, law enforcement, FBI, and other criminal justice agencies). It contains a list of every contact you have had with the criminal justice system, including: arrests, charges, convictions, acquittals, dismissals, pleas, sentences, and open warrants.

Your RAP sheet includes important information like the date of each arrest, which law enforcement agency arrested you, what offense(s) you were charged with, your case number (docket or indictment number), and—most important—the final outcome (disposition) of each case (for example, acquittal, conviction, plea bargain, sentence, or dismissal).<sup>2941</sup> It's also important to look out for errors (learn about common ones on PG. 939).

HOW MANY RAP SHEETS DO I HAVE?

If you've been arrested or convicted of a crime in California, you potentially have three different RAP sheets.<sup>2942</sup>

- Your county (local) RAP sheet lists your criminal history in that specific county only. If you have convictions in multiple counties, you will have a RAP sheet for each county.
- Your DOJ (state) RAP sheet lists your criminal history in all of California, but only California. This RAP sheet is kept by the California Department of Justice (DOJ).<sup>2943</sup> Unless you are 100% positive that all of your arrests and convictions were in just one county, it's a safer bet to get a copy of your DOJ (state) RAP sheet to make sure you know of everything about you in California.
- Your FBI (federal) RAP sheet lists any and all criminal justice involvement you've had in any state in the U.S., or with the federal government. This RAP sheet is produced by the Federal Bureau of Investigations (FBI).<sup>2944</sup> Your FBI (federal) RAP sheet is also called an Identity History Summary.

See APPENDIX CC, on PG. 1066 for a sample RAP sheet.

WHAT WILL MY RAP SHEET LOOK LIKE?

Looking at a RAP sheet can be confusing! RAP sheets have lots of numbers and abbreviations, so it's not always clear what information it actually contains or if it is correct. To learn how to read and understand the information in your California RAP sheet, and to see a sample California RAP sheet, see APPENDIX CC, on PG. 1066. You can also ask a lawyer or a public defender to help you read and understand your RAP sheet.

IMPORTANT: Your RAP sheet is confidential! Unlike a background check, your official government RAP sheets are confidential. This means that most people—most employers, private landlords, and average Joes—CANNOT see your RAP sheets. Only certain people under certain circumstances can see your RAP sheet—this includes courts, law enforcement, government agencies, and special employers.<sup>2945</sup> Of course, YOU always have a right to see your own RAP sheet. (For a complete list of who can see your RAP sheet, see PG. 948.)

BUT: Even though RAP sheets are confidential, some of the information in them will likely show up in background checks. That's why it's important to know what information is in your RAP sheet, and to correct any errors. For more information about correcting mistakes in your RAP sheet, see PG. 944. For more information on background checks and what information can and can't show up in them, see PG. 941.

WHY IS IT HELPFUL FOR ME TO SEE MY RAP SHEET?

There are 4 main reasons why it's important to see your RAP sheet and know exactly what it says:

- RAP sheets often contain mistakes, such as incomplete or incorrect information. It's important to find and correct any errors BEFORE the wrong information has a chance to harm you.
- You will have an accurate record of your criminal history, so that you know what information certain employers, professional licensing agencies, landlords, banks, or others might see about you. To learn more about what information employers and licensing agencies CAN and CAN'T consider, see the EMPLOYMENT CHAPTER, beginning on PG. 557. To learn more about what information private landlords, Public Housing Authorities (PHAs) and owners of government-assisted housing CAN and CANNOT consider, see the HOUSING CHAPTER, beginning on PG. 332.
- You will be better prepared to answer questions about your criminal history. If you know what is in your record, you can plan ahead and figure out how to talk about it in a more positive light. For more information about how to talk about your criminal history in a job interview, see the EMPLOYMENT CHAPTER, beginning on PG. 557.
- It's necessary for cleaning up your record! Your RAP sheet will help you figure out which remedies you qualify for and which are the best options for you. In addition, you will need the details from your RAP sheet to fill out forms and complete the process of cleaning up your record.

For more information on how to get a copy of your RAP sheet, see PG. 950.

FIXING ERRORS IN RAP SHEETS

There are many different reasons why incorrect or incomplete information may show up in your government-produced RAP sheet. It's very important to get copies of your RAP sheet (and background check, discussed on PG. 944)—so that you can find and correct any errors BEFORE they cause problems for you!

WHAT ARE COMMON ERRORS IN RAP SHEETS?

- Someone else's information. Your RAP sheet may contain criminal history information about someone else with the same (or a similar) name as you.
- Leaving out important information about a case. Your RAP sheet may leave out important information about the final outcome of your case. For example, your RAP sheet may still say "case pending" even AFTER you were acquitted or the charges were dropped.
- Including sealed information. Your RAP may contain records that should have been destroyed or can only be released by special court order, such as sealed arrests or juvenile offenses.
- Misleading information. It is possible that a single charge may appear multiple times on your RAP, making it look like you have multiple offenses when you only have one.
- Misclassifying your offense. If a misdemeanor conviction shows up as a felony on your RAP sheet, this is a serious problem!

HOW COULD THESE MISTAKES END UP IN MY RAP SHEET?

- Human error. The people who manage the various records can make mistakes. They may confuse you with someone who has a similar name, enter your information wrong, or include information that should NOT be included (for example, a sealed juvenile offense).
- Failure to confirm information: Although government agencies are supposed to confirm that the information that they have about you is correct and up-to-date, a lot of times they don't. As a result, they may not report changes in the status of your case or the final outcome of the case, even if you were acquitted or the case was dismissed!
- Identity theft. Someone else may open an account using your personal information or commit a crime and pretend to be you by giving your name or identification. These activities may then go in your record as your actions!

WHEN CAN I FIX THE ERRORS?

You can start to fix the errors right away! If you find incorrect or missing information in your criminal records, you can follow these steps to fix the errors! Don't let errors stay on your record — they can hurt your chances of getting a job, a place to live, or government benefits, and they can disrupt many other areas of your life as well! And don't wait until the errors show up on a background check that is seen by an employer, private landlord, creditor, or government agency—it's much easier to clean up errors BEFORE they cause you any problems! Make sure your criminal record contains only correct and up-to-date information, so that wrong information does NOT get used against you.

HOW CAN I FIX ERRORS IN MY CALIFORNIA STATE (DOJ) RAP SHEET?

Even though your DOJ RAP sheet is supposed to be the official record of your criminal history from California law enforcement agencies and the courts, it is likely to still contain errors. If you think that any piece of information contained in your state RAP sheet is incorrect, you must submit a formal challenge to the Department of Justice in order to dispute the information. However, you can only submit this formal challenge after you have requested and received a copy of your RAP sheet from the DOJ.<sup>2946</sup> Once the DOJ receives your challenge, it will review your claim and decide whether or not to correct the information in your RAP sheet. It typically takes the DOJ an average of six months to review paperwork related to correcting RAP sheet errors. We recommend starting the process as soon as possible.

For detailed instructions on each step of the process for correcting errors in your DOJ RAP sheet, see APPENDIX F, on PG. 1010. If you have any other questions about getting or correcting your California RAP sheet, call the DOJ's Record Review Unit at (916) 227-3835. (NOTE: This is an automated phone system that lists many DOJ-related issues. Follow the prompts that ask if you if you want to "verify or challenge the accuracy of your criminal history.")

HOW CAN I FIX ERRORS IN MY FEDERAL (FBI) RAP SHEET?<sup>2947</sup>

Your FBI (federal) RAP sheet (also called your Identity History Summary) is the federal government's official record of all of your interactions with law enforcement and the criminal justice system from anywhere in the United States, including any federal cases or convictions. The FBI gets your fingerprints and criminal history information from other criminal justice organizations throughout the U.S. This includes local police, county sheriff, and state highway patrol departments, statewide criminal justice agencies (such as the California Department of Justice), federal law enforcement agencies (such as the Drug Enforcement Administration and the FBI itself), and state and federal courts. In general, when you have any interaction with one of these agencies, they send your information to the FBI's Criminal Justice Information Services (CJIS) Division.

The FBI can only change your information if the original agency or court (i.e., the one that sent the information to the FBI in the first place) tells the FBI to change it.<sup>2948</sup> If you think your FBI RAP sheet is inaccurate or incomplete, there are 2 ways to correct the information:

OPTION 1: Contact the court or agency that sent your information to the FBI.

NOTE: Each entry on your FBI RAP sheet should list the specific agency that provided the information. This is how you can tell which agency sent the FBI the incorrect or incomplete information on your FBI RAP sheet.

> IF THE INCORRECT OR MISSING INFORMATION IS FROM A CALIFORNIA STATE AGENCY OR COURT:

Contact the California DOJ's Bureau of Criminal Information and Analysis, and ask them to send the FBI corrected or updated information.<sup>2949</sup>

> IF THE INCORRECT OR MISSING INFORMATION IS FROM AN AGENCY OR COURT IN ANOTHER STATE:

Contact the state Identification Bureau of the state where the agency or court is located, and ask them to send the FBI corrected or updated information. Contact information for the Identification Bureau of every U.S. state is available on the FBI's website at: <http://www.fbi.gov/about-us/cjis/identity-history-summary-checks/state-identification-bureau-listing>.

WHAT ARE "FEDERAL AGENCIES AND COURTS"?

If you had a case in FEDERAL court, or if you've had any interaction with FEDERAL law enforcement, it will show up on your FBI RAP sheet. You will need to contact the federal agency that sent your information to the FBI in order to correct it.

Examples of FEDERAL agencies and courts include: the FBI; the U.S. Attorney's Office (federal prosecutor); U.S. district courts; and U.S. Offices of Probation and Pretrial Services (federal probation department).

<sup>2949</sup> State Identification Bureau Listings, FED. BUREAU INVESTIGATION, <http://www.fbi.gov/about-us/cjis/identity-history-summary-checks/state-identification-bureau-listing>.

> IF THE INCORRECT OR MISSING INFORMATION IS FROM A FEDERAL AGENCY OR COURT:

Contact the specific federal agency that sent your information to the FBI, and ask them to send corrected or updated information. See APPENDIX G, PG. 1012 for additional details about each of these steps.

OPTION 2: Go through the FBI directly.<sup>2950</sup>

If you don't know where the incomplete or incorrect information on your RAP sheet came from, you can contact the FBI directly to challenge it, and ask them to correct it. You will need to write a "challenge letter" explaining exactly what information is wrong and why, and send it to the FBI along with any proof you have to support your claim. (For a list of common RAP sheet errors, see PG. 939.)

The FBI will then investigate your claim. If the FBI decides that the information in your RAP sheet was wrong or incomplete, it will correct your RAP sheet and let you know. For a detailed explanation of both Option 1 and Option 2, see APPENDIX G, PG. 1012.

IMPORTANT: IT IS EXTREMELY IMPORTANT TO REVIEW YOUR RAP SHEETS – both State and Federal-level – to make sure that all the information contained in them is ACCURATE, COMPLETE, AND UP-TO-DATE. Any errors on your RAP sheet can cause you serious problems in the future when you apply for a job, a professional license, housing, or a loan, or if you try to reconnect with your family, or if you get arrested or charged with a crime in the future. (To find out how to get a copy of your RAP sheet, see PG. 950. For more information on what to do if there are errors in your RAP sheet, see PG. 939.)

REMINDER

A background check is the process of looking up information about your past—such as your criminal history, work experience, education, debts, and other personal facts. They are usually done by private background check companies which often get requests for them from employers and landlords. There are special laws that protect your rights when someone gets a background check on you. Remember, a background check does NOT include your RAP sheet or your credit report, and there are strict limits on what criminal history information they can include.

BACKGROUND CHECKS

WHAT IS A BACKGROUND CHECK?

You've probably heard of someone running a "background check" on someone else. A background check is the process of looking up non-confidential information about someone's past activities, including their criminal history, work experience, education, debts, etc. When someone runs a background check on you, they may research your history by looking up public records about you, running an internet search on you, and even interviewing people you know!

Most commonly, background checks are done by private companies that specialize in investigating people and compiling information about them. Employers, private landlords, creditors, and other people often hire these companies to run a background check on you when you apply for a job, rent an apartment, apply for a loan, or volunteer at your child's school! (For more information about background checks in these different situations, see the EMPLOYMENT CHAPTER (PG. 557), HOUSING CHAPTER (PG. 332), and FAMILY & CHILDREN CHAPTER (PG. 714).

DEFINITIONS

Background Check Reports & Background Check Companies

- A "background check report" is the document that an employer, landlord, or other person sees when he/she hires a private background check company to run a background check on you.
- A "background check company" is a private company that specialize in doing background checks (and selling the information they gather).

REMEMBER: Your RAP sheet itself is confidential and CANNOT be included in most background checks. BUT some of the information in your RAP sheet—like the record of certain criminal convictions—may be public information, so the information can show up on a regular background check. For example, court records are public information, so a background check company can go to the courthouse and look up your records to find out about convictions.

WHAT INFORMATION CANNOT SHOW UP IN A PRIVATE BACKGROUND CHECK?

Background check laws protect you by making it illegal for private background check companies to include certain types of information in your background check report, and by creating penalties if they do.

INFORMATION THAT CANNOT BE IN YOUR BACKGROUND CHECK REPORT IN CALIFORNIA:

- Criminal convictions that have been fully pardoned;
- Criminal convictions that have been expunged (for employment background checks);
- Criminal convictions from more than 7 years ago (except for certain, sensitive jobs where the law requires it);
- Any information about arrests or charges that did not result in a conviction, no matter how recent (unless your judgment is still pending);<sup>2951</sup>
- Any information about arrests or charges from more than 7 years ago;
- Any information about referrals to, or participation in, any pre-trial or post-trial diversion programs (usually drug treatment programs that you are ordered to do instead of going to jail);
- Lawsuits and judgments from more than 7 years ago;<sup>2952</sup>
- Paid tax liens from more than 7 years ago;<sup>2953</sup>
- Accounts placed in collections from more than 7 years ago;
- Bankruptcies from more than 10 years ago;
- Unlawful detainers (evictions) that you won or resolved with a settlement agreement;
- Any other negative information like repossessions, foreclosures, check verification reports, motor vehicle reports, or drug test results<sup>2954</sup> from more than 7 years ago;<sup>2955</sup>
- * Public information that hasn't been checked for accuracy in the past 30 days before the background check is issued.<sup>2956</sup> Read more about this law below.
- ** Testimonial information that has another person who can verify it as true or false.<sup>2957</sup> Read more about this law below.

ADDITIONALLY, BACKGROUND CHECK COMPANIES MUST FOLLOW SPECIFIC RULES:

Background check companies must follow specific rules when they include ANY negative or harmful information—including criminal history information—in a background check on you. Harmful information includes anything that could hurt your chances of getting a job, housing, insurance, or public benefits; cause you to have to pay more for housing, insurance, or public benefits; have ANY other negative impact on you.<sup>2958</sup>

* Confirming that public records are accurate:

Background check companies cannot include any public information (for example, information about arrests, convictions, civil actions, tax liens, and outstanding judgments) unless the company has been double-checked it for accuracy in the past 30 days.<sup>2959</sup> This means the company should check with the court, police, or other agency to find out the current status of any arrests, charges, indictments, convictions, judgments, etc. For example, if you were arrested but never charged, if your charges were dismissed or reduced, if you were acquitted (or convicted), or if there were any other changes to your case, the company must report the updated information.<sup>2960</sup>

<sup>2951</sup> EXCEPTIONS: An agency can report these kinds of arrests or charges (1) if they are part of a case that hasn't yet gone to trial or been resolved, meaning a "judgment is pending," or (2) if you are applying to work at a health care facility and would have access to patients, drugs or medication.

** Confirming “testimonial information” when possible:

A background check company CANNOT include negative information from personal interviews with people who know you—such as neighbors, landlords, employers, etc.—in your background check UNLESS the agency either confirms the information with another person (who would know whether the information is true or not) OR the person who gave negative information in the first place is the best (or only) possible source.<sup>2961</sup>

Read more about your rights regarding private background checks on PG. 571.

WHAT INFORMATION CAN SHOW UP IN A BACKGROUND CHECK?

In the age of the Internet, there is a lot of information that could show up in your background check report. For example, it may contain information about:

- Criminal convictions;
- Other court cases you were involved in (for example, lawsuits, small claims court cases, money judgments against you, etc.)
- Your driving record;
- Previous employment;
- Education records;
- Property ownership records;
- Bankruptcies and tax liens;
- Professional licensing records;
- Previous addresses;
- Past evictions; AND
- Personal references from people who know you (such as past employers, private landlords, neighbors, etc.).

Although anyone can look up public records or information on the Internet about you, there are special laws that limit WHO & WHEN someone can run a background check on you if they use a private (“commercial”) background check company. In general, the people who can run a private background check on you include: employers, private landlords, insurance companies, professional licensing agencies, creditors, anyone with a court order or subpoena, and anyone seeking child support payments from you. (For a list of who can legally run a background check on you, see PG. 948.)

In addition, there are laws that protect you by limiting the information that can show up in a private background check report, and give you the chance to correct any errors that show up. For a list of what information CAN & CANNOT be included in your private background check, see PG. 942-943.

WHY IS IT HELPFUL FOR ME TO SEE WHAT’S IN MY BACKGROUND CHECK?

There are several reasons why it’s important to find out what’s likely to come up in your background check:

- Background checks often contain mistakes—such as incomplete, incorrect, or forbidden information. It’s important to find and correct any errors BEFORE the information shows up in a background check and causes you problems.
  - You will know what other people are likely to see about you, in case your criminal history comes up on an application for employment, professional licensing, housing, or a loan, or in any other situation. To learn more about what information employers and licensing agencies CAN and CAN’T consider, see the EMPLOYMENT CHAPTER (PG. 557). For more information about what landlords and housing authorities can consider, see the HOUSING CHAPTER (PG. 332).
- You will be better prepared to answer questions about your criminal history during job interviews, on job and housing applications, and in other situations. For more information about what employers CAN and CAN’T ask you about or see in your record, see the EMPLOYMENT CHAPTER, (PG. 557).
- You can protect your rights and maximize your chances of success! Remember, there are laws that protect your rights when someone runs a background check on you. But you need to know what information will show up in your background check in order to protect those rights!

REMEMBER, cleaning up your criminal record will reduce the information that most people can see about you when they run a background check!

<sup>2961</sup> CAL. CIV. CODE § 1786.18(d).

WHAT'S THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN A RAP SHEET AND A BACKGROUND CHECK?

RAP Sheet	Background Check
Based on official government records	Based on investigation by a private company
Lists every encounter with law enforcement, the courts, and the criminal justice system	Contains only limited criminal history information
Contains criminal history information only	Includes criminal history information as well as other information about you
Generally confidential (generally only law enforcement and courts)	Can be seen by a variety of people (like public and private landlords and employers, banks, etc.) for many reasons – but not everything from your past can be reported.

FIXING ERRORS IN BACKGROUND CHECKS

HOW CAN I FIX ERRORS IN MY BACKGROUND CHECK?

Even though background check companies are limited by law on what information they can report about you, and are required to confirm that the information is true and correct, it is still very common for background checks to contain errors.

WHAT ARE COMMON ERRORS IN A BACKGROUND CHECK?

- Information that should *NOT be included—such as convictions more than 7 years old, arrests that did not lead to a conviction (unless charges are still pending), participation in court-ordered drug treatment, or convictions that have been dismissed;
- Information that is *wrong (for example, reporting that you were convicted of robbery instead of petty theft);
- Information that belongs to *someone else with the same (or a similar) name as you;
- Report of an arrest or charges filed, but not the *final outcome of the case (for example, you were never charged, charges were dismissed, you were acquitted, or you plead guilty to a lesser offense);
- Information from public records or personal interviews that *has not been confirmed;
- Any negative information about you that is more than 7 years old (or bankruptcies that are more than 10 years old).

You have the right to challenge any information in your background check, and to view the background check company's files containing any information that was used to prepare your background check.

WHAT ARE SOME STEPS I CAN TAKE TO FIX ERRORS IN MY BACKGROUND CHECK?

- First, you can NOTIFY the background check company that the information is wrong and include proof (documents or evidence) of the correct information.
- Second, the background check company MUST INVESTIGATE the information that you challenged, and MUST inform you of the results within 30 days.
- Third, the background check company MUST REMOVE or CORRECT any information that is wrong, incomplete, or cannot be confirmed as true.
- Finally, if the background check company does not remove the information from your background check, you can add your own STATEMENT OF DISPUTE to the company's file stating that you disagree with the information.<sup>2962</sup>

For a step-by-step explanation of this process, see APPENDIX H, on PG. 1014.<sup>2963</sup>

HOW DO I KNOW WHICH BACKGROUND CHECK COMPANY DID MY BACKGROUND CHECK?

There are two ways to find out which background check company ran your report and how to contact them:

- BEFORE someone runs a background check on you (such as an employer, private landlord, or creditor), generally they must TELL YOU that they are going to get a background check on you and get your

PERMISSION. They must also give you the name, address, phone number, and website of the background check company that they are going to use.<sup>2964</sup>

- If someone takes a harmful action against you (such as refusing to hire you, rent you an apartment, or give you benefits) based on information in your background check, they must give you an “ADVERSE ACTION LETTER” with the name, address, and phone number of the company used.<sup>2965</sup>

You have the right to know what internal procedures the background company uses to investigate your claim. You can ask the company for this information and they MUST provide it to you.<sup>2966</sup>

A NOTE ABOUT CHALLENGING INFORMATION IN YOUR BACKGROUND CHECK REPORT: Under the law, you have the right to challenge any information in your background check, and there is a specific process for doing it. However, in practice, it might not be as easy or straightforward, especially if the background check company is uncooperative or unresponsive. If you have trouble getting the company to review or change the wrong information in your file, it is recommended that you contact a lawyer for help.

ARREST WARRANTS

WHAT IS AN ARREST WARRANT, AND WHY IS IT IMPORTANT?

An arrest warrant or simply a “warrant” is a legal order that gives police and law enforcement the authority to arrest you for various reasons: for example, because you missed a criminal court date or are suspected of a crime. If you have an outstanding warrant this means that the police can take you into custody at any time - including during a routine traffic stop, at your home, or when you appear in court for another reason. If you do not take care of the warrant, you may constantly worry about being unexpectedly arrested or taken to jail. This is why it is very important to figure out if you have any outstanding warrants before getting your criminal record expunged (learn more about expungements starting on PG. 950) An outstanding warrant could also impact other areas of your life, such as your ability to get public benefits, public housing, or a passport.

WHAT TYPE OF WARRANTS COULD BE ON MY RECORD?

Below is a brief overview of different types of warrants that could show up on a record:

Arrest Warrant: An arrest warrant is issued after a grand jury or law enforcement officials have probable cause to suspect that you have committed a crime. Probable cause requires the knowledge of facts that would lead to a reasonable belief or strong suspicion that you committed a crime.<sup>2967</sup> A judge will issue an arrest warrant for you if the judge determines a crime has been committed and that “there is reasonable ground to believe” that you committed the crime.<sup>2968</sup>

Bench Warrant: A bench warrant is issued for failing to obey a court order, such as failing to appear for a court hearing or failing to answer a subpoena. A bench warrant can be issued for the following reasons:

- Failure to pay a fine;
- Failure to appear after an indictment on criminal charges where the court has a fixed date and place for an appearance by the defendant;
- Failure to appear in court after an attorney and judge personally order the defendant to appear;
- Failure to appear in court and show proof of enrollment, progress or completion of community service or other alternative sentencing; and
- Failure to appear (FTA) in court after citation by police officer.

A bench warrant gives police the authority to arrest you at any time, but usually doesn’t trigger immediate police action. When a bench warrant is issued against you, your name will go into a statewide computer system that is accessible to the entire law enforcement community. Please note that in serious criminal cases, a failure to appear will most likely cause the court to issue a “regular” arrest warrant; this means the police may immediately try to find and arrest you.

Parole Warrant: A parole warrant can be issued if you violate the terms of your parole, including failure to meet your parole agent. If a parole warrant has been issued against you and you’re considered a potential threat to public safety, the California Parole Apprehension Team will be sent to find you.

Not all parole violations lead to revocation of parole. The California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation has developed a Parole Violation Decision Making Instrument to help parole agents determine

whether parole should be revoked or not. If the agent recommends that your parole should be revoked, a parole warrant can be issued.

HOW DO I FIND OUT IF I HAVE AN OUTSTANDING WARRANT?

If you are unsure whether you have an outstanding warrant, check your county courthouse website to see if it has a searchable public records section with information about outstanding warrants. You can search your name to see if the website has any warrants listed under that name. Please note that this option of searching a courthouse database for warrants may not be available.

You can also call the clerk of the court in your county. When you call the clerk of the court, ask if there is an outstanding warrant for “Person X” (your name) in a criminal or civil case. Have your name, birth date, and if possible, your case number and Social Security number, in hand. Avoid identifying yourself as the person for whom a warrant could have been issued.

If you do not feel comfortable calling the clerk of the court, you may also try calling your local public defender’s office to assist you.

HOW DO I FIND OUT IF I HAVE AN OUTSTANDING WARRANT IN A FEDERAL CASE?

If you want to know whether you have an outstanding warrant in a federal case, call the federal clerk of the court for your district. If you are uneasy about calling the clerk of the court yourself, you can have another person call for you.

Another option is to go to the courthouse and look up your name in its public records. If it’s possible, have another person do this for you, as you risk being taken into custody if you have an outstanding warrant.

You may have multiple outstanding warrants out for your arrest in different federal circuits. The clerk of the court for one circuit may not be able to tell you whether you have a warrant in another circuit. Consider working with a bail bondsman or an attorney to determine if you have multiple warrants.

HOW DO I FIND OUT IF I HAVE A PAROLE WARRANT?

Maintaining a positive relationship with your parole agent is key to staying out of jail or prison. If you have missed a meeting, you should immediately call your parole office and ask your parole agent for instructions.

You can reach the office for California’s Northern Region at 916-255-2758 and the Southern Region office at 909-468-2300. These offices can then give you the phone number for your local parole office.

If you think a parole warrant has been issued against you, you can call the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation at 916-445-6713.

I FOUND OUT I HAVE AN OUTSTANDING WARRANT. WHAT CAN I DO?

If you have an outstanding warrant, you have a few options. You can call the clerk of the court and find out whether you can take care of the warrant by simply paying a fine. Although you may also go to the court and take care of your warrant in person, contact a lawyer to determine whether you are at risk of being taken into custody when you identify yourself.

It may be best to have a lawyer take care of the warrant for you. The lawyer may be able to get your warrant “recalled” or “quashed,” meaning the warrant would be deemed invalid. If you don’t take care of your warrant, you risk being taken into custody the next time you come in contact with the police, even during a routine traffic stop. Call a lawyer to make sure this doesn’t happen to you.

CREDIT REPORTS

WHAT IS A CREDIT REPORT? AND WHAT’S THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN A RAP SHEET AND A CREDIT REPORT?

In California, a credit report is different from a background check and is covered by a different set of laws.<sup>2969</sup> A credit report contains information about your money and finances—including debts you owe (such as unpaid bills, loans, or leases), your payment history for past bills and debts, and the status of your credit accounts. Your credit report does NOT include your criminal history or other personal information about you. For this reason, this legal guide does not go into detail about the laws governing credit reports.

WILL MY CREDIT REPORT BE INCLUDED IN MY BACKGROUND CHECK?

Generally, no. Background check companies are NOT allowed to include your credit report in your regular background check, because not everyone who is allowed to see your background check is also allowed to see your credit report. When companies run your credit report, they must follow a separate set of rules that are specific to credit reports, which are not covered in this guide. The only time that your credit report and background check will be together is when someone who is ALLOWED to see both requests them together (for example, a landlord can request both at the same time, but most employers cannot see your credit report, just your criminal background check).<sup>2970</sup>

HOW DO I GET A COPY OF MY CREDIT REPORT WHILE I'M INCARCERATED?

You must mail in a request for your free credit report to the following address:

Annual Credit Report Request Service
PO Box 105281
Atlanta, GA 30348

Include your full name, date of birth, Social Security Number and any addresses used in the last two years in a letter stating that you are requesting a free credit report. To find out how to obtain your Social Security Number, see PG. 38.

NOTE: When this guide refers to background checks or background check reports, it means information about your criminal history (and certain other personal information)—but NOT your credit report. ### III. WHO HAS ACCESS TO YOUR CRIMINAL RECORD & WHAT THEY CAN SEE

WHAT WILL I LEARN?

- Who CAN and CAN'T see your RAP sheet;
- Who CAN and CAN'T run a background check on you;
- Other ways that people may see your criminal history.

There are laws about who can and can't get your RAP sheet or run a background check on you. This section will explain the different rules for accessing each type of criminal record.

WHO IS LEGALLY ALLOWED TO SEE MY RAP SHEET?

MOST PEOPLE CANNOT SEE YOUR RAP SHEET. Your RAP sheet is protected and confidential because it is kept by law enforcement agencies. The only people who can see your RAP sheet are:

- Criminal justice and law enforcement agencies have full access to your RAP sheet, including juvenile adjudications, expunged/dismissed cases, and sometimes even sealed records!<sup>2971</sup>
- State occupational licensing agencies can review your RAP when considering whether or not to issue you a professional license. Some may ban you from getting a license if you have a criminal record.<sup>2972</sup> (For more information see the EMPLOYMENT CHAPTER, on PG. 601)
- State and local welfare agencies including child welfare agencies, child support agencies, and humane societies can see your RAP sheet.<sup>2973</sup>
- Most public employers can see your RAP sheet when you apply for a job with them. These include all federal, state and local government agencies—including police and fire departments, the California Department of Corrections (CDCR), local Boards of Education, and the U.S. Postal Service.<sup>2974</sup>
- Certain private employers can see your RAP sheet if you are applying for a job that involves access to sensitive information (e.g., nuclear power plants, public utilities, private security companies, and financial institutions like banks) OR you will be working with children, elderly, disabled, or other vulnerable people.<sup>2975</sup>

WHO IS LEGALLY ALLOWED TO RUN A BACKGROUND CHECK ON ME?

Unlike a RAP sheet, many more people (for housing, employments, bank loans, public benefits, etc.) can run a private background check on you, but it is still protected from showing everything in most cases. In California, state and federal laws<sup>2976</sup> allow background check companies to run background checks and send the information...

- To anyone making decisions about you for: employment, renting a house/apartment, professional licensing, government benefits, credit obligations,<sup>2977</sup> court-ordered child support or alimony, or insurance;
- To establish child support requirements;
- In response to a court order or subpoena;
- To anyone with a legitimate business need for the report (for example, a bank, creditor, or someone you have a business relationship with);<sup>2978</sup> or
- To the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation or National Credit Union Administration.

<sup>2971</sup> CAL. PENAL CODE § 11105 (police departments, courts, District Attorney and Public Defender offices, parole and probation departments, and corrections agencies can access RAP sheets).

<sup>2972</sup> CAL. BUS. & PROF. CODE § 475; CAL. PENAL CODE § 11105 (occupational licenses are required for MANY professions, including: accountants, taxi drivers, architects, automotive repair persons, barbers and cosmetologists, cemetery and funeral service workers, contractors, court reporters, dental service professionals, electronic and appliance repair persons, physical therapists, real estate agents, security guards and private investigators, and nurses). See also Occupational Guides, CAL. EMP'T DEV'T DEP'T, <http://www.labormarketinfo.edd.ca.gov/occguides/> (listing 200+ professions that require occupational licenses in California).

<sup>2975</sup> These employers include: nuclear power plants; public utilities; agencies directly responsible for the care of children, the elderly, or the mentally or physically disabled; youth organizations; in-home supportive care agencies; security organizations; financial institutions; private schools. See CAL. PENAL CODE §§ 11105(c)(1); 11105.3, 11105.4; CAL. FIN. CODE § 777.5; CAL. HEALTH & SAFETY CODE § 1596.871; CAL. VEH. CODE § 44237. However, private employers must still get authorization from the DOJ in order to view RAP sheets.

<sup>2978</sup> FCRA, 15 U.S.C. § 1681b(a)(3)(F). A "legitimate business need" includes anything related to a business relationship you started, or a need to review an existing account or ensure that you meet the terms of the account.

Basically, the main people who can—and are likely to—run a background check on you are employers, private landlords, insurance companies, licensing boards and agencies, and financial institutions.

REMEMBER, there are LIMITS on what information can be included in your background check. In general, cleaning up your record means that the information may no longer show up in the background checks that most people—like ordinary employers and private landlords—can get.

IS THERE ANY OTHER WAY THAT SOMEONE CAN SEE MY CRIMINAL HISTORY?

Yes. Because most criminal records and criminal case information is technically public, people in the general public could access on their own most legal paperwork filed in court or with a government agency. For example, anyone can go to the local courthouse, look up your criminal case and make copies of the documents in the court file.

But it is very unlikely that most people would go down to the courthouse to look you up for an apartment or job! Keep in mind that the information is likely scattered across hundreds of locations, so someone would really have to know exactly what they are looking for to actually find it. That's why most people use professional background check companies to do the investigating for them—and that's why these companies and the background checks they create are regulated by state and federal laws to protect you!

IV. GETTING COPIES OF YOUR CRIMINAL RECORDS

WHAT WILL I LEARN?

- Why it's important to get a copy of your RAP sheet and background check;
- How to get your state, federal, and county RAP sheets;
- How to get a copy of your background check.

This section explains how you can get copies of your various types of criminal records. You will need the information from your criminal record(s) to figure out which options are best for cleaning them up, and to complete the steps to do so.

IMPORTANT: If there's ANY possibility that you might have an outstanding warrant for your arrest—for ANY reason (including new charges against you or a failure to appear in court) from ANY county—it is recommended that you call the public defender or a private lawyer to check on your warrant status first, before trying to get your RAP sheet.

HOW DO I GET MY CALIFORNIA STATE (DOJ) RAP SHEET?

If you have arrests or convictions in California only, this is the only RAP sheet you will need. In order for the DOJ to release your RAP sheet, you are required to submit your fingerprints. Your fingerprints must be taken by a company called "Live Scan" (which has been specially approved by the DOJ and has locations all around California). You will also need to pay a $25 processing fee to the DOJ.

For a step-by-step explanation of how to get your DOJ RAP sheet, see APPENDIX A, on PG. 1002.

Note: It can take up to 2 months (anywhere from 2 to 8 weeks) to get a copy of your DOJ RAP sheet, depending on how long your RAP sheet is (i.e., how much information it contains).<sup>2979</sup>

For more information, visit the Frequently Asked Questions section of the DOJ website at http://oag.ca.gov/fingerprints/security\_faq.

HOW DO I GET MY DOJ RAP SHEET IF I AM INCARCERATED?<sup>2980</sup>

Ask your attorney. Contact the attorney who represented you in your criminal case. They may have a copy of your RAP sheet in their files or archives.

Review your C-file. If you are in state prison, your RAP sheet may be included in your C-file. You have the right to review the non-confidential portion of your C-file; the process of asserting that right is called an "Olsen review."<sup>2981</sup> Your Correctional Counselor will have more information on how to begin this process.

Contact the DOJ: In order to obtain your RAP sheet directly from the DOJ, you must follow these steps:

STEP 1: Write a letter to the DOJ requesting a Fingerprint Identification Card (sometimes called a Hard Card) and, if you are indigent, a Fee Waiver form. Explain that you are currently incarcerated and be sure to provide your CDCR number and correct return address (including, where appropriate, your housing unit). Send this letter to:

Bureau of Criminal Identification and Information
Attention: Record Review Unit
P.O. Box 903417
Sacramento, CA 94203-4170

REMINDER: WHY IS IT IMPORTANT TO GET MY RAP SHEET?

- To correct any errors, such as incomplete or incorrect information;
- To have an accurate record of your conviction history;
- To be better prepared to answer questions about your criminal history; AND
- You will need it to clean up your record!

STEP 2: Once the Hard Card arrives, fill out the information and get fingerprinted. You may need to find a prison staff member who is a certified fingerprint technician. Ask your Correctional Counselor for more information.

STEP 3: If you are indigent, fill out the Fee Waiver form. Provide proof of indigence, such as a commissary account record or other document. If not, provide payment of the $25 DOJ fee via check or money order, seeking help from an outside loved one if need be.

STEP 4: Mail all forms to the address listed in Step 1. You should receive your RAP sheet within one to eight weeks.

HOW DO I GET MY FEDERAL (FBI) RAP SHEET?

If you have ever been arrested or had a conviction in another state, or for a federal offense, you will want to get a copy of your FBI (federal) RAP sheet (also called your “Identity History Summary.”

There are two ways to get a copy of your FBI RAP sheet:

- You can request your RAP sheet directly from the FBI; OR
- You can use a special private company, called a “Channeler,” that has contracted with the FBI to perform this service.

NOTE: It is generally faster to go through an FBI Channeler, but it is likely to be more expensive because these companies usually charge extra fees.

Whether you request your RAP sheet directly from the FBI or go through a channeler, you will need to fill out the FBI’s “Applicant Information Form” and get fingerprinted by a Live Scan service provider. For a step-by-step explanation of how to get your FBI RAP sheet, see APPENDIX D, on PG. 1008.

For more information about getting your RAP directly from the FBI, visit the FBI’s website at: <http://www.fbi.gov/about-us/cjis/identity-history-summary-checks/faqs>

For more information about getting your FBI RAP sheet through an FBI-approved channeler, see <http://www.fbi.gov/about-us/cjis/identity-history-summary-checks/fbi-approved-channelers>

HOW DO I GET MY LOCAL (COUNTY) RAP SHEET AND CRIMINAL HISTORY INFORMATION?

The process for getting your local RAP sheet is different in each county. In some counties, you can get a complete RAP sheet that has ALL of your criminal history information from that county in one place, including all of your convictions, arrests, and any open warrants. In other counties, these records are kept separately (by different agencies), so you will need to go to several places and get separate records for all of your court cases (convictions), arrest records, and warrants.

You will need to contact the police department, sheriff’s department, courthouse, or Public Defender’s Office of the county where you were convicted for information on how to get your local RAP sheet.

Remember, your county RAP sheet and other records will ONLY show information for that county. If you’ve had any interaction with the police, courts, highway patrol, or any other law enforcement or criminal justice agencies in other counties, you should get your California (DOJ) RAP sheet to see all of your criminal history information.

HOW DO I GET A COPY OF MY BACKGROUND CHECK?

The best way to find out what information might show up in your background check is to get your own background check done on yourself.

There are 2 ways to do this:

OPTION 1: Pay a reputable background check company to run a report on you.

There are MANY private background check companies out there—you can search online for “background checks” or check your local Yellow Pages under “Investigators.” Beware, however, some background check companies are scams. Look up or call a few different companies to see what they offer and how much they charge. Avoid companies that seem to charge much more or much less than others.

OPTION 2: Request a background check report.

REMINDER: WHY IS IT IMPORTANT TO GET A COPY OF MY BACKGROUND CHECK?

- To correct any errors, such as incomplete or incorrect information;
- To find out what other people are likely to see about you (employers, private landlords, government agencies, etc.);
- To be better prepared to answer questions about your criminal history (on job and housing applications, in job interviews, etc.); AND
- To protect your rights and maximize your chances of success!

ROADMAP TO REENTRY

Under federal and state law, you are entitled to get a FREE copy of your background check once every 12 months from any background check company.<sup>2982</sup> To get a copy of your background check for free, you must confirm in writing that 1 of the following is true:

- You are unemployed and intend to look for work within the next 60 days;
- You receive public benefits (government assistance such as CalFresh or General Assistance); OR
- You believe there may be errors in your report because you have been the victim of fraud or identity theft.<sup>2983</sup>

Send a letter to whichever background check company you choose stating that you fall into one of the above categories (and list which category), and that you would like to request your free background check.

Legitimate agencies should not hesitate when you ask for your free report and should offer to run it right away.

REMEMBER, your background check is different from your credit report, but you are entitled to both for free once every 12 months.

V. CLEANING UP YOUR CRIMINAL RECORD— LATER IN REENTRY

WHAT WILL I LEARN?

- If/ when possible, the different ways to clean up your criminal record in California
- The rules and requirements for each remedy
- What effect each of these remedies has on your criminal record
- What effect each of these remedies has on your other legal rights
- When to apply for each of these remedies
- Which remedies you qualify for and which are best for you!

There are MANY different ways to clean up your criminal record. This section will explain all of the different options in California, along with the rules and process for each one.

WHY COULD IT BE HELPFUL TO “CLEAN UP” MY CRIMINAL RECORD?

In general, cleaning up your criminal record can reduce many of the damaging effects associated with having a criminal history:

- Cleaning up your record can hide criminal records from certain people who run background checks on you—meaning most private employers, private landlords, and other private individuals or companies will NOT be able to see much of the information in your record.
- Cleaning up your record may allow you to say that you were never convicted of a particular offense; and/or may restore many of the rights that you lost because of a conviction (for example, voting rights, right to sit on a jury service, gun rights, etc.)
- Cleaning up your record can reduce or remove the legal restrictions that prevent you from getting certain jobs and professional licenses.

Cleaning up your record will make it easier to rebuild your life, move forward, and maximize your opportunities for success in the future. The first step toward cleaning up your criminal record is understanding the different types of records you may have and the information that may be in them.

IF I AM REQUIRED TO REGISTER WITH LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT BECAUSE OF A SEX, ARSON, OR DRUG CONVICTION, HOW WILL CLEANING UP MY RECORD AFFECT MY REGISTRATION REQUIREMENT?

Like most other questions about cleaning your record, this will depend on the specific details of your situation, including the type of registration requirement you have, your conviction offense, and which of these “remedies” you use to clean up your record. Certain remedies can remove your registration requirement, while others will NOT affect your registration requirement at all, so you will still have to register. For more information about which “cleaning remedies” DO and DON’T affect your registration requirements, see PG. 997.

California offers these remedies to help you clean up your record...

- You can correct errors, fill in incomplete information, or add missing information in your record (see PG. 939 to learn about fixing errors in your RAP sheet, and see PG. 944 to learn about fixing errors in a background check);
- You may be able to get your conviction(s) expunged (see PG. 957);
- You may be able to get your felony conviction reduced (see PG. 968), or reclassified or resentenced as a misdemeanor (see PG. 970);
- You may be eligible for a Certificate of Rehabilitation (see PG. 980);
- You may be able to get a pardon from the governor (see PG. 984);
- You may be able to get your adult arrest record(s) sealed (see PG. 989) or get your juvenile criminal records sealed (see PG. 991);
- You may be able to get your federal conviction expunged (see PG. 993) or get a Presidential Pardon (see PG. 996).

HERE IS A BASIC OVERVIEW OF THE DIFFERENT REMEDIES AVAILABLE FOR CLEANING UP YOUR RECORD, AND THE RULES FOR EACH TYPE OF REMEDY. FOR MORE INFORMATION ABOUT EACH OF THESE REMEDIES, TURN TO THE PAGE NUMBER LISTED IN THE CHART.

CLEANING UP YOUR RECORD—DIFFERENT REMEDIES
“CLEANING” REMEDY	AM I ELIGIBLE?	WHEN?	EFFECT
Fixing errors in your criminal record (PG. 953)	YES! Anyone can fix errors in their record.	ANYTIME	Your criminal record will not contain wrong, incomplete, or missing information
California Expungement (“dismissal”) (PG. 957)	You may be eligible if: You did NOT spend any time in prison for the offense; You are OFF probation, or other supervision; AND You are NOT currently charged with, serving a sentence for, or on probation/parole/ supervision for another offense.OK  Note: Certain convictions are NEVER eligible for expungement (technically called a “dismissal”).	> You must be OFF probation or other supervision > Certain convictions require you to wait 1 or 2 years before you can apply for an expungement  (Note: If you are still on probation, you may be able to get released early, so that you can apply for expungement – see PG. 966.)	> Most private employers, private landlords, insurance companies, creditors, and other people will NOT be able to see an expunged conviction if they run a background check on you.  > Most private employers CANNOT ask about or consider a conviction that has been expunged.
Reducing felony conviction to a misdemeanor under Cal. Penal Code § 17(b) (PG. 968)	You may be eligible if: Your conviction was for a felony “wobbler”, AND You were NOT sentenced to state prison; You were NOT sentenced to county jail under CA’s Realignment laws; AND You were sentenced to PROBATION.	You can apply anytime, but you will have a much better chance if you wait until you are half-way through or done with your probation term.	> You can say that you were never convicted of the felony  > Restores your rights to vote and sit on a jury  > May restore your gun rights  > Removes many legal barriers to getting professional licenses and jobs
Prop. 47: Reclassifying and/or resentencing felony conviction to a misdemeanor (PG. 970)	You are eligible if your conviction is for one of the covered offenses (see list PG. 971), AND you do NOT have a conviction for a “super strike” felony, and you are NOT required to register as a sex-offender.	ASAP!—You MUST apply before November 2022.	> Reduces your current sentence or term of supervision  > Offers immediate release if you have already served your reduced sentence  > Changes your conviction to a misdemeanor  > Removes legal barriers and restores most rights lost due to felony conviction
Prop. 64: Reclassifying and/or resentencing certain felony marijuana convictions to misdemeanors, infractions or getting them dismissed (PG. 976)	You are eligible if your conviction is for one of the covered offenses (see list PG. 976). Unlike Prop. 47, you are not automatically disqualified if you have a conviction for a “super strike” felony or are required to register as a sex-offender under Cal. Pen. Code section 290(c), but the trial court may impose higher punishment under those circumstances.	ANYTIME	> Legalizes certain marijuana offenses related to personal use where the individual is 21 or older  > Reduces the penalties for certain marijuana offenses to wobblers, misdemeanors, or infractions  > Restores all civil rights denied due to a felony conviction where sentence is recalled  > May be relieved of duty to register

Certificate of Rehabilitation (PG. 980)	You may be eligible if > You were convicted of felony and you served a state prison sentence for it OR You were convicted of a felony or misdemeanor sex offense, AND your conviction was expunged, AND have not been incarcerated since then, AND are not on formal probation AND > Lived in California for last 5 years Note: You are NOT eligible if you have a conviction for certain serious sex offenses; were sentenced to death penalty; have mandatory lifetime probation; are in the military; or no longer live in California.	> You must be OFF probation, parole, or PRCS > You must complete 7-10 year waiting (“rehabilitation”) period, based on conviction offense [Note: You can request a COR before the end of your waiting period, but it must be “in the interests of justice” to grant it early.]	> Serves as official proof of your rehabilitation > May remove sex offender registration requirement > Serves as an automatic application for governor’s pardon
Governor’s Pardon (PG. 984)	> You were convicted of felony or misdemeanor sex offense; AND > Your conviction is from California.	> If you get a COR, you are automatically applied for a pardon. > If no COR, 10-year waiting period for direct application. > May be recommended for pardon by BPH while incarcerated.	> May restore your gun rights. > Restores your right to vote and sit on a jury. > Removes sex offender registration requirement. > Allows you to work as parole agent or probation officer. > Restores your right to hold public office.
Sealing adult arrest records (PG. 989)	You may be eligible if > You were arrested as adult; > Your arrest did NOT lead to a conviction; > You have NO other convictions connected to the arrest; AND > You are found factually innocent of the charges.	You must apply within 2 years after you are arrest or charged. [Note: You may apply later, but you must show good reason for not applying earlier.]	> All records related to arrest and criminal proceedings are sealed and destroyed. > It’s as if the arrest and prosecution never occurred.
Sealing juvenile records (PG. 991)	You may be eligible if > You are over 18, OR it has been 5 years since your last arrest or probation discharge; > No adult convictions for felony or misdemeanor of “moral turpitude”; > Case started and ended in juvenile court; AND > NO open civil lawsuit from juvenile offense. [Note: You are NOT eligible if juvenile adjudication was for certain violent offenses AND you were over 14 at time of offense.]	> As soon as you are over 18; OR > 5 years after your last arrest or discharge from probation.	> All court, law enforcement, and other records are sealed and destroyed. > It’s as if the juvenile case never occurred.
Federal expungement or dismissal (PG. 993)	You may be eligible if > You were convicted of “simple” possession of drugs under federal law; > You were in possession of a drug covered by the statute; > You were only convicted of one drug-related offense (state or federal); > You successfully completed probation with NO violations.	As soon as you complete probation.	> Under 21 at time of offense - ALL records of conviction, arrest, and criminal proceedings are destroyed as if it never happened; > Over 21 at time of offense - All records of conviction, arrest, and criminal proceedings are sealed (but not destroyed).
Presidential pardon (PG. 996)	> You were convicted of a federal offense; You have completed your sentence (including any parole or probation term).	5 years from the date of your release (or from the date of your conviction if you were never incarcerated).	> Restores any civil rights lost due to federal conviction, including gun rights; > Does not restore rights lost due to state convictions.

Be prepared to show support for your clean record!

For almost every type of “cleaning” remedy, you will need to convince a judge (or sometimes the Governor or President) of why you deserve the remedy you are asking for. When you ask to have your record cleaned up (usually by filing papers in court or with the government), you will want to make sure that the judge (or Governor) has all possible materials that support your request, such as letters of support, school transcripts, awards, certificates of achievement, and diplomas.

WHAT INFORMATION WILL I NEED TO CLEAN UP MY RECORD?

This is a general list of the information you will need to have for EVERY entry in your criminal record:<sup>2984</sup>

1. Your case number (sometimes called “docket number”);
2. The dates associated with your offense, including the dates of arrest, conviction, sentencing, release, and completion of any term of supervision;
3. The name of the code (for example, Penal Code, Health & Safety Code, etc.) and section number of the code that you were accused or convicted of violating;
4. Whether you were ordered to serve time on probation (formal and informal probation are treated the same in your record);
  - a. If so, for how long?
5. Whether you were ordered to pay any restitution, court fines or penalties, or administrative fees, and how much (learn more about these in the COURT-ORDERED DEBT CHAPTER, beginning on PG. 654); and
6. Whether you were sentenced to state prison.

WHY DO I NEED THIS INFORMATION FOR EXPUNGEMENT?

You will need this information for two reasons:

1. The information in your record will help you (and your lawyer, if you have one) decide which remedies you are eligible for (allowed to get), based on your criminal history (such as expungement, reclassification, dismissal, Certificate of Rehabilitation, or pardon); AND
2. To request the remedy you want, you (or your lawyer) will need to fill out forms for the court or agency. You will need detailed information from your criminal record in order to fill out these forms.<sup>2985</sup>

WHERE DO I GET THIS INFORMATION FOR EXPUNGEMENT?

The best way to get this information is from your RAP sheet. You will need the RAP sheet that has information on ALL of your convictions.

Choose the RAP sheet that has information on ALL of your cases:

- Your local (county) RAP sheet will list only your cases in that county, so only use this if ALL of your cases are from the SAME COUNTY (or if you only have 1 case). For information on getting your local county RAP sheet, see PG. 951.
- Your California (DOJ) RAP sheet will list all of your cases in California, so use this if ALL of your cases are from the state of CALIFORNIA only. For instructions on how to get your DOJ RAP sheet, see APPENDIX A, on PG. 1002.)
- Your FBI (federal) RAP sheet will list all of your cases from EVERY STATE as well as FEDERAL offenses. Use this if you have cases from more than one state or any federal convictions. For instructions on how to get your FBI RAP sheet, see APPENDIX D, on PG. 1008.

You may also be able to get information on a case from the following sources:

- Your court papers from your case.
  - BUT court papers will only contain information about that particular case. If you have multiple cases, especially if they are from different counties, it may be easier to get a copy of your full California RAP sheet (or FBI RAP sheet, if you also have federal or out-of-state cases).
- Your lawyer, parole agent, probation officer, or other people at the courts or law enforcement agencies.
  - BUT these people may only have limited information about your case, or may have information about 1 case but NOT others, so it’s better to go through the formal channels of getting your full RAP sheet.
- The criminal court where your case was decided.
  - BUT the court will only have information for cases from that county and NOT other counties. If you only have cases from 1 county, make sure you get copies of ALL of your court papers for ALL of your cases in that county.

Now that you have your criminal records and you know what’s in them, you are ready to begin cleaning them up!

CALIFORNIA “EXPUNGEMENT” OF STATE CONVICTIONS

CA EXPUNGEMENT—A GENERAL OVERVIEW

An expungement of a state conviction (also called a “dismissal”) is a way of cleaning up your record that limits the information that shows up in a background check<sup>2986</sup> and can relieve you of some of the consequences associated with your conviction.

WHAT EXPUNGEMENT DOES:

- Prohibits information about the conviction from being included in some background checks;
- Releases you from most of the “penalties and disabilities” resulting from the conviction;
- Changes your record to show that the conviction was dismissed (but does NOT remove the offense from your official criminal record (RAP) entirely).

WHAT CONVICTIONS CAN BE EXPUNGED?

- A conviction may qualify for expungement if:
- You did NOT spend any time in prison for the offense; AND
- You completed any term of supervision for the offense; AND
- You are NOT currently charged with, serving a sentence for, or on a term of supervision for another offense.
- Note: Certain convictions are NEVER eligible for expungement.

HOW DO I GET AN EXPUNGEMENT?

- You must file a petition with the court;
- You may have a hearing where you will have to persuade a judge that you deserve an expungement;
- You may have to give the court documents that support your request, such as letters of support, school transcripts, and diplomas or certificates.

WHAT IS “EXPUNGEMENT”(A DISMISSAL) IN CALIFORNIA?

Expungement (also called dismissal) is a way to clean up your record, by limiting the criminal history information that certain people can see in your background check<sup>2987</sup> and relieves you of some of the consequences associated with your conviction.

An expungement is also called a “dismissal” because your case is actually reopened by the court, the “finding of guilt” (your guilty or no contest plea, or guilty verdict) is withdrawn, and a plea of not guilty is entered. The court will then dismiss your case, and your record will be changed to show a dismissal (under Cal. Penal Code § 1203.4) rather than a conviction.

Getting your conviction expunged hides the conviction from certain people when they run a background check on you. For example, most private employers are NOT allowed to see a conviction that has been expunged.<sup>2988</sup> Additionally, most private employers CANNOT ask you about, or even consider, a conviction that has been expunged when you apply for a job.<sup>2989</sup> For information on how to get a conviction expunged, see PG. 965.

IMPORTANT: Expungement does NOT erase the offense from your criminal record or RAP sheet. But it DOES change your record to show the conviction was dismissed.<sup>2990</sup>

WHAT DOES EXPUNGEMENT DO?

- An expungement makes it so that most private employers CANNOT see the expunged conviction when they run a background check on you.
- On job applications for (most) private employers, if you are asked if you have any convictions, you can answer “No”.<sup>2991</sup> EXCEPTION: On applications for certain jobs, you MUST report convictions even if they have been expunged. (For more information about who can still see or ask about expunged convictions, see PG. 958.)

<sup>2991</sup> CAL. PENAL CODE § 1203.4(a) [by exclusion]; see also Dealing With Criminal Records in Alameda County Self-Help Manual, EAST BAY COMMUNITY LAW CENTER (2005), <http://ebclc.org/documents/AlamedaCountyCriminalRecords-SelfHelpManual-SP2005.pdf>.

IMPORTANT “BAN THE BOX” LAWS: Several California cities and counties have passed “Ban the Box” laws that bar employers from asking about convictions on a job application. If you apply for a job in a location with a “Ban the Box” law, the application should not ask about any convictions. For more information on Ban the Box laws, see the EMPLOYMENT CHAPTER, on PG. 571.

- Anyone else who does see the expungement will see it as a dismissal instead of a conviction, which is less alarming.
- If you apply for a professional or occupational license or certification, an expungement can help your chances because it is seen as evidence of rehabilitation.<sup>2992</sup> (Although the licensing board will still be able to see that there was a conviction that was dismissed.) For more information on licensing and certification, see the EMPLOYMENT CHAPTER, on PG. 571.
- An expungement may also be seen as evidence of rehabilitation when you apply for housing.<sup>2993</sup> Learn more in the HOUSING CHAPTER, PG. 371).
- If you were denied federal student loans because of a drug conviction, you will become eligible again after an expungement.<sup>2994</sup> For more information about regaining eligibility for federal aid after a drug conviction, see the EDUCATION CHAPTER, on PG. 882, and EDUCATION CHAPTER: Appendix B, on PG. 905).

IMPORTANT: If you are a noncitizen and were convicted of a DUI offense, getting your conviction expunged might have immigration benefits for you. It’s recommended that you contact a lawyer immediately if you have a DUI and you are a noncitizen. See the new section on immigration consequences of criminal records starting on PG. 1105, which includes a list of legal aid resources.

WHAT DOES EXPUNGEMENT NOT DO?

- Expungement DOES NOT remove the offense from your criminal history—it will still show up on your RAP sheets, but it will show that the conviction was dismissed.<sup>2995</sup>
- Expungement DOES NOT seal the court file from public access, so someone can still see the conviction if they look up court records from your case.<sup>2996</sup>
- If you face criminal charges in the future, the expunged conviction still counts as a prior conviction.<sup>2997</sup>
- Under California’s 3 Strikes law, the expunged conviction still counts as a “strike” if the underlying offense was a “strike.” This means the expunged conviction can still count against you if you have a new criminal case under the 3 Strikes law.<sup>2998</sup>
- Expungement does NOT restore your right to possess a firearm if you lost this right due to your conviction. This means you can still be charged with “felon in possession” offenses if the conviction caused you to lose your gun rights.<sup>2999</sup>
- If your conviction required you to register as a sex offender, you will still have to register after the conviction is expunged.<sup>3000</sup>
- Expungement will NOT prevent the DMV from suspending or revoking your driver license based on the underlying offense.<sup>3001</sup>
- You will still have to disclose your conviction when applying for certain types of jobs, such a law enforcement or working with children, and employers in these areas can still consider your expunged conviction when deciding whether to hire you. (For more information, see the EMPLOYMENT CHAPTER, on PG. 571.)

- You will still have to disclose your conviction when applying for government-issued licenses (such as professional or occupational licenses or certificates), and licensing agencies can still consider an expunged conviction when deciding whether to issue you a license.<sup>3002</sup> However a professional or occupational licensing board CANNOT deny your license based solely on a conviction that was expunged.<sup>3003</sup> (For more information, see the EMPLOYMENT CHAPTER, on PG. 601.)
- Expungement does NOT restore your right to hold public office if you lost this right due to your conviction.<sup>3004</sup>
- Expungement does NOT remove the immigration consequences of your conviction, so Immigration & Customs Enforcement (ICE) can still use the expunged conviction for removal or exclusion.<sup>3005</sup> Talk to an immigration attorney for help if you have this issue!

WHO CAN SEE MY RECORD—EVEN IF IT IS EXPUNGED?

Anyone with access to your RAP sheet will still see your expunged convictions (see SIDE BOX). This includes law enforcement agencies, courts, licensing boards, and certain employers. You must disclose expunged convictions if you are applying for a job in certain fields such as law enforcement,<sup>3006</sup> healthcare,<sup>3007</sup> or banking,<sup>3008</sup> or if you want to apply for a professional or occupational license of any kind.<sup>3009</sup> Public Housing Authorities (PHAs), which run many government-assisted housing programs can also consider convictions that have been expunged.

2 THINGS TO KNOW:

- Certain employers and most licensing agencies are required to ask about expunged convictions—and you MUST disclose this information if they do. However, these groups will also understand what an expungement means—they will know that you are making an effort to clean up your record by having the original conviction expunged.
- Although it is illegal for most private employers to ask about or consider expunged convictions when making hiring decisions,<sup>3010</sup> be prepared for unethical or uninformed employers to access and use this information anyway. For more information about what to do in this situation, see the EMPLOYMENT CHAPTER, on PG. 571.

IF I SUCCESSFULLY OBTAINED A DISMISSAL UNDER PROP. 36 OR PENAL CODE SECTION 1000, DO I EVER HAVE TO DISCLOSE THE UNDERLYING CONVICTION?

In certain situations. In general, once you have a dismissal under Penal Code section 1000 or Prop 36, you are not required to disclose the underlying conviction. However, the Penal Code does list exceptions to this general rule. You are required to disclose that you were convicted of a crime (even after dismissal) under the following circumstances:

- When applying for a job in public office OR as a police officer;
- When applying for a professional license through a state or local agency;
- When contracting with the California Lottery;
- When you are impeached to serve on a jury.<sup>3011</sup>

CAN A PRIVATE EMPLOYER FIND OUT ABOUT MY EXPUNGED CONVICTION?

Maybe. There are two ways that a private employer might find out about your expunged conviction:

- Even though background check companies are NOT allowed to report expunged convictions to employers, it is possible that a company might include this information in your background check anyway;
- If an employer does its own “in-house” background check on you, they may find the information in (public) court records about your case. Remember, expungement does NOT seal the court records from your case, so someone could still look up the original conviction in your files. However, it is still illegal for most private employers to consider an expunged conviction, even if they learn about it through public records.

WHAT TYPES OF CONVICTIONS CAN BE EXPUNGED?

Under the law, only certain types of convictions can be expunged. Generally, the following types of convictions qualify for expungement (a dismissal):

1. The CONVICTION is for: an Infraction; a misdemeanor, or a felony “wobbler” (with NO prison time);

AND

2. The SENTENCE imposed was: county jail time; probation; a fine; or a combination of these.<sup>3012</sup>

This means that as long as you were sentenced only to pay a fine, serve a term of probation, OR serve time in county jail—even for a felony “wobbler”—your conviction may be eligible for expungement.

IN ADDITION, you must meet the following requirements for your conviction to be eligible for expungement. In general, these requirements are:

1. You did NOT spend any time in prison for the offense; AND
2. You are OFF probation or other type of supervision; AND
3. You are NOT currently charged with, serving a sentence for, or on a term of supervision for another offense.

PLEASE NOTE: Certain convictions are NEVER eligible for expungement (see the next question). Also, if you are at least half-way through probation, you may be able to request to get off early. Learn more on PG. 201.

For information more information about the types of California expungement, see PG. 962.

IMPORTANT: You must be OFF PROBATION or any other form of supervision to be eligible for expungement!<sup>3013</sup> If you are still on probation and want to get your conviction expunged, you must first ask a judge to grant you early release (“early discharge”) from probation BEFORE requesting an expungement. For more information on requesting early release from probation, see PG. 966.

WHAT TYPES OF CONVICTIONS CAN’T BE EXPUNGED?

Some convictions are NEVER ELIGIBLE for expungement. They are:

- Any conviction where you SERVED a prison term (or any other facility run by CDCR, including prison camps and prison hospitals)—no matter what your conviction was for! Exception: if you served a prison term before 2011 for a crime that falls under realignment. See PG. 961.
- Violations of the following code sections:
  - Any infraction under California Vehicle Code section 42001 (violations of any local ordinance, minor traffic tickets, pedestrian and bicycle offenses);
  - Any misdemeanor under California Vehicle Code section 42002.1 (failing to stop and submit to vehicle inspection, refusing to comply with orders from law enforcement officer or firefighter, unsafe condition that endangers a person);
  - Any conviction (felony or misdemeanor) under California Penal Code sections 286(c), 288, 288a(c), 288.5, 289(j), 311.1, 311.2, 311.3, 311.11; or a felony conviction under California Penal Code sections 261.5(d).<sup>3014</sup>

BECAUSE I HAVE A FELONY CONVICTION, BUT NEVER WENT TO PRISON FOR IT, CAN I GET IT EXPUNGED?

Maybe. If you were convicted of a felony, but you were NOT sentenced to serve a state prison term, your offense is called a “wobbler.” A wobbler is an offense that can be charged as either a misdemeanor or a felony, so the offense “wobbles” between the two offense categories. If you were convicted of a felony wobbler AND you were NOT sentenced to a state prison term, your offense is probably eligible for expungement.

“Wobblers” are eligible for expungement if:<sup>3015</sup>

- You were NOT sentenced to a state prison term for the offense;
- You were NOT sent to prison for a violation while on probation for the offense;

IS IT A “WOBBLER”?

You can find out if your conviction is a wobbler by checking the California Penal Code section reported on your RAP sheet. If the code states that the crime is punishable either a fine, time in the county jail, time in state prison, or any combination of these, your offense is considered a wobbler.

- You were NOT convicted of an offense that is NEVER eligible for expungement (see PG. 960); AND
- You otherwise meet the requirements for expungement (for information on the two types of expungement and their requirements, see PG. 962).

If you meet the above requirements, your felony should be eligible for expungement.

BECAUSE I HAVE A FELONY CONVICTION THAT WAS SENTENCED TO COUNTY JAIL UNDER REALIGNMENT INSTEAD OF STATE PRISON, CAN I GET IT EXPUNGED?

Maybe. If you were convicted of a felony and sentenced to county jail instead of state prison (called a “County Jail Felony”) under California’s Realignment Act,<sup>3016</sup> you may be eligible for expungement under California’s newest expungement law.<sup>3017</sup> This law is specifically intended for people who were sentenced under Realignment.

To be eligible for expungement of your Realignment felony, you must:

- Have served your entire sentence in county jail—NOT state prison (unless you meet the criteria for 1203.42, described below);
- Have completed your entire sentence—including any probation or community supervision;
- Paid all of your fines and fees; AND
- Not have any new charges pending, not be serving a sentence on a new case, and not be on probation for another case.

NEW LAW: If you served a prison term before 2011 for a felony that now falls under the Realignment Act, you may be eligible for dismissal under a new law. Penal Code section 1203.42, effective January 1, 2018, applies to you if you would have been sentenced to a County Jail Felony if Realignment had existed at the time of your conviction.<sup>3018</sup>

The dismissal will be granted at the discretion of the court “in the interest of justice.” As with other dismissal remedies, in order to be eligible, you must not have any new charges pending, must not be serving a sentence on a new case, and must not be on probation for another case. In addition, at least two years must have passed since you finished your prison sentence.<sup>3019</sup> For more information on whether you qualify, call Root & Rebound’s Reentry Legal Hotline.

WHAT IS A “SPLIT SENTENCE” VERSUS A “STRAIGHT SENTENCE”?

Under California’s Realignment Act, people who are sentenced to county jail instead of prison for felony convictions, can be sentenced in two ways:

- Straight sentence—a person is sentenced to serve their entire sentence in custody. When they are released, they have completed their entire sentence and are not required to serve any term of supervision.
- Split sentence—a person is sentenced to spend a portion of their time in custody and the remainder under community supervision (mandatory supervision).

Additionally, BEFORE you can get your conviction expunged, you must wait a certain amount of time after completing your sentence:

- If you had a split sentence, you must wait 1 year after the completion of your sentence.
- If you had a straight sentence, you must wait 2 years after the completion of your sentence.<sup>3020</sup>

Finally, expungement under this statute is entirely discretionary, meaning it is up to the judge to decide whether or not your conviction should be expunged. For this reason, you should be prepared to bring any evidence you can to show the judge that you deserve to have your conviction expunged. (For more information on discretionary expungements, see PG. 963.)

IMPORTANT: What an expungement will NOT do. Even if you have your Realignment “AB 109” felony expunged:

- It will still count as a “prior” conviction in a future criminal case;<sup>3021</sup>

- You still have to report it as a conviction to occupational licensing agencies and on applications for job positions in a government office;<sup>3022</sup>
- It does NOT restore your gun rights, so you can still be charged under “felon in possession” criminal laws;<sup>3023</sup>
- It does NOT restore your right to hold a job in public (government) office (if you lost this right due to your conviction).<sup>3024</sup>

WHAT ARE THE DIFFERENT TYPES OF EXPUNGEMENT AND WHAT DO THEY REQUIRE?

There are 2 types of expungements: Mandatory and Discretionary.

- Mandatory expungement is automatic, meaning the judge MUST expunge your conviction if you meet all the requirements.
- Discretionary expungement means that it is up to the judge whether or not you deserve to have your conviction expunged. You still have to meet certain requirements, but you do NOT have to meet all of the requirements like you do for mandatory dismissal.

➤ MANDATORY EXPUNGEMENT

If your conviction is eligible for expungement AND you meet certain additional requirements, the law says that the judge MUST dismiss your conviction. There are two situations where you can get MANDATORY expungement of your conviction:<sup>3025</sup>

SITUATION #1 – If you received PROBATION:

Your conviction MUST be expunged if ALL 4 of the following apply to you:<sup>3026</sup>

- (1) Your conviction was for a misdemeanor or felony “wobbler”;
- (2) You received probation as part of your sentence, and:
  - You successfully completed probation OR
  - You received early release from probation;<sup>3027</sup>
- (3) You are NOT currently serving another sentence or under supervision for another offense; AND
- (4) You are NOT currently charged with another offense.

IMPORTANT LEGAL UPDATE: Please note—it used to be unclear whether or not you were required to pay off victim restitution to get a mandatory expungement of an eligible conviction, but a recent California court case decided that a person who has the right to a mandatory expungement of a conviction under California Penal Code § 1203.4 CANNOT be denied the dismissal just because he or she still owes victim restitution.<sup>3028</sup> This means that if you owe victim restitution, you would still have the RIGHT to a mandatory dismissal of the conviction if all of the other above requirements are met.

SITUATION #2 – If you did NOT receive PROBATION:

Your conviction MUST be expunged if ALL of the following apply to you:<sup>3029</sup>

- Your conviction was for an infraction or misdemeanor; AND
- You did NOT receive probation as part of your sentence, AND
- You have fully complied with the requirements of your sentence (including paying fines and reimbursements that were part of your sentence<sup>3030</sup>); AND
- One year has passed since the date of your conviction; AND

<sup>3022</sup> CAL. PENAL CODE § 1203.41(b)(2). You must also report the conviction on applications for contracting with the California State Lottery Commission.

<sup>3025</sup> CAL. PENAL CODE § 1203.4(a) (“In any case in which the defendant has fulfilled the conditions of probation for the entire period of probation, or has been discharged prior to the termination of the period of probation, or in any other case in which a court, in its discretion and the interests of justice, determines that a defendant should be granted relief available under this section, the defendant shall, at any time after the termination of the period of probation, if he or she is not then serving a sentence for any offense, on probation for any offense, or charged with the commission of any offense, be permitted by the court to withdraw his or her plea of guilty or plea of nolo contendere and enter a plea of not guilty.”).

<sup>3030</sup> In light of the decision in People v. Seymour, Case No. H040560 (Santa Clara County, Super. Ct. No. CC955665), it is unclear whether you can be denied mandatory expungement because of unpaid fines and reimbursements. However, you cannot be denied mandatory expungement because you still owe victim restitution.

- You are NOT currently serving another sentence or under supervision for another offense; AND
- You are NOT currently charged with another offense.

If you meet the requirements for either of the two situations above, your conviction should be eligible for MANDATORY expungement.

➤ DISCRETIONARY EXPUNGEMENT

If your conviction is eligible for expungement, but you do NOT meet the requirements for a mandatory expungement, you may still get a DISCRETIONARY expungement for your conviction—but it will be up to the judge to decide whether or not to grant it.

The judge MAY expunge your conviction if you meet these 3 requirements:<sup>3031</sup>

(1) You were convicted of an infraction, misdemeanor, or felony “wobbler”;

AND

(2) (2a or 2b or 2c must apply...)

(2a) You received probation, AND you did NOT complete all the conditions of probation (for example, if you violated conditions of your probation—though just not paying victim’s restitution isn’t enough to deny a mandatory expungement anymore<sup>3032</sup>); AND you did NOT get an early release from probation;<sup>3033</sup> OR

(2b) You received probation for a conviction of any offense listed in California Vehicle Code sections 12810(a) to (e) (certain serious traffic violations)<sup>3034</sup>; OR

(2c) You did NOT receive probation AND you did NOT complete all the requirements of your sentence; AND 1 year has passed since your conviction.<sup>3035</sup>

AND

(3) You are NOT currently charged with, under supervision for, or serving a sentence for any other offense.

IMPORTANT: Restitution Payments & Discretionary Expungement.

Although the judge is allowed to grant you a discretionary expungement if you still owe restitution, fines, or other payments ordered by the court,<sup>3036</sup> it can be much more difficult to get your conviction expunged if you have not made these payments (especially victim restitution). The judge will probably want to see that at least you have been making efforts to pay your debts, even if you still owe money. For more information on paying restitution, fines, and other fees, see the COURT-ORDERED DEBT CHAPTER, beginning on PG. 654. It’s also good to contact lawyer to get advice on your individual case, since restitution is different for every case. See the list of legal aid providers to find a lawyer who may be able to help you on PG. 1127.

In order to grant a discretionary dismissal, the judge must find that is “in the interests of justice” to do so.<sup>3037</sup> This means you will need to show a very convincing reason why you deserve to have your conviction expunged. You should give the court as much helpful information as possible (including evidence of rehabilitation) to persuade the judge to decide in your favor!

AUTOMATIC “EXPUNGEMENTS”

In a handful of limited cases involving certain types of drug convictions, your record will be cleared automatically, and you will not have to go through any special court process to get an expungement. This happens in 2 situations:

- If the judge suspended your sentence (called deferred entry of judgment) and ordered you to do a drug-treatment program (drug diversion) instead, and you successfully completed the program.
- If you have a minor marijuana conviction for simple possession, and your conviction is more than 2 years old.

For more information about automatically cleaning your record in these 2 situations, see PG. 965.

REMEMBER, YOU ARE NOT ELIGIBLE FOR EXPUNGEMENT IF YOU SPENT TIME IN STATE PRISON FOR YOUR CONVICTION, OR IF YOUR CONVICTION IS FOR ANY OF THE OFFENSES THAT ARE NEVER ELIGIBLE FOR EXPUNGEMENT (SEE PG. 960).

Requirement	MANDATORY (Situation 1— Probation)	MANDATORY (Situation 2—NO probation)	DISCRETIONARY	DISCRETIONARY (Realignment Felony)
Here is a list of requirements that you must meet for each type of expungement:
What type of conviction did you have?	Misdemeanor or felony “wobbler”  (But NOT for an offense that is never eligible)	Infraction or misdemeanor	Infraction, misdemeanor, or felony “wobbler”—including violations of Vehicle Code § 12810(a)-(e) (serious traffic violations)  (But NOT for other offenses that are never eligible.)	Realignment felony (county jail felony)
Did your sentence include probation?	YES	NO	YES	(does not matter)
Did you successfully complete ALL probation and/or sentencing requirements (including fine payments)?<sup>3038</sup>	If you were discharged at end of your probation term (not early)—YES  If you were discharged early from probation—NO	YES	NO (and you did NOT receive early discharge)	YES
NOT currently serving another sentence, on probation/parole, or charged with another offense	YES	YES	YES	YES
How much time has passed since your conviction?	(no waiting period)	1 year	(no waiting period)	* 1 year if split sentence * 2 years if straight sentence

<sup>3038</sup> See PG1053. In light of the decision in People v. Seymour, Case No. H040560 (Santa Clara County, Super. Ct. No. CC955665), it is unclear whether you can be denied mandatory expungement because of unpaid fines and reimbursements. However, you cannot be denied mandatory expungement because you still owe victim restitution.

GETTING YOUR CONVICTION “EXPUNGED”

The following information will guide you through the general process of requesting an expungement in California, but it is always a good idea to get a lawyer’s help to make sure you get the best results. There are many expungement clinics across the state that offer free services and advice. For a list of expungement clinics and legal aid organizations that offer expungement services, see PG. 1127.

A NOTE ABOUT COURT FEES: Be aware that the court will charge you fees for filing documents with the court. The amount of the fees will vary by county. If you cannot afford to pay the fees, you can request a fee waiver (meaning you may not have to pay the fees). Ask the clerk how much the fees are and how to request a fee waiver.

I BELIEVE I AM ELIGIBLE FOR A MANDATORY OR DISCRETIONARY EXPUNGEMENT. HOW DO I GET ONE?

In most cases, you will need to file papers in court and ask a judge to expunge your conviction. This process is called filing a Petition for Dismissal, and is basically the same for both mandatory and discretionary expungements, with a few small differences. You will need to file the proper forms in the court where you were convicted, and you may have a hearing in front of a judge (especially if you are requesting a discretionary expungement). For a detailed explanation of each step, see APPENDIX K, on PG. 1018.

IMPORTANT: If you have convictions from multiple cases, you will need to file a separate petition for each case.

IF MY CONVICTION IS ELIGIBLE TO BE EXPUNGED AUTOMATICALLY, HOW DOES THIS HAPPEN?

Under the law, certain drug convictions will be expunged from your record automatically, without you having to file a petition in court. This happens in the following 2 situations:

- 1) Successful completion of a drug diversion program:<sup>3039</sup>
  - In some cases, if you were charged with a drug offense, the judge will suspend your sentence so that you can complete drug treatment instead of going to jail.
  - If the judge suspended your sentence and ordered you to do a drug-treatment program (drug diversion), and you successfully completed the program, your records will be automatically expunged.
  - NOTE: This remedy is available ONLY if you were given drug diversion by the court AND you successfully completed all court-ordered requirements. If you did NOT complete your requirements, or you were NOT actually given diversion by the court, then the conviction will still be on your record (even if you completed a drug treatment program on your own).
- 2) Minor Marijuana Convictions:<sup>3040</sup>
  - If you have a minor marijuana conviction on your record, your record will be cleaned automatically if:
    - Your conviction was for “simple possession” of marijuana; AND
    - The conviction occurred after January 1, 1976; AND
    - The conviction is more than 2 years old.
  - After 2 years, all records relating to your arrest and conviction will be destroyed. You will be able to say that you have NO arrests or convictions for this case.
  - NOTE: This automatic erasure of minor marijuana convictions is ONLY for convictions related to possession of less than 1 ounce (28.5 grams) of marijuana for personal use. If your conviction was for cultivation, sales, or transportation of marijuana, it will NOT be erased automatically.

NOTE: As of January 1, 2011, simple possession of marijuana is no longer a misdemeanor offense; it is now only an infraction.<sup>3041</sup> Although minor marijuana infractions are supposed to be erased automatically just like other minor marijuana (misdemeanor) convictions, in practice, this doesn’t always happen! If you find that your marijuana infraction has NOT been erased from your record, you will need to contact the court clerk at the court that handled your case and ask him or her to (1) correct your criminal record and (2) destroy all arrest and conviction records from your case.

<sup>3040</sup> CAL. HEALTH & SAFETY CODE §§ 11361.5, 11361.7. Note: Even if the records are not physically destroyed, they will no longer have any legal effect after 2 years.

BECAUSE I AM STILL ON PROBATION AND NEED TO BE OFF TO HAVE MY CONVICTION EXPUNGED, IS THERE ANYTHING I CAN DO TO GET OFF EARLY?

Yes. Under California law, you can ask the judge to release you early from your probation term (called “early discharge”).<sup>3042</sup> Although courts often sentence people to several years on probation (for example, 3-4 years for a misdemeanor), many people are able to complete all of their probation requirements (all of the things the court has ordered them to do—such as attend counseling or pay restitution) long before their time is up. For this reason, courts are often willing to release people early from their probation. For more information about probation terms and conditions, see the PAROLE & PROBATION CHAPTER, on PG. 125.

You can request early release from probation whether you are on informal probation (also called court probation), formal probation, or mandatory supervision. The process is the same for all three.<sup>3043</sup> However, early release from supervision in order to get your conviction expunged ONLY applies if you are on informal or formal PROBATION or Mandatory Supervision. It does NOT apply if you are on parole or PRCS. Although you CAN get off parole and PRCS early, you still CANNOT get your conviction expunged because you will have served a prison sentence for it.

For more information about the difference between formal and informal probation, PRCS, and parole, see the PAROLE & PROBATION CHAPTER, on PG. 125. For more information about getting released early from PRCS, see PG. 967, or see also the PAROLE & PROBATION CHAPTER, on PG. 125.

WHAT IS THE PROCESS FOR REQUESTING AN EARLY RELEASE FROM PROBATION SO THAT I CAN PURSUE EXPUNGEMENT?

To request early release from probation, you will need to file a Motion for Early Termination of Probation in the court where you were convicted. Because this process requires drafting a formal court pleading with accompanying documents, we recommend that you ask a lawyer for help. Ideally, you should contact the lawyer who represented you when you were sentenced, but any private criminal defense lawyer or Public Defender should be able to help you.

Requesting an early release from probation will involve filing a Motion for Early Termination of Probation. You will have a hearing where you will need to convince the judge that you deserve to be discharged from your probation term early.

For complete details on each step of the process for requesting an early release from probation, see APPENDIX P, on PG. 1026.

YOU WILL HAVE THE BEST CHANCE OF GETTING RELEASED EARLY FROM PROBATION EARLY IF:

- You have not violated your probation in any way;<sup>3044</sup>
- You have completed the requirements of your probation (finished all classes, paid all restitution<sup>3045</sup> and fines, etc.);<sup>3046</sup> AND
- You are at least halfway through your probationary period (i.e. 1 ½ years of a 3-year probation).<sup>3047</sup>

For more information about probation conditions and requirements, see the PAROLE & PROBATION CHAPTER, on PG. 125. For more information about paying court-ordered restitution and fines, see the COURT-ORDERED DEBT CHAPTER, on PG. 654.

NEED HELP WITH YOUR COURT FORMS?

Remember, it is recommended that ask a lawyer to help you with your Motion for Early Termination forms. But if you cannot get a lawyer or want to do it on your own, you can find helpful information on the California Courts website:

- Cleaning up your record—<http://www.courts.ca.gov/1070.htm>
- Understanding the basics of court forms—<http://www.courts.ca.gov/1078.htm>.

<sup>3042</sup> CAL. PENAL CODE § 1203.3(a) (“The court may at any time when the ends of justice will be served thereby, and when the good conduct and reform of the person so held on probation shall warrant it, terminate the period of probation, and discharge the person so held.”).

<sup>3045</sup> See PG. 1053. In light of the decision in People v. Seymour, Case No. H040560 (Santa Clara County, Super. Ct. No. CC955665), it is unclear whether you can be denied mandatory expungement because of unpaid fines and reimbursements. However, you cannot be denied mandatory expungement because you still owe victim restitution.

<sup>3046</sup> People v. Hawley, 228 Cal. App. 3d 247 (Ct. App. 1991); People v. Guillen, 218 Cal. App. 4th 975 (2013); People v. Holman, 214 Cal. App. 4th 1447-48 (2013).

<sup>3047</sup> People v. Hawley, 228 Cal. App. 3d 247 (Ct. App. 1991); People v. Guillen, 218 Cal. App. 4th 975 (2013). See also Early Termination of Probation in California, CALIFORNIA EXPUNGEMENT HELP, <http://californiaexpungementhelp.com/early-termination-of-probation/>.

COURTS ALSO OFTEN CONSIDER OTHER POSITIVE EFFORTS THAT YOU HAVE MADE IN YOUR LIFE, SUCH AS:<sup>3048</sup>

- Employment or efforts to find a job;<sup>3049</sup>
- Community service or volunteer work;<sup>3050</sup> and
- Educational pursuits and school accomplishments.<sup>3051</sup>

For this reason, you should make every effort to look for a job, volunteer, or go back to school, and you should emphasize these efforts and accomplishments in your Motion for Early Termination. For more information on finding work and getting a job, see the EMPLOYMENT CHAPTER, on PG. 557. For more information on educational opportunities, see the EDUCATION CHAPTER, on PG. 832.

FINALLY, THE JUDGE MAY CONSIDER:

1. The severity of your conviction and conduct;
2. Your complete criminal history (i.e., other convictions on your record);
3. The prosecutor's opinion; and
4. How much hardship it will cause you to remain on probation (for example, whether being on probation is making it difficult for you to find work, reconnect with your family, apply for loans, or go back to school).<sup>3052</sup>

BECAUSE I AM STILL ON POST-RELEASE COMMUNITY SUPERVISION (PRCS), AND NEED TO BE OFF TO HAVE MY CONVICTION EXPUNGED, IS THERE ANYTHING I CAN DO TO GET OFF EARLY?

Yes. Under the Realignment law, the maximum amount of time that you can be on Post-Release Community Supervision is 3 years (not including any time that your PRCS was revoked or suspended).<sup>3053</sup> However, you can be released early in 2 situations:

1. Six months/No violations—If you have been on PRCS for 6 straight months with no violations, you may ask for an early release.<sup>3054</sup> The process for requesting early release from PRCS is very similar to the process for requesting early release from regular probation (see APPENDIX P, on PG. 1026).<sup>3055</sup>
  - a. You will need to write a motion requesting an early release from PRCS, and file it in court in the county where you are on PRCS.<sup>3056</sup> The main difference when you request an early release from PRCS is that the court will ask your probation officer for a probation report and use it to decide whether or not to release you early.<sup>3057</sup> If you have been on PRCS for less than one year, it is entirely up to the judge whether or not to release you early, based on your motion and on what is in your probation report.<sup>3058</sup>
2. One year/No violations—If you have been on PRCS continuously for 1 year with no violations, you will automatically be discharged early, within 30 days after your 1-year anniversary.<sup>3059</sup>
  - a. the probation department does NOT discharge you automatically after If this time, you may need to file a motion in court asking the judge to discharge you. Ask a lawyer for help if you are in this situation. For a list of legal aid organizations that may be able to help, see PG. 1127.

HELPFUL HINT

A Note About Early Release From Probation & Getting a Conviction Expunged in Court at The Same Time:

Generally, early release from probation and expungement of the underlying conviction go hand in hand. In many counties, these two legal processes will happen at the same court appearance, one after the other. You or your lawyer will file both a Motion for Early Termination of Probation (see APPENDIX P, on PG. 1026) and a Petition for Dismissal (see APPENDIX K, on PG. 1018). If the judge grants your Early Release from Probation motion, he or she will probably grant your Dismissal Petition also (as long as you meet all the other expungement requirements), so you could be off probation AND have your conviction expunged by the end of the day!

REDUCING FELONIES TO MISDEMEANORS

Certain felony convictions can be reduced to misdemeanors on your record. You can do this as part of getting the conviction expunged, or you may be able to do it separately, even if you DON'T get the conviction expunged.

Whether or not you get the conviction expunged, reducing your felony to a misdemeanor will help you to clean up your record, and has other benefits, including:

- making the conviction look less serious on your criminal record;
- allowing you to say that you've never been convicted of a felony on certain job, housing, and other applications; AND
- restoring some of the rights you may have lost due to your conviction—such as the right to possess a gun and the right to serve on a jury.

This section explains the benefits of having your felony conviction reduced to a misdemeanor, what penalties may still affect you afterward, and the steps for getting your felony conviction reduced to a misdemeanor.

WHICH FELONY CONVICTIONS CAN BE REDUCED TO MISDEMEANORS?

If you were convicted of a felony, your conviction can be reduced to a misdemeanor if ALL of the following apply:

- 1) You were NOT sentenced to state prison<sup>3060</sup> OR county jail instead of state prison under California's Realignment Act<sup>3061</sup> (in other words, your felony was a "wobbler" offense); AND
- 2) You were sentenced to PROBATION.<sup>3062</sup>

NOTE THAT CERTAIN OFFENSES, referred to as "straight felonies," can NEVER be reduced to misdemeanors. These "straight felonies" can only ever be charged and sentenced as felonies.<sup>3063</sup>

WHAT IS A "WOBBLER" AND WHY IS IT IMPORTANT FOR EXPUNGEMENT?

If you were convicted of a felony, but were NOT sentenced to a state prison term (or county jail under California's Realignment Act), your offense is called a "wobbler." A wobbler is an offense that can be charged as either a misdemeanor or a felony, so the offense "wobbles" between the two offense categories. You can find out if your conviction is a wobbler by reading the California Penal Code section that is listed on your RAP sheet. If it says that the offense is punishable by a fine or time in the county jail (misdemeanor sentences) OR time in state prison or "imprisonment pursuant to subdivision (h) of Section 1170"<sup>3064</sup> (felony sentence), your offense is considered a wobbler.<sup>3065</sup>

Remember, felony "wobblers" are eligible for reduction and ultimately expungement if:<sup>3066</sup>

- You were NOT sentenced to prison time for the offense;
- You were NOT sentenced to county jail instead of prison under Realignment;
- You were NOT sent to prison for a violation while on probation for the offense;
- You were NOT convicted of an offense that is NEVER eligible for expungement (see PG. 960); AND
- You otherwise meet the requirements for expungement (for more information on these requirements, see PG. 960).

For more information on expunging a felony "wobbler" conviction, see PG. 960.

<sup>3065</sup> People v. Mauch, 163 Cal. App. 4th 669, 675 (Ct. App. 2008); (There are a small number of felonies where the legislature has prescribed a fine as an alternative to state prison. For these crimes, CAL. PENAL CODE section 18 permits the court to sentence a person to county jail, thus making the conviction a misdemeanor although the legislature in the original writing of the statute, did not permit this alternative. According to the court in People v. Mauch, "By providing for incarceration in the county jail instead of prison, section 18 authorizes a reduction to a misdemeanor for certain felonies even though the Legislature did not provide for misdemeanor treatment in the statutory provisions defining those particular crimes. Because the Legislature has not elsewhere expressly declared any of these particular felonies may qualify as misdemeanors, section 18 creates, to coin a phrase, "stealth wobblers." Section 18's misdemeanor option, however, is limited to felonies the Legislature has specified are punishable by imposition of a fine as an alternative to state prison. People v. Isaia (1989) 206 Cal. App. 3d 1558, 1564.

<sup>3066</sup> People v. Moomey, 194 Cal. App. 4th 850, 857 (Ct. App. 2011) (citing to authorities stating that "the commission of a wobbler is a felony at the time it is committed and remains a felony unless and until the principal is convicted and sentenced to something less than imprisonment in state prison (or the crime is otherwise characterized as a misdemeanor).

Although the law does not require you to be off probation, you will have a better chance of getting your conviction reduced if you have successfully completed probation first. For information on how to get off probation early, see PG. 966.

IMPORTANT: Felonies that CANNOT be reduced to misdemeanors. If you were sentenced to state prison OR sentenced to county jail for a straight felony under Realignment—even if the judge suspended your sentence so you never spent any time in custody—your conviction is NOT eligible to be reduced to a misdemeanor.<sup>3067</sup>

However, if you never spent any time in prison and you were not sentenced to county jail instead of prison because of Realignment, you may still qualify to have your felony conviction expunged (see PG. 960).<sup>3068</sup>

I WANT TO GET MY FELONY “WOBLER” EXPUNGED. WHAT ARE THE STEPS TO GETTING IT REDUCED TO A MISDEAMEANOR SO THAT IT IS THEN ELIGIBLE FOR EXPUNGEMENT?

Having a felony conviction on your record (even after the conviction has been expunged) can be much more damaging than having only a misdemeanor. Reducing your felony “wobbler” conviction to a misdemeanor, whether or not you have it expunged, changes your criminal record so that—going forward—you no longer have a felony conviction on your record.<sup>3069</sup>

Here are the benefits of reducing your felony “wobbler” to a misdemeanor:

- You can say that you were never convicted of a felony when applying for most jobs, housing, public benefits, loans, etc.,<sup>3070</sup>
- You will no longer be disqualified from getting most professional and occupational licenses because of a felony conviction;<sup>3071</sup>
- You may get back your state gun rights back;<sup>3072</sup> AND
- You will get back your right to serve on a jury.<sup>3073</sup>

IMPORTANT: FELONY REDUCTIONS & IMMIGRATION ISSUES: As of January 1, 2015, the maximum jail time that a person can be sentenced to for a misdemeanor is 364 days—one day short of a full calendar year. This is important if you are at risk of being deported because of a felony conviction, and your conviction can be reclassified or resentenced as a misdemeanor under Prop. 47. When you get your felony conviction reclassified or resentenced, it is recommended that you ask the judge to say on the record that the maximum sentence for your conviction is now 364 days. This might help you avoid certain negative immigration consequences that are tied to a sentence of 365 days or more.<sup>3074</sup> Learn more in the chapter on immigration issues starting on PG. 1105.

ARE THERE PENALTIES THAT WILL STILL AFFECT ME EVEN IF MY FELONY IS REDUCED TO A MISDEMEANOR?

Yes. Unfortunately, reducing your felony conviction to a misdemeanor doesn’t get you completely off the felony hook. Some penalties will carry over and continue to affect you, even after your felony conviction is reduced to a misdemeanor. These include:

<sup>3069</sup> People v. Gilbreth (2007) 156 Cal. App. 4th 53, 57. (“[O]nce a court has reduced a wobbler to a misdemeanor pursuant to . . . [CAL. PENAL CODE] section 17, the crime is thereafter regarded as a misdemeanor ‘for all purposes.’ This unambiguous language means what it says, and unless the Legislature states otherwise, a person such as [defendant] stands convicted of a misdemeanor, not a felony, for all purposes upon the court so declaring.”)

<sup>3070</sup> A few licensing boards/agencies can still consider a conviction as a felony, even after the conviction has been reduced to misdemeanor under 17(b). For example: CAL. BUS. & PROF. CODE § 6102 (Cal. State Bar—licensing of attorneys) and CAL. GOV’T CODE § 1029(a)(3) (disqualification from employment as peace officer).

<sup>3071</sup> CAL. PENAL CODE § 1203.4; see, e.g., 10 CAL. CODE REGS. § 3723(a)(3) (discipline of real estate appraisers—criteria of rehabilitation includes “[j]udicial relief from the consequences of criminal conviction”).

<sup>3072</sup> CAL. PENAL CODE § 29800 imposes a lifetime ban on owning or acquiring a firearm for individuals with felony convictions. It also imposes a 10-year firearm ban for certain misdemeanor convictions. If your conviction is reduced to a misdemeanor that does not carry the 10-year ban, your firearm ban will be automatically lifted. If your conviction is reduced to a misdemeanor that carries a 10-year ban, your prohibition will be lifted after the 10-year period. See People v. Gilbreth, 156 Cal. App. 4th 53, 57 (2007) (a reduction of a felony offense to a misdemeanor precludes its use as a predicate offense under the felon-in-possession statutes).

- If your conviction was for a serious or violent felony, it will still count as a prior “strike” under California’s Three Strikes Law;<sup>3075</sup>
- If your conviction requires you to register as a sex offender under Penal Code section 290, you will still have to register after your felony is reduced;<sup>3076</sup>
- You may still be subject to federal firearms restrictions;<sup>3077</sup>
- Some state licensing agencies may still consider your conviction a felony.<sup>3078</sup>

Also, please note that getting your felony conviction reduced to a misdemeanor under Penal Code section 17(b) does NOT give you any legal rights to be compensated for any time that you served that is more than what you could have been sentenced to if you had been convicted of a misdemeanor originally.

WHAT IS THE PROCESS FOR GETTING A FELONY “WOBLER” CONVICTION REDUCED TO A MISDEMEANOR, AND THEN EXPUNGED?

If you want to reduce your felony conviction to a misdemeanor AND get your conviction expunged, it is generally very easy to do both at the same time! In fact, the Petition for Dismissal (Form CR–180) that you must file to get your conviction expunged has a box that you can check to say that your conviction is also eligible to be reduced and to request it.

Then, when you have your court hearing for your expungement, the judge will consider both requests—first your request to reduce the conviction to a misdemeanor, and then your request to have it expunged. If you meet all the requirements, the judge usually will grant both of your requests together. (For a list of the requirements for reducing a felony to a misdemeanor, see PG. 968. For a list of requirements to get your conviction expunged, see PG. 960.) For more details on how to get your felony conviction reduced to a misdemeanor, see APPENDIX R, on PG. 1035.

If the judge does NOT reduce your felony to a misdemeanor, or if your felony is only eligible for reduction but not expungement, you may need to file a separate petition to get it reduced. It is recommended that you ask a lawyer to help you with this. For more information about filing a separate petition to ask for your felony conviction to be reduced, see APPENDIX R, on PG. 1035.

MY CONVICTION WAS FOR A FELONY AND I WAS SENTENCED TO STATE PRISON. WHAT, IF ANYTHING, COULD I DO TO GET IT EXPUNGED?

Unfortunately, if you were sentenced to state prison, or spent any time in a CDCR facility (including a prison camp or hospital) for your conviction (for any reason), your conviction does NOT qualify for expungement OR for reduction to a misdemeanor.<sup>3079</sup>

BUT, your conviction may still be eligible for Reclassification or Resentencing under Proposition 47, or you may be eligible for a Certificate of Rehabilitation and/or a Governor’s Pardon. (For information on Reclassification and Resentencing under Proposition 47, see PG. 970. For information on Certificates of Rehabilitation, see PG. 980. For information on Governor’s Pardons, see PG. 984.)

PROPOSITION 47: RECLASSIFICATION AND RESENTENCING UNDER THE NEW LAW

WHAT IS PROPOSITION 47, AND HOW COULD IT HELP ME?

Proposition 47 (“Prop. 47”) was a law passed by California voters and became effective in November of 2014. Prop. 47 changed state law so that certain non-violent offenses that previously could be charged as felonies or “wobblers” (either a felony or misdemeanor) can now only be charged as straight misdemeanors.<sup>3080</sup> Prop. 47 is retroactive, which means it also applies to past convictions, so you may be able to get your past felony <sup>3075</sup> Gebremicael v. Cal. Com’n on Teacher Credentialing (2004) 118 Cal. App. 4th 1477, 1486 (“Similarly, for purposes of the “Three Strikes law”, the Legislature has declared a prior felony conviction proven by the prosecution as a prior strike retains its status as a felony even if it had been reduced after initial sentencing to a misdemeanor under Penal Code section 17. CAL. PENAL CODE, § 667, subd. (d)(1), 1170.12, subd. (b)(1).”). However, a reduced felony cannot act as a “prior” crime for a future offense that requires a predicate (that is, preexisting) felony conviction. See People v. Gilbreth 156 Cal. App. 4th 53, 57 (2007).

<sup>3077</sup> 18 U.S.C. 921-930. Under federal law, most domestic violence convictions trigger a lifetime firearms ban, regardless of what state you were convicted in. Most people convicted of a crime of domestic violence in California will never be able to own a gun legally anywhere in the United States.

<sup>3078</sup> See, for example, CAL. BUS. & PROF. CODE §§ 6100, 6102 (for purposes of attorney discipline or disbarment, a felony conviction remains a felony regardless of post-conviction proceedings under CAL. PENAL CODE § 17(b)).

convictions changed to misdemeanors if they meet the legal requirements! If you are still serving a sentence for a conviction that qualifies for Prop. 47, you may be able to get your sentence reduced. Contact your public defender/defense attorney for assistance. Keep reading this section to learn more about the benefits and limitations of Prop. 47!

IMPORTANT UPDATE: The deadline to file Prop. 47 applications has been extended to November 4, 2022! Spread the word.

WHAT OFFENSES DOES PROP. 47 REDUCE?

So long as you were not convicted of an offense listed on PG. 971 (see question: “WHO CANNOT GET PROP. 47 RELIEF?”), Prop. 47 generally helps to reduce the following offenses (past, current, and future):

- Second Degree Burglary—Cal. Penal Code section 459 (if underlying facts can meet the definition of shoplifting now listed in Cal. Penal Code section 459.5)—
- Forgery—Penal Code Sections 470, 475, 476
- Forgery, writing bad checks— Cal. Penal Code section 476a
- Grand Theft—Penal Code Section 487
- Receiving Stolen Property— Cal. Penal Code section 496(a)
- Petty Theft with a Prior— Cal. Penal Code section 666
- Possession of Drugs for Personal Use—Cal. Health & Safety Code Section 11350
- Possession of Concentrated Cannabis—Cal. Health & Safety Code Section 11357(a)
- Possession of Meth—Cal. Health & Safety Code Section 11377
- See PG. 973 for details about the circumstances in which Prop. 47 can change these offenses.

If you were or are charged with one of these offenses on or after November 9, 2014, it can be charged only as a misdemeanor—NOT as a felony.

If were convicted of a felony for one of these offenses on or before November 8, 2014, you may be able to ask a superior court judge to reduce it to a misdemeanor under Prop. 47 (a process called “reclassification” where you must petition the superior court).

If you are currently serving a felony sentence in prison or jail, or are under supervision on probation, post-release community service (PRCS), or state parole for an offense that you were convicted of on or after November 9, 2014, you may be able to get your sentence reduced to a misdemeanor sentence (a process called “resentencing” where you must petition the superior court - see more on PG. 973).

WHO CAN GET PROP. 47 RELIEF?

You can petition a superior court for Prop. 47 relief if you were ever convicted of a felony for an offense listed in the previous question (see question: WHAT OFFENSES DOES PROP. 47 REDUCE?), AND you do not have a disqualifying offense listed below (see question: “WHO CANNOT GET PROP. 47 RELIEF?”).

A California Court of Appeal also decided that Prop. 47 applies equally to juveniles with offenses covered by Prop. 47.<sup>3081</sup> This means that both juveniles AND adults can get qualifying felonies reduced under Prop. 47.

PLEASE NOTE: This information is meant to help you figure out whether you may qualify, but it is always better to have the help of a lawyer to make sure the entire Prop. 47 process is completed accurately, and so that you can be screened for any other possible options for reducing the severity or impact of your criminal record. You can call your local Public Defender’s office for more information about the Prop. 47 process in your county!

IMPORTANT: Your conviction will NOT qualify for Prop. 47 if you also have a conviction for certain serious felony offenses. Below is a list of offenses that will disqualify you from using Prop. 47 to get your felony conviction reduced to a misdemeanor.

WHO CANNOT GET PROP. 47 RELIEF?

Unfortunately, you CANNOT use Prop. 47 to clean up your record if you have also been convicted of any of the following offenses:

- A “serious” or “violent” felony that qualifies as a “super strike” under California Penal Code section 667(e)(2)(iv):
- A “sexually violent offense” under the Sexually Violent Predator Law;<sup>3082</sup>

- Oral copulation,<sup>3083</sup> sodomy,<sup>3084</sup> or sexual penetration<sup>3085</sup> with a person under 14 and more than 10 years younger;
- A lewd or lascivious act involving a person under 14;<sup>3086</sup>
- Any homicide offense, including attempted homicide;<sup>3087</sup>
- Solicitation to commit murder;<sup>3088</sup>
- Assault with a machine gun on a peace officer or firefighter;<sup>3089</sup>
- Possession of a weapon of mass destruction;<sup>3090</sup>
- Any serious or violent felony punishable in California by life imprisonment or death;
- Any offense that requires you to register as a sex offender under California Penal Code section 290(c).

WHO CAN GET PROP. 47 REMEDIES?

Prop. 47 can reduce prior felony convictions to misdemeanors (reclassification) AND can reduce any felony sentence that you're currently serving to a misdemeanor sentence (resentencing).

If you were convicted of one of the offenses covered by Prop. 47 (see PG. 971), and you don't have any of the disqualifying convictions on your record, here's what the change in law could do for you:

- If you are currently incarcerated or on parole, you may be immediately resentenced to a misdemeanor sentence.
- If you are incarcerated, you could be immediately released based on time served;
- If you are on parole or PRCS, you could be immediately discharged, or your parole could be reduced to probation.<sup>3091</sup>
- If you have already completed your sentence and are off parole, you may be able to have your prior conviction reclassified as a misdemeanor.
- If you are currently on formal probation, you could have your probation reduced to informal probation, or terminated based on time served.

IMPORTANT: FELONY REDUCTIONS & IMMIGRATION ISSUES:

As of January 1, 2015, the maximum jail time that a person can be sentenced to for a misdemeanor is 364 days—one day short of a full calendar year. This is important if you are at risk of being deported because of a felony conviction, and your conviction can be reclassified or resentenced as a misdemeanor under Prop. 47. When you get your felony conviction reclassified or resentenced, it is recommended that you ask the judge to say on the record that the maximum sentence for your conviction is now 364 days. This might help you avoid certain negative immigration consequences that are tied to a sentence of 365 days or more.<sup>3092</sup> Learn more in the chapter on immigration issues starting on PG. 1105.

WHAT DOES PROP. 47 NOT DO?

Prop. 47 does not give you back your gun rights if you lost these rights due to your conviction.<sup>3093</sup> Prop. 47 also does not remove the conviction from your record; it simply reduces it to a lesser offense.

Also, please note that getting your felony conviction reclassified or resentenced as a misdemeanor under Prop. 47 does NOT give you any legal rights to be compensated for any time that you served that is more than what you could have been sentenced to if you had been convicted of a misdemeanor originally.

It used to be true that you could use excess custody credits to offset restitution fines, but the Legislature changed that section of the Penal Code in July 2013 to say that custody credits cannot be used to lower restitution fines.<sup>3094</sup>

PENAL CODE §§ 207, 209, or 220, committed with the intent to commit a violation of CAL. PENAL CODE §§ 261, 262, 264.1, 286, 288, 288a, or 289. CAL. WELF. & INST. CODE § 6600(b).

HOW DOES PROP. 47 CHANGE A CONVICTION ON MY CRIMINAL RECORD?

Prop. 47 affects eligible offenses in the following ways:

Shoplifting (Penal Code section 459.5)—Prop. 47 adds a new offense, misdemeanor shoplifting. If you enter a business, during regular business hours and steal something worth less than $950, it is now shoplifting instead of second-degree burglary. If you are charged with shoplifting, now you cannot also be charged with petty theft or burglary. If you have a conviction for felony second-degree burglary (California Penal Code section 459), you may be able to get it reduced to misdemeanor shoplifting.

Forgery (Penal Code sections 470, 471, 472, 475)—Prop. 47 changes the laws for several forgery offenses that previously could be charged as either misdemeanors or felonies. Now, all of these offenses are straight misdemeanors only. However, Prop. 47 does NOT apply if you are convicted of both forgery and identity theft (CAL. PENAL CODE section 530.5). If you have a felony conviction for an eligible forgery offense, you may be able to get it reduced to a misdemeanor.

Forgery/Writing Bad Checks (Penal Code section 476a)—Prop. 47 changes this offense from a “wobbler” to a straight misdemeanor if the amount of the check is less than $950. Beware, however, that Prop. 47 does not apply if you have three or more prior forgery convictions. If you have a felony conviction for writing a bad check, you may be able to get it reduced to a misdemeanor.

Theft (Penal Code section 490.2)—Before Prop. 47, an offense was classified as either GRAND THEFT (a felony) or PETTY THEFT (a misdemeanor) based on (1) the value of the property stolen, (2) the type of property stolen (i.e. guns or cars), OR (3) the manner in which the property was stolen (for example, from someone’s immediate possession). After Prop. 47, the offense is classified based ONLY on whether the value of the property is more or less than $950. So, now if you steal something that is worth less than $950, you can only be charged with misdemeanor petty theft, regardless of what type of property you took or how you took it. If you have a felony grand theft conviction, you may be able to get it reduced to misdemeanor petty theft.

Receiving Stolen Property (Penal Code Section 496)—Prop. 47 changes this offense to a straight misdemeanor if the value of the stolen property is under $950. If you have a felony conviction for receiving stolen property, you may be able to get it reduced to a misdemeanor.

Petty Theft with a Prior (Penal Code Section 666)—Before Prop. 47, if you were charged with petty theft and had three or more previous theft convictions, you could have been charged with a felony. Now, for most people, you cannot be charged with a felony for petty theft, no matter how many prior petty theft convictions you have. The only way that you can be charged with felony petty theft under section 666 now is if you are already excluded from Prop. 47 (see above for convictions that can exclude you), and you also have a previous conviction for petty theft, grand theft, elder financial abuse, joyriding, burglary, carjacking, robbery or felony receiving stolen property,<sup>3095</sup> OR you are required to register as a sex offender. If you have a felony conviction for petty theft based on prior theft convictions, you may be able to get it reduced to a misdemeanor.

Simple Drug Possession (Health & Safety Code Sections 11350, 11357, & 11377)—Under Prop. 47, simple possession of pretty much any controlled substance is a straight misdemeanor.<sup>3096</sup> If you have a felony conviction for simple drug possession, you may be able to get it reduced to a misdemeanor.

CAN PROP. 47 CHANGE THE AMOUNT OF COURT-ORDERED FINES I OWE?

Maybe, but the change is not automatic and the courts have not yet said whether fine reductions should be allowed. Under the language of Prop. 47, a conviction that has been reduced to a misdemeanor should be considered a misdemeanor “for all purposes”. Since the maximum fines for misdemeanors are usually lower than they are for felonies, it follows that the sentencing court may be willing to reduce your fines to reflect the change in your conviction. If you have completed your sentence and are looking to have one or more felonies reduced to misdemeanors under Prop. 47, you may want to request a hearing, even though one is not required, so you can ask the judge to reduce your fines.

HOW DO I GET MY CONVICTION REDUCED UNDER PROP. 47?

The process for getting a felony conviction reduced to a misdemeanor under Prop. 47 depends on whether you are currently still serving your sentence (“under sentence”) for the conviction, or if you have already completed your sentence.

- If you are currently still serving your sentence (meaning you are incarcerated OR on parole or PRCS for the qualifying conviction—also called being “under sentence”),<sup>3097</sup> you must ask to be “resentenced.” (See PG. 974 for information on resentencing.)

- If you have already completed your sentence, you must ask to have your conviction “reclassified.” (See PG. 974 for information on reclassification.)
- If you are currently on formal probation for the qualifying offense, you have the right to submit a petition for resentencing, which could result in being released from probation.<sup>3098</sup>

HELPFUL HINT—TALK TO A LAWYER! If you think you qualify for resentencing or reclassification, it is recommended that you talk to a lawyer for help. You can start with the lawyer who represented you in your case or your local Public Defender. See also the list of expungement legal aid providers on PG. 1127.

IMPORTANT: Petitions for resentencing and applications for reclassification must be filed on or before November 4, 2022. Petitions filed after that date will only be considered upon a showing of “good cause.”<sup>3099</sup> Proposition 47 does not define what would qualify as “good cause.”

RESENTENCING:

If you are currently serving your sentence (“under sentence”) for an offense that qualifies under Prop. 47, and you are NOT excluded by one of the disqualifying convictions, you may be eligible for resentencing.<sup>3100</sup>

You will need to fill out and file a Petition for Resentencing, and you may need to request a hearing to convince the judge that you qualify for resentencing under Prop. 47. If you qualify, the judge MUST sentence you unless s/he thinks you pose an “unreasonable risk to public safety.” If you have already served the amount of time that you would have served if you were originally convicted of a misdemeanor, you will be released or discharged from supervision.

For information and instructions on how to petition for resentencing, including what “unreasonable risk to public safety” means, see APPENDIX T, on PG. 1043. Each local court has created its own version of this petition, so it’s recommended that you go to the court where you were convicted to request one.

RECLASSIFICATION:

If you already completed your sentence (including any parole or probation term) for an offense that qualifies under Prop. 47, and you do NOT have one of the disqualifying convictions discussed above, you may be able to have your felony reclassified as a misdemeanor. Unfortunately, you cannot get back the time that you served for the felony, but you can change your criminal record to show a misdemeanor conviction instead of a felony. (For information on the benefits of reducing a felony conviction to a misdemeanor, see PG. 969.)

You will need to fill out and file a Petition for Reclassification (in most courts this is the same form used for resentencing people under Prop. 47). The judge will then review your petition to make sure that you qualify for reclassification. Normally, you do not need to request a hearing for a reclassification; but in some circumstances, you may need to.

If you meet the requirements, the judge MUST reclassify your conviction as a misdemeanor.

For information and instructions on how to petition for reclassification, including when you might need to request a hearing, see APPENDIX T, on PG. 1043.

IF I GET MY FELONY REDUCED UNDER PROP. 47, CAN I ALSO GET IT EXPUNGED?

Possibly. Generally, if you served any time in state prison for a felony conviction, you cannot get your conviction expunged (“dismissed” is the legal term).<sup>3101</sup> However, many lawyers believe that this is an oversight by the drafters of Prop. 47, and feel that if your felony conviction is eligible to be reduced to a misdemeanor under Prop. 47, it should be eligible for expungement (like most misdemeanors) as well. Some lawyers have had success getting discretionary expungements for Prop. 47 convictions under California Penal Code section 1203.4a (which allows expungement of misdemeanor convictions with sentences other than probation).<sup>3102</sup>

IMPORTANT: PROP. 47 & FEDERAL SENTENCES:

Even though Prop. 47 only applies to state convictions, it may still help you if you are serving time for a federal conviction. If your federal sentence was increased because you had a prior state conviction, and that state conviction can be reduced to a misdemeanor under Prop. 47, that conviction should no longer have as much impact on your federal sentence, which may mean that your total federal sentence can be reduced.<sup>3103</sup>

If you are serving a federal sentence and you have prior state convictions, it is recommended that you contact the federal defense lawyer who represented you, the federal public defender, or the county public defender where you were convicted immediately.

PROPOSITION 64: CALIFORNIA'S NEW "ADULT USE OF MARIJUANA" LAW

WHAT IS PROPOSITION 64?

California voters passed Proposition 64 ("Prop. 64") into law on November 8, 2016, and it went into effect on November 9, 2016. Prop. 64 legalizes the possession, transport, purchase, consumption and sharing of up to one ounce of marijuana and up to eight grams of marijuana concentrates for adults aged 21 and older.<sup>3105</sup> Adults may also grow up to six plants at home.<sup>3106</sup> Prop. 64 also provides for a strict governmental system to regulate and tax the nonmedical use of marijuana, which will not begin until 2018.

In addition to legalizing certain acts, Prop. 64 also reduces or eliminates criminal penalties for most marijuana offenses for both adults AND juveniles.<sup>3107</sup> Prop. 64 provides a way for people with prior marijuana convictions that qualify under the new law to petition a court to have their convictions reduced or dismissed.<sup>3108</sup>

Keep reading to learn more about Prop. 64 and the requirements and procedure for seeking relief! Although a lawyer is not required for reclassification, it is always useful to get help from a lawyer to make sure the Prop. 64 process is completed accurately. See a list of "clean slate" legal aid referrals on PG. 1133.

HOW COULD PROP. 64 HELP ME?

The changes in criminal penalties apply to past convictions, current and pending charges, and future charges.

If you are currently serving a sentence in prison or county jail, or are on probation, post-release community supervision (PRCS), or parole, you may apply for "resentencing" by petitioning the superior court.<sup>3109</sup> The judge must resentence you, unless they determine that you are "an unreasonable risk of danger to public safety."<sup>3110</sup> As used in Prop. 64, "unreasonable risk to public safety" has the same meaning as it does in Prop. 47 (see APPENDIX T, on PG. 1043), which this law was modeled after.<sup>3111</sup> In other words, a judge can only find you "an unreasonable risk of danger to public safety" if you are at risk of committing a "super strike" as defined in Penal Code § 667(e)(2)(C)(iv). If resentenced, the judge will order you to serve one year on parole or PRCS, unless the court, in its own discretion, removes this requirement.<sup>3112</sup>

If you have completed your sentence and are no longer in custody and are no longer under supervision, you may apply for "reclassification" by petitioning the superior court.<sup>3113</sup> Some courts also refer to this process as "redesignation." When evaluating petitions for reclassification/redesignation, the judge does not make any determination about whether you are a risk to public safety and does not have the option or discretion to deny resentencing. So long as you were convicted of an offense changed by Prop. 64, the judge and court must reclassify the conviction.

If you are serving a federal sentence for a marijuana-related federal offense, reducing or sealing your conviction might help reduce your sentence and any immigration consequences.

Also note: Resentencing, redesignation, or sealing a conviction under Prop. 64 could give you back your gun rights.<sup>3114</sup> Ask a criminal or clean slate lawyer for advice.

WHAT OFFENSES DOES PROP. 64 REDUCE OR ELIMINATE?

Prop. 64 reduces or eliminates certain offenses based on the amount of marijuana, the person's age, and the person's prior offenses. Whether Prop. 64 will help you depends on all these factors. Below is a general summary, and you can find a detailed chart in APPENDIX U on PG. 1045.

Prop. 64 changed the criminal penalties for the following four criminal offenses:

- Possession of marijuana or concentrated marijuana (Cal. Health & Safety § 11357)
- Cultivation of marijuana (Cal. Health & Safety Code § 11358)
- Possession with intent to sell marijuana (Cal. Health & Safety Code § 11359)
- Sales or transport of marijuana (Cal. Health & Safety Code § 11360)

<sup>3114</sup> CAL. HEALTH & SAF. CODE § 11361.8(h) states that a conviction resentenced or redesignated under Prop. 64 "shall be considered a misdemeanor or infraction for all purposes" and does not make gun rights an exception like in Prop. 47 (CAL. PEN. CODE, § 1170.18(k)).

The new penalty (either a misdemeanor, infraction, or dismissal) depends on the specific offense. For example, some offenses became outright legal (such as possession of up to 28.5 grams of marijuana or up to 8 grams of concentrated marijuana) and some offenses were reduced to misdemeanors (such as sales of marijuana).

Again, find a detailed chart about how different penalties changed under Prop. 64 in APPENDIX U on PG. 1045.

WHO CAN GET PROP. 64 RELIEF?

You may apply for Prop. 64 “reclassification” if you were ever convicted of one of the four offenses listed above (again, those are: Cal. Health & Safety Code §§ 11357, 11358, 11359, and 11360).

You can apply for Prop. 64 regardless of what else is on your record, even a “super strike” will not disqualify you. In other words, as long as you: (1) were convicted of an offense listed above, (2) are serving or completed a sentence for one of those offenses, and (3) would have been guilty of a lesser offense under Prop. 64, you can apply. If the District Attorney objects to resentencing for any reason, they must prove that you are not eligible by “clear and convincing evidence.”

NOTE: If you have a current or past juvenile offense (called a disposition or adjudication) for an offense Prop. 64 reduced, you can ask for a new disposition, redesignation, or sealing.<sup>3115</sup>

VERY IMPORTANT NOTE FOR NONCITIZENS: Immigration enforcement is run by the federal government, not California’s state government. Federal immigration officials still consider the possession of marijuana to be illegal. Admitting the use or possession of marijuana is a danger for noncitizens. Immigration officers are increasingly asking noncitizens about their use of marijuana. If you say you have ever used marijuana, especially in states that have legalized marijuana. You should not admit using marijuana to any immigration official. In the resentencing process, you or your lawyer should try to get the judge to make an order that that says your previous marijuana-related conviction is reduced or dismissed because it is “legally invalid”—which is what the law requires under California Health & Safety Code § 11361.8. Since we do not know yet if immigration officials will accept Prop. 64 relief, you should consider other forms of post-conviction relief as well if you are a noncitizen. Learn more options to address the immigration consequences of your record starting on PG. 1105.

WHICH MARIJUANA-RELATED OFFENSES DID NOT CHANGE UNDER PROP. 64?

- Marijuana offenses involving minors (such as hiring or using minors to sell or transport marijuana, and selling, giving, or offering to sell or give marijuana to minors)<sup>3116</sup>
- Manufacturing concentrate by chemical extraction or synthesis<sup>3117</sup>
- Providing a place for trafficking, processing, or distribution of controlled substances<sup>3118</sup>
- Driving under the influence of cannabinoids (marijuana)<sup>3119</sup>
- Driving with marijuana<sup>3120</sup>
- Marijuana offenses related to jails<sup>3121</sup>
- Also not: Medical marijuana protections are still in effect.<sup>3122</sup>

Please note that this list is an overview, and there may be other marijuana-related offenses that have not changed under Prop. 64.

WHAT NEW INFRACTIONS ARE CREATED UNDER PROP. 64?

The following crimes are now classified as infractions that are punishable by a fine:

- Growing marijuana at home in a space that is visible to the public<sup>3123</sup>
- Using marijuana in public<sup>3124</sup>
- Smoking marijuana in a place where smoking of any kind is prohibited<sup>3125</sup>
- Smoking marijuana within 1,000 feet of a school, daycare, or youth center<sup>3126</sup>
- Open container of marijuana in a vehicle<sup>3127</sup>

RESENTENCING

CAN I BE RESENTENCED UNDER PROP. 64?

There are three requirements for resentencing. The court must resentence you unless the District Attorney (prosecution) proves that you do not meet the requirements by clear and convincing evidence.<sup>3129</sup>

Requirement 1: You are “currently serving a sentence.”<sup>3130</sup> (There is otherwise no time limit.)

Although “currently serving a sentence” is not defined in Prop. 64, it likely includes you if you are:

- Serving time in prison, county jail, or a juvenile facility; OR
- On probation, post-release community service, mandatory supervision, or state parole.<sup>3131</sup>

Requirement 2: You would not have been guilty of an offense, or would have been guilty of a lesser offense under Prop. 64, had had it been in effect at the time of your offense.<sup>3132</sup>

Requirement 3: You do not pose an “unreasonable risk of danger to public safety.”

- “Unreasonable risk of danger to public safety” for Prop. 64 means there is an unreasonable risk you will commit a new violent offense (among the ones listed in Cal. Penal Code section 667(e)(2)(C)(iv)).<sup>3133</sup>

IMPORTANT NOTE IF YOU HAVE A PENDING APPEAL: You may be able to argue you should be resentenced without the court first deciding if you pose an “unreasonable risk.” The argument is that Prop. 64 applies retroactively to all cases pending on appeal because of a case called In re Estrada.<sup>3134</sup> Consult with your appellate attorney about this argument.

HOW DO I GET RESENTENCED UNDER PROP. 64?

For resentencing, a “petition” to the sentencing court is required.<sup>3135</sup> For fixing your record, an “application” to the sentencing court is required.<sup>3136</sup> There is a form petition/application, available online at: <http://www.courts.ca.gov/prop64.htm>, and find sample forms in APPENDIX V, PG. 1050. Contact the attorney who represented you or the county public defender’s office from where you were sentenced to file the petition or application for you. If you have an ongoing appeal, also talk to your appellate attorney.

Additionally, some records will be sealed automatically. State agencies must automatically destroy records of arrest and conviction from January 1, 1976 or later for possession of marijuana offenses under Health and Safety Code sections 11357 and 11360(b), plus juvenile adjudications for all marijuana-related offenses except those involving synthetic marijuana under Health and Safety Code section 11357.5. Agencies should destroy records two years after conviction or arrest if no conviction. Certain offenses including Health and Safety Code section 11357, subdivision (d) and other offenses on K-12 school grounds have special rules requiring destruction only upon a person turning 18.<sup>3137</sup> If you have certain offenses from before 1976, you can apply to destroy related records of arrests and convictions.<sup>3138</sup>

NOTE FOR SAN FRANCISCO RESIDENTS:

If you were convicted of a marijuana-related offense in San Francisco after 1975, your offense could be recalled, dismissed, or sealed without any action on your part. San Francisco District Attorney George Gascon has committed to reviewing and revising every eligible marijuana conviction in his district. However, Conley does not eliminate the question for Prop. 64. The Supreme Court in *People v. ### RECLASSIFICATION (OR REDESIGNATION):

CAN I GET A PRIOR MARIJUANA CONVICTION REDUCED OR REMOVED UNDER PROP. 64?

Yes. If you already have finished your sentence or juvenile disposition (including any supervision), then you can change your record under Prop. 64. If they now would be misdemeanors or infractions, they can be “redesignated”—reduced to—misdemeanors or infractions. If they now would be considered legal activities, they can be “sealed” or destroyed. The requirements for reclassification or dismissal and sealing are:

- You have finished your sentence or disposition
- You “would not have been guilty of an offense, or [] would have been guilty of a lesser offense under the [Prop. 64] had the Act been in effect at the time of the offense . . . .”
- The law also lists convictions that may underlie a petition: Health and Safety Code sections 11357 (Possession), 11358 (Planting, harvesting, or processing), 11359 (possession for sale), or 11360 (Sale, transportation for sale, or gift).<sup>3139</sup> An argument may exist that other convictions not listed as eligible for reclassification and sealing, but which would not be illegal under current law, can be redesignated or sealed.<sup>3140</sup>
- There is no “unreasonable risk” exception. There is no time limit.

OTHER QUESTIONS ABOUT PROP. 64:

WHAT DOES PROP. 64 NOT DO?

Prop. 64 does not specify a legal right to seek compensation for time spent in custody you could not have spent under the current law.

IF I GET MY FELONY REDUCED UNDER PROP. 64, CAN I THEN GET IT EXPUNGED?

Generally, if you have served time in prison for a felony conviction, you do not qualify for expungement. However, the Prop. 64 law clearly says that offenses reduced to misdemeanors under Prop. 64 should be treated as misdemeanors “for all purposes.”<sup>3141</sup> This language should mean (and courts hopefully will decide it does mean) they will be misdemeanors for purposes of expungement under Penal Code section 1203.4a. If you are in this situation, you should consult with an attorney for more information. You can contact the public defender’s office in the county where you were sentenced. If you have already had your conviction expunged, you still should be eligible for Prop. 64 relief if you satisfy all the requirements.<sup>3142</sup>

IF I GET MY FELONY REDUCED UNDER PROP. 64, WILL IT RESTORE MY GUN RIGHTS?

Probably. Prop. 64 is similar to Penal Code section 17(b) in that successful reduction transforms that conviction into a misdemeanor for all purposes. California courts have explicitly stated that 17(b) restores a person’s gun rights.<sup>3143</sup> Though it has not yet been litigated, there is nothing in the language of Prop. 64 that implies it should be treated differently than 17(b) in this sense.<sup>3144</sup> Still, because Prop. 64 is a relatively new law, it may take some time for the DOJ to devise policies around the restoration of gun rights under Prop. 64. If you are having a hard time, contact your attorney or call Root & Rebound’s Reentry Legal Hotline.

WHAT IF I HAVE A GUN POSSESSION CONVICTION, OR OTHER OFFENSE/ENHANCEMENT THAT I WOULD NOT HAVE HAD WITHOUT MY FELONY MARIJUANA CONVICTION OR SENTENCE?

Depending on the circumstances, it might be possible to challenge other convictions, adjudications, ehanancements (e.g., Cal. Health & Safety Code § 11370.2), or sentences affected by a marijuana conviction that gets sealed or redesignated under Prop. 64. The California Supreme Court is currently considering a similar question of whether a prior prison term enhancement (that is, Cal. Pen. Code, § 667.5, subd. (b)) should be taken off where the underlying felony was changed to a misdemeanor under Prop. 47.<sup>3145</sup>

<sup>3140</sup> For example, an argument exists that violations of CAL. HEALTH & SAF. CODE §§ 11366 and 11366.5 (providing a place for manufacturing, distributing, or giving away of controlled substances) that were based on conduct that now would be legal should be sealed in accordance the intent of Prop. 64. However, CAL. HEALTH & SAF. CODE § 11361.8(e) expressly provides for redesignation and sealing only for CAL. HEALTH & SAF. CODE §§ 11357-11360. As subdivision (a) of the same section uses broader language, an equal protection argument may exist.

<sup>3144</sup> By contrast, the language of Penal Code section 1170.18(k), which codifies Prop. 47, explicitly states that gun rights cannot be restored under that section. Health & Safety Code section 11361.8. which codifies Prop. 64, contains no such provision.

DOES PROP. 64 IMPACT MY FEDERAL SENTENCE?

Maybe. Even though Prop. 64 only applies to state sentences, it still could help you if you are serving time for or at risk of deportation for a federal conviction. If your federal sentence was increased because you had a prior state conviction, sealing that conviction or reducing it to a misdemeanor could decrease the length of your sentence. If you are serving a federal sentence and have a prior state conviction possibly affected by Proposition 64, contact the federal lawyer who represented you, the federal public defender, and/or the county public defender where you were convicted immediately for assistance.

DOES PROP. 64 HELP WITH IMMIGRATION CONSEQUENCES?

Maybe. First, under Prop. 64, misdemeanor sentences cannot be longer than 364 days. So if you are at risk of being deported because of a felony conviction and Prop. 64 redesignates your conviction to a misdemeanor or infraction, this reclassification could have a significant impact for you. In your petition or in court (if you have a hearing), it may help you to ask the court to note on the record the new maximum sentence. Second, because Prop. 64 labels some relevant convictions “legally invalid,” you may be able to argue these “legally invalid” convictions should not affect immigration because they were “legal defects.”<sup>3146</sup> Contact a lawyer immediately for help with this situation. See PG. 1134 for a list of legal aid organizations that help with immigration issues.

CAN EMPLOYERS LOCATED IN CALIFORNIA STILL DRUG TEST ME EVEN THOUGH PROP. 64 PASSED? CAN EMPLOYERS REFUSE TO HIRE ME OR FIRE ME FOR USING MARIJUANA?

Yes. Even though Prop. 64 passed, California employers can still conduct drug tests during the application process, and even once someone has been hired. Employers can also refuse to hire you and can fire you for using marijuana. There are two reasons why employers are allowed to test, refuse to hire, and/or fire you for marijuana use. First, employers are allowed to create rules to maintain a drug-free workplace by making sure that employees don't come to work under the influence of marijuana or use marijuana at work.<sup>3147</sup> Second, marijuana possession and use is still illegal under federal law, and employers are allowed to create rules to ensure that their employees don't violate state or federal laws at the workplace or on employer property.<sup>3148</sup> Learn more about your employment rights with a criminal record in the EMPLOYMENT CHAPTER, beginning on PG. 557.

CERTIFICATES OF REHABILITATION

A Certificate of Rehabilitation (COR) is another way to clean up your criminal record. Although it does NOT remove anything from your record, it can restore certain rights that you may have lost, and can help improve your chances of success when you're applying for work, housing, and professional or occupational licenses.

IMPORTANT: If you have a felony or misdemeanor sex conviction that is eligible for expungement (meaning you were not sent to prison), by law you must expunge it first BEFORE you are eligible for a COR.<sup>3149</sup>

AM I ELIGIBLE FOR A CERTIFICATE OF REHABILITATION IF I AM STILL ON PAROLE, PROBATION, OR PRCS?

NOT YET. BEFORE you can apply for a COR, you must have completed any term of probation, parole, or PRCS that was part of your sentence or a condition of your release.

You will also have to complete a waiting period (which begins when you are released from custody) BEFORE you can apply for a COR. However, any time that you spend on parole, probation, or PRCS will count toward this period. For more information on when you can get a COR, see PG. 982.

<sup>3146</sup> See Matter of Pickering (BIA 2003) 23 I & N Dec. 621, 624.

WHAT IS A CERTIFICATE OF REHABILITATION AND HOW COULD IT HELP ME?

A Certificate of Rehabilitation (COR) is a court order saying that someone who was previously convicted of a crime is now officially rehabilitated.<sup>3150</sup> A COR can restore some of the rights you lost as a result of your conviction. A COR may help you in the following ways:

- When you apply for a job or housing, a COR serves as official proof of your rehabilitation;<sup>3151</sup>
- If you apply for a professional or occupational license, a COR improves your chances of getting approved;<sup>3152</sup>
- If you were required to register as a “sex offender” under California Penal Code section 290, a COR may eliminate your registration requirement;<sup>3153</sup>
- A COR serves as an automatic application and recommendation for a full pardon from the Governor.<sup>3154</sup>

However, there are many things that a COR does NOT do—for example, it does NOT erase or seal your conviction; it does NOT restore all of the rights you may have lost due to your conviction; and you will still have to disclose the conviction when you apply for jobs, housing, and professional licenses. (For more information on what a COR does NOT do, see PG. 982.)

WHO CAN GET A CERTIFICATE OF REHABILITATION?

You may be eligible to apply for a Certificate of Rehabilitation if you fall into one of the following two categories:<sup>3155</sup>

CATEGORY 1: Felony—You are Category 1 if the following are true:

- a. You were convicted of a felony;
- b. You served your sentence in a California state prison or county jail (or some other CDCR facility, such as a prison camp or hospital)<sup>3156</sup>;
- c. You completed your sentence and were released from prison or you were released on parole;
- d. You have NOT been incarcerated in any California state prison (or other CDCR facility) since your release; AND
- e. You have lived in California for the last 5 years.

CATEGORY 2: 1203.4 Dismissals—You are in Category 2 if all of the following are true:

- a. You were convicted of a felony OR convicted of a misdemeanor sex offense;<sup>3157</sup>
- b. Your conviction was expunged under California Penal Code section 1203.4;
- c. You have NOT been incarcerated ANYWHERE (in ANY prison, jail, or correctional institution) since getting your conviction expunged;
- d. You are NOT on probation for any other felony; AND
- e. You have lived in California for the last 5 years.

You will also need to complete a waiting period BEFORE you can apply for a COR, which will be based on your conviction offense. To figure out how long you must wait before applying for a Certificate of Rehabilitation, see APPENDIX W, on PG. 1056.

WHO CANNOT GET A CERTIFICATE OF REHABILITATION?

Unfortunately, people in certain situations and with certain convictions are NEVER eligible for a Certificate of Rehabilitation. You are NEVER eligible for a COR if:

- You were convicted of certain serious sex offenses (listed in California Penal Code sections 269, 286c, 288, 288ac, 288.5, 288.7, or 289(j));
- You are on mandatory lifetime parole (for more information on the length of state parole and who must serve mandatory lifetime parole, see the PAROLE & PROBATION CHAPTER, PG. 152);
- You have been sentenced to the death penalty (and your sentence has not been overturned);
- You are serving in the military; or
- You no longer live in California.<sup>3158</sup>

IF YOU NO LONGER LIVE IN CALIFORNIA...

This manual focuses on how to clean up your criminal record if you live in California. If you have a California conviction but no longer live in California, you may be eligible for a Governor's Pardon (see PG. 984).

If your conviction is from another state, you will not be eligible to clean up your record using the California remedies described in this chapter. However, many other states provide similar remedies, so you should find out what "cleaning" remedies are available in the state where your conviction is from.

If you have a federal conviction, possible remedies for cleaning up federal criminal records start on PG. 993.

NOTE: If you ONLY have misdemeanor convictions on your criminal record, you are NOT eligible for a Certificate of Rehabilitation. Instead, it is recommended that you try to get your conviction(s) dismissed under California's expungement statute (see PG. 957).

BUT there is one exception—if you were convicted of a misdemeanor sex offense (listed in California Penal Code Section 290), then you may be eligible for a Certificate of Rehabilitation AFTER you get your conviction expunged. (You must also meet the expungement requirements to be eligible, see PG. 960.)

WHAT CAN'T A CERTIFICATE OF REHABILITATION DO FOR ME?

Although there are many benefits to obtaining a COR, it is a limited remedy. Here are some of the things that a COR does NOT do for you:

- It does NOT erase a felony conviction or seal your criminal record;<sup>3159</sup>
- It does NOT prevent your conviction from being considered a "prior" if you are later convicted of a new offense;<sup>3160</sup>
- It will NOT necessarily eliminate your registration requirement, if you are required to register as a "sex offender" under Cal. Penal Code § 290;<sup>3161</sup>
- It does NOT allow you to say that you've never been convicted of a felony—in other words, you must still disclose your conviction on job and professional licensing applications.<sup>3162</sup>

CERTIFICATES OF REHABILITATION & VOTING RIGHTS

A COR does NOT restore your right to vote if you lost this right due to your conviction. However, you will get your voting rights back automatically once you are out of prison and OFF parole, so you do not need a COR to get your voting rights back. (For more information about voting rights, see the BUILDING BLOCKS OF REENTRY: ID & VOTING CHAPTER, on PG. 67).

WHEN CAN I GET A CERTIFICATE OF REHABILITATION?

Before you can apply for a Certificate of Rehabilitation, you must complete a "period of rehabilitation"<sup>3163</sup> to show that you have improved your life and avoided involvement in any more criminal activity since your release from prison or jail. In general, you must wait a minimum of five years before you can apply for a COR, PLUS an additional number of years depending on what your conviction was for. You must also have completed your parole or probation term, but your period of rehabilitation starts running as soon as you are released from prison or jail and includes any time you spent on supervision.

CORS & PARDONS:

If the judge grants your COR, this will automatically send an application to the Governor for a pardon. You will not have to do anything more to apply for a pardon. (For more information about Governor's pardons, see PG. 984.)

IMPORTANT: Even if you have not completed your entire period of rehabilitation, you are allowed to request a COR early (as long as you are NOT required to register as a sex offender under California Penal Code Section 290). The judge may grant you a COR early, if s/he finds that it is "in the interests of justice" to do so.<sup>3164</sup> The judge will consider your good conduct, rehabilitation efforts, and how important getting a COR is to your success in the future.

The process for requesting a Certificate of Rehabilitation is the same, regardless of whether you are requesting it early or at the end of your period of rehabilitation.

I'VE HAD A NEW CONVICTION SINCE MY ORIGINAL OFFENSE? CAN I STILL APPLY FOR A CERTIFICATE OF REHABILITATION FOR THE ORIGINAL OFFENSE?

You are allowed to apply for a COR if you have a new conviction during your period of rehabilitation, BUT the judge will likely use the new conviction as a reason to deny your COR, and can require you to complete a new period of rehabilitation (see APPENDIX W, on PG. 1056) starting from the date your COR is denied (not from the time of the offense that led to the denial).<sup>3165</sup> In addition, even if you get the new conviction expunged, the judge can still consider the conduct that led to the conviction when deciding whether to grant your COR.<sup>3166</sup>

The judge has discretion to consider every interaction with the law when determining whether to grant a COR.<sup>3167</sup> Evidence presented at a COR hearing includes records from parole and probation, which would include any violations of your conditions, as well as “written reports or records of any other law enforcement agency” about you.<sup>3168</sup>

HOW DO I GET A CERTIFICATE OF REHABILITATION?

If you meet all of the requirements for a COR (see PG. 981) and you have completed your required period of rehabilitation (or you want to request a COR early), you will need to file papers (called a Petition for Certificate of Rehabilitation) in the court in the county where you currently live. Your petition will explain why you deserve a COR. It should include letters of support and proof of your accomplishments. The District Attorney will likely do an investigation and prepare a report about you. Then you will have a hearing where you will have to convince the judge that you are rehabilitated and ready to be a responsible member of society.

NOTE: You must request a COR from the court in the county where you currently live. This is different from most other remedies (such as expungement, reducing your felony to a misdemeanor, and Prop. 47), which require you to request them from the court where you were convicted. For complete information and instructions on how to request a Certificate of Rehabilitation, including a sample application, see APPENDIX X, on PG. 1057.

IMPORTANT: You have the right to a lawyer to help you with your request for a COR. You can hire a lawyer of your choice, or if you cannot afford a lawyer, the court must assign a public defender or another lawyer to help you.<sup>3169</sup> If you are just getting started and don't yet have a lawyer, you should start by contacting the Public Defender's Office in the county where you live, or look for a local expungement clinic in your area. You also have the right to get help with your request from the county probation department, state parole officers, the California Youth Authority (if you are under 30 years old), and any other rehabilitative agency.<sup>3170</sup>

FREE RAP SHEETS FOR PUBLIC DEFENDERS

Code § 11105(b)(9) and People v. Webber (1991) 228 Cal.App.3d 1146, 1167. They may also need to obtain a judge's signature and/or a Certification of Attorney of Record containing a court stamp or seal.

GOVERNOR'S PARDON

WHAT IS A GOVERNOR'S PARDON?

A governor's pardon is an official forgiveness for your conviction, granted by the Governor of California. A pardon restores all of the rights you lost due to your conviction—including your gun rights and your right to serve on a jury—and if you qualify, eliminates your requirement to register as a sex offender under California Penal Code section 290. It is the best thing you can do to reduce the impact of your criminal record on your life, but it is still not a complete remedy because it does not completely erase the conviction from your record. (For more information on what a pardon does and does not do for you, see PG. 985.)

A California Governor's pardon is an honor granted only to individuals who have demonstrated exemplary behavior following conviction for a felony.<sup>3171</sup> It is official acknowledgement of your rehabilitation from the state's highest elected official. A pardon removes most of the consequences of a criminal conviction. Both the California Penal Code and the California Constitution give the Governor the authority to grant pardons, and that authority is entirely discretionary.<sup>3172</sup>

Unfortunately, Governor's pardons are difficult to get and are NOT granted very often, so you should try to clean up your record using other remedies first—such as an expungement or a Certificate of Rehabilitation.

Governor's Pardons vs. Felony Reductions, Reclassifications & Resentencing

In most cases, you are NOT eligible for a Governor's pardon if you ONLY have misdemeanor convictions on your criminal record. (In other words, you must have a felony conviction to get a pardon.) If you reduce your felony conviction to a misdemeanor under California Penal Code section 17(b) (see PG. 968), or have it reclassified or resentenced as a misdemeanor under Prop. 47 (see PG. 970), you could become ineligible for a Governor's pardon (unless you also have other felony convictions on your record).

HOWEVER, in most cases it's still better to have your felony conviction reduced to a misdemeanor—even if that makes you ineligible for a Governor's pardon—for these reasons:

- It is MUCH easier to get your felony conviction reduced to a misdemeanor than it is to get a Governor's pardon. Governor's pardons are very rare, and you should not count on getting one.
- Getting your felony conviction reduced to a misdemeanor removes the felony from your criminal record and allows you to say that you were never convicted of a felony for that offense. But a Governor's pardon does NOT remove, erase, or seal the conviction on your record, so you will still have to disclose that you have a felony conviction even if you have been pardoned.

IMPORTANT: If your conviction is eligible for a Certificate of Rehabilitation (COR), you should absolutely apply for a COR first, BEFORE seeking a pardon. Getting a COR improves chance of getting a pardon AND automatically sends in your application for a pardon (so you do not have to do anything else to apply!).

WHO CAN GET A GOVERNOR'S PARDON?

Anyone who has been convicted of a felony OR certain misdemeanor sex offenses is eligible for a pardon.<sup>3173</sup> Your conviction must be from California—you cannot get a Governor's pardon for a conviction from another state, or for a federal conviction.<sup>3174</sup>

WHO CANNOT GET A GOVERNOR'S PARDON?

You are NOT eligible for a pardon if you ONLY have misdemeanor convictions that are NOT sex offenses on your California criminal record. Note that if you have a felony conviction from another state or for a federal felony conviction, you still do NOT qualify for a California Governor's pardon. Your felony or misdemeanor sex offense conviction must be from California to qualify.

HOW COULD A GOVERNOR'S PARDON HELP ME?

A Governor's Pardon can restore many of the rights and benefits that you lost because of your conviction. A pardon MAY:

1. Restore your right to serve on a jury;<sup>3175</sup>
2. Restore your California gun rights (UNLESS you were convicted of a felony involving the use of a dangerous weapon);<sup>3176</sup>
3. Permit you to work as a county probation officer or state parole agent*;<sup>3177</sup>
4. Relieve certain people of their duty to register as "sex offenders," who would otherwise still be required to register after getting a Certificate of Rehabilitation (see PG. 982).<sup>3178</sup>

PARDONS & GUN RIGHTS

BEWARE: A pardon may restore your California gun rights, but it will not necessarily restore your federal gun rights (because federal gun laws are much stricter).

HOW CAN'T A GOVERNOR'S PARDON HELP ME?

Like a Certificate of Rehabilitation, a pardon is still a limited remedy.

There are certain things that a pardon does NOT do for you:

- A pardon does NOT seal or erase the record of your conviction<sup>3179</sup> (But you may still get the conviction dismissed, if you meet all the other requirements—see PG. 960);
- A Pardon does NOT allow you to say that you've never been convicted of a felony on applications for employment, housing, or professional licenses— you must still disclose the conviction<sup>3180</sup> (But you may still get the felony reduced to a misdemeanor or reclassified under Prop. 47, if you meet all the other requirements for these remedies—see PG. 970);
- A Pardon does NOT prevent your conviction from being considered a "prior" if you are convicted of a new offense in the future;<sup>3181</sup>
- A Pardon does NOT restore your gun rights if you were convicted of a felony involving the use of a dangerous weapon;<sup>3182</sup>
- A Pardon is NOT a remedy for any convictions from another state or for federal convictions;<sup>3183</sup>
- A Pardon does NOT prevent you from being deported.<sup>3184</sup>

IF I AM ELIGIBLE, HOW COULD I GET A PARDON?

There are 3 different ways to get a pardon:

1. Certificate of Rehabilitation (COR)—If you apply for and receive a COR first, a request for your pardon is automatically sent to the Governor. The COR serves as the judge's official recommendation that the Governor should grant your pardon. If your conviction is eligible for a COR, this is the best way to get a pardon. Learn more about getting a COR on PG. 980.
2. Direct Pardon (without COR)—You can send a request for a pardon directly to the Governor (also called a traditional pardon). This is the best way to get a pardon if you are NOT eligible for a COR; it is also necessary if any of the following apply to you:
  - Your conviction is from California but you do NOT currently live in California;
  - You were released from prison or onto parole before May 13, 1943; OR
  - You are serving a life sentence without the possibility of parole, and you have more than 1 felony conviction.<sup>3185</sup>
3. Board of Parole Hearings Recommendation—The Board of Parole Hearings (BPH) can recommend you for a pardon while you are still in prison, based on your good conduct, unusual sentence, or other

<sup>3176</sup> CAL. PENAL CODE §§ 4852.17, 4854. A pardon by the Governor may restore your California firearm privileges, however, it will not necessarily restore your federal firearm privileges, which contain stricter prohibitions.

IF I AM ELIGIBLE, WHEN COULD I APPLY FOR A PARDON?

When you can or should apply for a pardon depends on the type of pardon you are seeking.

1. Pardon with Certificate of Rehabilitation (COR): If you are granted a COR by a judge, a request for a pardon will be automatically sent to the Governor—and you don’t need to do anything else! If you do NOT have a Certificate of Rehabilitation yet, but your conviction is eligible for one, you can apply for a COR as soon as you’ve completed your time period of rehabilitation, which is set by law (it is a minimum 7 years after your release, and longer for certain offenses). Learn more about getting a COR on PG. 980.
2. Direct Pardon (without Certificate of Rehabilitation): You can apply for a pardon directly from the Governor after you have been off probation or parole for 10 years, with NO criminal activity during that period.<sup>3187</sup> The 10-year requirement will only be waived (excused) in very rare situations (under “extraordinary and compelling circumstances”).
3. BPH-Recommended Pardon: The BPH can only recommend you for a pardon while you are still incarcerated. There is no specific time frame for when the BPH can recommend you for a pardon, but it would likely be after the BPH has a chance to consider information about your case (for example, after you’ve had at least one BPH hearing).
  - If (or when) you have a BPH hearing, you can bring any evidence showing why you deserve to receive a pardon, based on your good conduct, accomplishments, the circumstances of your conviction, or your sentence.
  - If you are no longer in prison, you are not eligible for a BPH recommendation for a pardon.

WHAT IS THE PROCESS FOR GETTING A PARDON?

How you go about getting a pardon depends on the type of pardon you are seeking.

1. Pardon with Certificate of Rehabilitation: You DO NOT have to do anything once you have your Certificate of Rehabilitation! When the judge grants your COR, he will also send a copy of your COR directly to the Governor’s Office. This will serve as your automatic application for a pardon AND as an official recommendation from the judge that the Governor should grant your pardon. You will not need to do anything else to apply.<sup>3188</sup> Once the Governor receives a copy of your COR, s/he can do any of the following:
  - Grant your pardon immediately (if you have no more than 1 felony conviction);<sup>3189</sup>
  - Do an investigation and review your case to decide whether to grant your pardon; OR
  - Ask the Board of Parole Hearings (BPH) to investigate your case and make a recommendation about whether you should receive a pardon (see below under “Traditional or Direct Pardon”).<sup>3190</sup>
2. Direct Pardon (without COR): You need to complete a formal application for a pardon -called an “Application for gubernatorial Pardon.” If you are not eligible for a Certificate of Rehabilitation, or if any of the following apply to you, this is the only way to apply for a pardon from the Governor:
  - Your conviction is from California but you do NOT currently live in California;
  - You were released from prison or onto parole before May 13, 1943; OR
  - You are serving a life sentencing without the possibility of parole, and you have 2 or more felony convictions.<sup>3191</sup>

For instructions on how to complete a formal application for a traditional or direct pardon, see APPENDIX Y, on PG. 1059.

3. BPH-Recommended Pardon: You cannot apply for a BPH-recommended pardon yourself—the BPH must recommend you to the Governor on its own.<sup>3192</sup> However, you may be able to show the BPH that you deserve to be recommended for a pardon. If you have a BPH hearing, it’s recommended that you bring evidence (such as documents, certificates, or letters) showing:
  - That you were a victim of domestic violence and it led to your offense;

HOW DO I APPLY FOR A TRADITIONAL PARDON DIRECTLY FROM THE GOVERNOR (WITHOUT A CERTIFICATE OF REHABILITATION)?

Here is a summary of the steps to apply for a Traditional Pardon directly from the Governor. For a more detailed explanation of each step, see APPENDIX Y, PG. 1059.

STEP 1: The Application

You will need to fill out the “Application for Gubernatorial Pardon” with information about the conviction you want pardoned, any other convictions on your record, and why you deserve a pardon.

- You can get the application online at: http://gov.ca.gov/s\_pardonsandcommutations.php, or request an application by mail from the Governor’s office:
Governor’s Office
State Capitol
ATTN: Legal Affairs
Sacramento, CA 95814

STEP 2: Notice to the District Attorney

- Before sending your application to the Governor, you must notify the District Attorney in the county where your conviction is from that you intend to request a pardon.<sup>3193</sup> There is a special form to use for this, which is included in the Application for Gubernatorial Pardon.
- You must deliver your notice for to the DA(s) at least 10 days before you submit your application to the Governor.<sup>3194</sup>

If you are requesting a pardon for multiple convictions from DIFFERENT counties, you must notify the DA in EVERY county where you have a conviction.

STEP 3: Submitting your Application to the Governor’s Office

- At least 10 days after sending your notice to the DA(s), you can mail your completed Application for Gubernatorial Pardon to the Governor’s Office.<sup>3195</sup>
Governor’s Office
State Capitol
ATTN: Legal Affairs
Sacramento, CA 95814

ONCE I HAVE APPLIED FOR A PARDON, WHAT HAPPENS?

What happens next will be different, depending on how you applied for a Pardon:

1. Pardon with Certificate of Rehabilitation (COR): When the judge grants your COR, he will also send a copy of your COR directly to the Governor’s Office.<sup>3196</sup> Once the Governor receives your COR, s/he can do any of the following:
  - Grant your pardon immediately (if you have only 1 felony conviction);<sup>3197</sup>
  - Do an investigation and review your case to decide whether to grant your pardon; OR
  - Ask the Board of Parole Hearings (BPH) to investigate your case and make a recommendation about whether you should receive a pardon (see below under “Traditional or Direct Pardon”).<sup>3198</sup>
2. Direct Pardon (without COR): If you applied directly to the Governor for a Traditional Pardon, the Governor will review of your case to decide whether you deserve a pardon. The Governor may ask the judge of the court where you were convicted and the DA who prosecuted you for information about your case and recommendations about whether you should get a pardon.<sup>3199</sup>

<sup>3197</sup> CAL. PENAL CODE § 4852.16; CAL. PENAL CODE § 667(d); cf. CAL. PENAL CODE § 3045; cf. People v. Laino, 32 Cal. 4th 878, 895 (2004); see also How to Apply for a Pardon, STATE OF CAL. OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR (Sept. 5, 2013), http://gov.ca.gov/docs/How\_To\_Apply\_for\_a\_Pardon.pdf.

In most cases, the Governor will also send your application to the Board of Parole Hearings for its recommendation about whether you deserve a pardon.<sup>3200</sup> The BPH may investigate your application by looking at documents and transcripts from your case, talking to witnesses, or doing anything else to evaluate your application. The BPH will then make a recommendation to the Governor about whether you should get a pardon.<sup>3201</sup>

REMEMBER: If you were convicted of 2 or more felonies, the Governor MUST send your application to the Board of Parole Hearings for review, AND also CANNOT grant your pardon without getting a recommendation from the California Supreme Court. (However, the Governor does not have to send your application to the Supreme Court for review in the first place.)<sup>3202</sup>

3. BPH-Recommended Pardon: If the BPH recommends you for a pardon, it will conduct its own investigation of your case first, before making its recommendation to the Governor. If the BPH investigates your case, but decides NOT to recommend you for a pardon, it must tell you its reasons for not recommending you.<sup>3203</sup>

WHAT HAPPENS IF MY PARDON IS GRANTED?

What happens when the Governor grants your pardon is the same regardless of whether you received the pardon based on your Certificate of Rehabilitation, applied for a Traditional Pardon directly from the Governor, or were recommended for a pardon by the BPH. Here is the process:

1. The Governor's Office will notify the CA Department of Justice (DOJ) and the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) to update their records.
2. The Governor will file your pardon with the CA Secretary of State and report it to the CA State Legislature.
3. The pardon will become a public record, along with your Certificate of Rehabilitation (if you received one) or your direct Application for gubernatorial Pardon. (However, any sensitive personal information will remain confidential and hidden from the public.)<sup>3204</sup>

WHAT CAN I DO IF MY PARDON IS DENIED?

If your pardon is denied, the only thing you can do is start over and file a new application. However, just as with a Certificate of Rehabilitation, you should not file a new application until AFTER you fix or improve whatever problems caused your first application to be denied.<sup>3205</sup>

IF YOU HAVE 2 OR MORE FELONY CONVICTIONS

If you were convicted of more than one felony, the Governor is required to have the Board of Parole Hearings review your case, regardless of whether you were issued a Certificate of Rehabilitation. Also, if you have two or more felony convictions, the Governor cannot grant you a pardon without a recommendation from the California Supreme Court, however, the Governor is not required to send your application to the Supreme Court for review.

SEALING CALIFORNIA STATE ADULT ARREST RECORDS

WHAT DOES IT MEAN TO HAVE AN ARREST RECORD “SEALED” IN CALIFORNIA?

California law changed in 2018 so that more people with arrest records (that did not lead to a conviction) can get them sealed. If it is possible for you to seal an arrest record, it is always a good idea. “Sealing” an arrest record means that all documents related to your arrest—including your fingerprints—are confidentially sealed for 3 years, and then destroyed.<sup>3206</sup>

The benefit of having your arrest record sealed is that it deletes the information from your RAP sheet (your official criminal record kept by the state), so even law enforcement officers will NOT be able to see the information in most cases. Once your arrest record is sealed, it is as if the arrest (and any related proceedings) never happened.<sup>3207</sup> (For more information on who can see your RAP sheet, see PG. 948.)

WHICH ARREST RECORDS CAN BE SEALED BY THE COURT (UNDER SB 393)?

SB 393, a new law that went into effect on January 1, 2018, gives Californians the right to have their arrest records sealed if the arrest did not lead to a conviction.<sup>3208</sup> Although arrests for certain crimes may be excluded under the new law (see next question, below) SB 393 requires the court to seal old arrest records if there is no possibility that any further charges will be brought.<sup>3209</sup> Once the record is sealed, it is treated as if it never happened.<sup>3210</sup>

Before SB 393 was passed, people were required to prove that they were factually innocent of the offense for which they were arrested to get it sealed. It is no longer necessary to prove factual innocence in most cases. Rather, any arrest that did NOT lead to a conviction can be sealed (with a few exceptions - see the next question “Which arrest records cannot be sealed?”).

You can ask to have your arrest record sealed if you were arrested, but:

- The prosecutor/DA never filed charges against you in court;<sup>3211</sup> OR
- The prosecutor/DA offered you a diversion program instead of filing charges (and you successfully completed it);<sup>3212</sup> OR
- The prosecutor/DA filed charges against you, but the case was dismissed;<sup>3213</sup> OR
- The prosecutor/DA filed charges, but the judge sent you to a diversion program instead (and you successfully completed it);<sup>3214</sup> OR
- The prosecutor/DA filed charges against you, but you were acquitted at trial;<sup>3215</sup> OR
- The prosecutor/DA filed charges, you were convicted at trial, but the judge set aside your conviction.

WHICH ARREST RECORDS CANNOT BE SEALED (UNDER SB 393)?

You do NOT have the right to have your arrest record sealed if your record shows a pattern of arrests or convictions for the following crimes:<sup>3216</sup>

- Domestic violence
- Child abuse
- Elder abuse

A “pattern” is defined as two or more convictions, or five or more arrests, for separate offenses within a three-year period.<sup>3217</sup> In addition, if you were arrested for a crime with no statute of limitations (i.e. murder), you cannot have your arrest sealed under SB 393.<sup>3218</sup>

WHAT HAPPENS TO MY RAP SHEET IF MY ARREST RECORD IS SEALED?

If your arrest record is sealed, all information about the arrest is deleted from your RAP sheet, and a new RAP sheet is issued without any information about the arrest. ALL records from the arrest are destroyed, including your fingerprint card.

When your arrest record is sealed, the arrest (and anything associated with it) is considered NEVER to have happened.

<sup>3209</sup> No further charges can be brought when the statute of limitations for that crime has expired. See CAL. PENAL CODE § 851.91(a)(1)(A).

I WAS ARRESTED FOR A CRIME THAT CANNOT BE SEALED UNDER SB 393. CAN I STILL TRY TO GET MY ARREST RECORD SEALED?

Possibly. If you cannot get your arrest record sealed under SB 393, you can still get your arrest record sealed if one of the following situations applies to you:

- 1) You can prove that sealing your record would serve the interests of justice. If you were arrested for domestic violence, child abuse, or elder abuse, you will have to convince a judge that your personal situation merits sealing.<sup>3219</sup>
  - The court will look at several factors related to your case, including:
    - The hardship caused by your arrest record;
    - Evidence of your good character;
    - Your account of the circumstances of the arrest; and
    - Whether you have any other arrests or convictions on your record.
- 2) You are found to be “Factually Innocent.”
  - If you were arrested as an adult for murder or any other crime that does not have a statute of limitations, you may have to prove you were factually innocent of the crime for which you were arrested.<sup>3220</sup>

WHEN COULD I GET MY ARREST RECORD SEALED?

Generally, you must file a request to have your arrest record sealed within 2 years after the date of your arrest OR the date that charges were filed against you (whichever is later). However, the judge can waive (excuse) the 2-year time limit if you can show “good cause”<sup>3221</sup>—meaning you can give the judge a really good reason why you could not or did not file your petition within the 2-year limit.

Since many people will be beyond the 2-year time limit, these are some examples of reasons that may qualify as “good cause:”

- If the charges are dismissed or you are acquitted more than 2 years after the date of your arrest or charging;
- If the DA waited more than 2 years after the arrest, and then decided not to file charges;
- In some cases, if you were trying to resolve your case informally, but were unsuccessful (but don’t wait too long afterward!).<sup>3222</sup>

Keep in mind, however, that it will be up to the judge to decide whether your reason is good enough to waive the 2-year limit.

WHAT IS THE PROCESS FOR GETTING MY ARREST RECORD SEALED?

The process for getting your arrest record sealed varies slightly, depending on your situation:

1. If you were arrested but never charged, you will need to start with the law enforcement agency that arrested you, and ask to have your records sealed. If the law enforcement agency refuses to seal your records (or doesn’t respond), you can file your request in court; OR
2. If you were arrested and charges were filed, you should take your request straight to the court first.

Either way, your claim will be reviewed, and you may have a hearing to convince the judge that you are factually innocent. If you are found factually innocent by either the law enforcement agency or the court, the records of your arrest will be sealed and eventually destroyed.

For information and instructions for each step of this process, see APPENDIX Z, on PG. 1061.

CAN I SEAL AN ARREST OR CONVICTION THAT HAPPENED WHILE I WAS A VICTIM OF HUMAN TRAFFICKING?

Yes—a new law has made this possible. In 2016, California added a new section to the Penal Code permitting special factual innocence petitions for victims of human trafficking.<sup>3223</sup> Section 236.14 provides relief for any person arrested for OR convicted of a nonviolent offense while a victim of human trafficking. The court will vacate the conviction or seal the arrest if it is satisfied that: (1) the person was a victim of human trafficking at

SEALING CALIFORNIA STATE JUVENILE RECORDS

It is a common misperception that juvenile criminal records are automatically sealed when you turn 18. Unfortunately, this is not the case. If you have a juvenile record in California, you must ask the court to have it sealed, otherwise this information may find its way into your background check.

NOTE: This section refers only to sealing juvenile records from California. Every state has different laws for handling juvenile records.<sup>3225</sup> If you have a juvenile record from another state, you will need to find out what relief is available in that state.<sup>3226</sup> Also, federal juvenile records can be sealed only under the very limited circumstances (the same as federal adult convictions—read more on PG. 993).<sup>3227</sup> If you have a federal juvenile record, it is recommended that you speak to a Federal Public Defender.

WHAT COULD SHOW UP IN MY JUVENILE RECORD?

Your juvenile record is made up of all documents, exhibits, judge's rulings, orders, and reports associated with any trouble you got into before you turned 18. These are mostly contained in your juvenile court file, but may also be kept by other agencies such as the Department of Justice (DOJ), the county Probation Department, police, sheriff, or other law enforcement agencies, and the District Attorney.<sup>3228</sup> Your record also includes any documents or records made by these other agencies.

WHO CAN SEE MY JUVENILE RECORD?

Under the law, juvenile court and police records are usually confidential and NOT visible to the public or other people, except in certain cases.<sup>3229</sup> Also, juvenile cases are considered "adjudications"—NOT "convictions"—so legally, you can say that you have NO convictions from your juvenile cases.<sup>3230</sup>

However, juvenile records sometimes DO show up on background checks, and certain employers such as law enforcement and health care agencies are allowed to ask about unsealed juvenile records.<sup>3231</sup> BUT once your juvenile record is sealed, NO one can see it. All juvenile records kept by the court, DOJ, probation department, and other law enforcement agencies are sealed, and it's as if your case never happened.<sup>3232</sup>

WHO CAN GET THEIR JUVENILE RECORDS SEALED?

Like everything else, it depends. You must meet 5 basic criteria to get your juvenile record sealed.<sup>3233</sup>

1. You are over 18 years old, OR it has been 5 years since you were last arrested or completed your juvenile probation (whichever is later);
2. You do NOT have any convictions as an adult for a felony OR for a misdemeanor involving "moral turpitude." ("Moral turpitude" means the offense involved dishonest or immoral behavior,<sup>3234</sup> such as theft, fraud, certain sex and drug offenses, and offenses causing significant bodily injury);
3. Your case started and ended in juvenile court (not in some other court, such as probate court or adult criminal court);
4. You can demonstrate (and convince the judge) that you have been rehabilitated; AND
5. There is NO open civil lawsuit based on your juvenile offense.

If you don't meet ALL of the above requirements, you cannot get your juvenile record sealed.

"CONVICTIONS AS AN ADULT":

A conviction as an adult means you were charged as an adult in criminal court (NOT in juvenile court) and convicted (either by plea bargain or trial).

WHO CANNOT GET THEIR JUVENILE RECORD SEALED?

You CANNOT get your juvenile record sealed if you committed any of the following offenses AND you were 14 or older at the time:

- Murder, attempted murder, or voluntary manslaughter.
- Assault with a firearm, other weapons, or any means of force likely to produce great bodily injury.
- Rape, sodomy, or other sexual offenses, while using force, violence, or threat of great bodily harm.
- Using a firearm while committing a felony (or attempted felony)
- Arson.
- Robbery.
- Various kidnapping offenses.
- Any other serious or violent offense listed in California Welfare & Institutions Code section 707(b).<sup>3235</sup>

IMPORTANT EXCEPTION

What are my options if I committed a serious or violent offense?

If you were convicted of a serious or violent offense AND are otherwise eligible for sealing, you may still be able to get your juvenile record sealed if you do one of the following:

- Set aside the findings and dismiss the petition in the interest of justice under Welfare & Institutions Code section 782.
- Reduce the offense to a misdemeanor under Penal Code section 17(b). (Learn more on PG. 968.)

WHAT IS THE PROCESS FOR GETTING MY JUVENILE RECORD SEALED?

To get your juvenile record sealed, you will need to file a request (called a Petition to Seal Juvenile Records) in the juvenile court where your case was adjudicated. You will have a hearing where the judge will review your petition and ask for a recommendation from the probation department. You will need to answer any questions the judge has, and you can bring people to testify on your behalf. The judge will then decide whether or not to grant your request. If the judge decides to seal your record, s/he will also order all other agencies that have juvenile records on you to seal their records too. If the judge does not decide to seal your record, you are allowed to re-file your petition (the judge will tell you when). For more information and instructions on how to seal your juvenile record, see APPENDIX AA, on PG. 1063.)

For more information about sealing juvenile records in general, see Sealing Your Juvenile Records—a helpful guide from Public Counsel, available online at <http://www.publiccounsel.org/tools/publications/files/Sealing-your-Juvenile-Record.pdf>, and the new online screening tool sealitca.org (which screens you for eligibility and explains the juvenile record-sealing process in each county).

IMPORTANT: As of January 1, 2015, California Welfare & Institutions Code section 786 changed so that juveniles who successfully complete probation, and otherwise qualify to have their record sealed, will have their juvenile record automatically sealed by the judge, without having to file a petition in court or do anything else.<sup>3236</sup>

However, this DOES NOT apply to juveniles who completed their probation BEFORE January 1, 2015. If you completed your juvenile probation BEFORE January 1, 2015, you will still need to file a petition in court to have your juvenile record sealed.

FEDERAL EXPUNGEMENTS & DISMISSALS

WHAT TYPES OF FEDERAL EXPUNGEMENT ARE AVAILABLE, AND HOW COULD THEY HELP ME?

Convictions for federal offenses (violations of U.S. law) often have consequences beyond California. Federal convictions cause you to lose your eligibility for government-assisted housing,<sup>3237</sup> federal student loans,<sup>3238</sup> and participating in foster care or adoption programs,<sup>3239</sup> so getting them expunged can benefit you in (re)applying to these programs.

Unfortunately, most federal convictions cannot be expunged or dismissed. Unlike in California (and most other states), there is NO general federal law that offers expungements for federal crimes. However, there are a few federal laws that offer expungements and dismissals in certain limited situations.

Here are the limited options that exist for “cleaning up” federal convictions on your record:

- If your federal conviction is for certain drug offenses and you were UNDER 21 when you committed the offense, you may be eligible for a federal expungement. (See Situation 1, below.)
- If your federal conviction is for certain drug offenses and you were OVER 21 when you committed the offense, you may be eligible for a federal dismissal, but not an expungement. (See Situation 2, below.)
- It is possible but very difficult to get your conviction expunged by a federal judge (this is called a judicial expungement). (See Situation 3, below.)

WHO CAN GET A FEDERAL EXPUNGEMENT OR DISMISSAL?

If you have a federal drug conviction (see Situation 1 or 2 in the next question), you may qualify for an expungement or dismissal of your conviction if ALL of the following are true:

- You were convicted of only one drug-related offense.
  - You are NOT eligible if you have any other drug-related convictions (state or federal), OR if you have had any previous drug convictions expunged under the statute.<sup>3240</sup>
- You were in possession of only certain types of drugs.
  - The federal expungement statute ONLY covers convictions for marijuana, cocaine and cocaine-based substances, heroine, and methamphetamines (along with a few other less common drugs). To be eligible, your conviction must have involved one of these drugs (NOT any other drug).<sup>3241</sup>
- You were convicted of “simple possession” only.
  - You are NOT eligible if your conviction was for any other offense besides possession of a small amount of drugs consistent with personal use. This means no sales, transportation, or distribution offenses will qualify.<sup>3242</sup>
- The judge “suspended” entry of judgment of conviction for the offense.
  - This means that you were found guilty of the offense, but the judge basically put your conviction on hold, and did not enter it into the official record. (This is to give you a chance to complete probation or a treatment program instead of going to prison.);
  - The judge put you on probation for no more than 1 year; AND
  - You successfully completed probation with NO violations.

FEDERAL EXPUNGEMENT & DISMISSAL:

A federal expungement is different than an expungement under California law. Federal law allows for complete expungement of your conviction. The entire record of your conviction is completely erased along with any information associated with it. The offense is removed from your criminal record as if it never happened.

This only applies in very limited situations, but it is a true expungement (see Situation 1).

A federal dismissal is more like a California expungement, in that the conviction is NOT completely erased from your record, but it is still hidden from public view (see Situation 2).

I MEET ALL OF THE REQUIREMENTS FOR FEDERAL EXPUNGEMENT. WHAT ARE MY NEXT STEPS FOR PURSUING THE EXPUNGEMENT?

SITUATION 1: IF YOU WERE UNDER 21 AT THE TIME OF THE DRUG OFFENSE.

When your probation term ends, you can ask the judge to expunge your conviction. If you have successfully completed your probation with NO violations, and you meet all the other requirements, the judge is required to grant your expungement. This means that ALL official records of your conviction, all references to your arrest, and the results of any criminal proceedings against you will be destroyed. You will get back any rights that you lost because of your conviction, and you can say that you have never been arrested, prosecuted, or convicted of the offense.<sup>3243</sup>

SITUATION 2: IF YOU WERE OVER 21 AT THE TIME OF THE DRUG OFFENSE.

If you were over the age of 21 at the time of your offense, your conviction will not be completely expunged (i.e. erased). However, if you successfully complete your probation with NO violations, and you meet all the other requirements described above, the judge is required to dismiss your conviction at the end of your probation term. You can also ask the judge to dismiss your conviction and release you from probation early (before the end of your probation), but it will be up to the judge whether or not to grant this early.

Once your conviction is dismissed, the record will be sealed—meaning the record will still exist, but it will NOT be public, and it will NOT show on your criminal record that you were ever convicted of the offense. You will also get back any rights that you lost because of your conviction.<sup>3244</sup>

NOTE: If your conviction is expunged (Situation 1) or dismissed (Situation 2), the U.S. Department of Justice will keep a confidential, non-public record of your conviction in case you try to get another conviction expunged or dismissed in the future. Remember: You can only get a federal expungement once in a lifetime!<sup>3245</sup>

SITUATION 3: IS THERE ANY OTHER WAY TO GET MY FEDERAL CONVICTION EXPUNGED?

Maybe. It is sometimes possible to convince a federal judge to ORDER that your conviction be expunged. This is called a “judicial expungement.” However, judicial expungements are VERY, VERY rare—and some courts won’t do them at all.<sup>3246</sup> Many federal courts only grant judicial expungements when it is necessary to correct an error in a criminal case that amounts to a violation of your basic rights (i.e. a “miscarriage of justice”). In these courts your only chance of being granted a judicial expungement is if your conviction was the result of illegal or invalid conduct by the government, such as an unlawful arrest, an unconstitutional law, or a gross administrative error.<sup>3247</sup> The federal courts in California follow this rule—so if your federal conviction happened in California, you will need to show that your conviction was caused by a “miscarriage of justice,” otherwise the judge will NOT grant you a judicial expungement.<sup>3248</sup>

Other federal courts will grant a judicial expungement only under specific and extraordinary circumstances, when they determine that it is necessary in all fairness.<sup>3249</sup> These courts balance the harm that you suffer because of your criminal record (for example, if you are denied public housing or benefits, you cannot be with your family, or you are disqualified from certain jobs), against the public’s interest in preserving the record of your conviction.<sup>3250</sup> If your federal conviction is from a state where the federal courts allow the judge to

<sup>3246</sup> Federal courts are divided into thirteen “circuits” across the country, comprised of district trial courts and circuit courts of appeals. Each of these circuit courts decides how the law should be interpreted within that circuit, which the district courts below must follow. This means that there are often discrepancies in the law at the federal circuit level—in other words, the same law can mean different things depending on where you live. These differences persist until the Supreme Court rules on which interpretation is correct. This is the current state of federal expungement law. Several federal circuit courts have ruled that the courts should be allowed to order expungements based on their inherent equitable powers—their duty to make things fair. Others have decided that expungements are beyond the scope of the court’s duties and that they infringe on the powers allocated to the other branches of government. The Supreme Court has not resolved the dispute. See U.S. v. Mitchell, 683 F. Supp. 2d 427 (2010).

<sup>3247</sup> Courts of Appeal in the First, Third, Sixth, Eighth, and Ninth Circuits, as well as some district courts in the Eleventh Circuit, do not allow expungements based on equitable grounds (i.e. to reward rehabilitation) and will not even hear these motions. See U.S. v. Meyer, 439 F.3d 855 (8th Cir. 2006), U.S. v. Coloian, 480 F.3d 47 (1st Cir. 2007); U.S. v. Sumner, 226 F.3d 1005 (9th Cir. 2000).

balance the factors of your situation, you will still have to convince the judge that the expungement is necessary to preserve your basic rights.<sup>3251</sup>

CAN I GET A CERTIFICATE OF REHABILITATION FOR A FEDERAL CONVICTION?

Unfortunately, no. There is currently no law that allows federal judges to grant Certificates of Rehabilitation (COR). However, one judge in the Eastern District of New York issued a COR on his own.<sup>3252</sup> This certificate has not been challenged, but to the best of our knowledge no other federal judge has issued a certificate of rehabilitation or anything like it in any other case. However, a small number of other federal judges in the Eastern District of New York have made it clear that they are frustrated by the limitations on remedies for cleaning up federal records. Although CORs are not currently available under federal law, it is something we may see in the future.

THE BOTTOM LINE:

The only circumstances under which you are likely to get a judicial expungement of your federal conviction are:

- When your conviction is based on a law that was later found to be unconstitutional; or
- If a judge finds that your conviction was the result of police or government misconduct.
- If you want to request a judicial expungement of your federal conviction, it is recommended that you talk to a lawyer. You can contact the lawyer who represented you in your criminal case or a federal public defender.

U.S. PRESIDENTIAL PARDONS

WHO CAN GET A PRESIDENTIAL PARDON OF A FEDERAL CONVICTION?

It depends. Presidential pardons are even more difficult to get than federal judicial expungements (see PG. 994). U.S. Presidential Pardons are generally only given in high-profile, highly public cases—for example, to certain public figures or politicians, or to friends and relatives of the President.

Technically, any federal conviction is eligible for a presidential pardon, but you must first complete your sentence (including any parole or probation term) AND a 5-year waiting period before you can request a Pardon. The 5-year waiting period starts when you are released from custody, or from the date of your conviction if you were never incarcerated (whichever is later).<sup>3253</sup> During this time, you will need to show that you have led a responsible and productive life, made significant efforts toward rehabilitation, and taken responsibility for your offense.

In deciding whether to grant your pardon, the President will consider the following factors, so you should emphasize your efforts and accomplishments in these areas:

- Employment, including stable work and financial situation;
- Family responsibility;
- Community service, volunteer work, or other charitable activities;
- Reputation in the community;
- Military service (if applicable);
- Any other accomplishments; AND
- Your efforts to take responsibility for your offense and make restitution to any victims.<sup>3254</sup>

Here are some other things you should include or mention:

- Letters of support, reports, and recommendations—particularly official reports or recommendations from people involved in your criminal case, such as the judge, the prosecutor, or your federal probation officer.
- Any hardships caused by your conviction—for example, if your conviction is preventing you from getting certain jobs or professional licenses; or making it difficult for you to reunite with your children and family; or if you cannot get certain public benefits, public housing, loans, or other services because of your conviction.
- The amount of time that has passed since your conviction—The more serious your offense, the more time you will need to put between your conviction and your request in order to demonstrate your rehabilitation and convince the president that you deserve a pardon.<sup>3255</sup>

HOW DO I GO ABOUT APPLYING FOR A PRESIDENTIAL PARDON?

To apply for a presidential pardon, you must complete a “Petition for Executive Clemency” and file it with the Office of the Pardon Lawyer within the U.S. Department of Justice. Application forms and instructions can be found on the U.S. Department of Justice website at: <http://www.justice.gov/pardon/>.

For more information on requesting a Presidential Pardon, see <http://www.justice.gov/pardon/rules-governing-petitions-executive-clemency>.

WHO GETS PRESIDENTIAL PARDONS?

Here are some examples of people who have received a Presidential Pardon:

- Former President Richard Nixon
- George Steinbrenner (former owner of the New York Yankees)
- Roger Clinton, Jr. (half-brother of former President Bill Clinton)
- Marc Richard (billionaire businessman)
- Jimmy Hoffa (former union leader)
- Patty Hearst

REMEMBER:

You must complete your sentence (including any probation, parole, or supervision) AND a 5-year waiting period before you can request a pardon.

For most people, a presidential pardon is NOT a realistic solution for cleaning up your criminal record.

VI. REGISTRATION REQUIREMENTS—SEX, ARSON, & DRUG OFFENSES

HOW WILL CLEANING UP MY RECORD AFFECT MY REGISTRATION REQUIREMENT?

Like most questions about cleaning up your record, it depends on the type of registration requirement you have, your conviction offense, and which remedy(ies) you use to clean up your record. For specific answers, it is recommended that you discuss your situation with a lawyer.

SEX REGISTRATION

Registration as a sex offender under California Penal Code section 290 is the most severe and permanent type of registration. However, under limited circumstances, cleaning up your record can remove your registration requirement.

WILL THE REMEDY REMOVE MY REGISTRATION REQUIREMENT?

- Expungement—NO, an expungement alone does NOT remove your sex registration requirement.<sup>3256</sup>
  - However, if you also get a Certificate of Rehabilitation<sup>3257</sup> AND
  - You qualify for relief from registration under California Penal Code section 290.5 (which has additional requirements and restrictions),<sup>3258</sup> you may no longer have to register.
- Certificate of Rehabilitation (COR)—Maybe, but it will depend on what offense you were convicted of.
  - A COR WILL remove your sex registration requirement if you were not convicted of one of the disqualifying offenses under Penal Code section 290.5(2).<sup>3259</sup>
  - For the serious (felony) sex offenses listed in Penal Code section 290.5(2), a COR will NOT remove your sex registration requirement (unless you also get a pardon).<sup>3260</sup>
  - Remember, a COR is available for misdemeanor sex offense convictions that are expunged under California’s expungement statute (Penal Code section 1203.4).<sup>3261</sup>
  - If your conviction was for certain sex offenses involving children (Cal. Penal § 288 or 288.5 ONLY), you received probation, AND you received a COR before 1998, a judge may remove your sex registration requirement after 10 years with no new felony convictions.<sup>3262</sup>
- Pardon—YES, this will remove your sex registration requirement.
  - A full pardon from the governor will remove your sex registration requirement, BUT a pardon is VERY difficult to get and granted only in “extraordinary circumstances.”<sup>3263</sup>

SEX REGISTRATION & MEGAN’S LAW

Under “Megan’s Law,” the California Department of Justice is required to keep a public website with personal and criminal history information about anyone who is required to register as a sex offender under California Penal Section 290. The website is available to the public, and includes information about your conviction offense, certain other information about your criminal history, a photograph and description of what you look like, and other personal information (name, date of birth, the community and zip code or county where you live, and in some cases even your address).<sup>3264</sup>

IMPORTANT: In some cases, you may be able to get your information removed from the Megan’s Law website. If your conviction was for a less serious sex offense, AND you do NOT have any other convictions for more serious sex offenses, you can ask the DOJ to remove (“exclude”) your information from the public website. If you meet all of the other requirements (listed in Cal. Penal 290.46(e)), the DOJ is required to remove your information.<sup>3265</sup> BUT even if your information is removed from the DOJ website, you are still required to register under section 290 (unless you get your registration requirement legally lifted).

ARSON REGISTRATION

WILL THE REMEDY REMOVE MY REGISTRATION REQUIREMENT?

- Expungement—YES, an expungement will remove your arson registration requirement if:
  - Your conviction was for a misdemeanor arson offense AND you get the conviction dismissed under California’s expungement statute.<sup>3266</sup>
- Certificate of Rehabilitation—YES, this will remove your arson registration requirement, even if you had a lifetime registration requirement!<sup>3267</sup>
- Pardon—YES, this will remove your arson registration requirement.<sup>3268</sup>
  - BUT remember, a pardon is very difficult to get and granted only in “extraordinary circumstances.”

DRUG REGISTRATION

WILL THE REMEDY REMOVE MY REGISTRATION REQUIREMENT?

Your drug registration requirement will end automatically after 5 years.<sup>3269</sup> (The 5-year period starts when you are released from prison or jail, or when you are discharged from probation or parole.) In many cases, your registration requirement will end on its own, even before you clean up your record.

- Expungement—YES, this will remove your drug registration requirement.<sup>3270</sup>
  - Getting your conviction expunged under California’s expungement statute will remove your requirement to register as a drug offender.
- Certificate of Rehabilitation—YES, this will remove your drug registration requirement.
  - If you get a Certificate of Rehabilitation, you no longer have to register as a drug offender.<sup>3271</sup> However, most people have to wait more than 5 years before applying for a COR. By this time you will no longer have to register anyway.
- Pardon—YES, this will remove your drug registration requirement.
  - BUT remember, a pardon is very difficult to get and granted only in “extraordinary circumstances.” Most people have to wait more than 5 years before applying for a pardon, by which time you will no longer have to register anyway.<sup>3272</sup>

VII. DNA EXPUNGEMENT

WHAT IS A DNA EXPUNGEMENT?

In California, anyone convicted of a felony, anyone convicted of a misdemeanor with a prior felony conviction, anyone on probation, parole, or supervision for a felony or with a prior felony conviction, and anyone required to register under California Penal Code sections 290 (sex offense) or 457.1 (arson), is required to give a DNA sample.<sup>3273</sup> Previously, DNA samples were also collected from anyone who was even arrested for certain felonies—but the California courts are still working out whether or not it is constitutional to take DNA samples from someone who has only been arrested and not convicted.<sup>3274</sup> These DNA samples are kept in a state and national database, and then used by law enforcement agencies to identify suspects involved in other crimes.

Usually when a sample of your DNA is taken, it will be kept in the California state database (CAL-DNA program), and the information may be shared with the national database (kept by the FBI), which can be searched by law enforcement agencies around the country.<sup>3275</sup>

If you had to give a DNA sample because of your arrest or conviction, you may want to consider getting your DNA expunged from the state and/or national databases. As long as your DNA remains in the database, law enforcement agencies can use your DNA to try to connect you (even incorrectly) to other crimes. Getting your DNA expunged from a database means that your DNA sample will be destroyed and all related information (your DNA profile) will be completely removed from that database.<sup>3276</sup>

CALIFORNIA DNA EXPUNGEMENT

WHO CAN GET THEIR DNA EXPUNGED FROM THE CALIFORNIA DATABASE?

You may qualify to have your DNA expunged from the California database if you meet the following requirements:

1. Your DNA was collected after you were arrested BUT NO charges were ever filed against you; OR
2. Your DNA was collected after you were arrested and charges were filed against you, but the charges were dismissed, or you were acquitted; OR
3. Your DNA was collected after you were arrested and criminal charges were filed against you, BUT your conviction was overturned;

AND

4. You have NO felony convictions (or juvenile felony adjudications) on your criminal record. (NOTE: Even if you get your felony conviction expunged or reduced to a misdemeanor, it will still count as a felony for purposes of DNA collection, so you will NOT qualify to have your DNA expunged from the database.);<sup>3277</sup>

AND

5. You are NOT required to register as a sex or arson offender.<sup>3278</sup>

If you meet all of the legal requirements, your DNA MUST be expunged from the database once you submit your request for expungement.

HOW CAN I GET MY DNA EXPUNGED FROM THE CALIFORNIA DATABASE?

You can request to have your DNA expunged from the California database directly from the DOJ, or you can file a petition in court asking for a court order to expunge it. It is easier and faster to request expungement directly from the DOJ because, if you meet the requirements, the DOJ is required to expunge your DNA records. If you are denied by the DOJ, and have to file in court, this generally means you do not meet one of the requirements. If you file in court, you will have to convince a judge to order expungement of your DNA.

For more details on both processes for requesting expungement of your DNA from the California database, APPENDIX BB, on PG. 1064.

For more information about DNA expungement in California in general, see Getting Expunged or Removed from the CAL-DNA Data Bank on the California DOJ's website at: <https://oag.ca.gov/bfs/prop69/faqs>.

FBI (NATIONAL) DNA EXPUNGEMENT

WHO CAN GET THEIR DNA EXPUNGED FROM THE NATIONAL DATABASE?

If your DNA sample was taken for a federal arrest or conviction, you may qualify to have your DNA expunged from the FBI's national database if:

1. Your federal arrest did NOT result in a conviction, because NO charges were filed against you, or the charges were dismissed, or you were acquitted; OR
2. Your federal conviction has been overturned.

To get your DNA expunged, you must provide an official court order showing the final outcome of your arrest, case, or overturned conviction.<sup>3279</sup> For details on how to get your DNA expunged from the federal database (also called "CODIS," which stands for Combined DNA Index System), see APPENDIX BB, on PG. 1064.

NOTE: If you want to get your California DNA sample expunged from the national database, you will need to contact the California DOJ and follow the instructions in APPENDIX BB, on PG. 1064.<sup>3280</sup>

For more information on expungement of DNA from the national database, visit the FBI's website on CODIS—Expungement Policy, available at http://www.fbi.gov/about-us/lab/biometric-analysis/codis/codis\_expungement.

VIII. CONCLUSION

Hopefully this Chapter has given you a better understanding of your criminal records, how to correct errors early in your reentry.

Later in reentry, if you become eligible, we hope this Chapter has also shown you the many options that are available to help you "clean up" your record and minimize its impact on your life.

APPENDIX A

Getting Your California (DOJ) RAP Sheet

STEP 1: Get and Fill out the “Request for Live Scan Service” (Form BCIA 8016).

You may download this form from the DOJ website at: <http://oag.ca.gov/fingerprints/security>.<sup>3281</sup> It should also be available at any public Live Scan Site.<sup>3282</sup> For a listing of public Live Scan Sites throughout California, visit the DOJ’s website at: <https://oag.ca.gov/fingerprints/locations>. (See APPENDIX B, on PG. 1002 for a sample Request for Live Scan Services form and instructions for filling it out.)

IMPORTANT INFORMATION ABOUT FILLING OUT THE REQUEST FOR LIVE SCAN SERVICES FORM:

- The DOJ is very particular about how this form is filled out. When you’re filling out the form, make sure you:
- Where the form says “Type of Application,” check the box for “Record Review.”
- Where the form says “Reason for Application,” write “Record Review” on the line.

STEP 2: Find a Live Scan Site near you.

Live Scan services are available at most local police departments and sheriff’s offices.<sup>3283</sup> There are also hundreds of Public Live Scan sites around the state. To find a public Live Scan location near you, check your local yellow pages, or visit the DOJ website at: <https://oag.ca.gov/fingerprints/locations>. The fees and hours vary from site to site (and change often), and some sites require appointments whereas others allow walk-ins. For this reason, it is always recommended that you call the site you want to visit beforehand to make sure you they’re open and know how much it costs. (Note: Most Live Scan sites charge between $20-40 for fingerprinting, but there is a lot of variation from one location to another.)

STEP 3: Get Fingerprinted.

Take your completed “Request for Live Scan Service” with you to the Live Scan site when you go to get fingerprinted.

STEP 4: Mail your Live Scan fingerprints, along with a $25 fee, to:

California Department of Justice: Record Review Unit
P.O. Box 903417
Sacramento, CA 94203-4170

FEE WAIVERS: WHAT TO DO IF YOU CANNOT AFFORD THE $25 FEE

If you cannot afford the $25 fee, you can request a “fee waiver”—meaning you will NOT have to pay to get your RAP sheet. To request a fee waiver, you can fill out an “Application for Record Review Processing Fee Waiver Claim and Proof of Indigence” form (see Appendix C, on PG. 1006). This form lets you choose from three reasons why you can’t afford the fee— you receive public benefits (such as CalWORKS, CalFRESH (food stamps), MediCal, or unemployment insurance); you are currently incarcerated; or your income falls below 138 percent of the federal poverty guidelines. If possible, you may want to send copies (not the originals!) of your pay stubs, bank account records, or other documents showing your income and expenses. If you do not receive the request after 2 weeks, call the DOJ at (916) 227-3835 to make sure that your documents are being processed. Leave your full name and a telephone number in their voicemail so they can return your call

How long will I have to wait for my California RAP sheet?

Once you send in your forms, it can take up to 2 months (anywhere from 1–8 weeks) to get a copy of your California (DOJ) RAP sheet, depending on how long your RAP sheet is (i.e., how much information it contains). If your RAP sheet is fairly long (in other words, if you have had many encounters with law enforcement and/or the criminal justice system), it takes longer for the DOJ to process your request, because they have to research and verify all of the information.<sup>3284</sup>

Getting Your FBI (Federal) RAP Sheet

There are two ways to get a copy of your FBI (federal) RAP sheet:

OPTION 1: Request your “Identity History Summary” (RAP sheet) from the FBI directly.

STEP 1: Fill out BOTH the FBI’s “Applicant Information Form”<sup>3285</sup> (see APPENDIX DD, on PG. 1067) AND the “Request for Live Scan Service” (Form BCIA 8016RR) (See APPENDIX B, on PG. 1003).<sup>3286</sup>

- Print the forms and fill them out by hand, OR fill out the forms online and then print them.
- Where the form says: “Type of Application,” check the box for “Record Review.”
- Where the form says: “Reason for Application,” write “Record Review” on the line.
- Review the Identity History Summary checklist (see APPENDIX E, on PG. 1002) to make sure you don’t miss any of the steps.<sup>3287</sup>

STEP 2: Take the completed “Request for Live Service Scan” form to a Public Live Scan Site to get fingerprinted.

- Live Scan services are available at most local police departments and sheriff’s offices.<sup>3288</sup> There are also hundreds of Public Live Scan sites around the state. To find a public Live Scan location near you, check your local yellow pages, or visit the DOJ website at: <https://oag.ca.gov/fingerprints/locations>.

STEP 3: Make your payment to the FBI.

- The charge is $18 per copy of your Identity History Summary.<sup>3289</sup>
- You can pay by credit card, money order, or certified check made out to the “Treasury of the United States.”

STEP 4: Mail all forms and your $18 payment to: FBI CJIS Division—Record Request, 1000 Custer Hollow Road, Clarksburg, West Virginia 26306

Note: It can take up to 3 months (or more!) to get a copy of your FBI RAP sheet after sending in your forms and payment.<sup>3290</sup>

For more information, visit Frequently Asked Questions about Identity History Summary checks on the FBI’s website at: <http://www.fbi.gov/about-us/cjis/identity-history-summary-checks/faqs>.<sup>3291</sup>

OPTION 2: Ask an FBI-approved “Channeler” (While this is a faster process, it may include extra fees!)

An FBI-approved “Channeler” is a private business that has contracted with the FBI to be the “middle-man” when you request a copy of your FBI RAP sheet. The Channeler will collect your all of your fingerprints, personal data, and fee(s), and then send everything to the FBI for you. Afterward, the FBI will send your RAP sheet to the Channeler, and the Channeler will forward the RAP sheet to you. This is a faster process than requesting your RAP sheet from the FBI directly, but channelers generally charge extra fees. Contact each Channeler to learn more about their specific procedures and instructions, processing times, and costs.

STEP 1: Find an FBI-approved Channeler.

- A list of FBI-approved Channelers is provided in APPENDIX EE, on PG. 1069.
- This list is also available on the FBI’s website at <http://www.fbi.gov/about-us/cjis/identity-history-summary-checks/list-of-fbi-approved-channelers>.

STEP 2: Contact the Channeler directly for specific instructions, fees, and processing times.

- For more information about getting your FBI RAP sheet through an FBI-approved Channeler, see <http://www.fbi.gov/about-us/cjis/identity-history-summary-checks/fbi-approved-channelers>.

FBI RAP Sheet Request Checklist

Please check the boxes below to ensure that you have included everything needed to process your request.

- Include a completed application form.
- Sign your application. Note: If for a couple, family, etc., all must sign the application.*
- Include a completed fingerprint card. A completed fingerprint card includes the following:
  - 1. Name
  - 2. Date of Birth
  - 3. Descriptive Data
  - 4. All 10 rolled fingerprint impressions.
  - 5. The plain impressions including thumbs of both hands.
- Include a credit card payment form, certified check*, or money order for $18.00 per request.

Note: This amount must be exact.

- If using a credit card, please ensure the credit card payment form is filled out completely.

Don't forget to include the expiration date of the credit card that you are using.

- If paying with a certified check or money order, make it payable to the Treasury of the United States.

CASH OR PERSONAL/BUSINESS CHECKS ARE NOT AN ACCEPTED FORM OF PAYMENT.

- Include a form of contact information (i.e., e-mail, telephone number) in case we need to contact you.

**To issue a certified check, the bank verifies that sufficient funds exist in the requestor's account to cover the check and so certifies payment at the time the check is written. Those funds are then set aside in the bank's internal account until the check is cashed or returned to the payee.*

Fixing Errors in Your California (DOJ) RAP Sheet

STEP 1: Get the form to request a RAP sheet correction.

When you received your RAP sheet, you should have also received a form called a “Claim of Alleged Inaccuracy or Incompleteness” (DOJ form BCIA 8706). This is the form you must fill out to challenge information in your state RAP sheet. If you do not have this form for any reason, you must contact the Department of Justice to request another copy. This form is not available online, or from any source other than the DOJ. If you cannot get the form, you can send a letter to the DOJ instead.<sup>3292</sup>

STEP 2: Fill out your claim.

Fill out the “Claim of Alleged Inaccuracy or Incompleteness” form, or write your letter. Whether you are filling out the form or writing a letter, you need to explain, as specifically as possible, what the error is—why and how your record is inaccurate or incomplete. Examples of common errors include:<sup>3293</sup>

1. Mismatched names. If your RAP sheet contains arrests, convictions, or other information that is unrelated to your past, your name may have been confused with another person’s name.
2. Leaving out important information about a case. Sometimes, even if a case against you has been resolved, your RAP sheet may not reflect the updated information. For example, if you were found innocent of the charges, but your RAP still says, “case pending.”
3. Revealing sealed information. Your RAP may contain records that should have been destroyed or can only be released by special court order, such as sealed arrests or juvenile offenses.
4. Providing misleading information. It is possible that a single charge may appear multiple times on your RAP, making it look like you are a multiple offender.
5. Misclassifying your offenses. If a misdemeanor conviction shows up as a felony on your RAP sheet, this is a serious problem!

HOW TO CONTACT THE DOJ RECORD REVIEW UNIT:

You can call the DOJ Record Review unit at (916) 227-3835 for the latest information on how to challenge what’s in your RAP sheet or to check on the status of a challenge that you have filed. This is an automated system (a recording) that contains information on many DOJ-related issues. Follow the prompts that ask you if you want to “verify or challenge the accuracy of your criminal history” or “check the status of a previously submitted request.” If you are asked to leave a message, make sure that your information is clear so that the right person can call you back.

IMPORTANT! Make sure to fill out all of your personal information clearly and accurately, so the DOJ properly identifies you and investigates the right record!

STEP 3: Include proof of your claim.

You should give the DOJ any proof you have that the information in your RAP sheet is wrong, such as court records, transcripts, court orders, court minutes, a copy of the plea agreement, police records, or other paperwork or evidence that supports your claim.<sup>3294</sup>

IMPORTANT: Sending court records and documents. The Department of Justice does NOT have access to your court documents. If you need copies of court documents to give to the DOJ in order to prove your claim, you must get them from the court where your case was heard and send them to the DOJ yourself.

NOTE: The DOJ assumes that its records are correct. When the DOJ looks into a challenge like this, it often simply checks its version of your record against the copy of your RAP sheet that it sent you. If there is no difference between the two, the DOJ will assume that your RAP sheet is accurate. This is why you must provide proof that the DOJ’s version of your record is wrong!

STEP 4: Mail in your claim and proof.

Send the following documents to the DOJ: Your completed “Claim of Alleged Inaccuracy or Incompleteness” form or letter; a copy of your RAP sheet (keep a copy for yourself!); and any documents or other evidence to prove your claim. You should use the address on the claim form, as it will be the most current address. As of publication of this manual, your claim and supporting documents should be sent to:

<sup>3292</sup> Recorded message, Cal. Dep’t. of Justice, Records Review Unit (Apr. 9, 2015); see also Criminal Records—Request Your Own, CAL. DEP’T. OF JUSTICE, OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL, <http://oag.ca.gov/fingerprints/security>.

STEP 5: Wait for the DOJ's Review.

After the DOJ has received your paperwork, it will review your claim and decide whether it agrees that your RAP sheet is wrong. If the DOJ agrees that the information in your record is wrong, it will make the changes and send you a new, corrected copy of your RAP sheet.<sup>3295</sup> It can take 2-4 weeks (or sometimes longer) for the DOJ to review all of your paperwork and get back to you with its decision.

STEP 6: Appeal the DOJ's Decision.

If the DOJ does not agree that your record is wrong, you have the right to request an administrative hearing to challenge the decision.<sup>3296</sup> You should talk to a lawyer if you want to take the next step and request a hearing to challenge the DOJ.

If you have any additional questions about fixing errors in your RAP sheet, you can call the DOJ's Record Review Unit at (916) 227-3835.

Fixing Errors in Your FBI (Federal) RAP Sheet

The FBI gets all of its criminal history information from other law enforcement and criminal justice agencies as well as courts throughout the U.S. The FBI can only change your information if the original agency or court (i.e., the one that sent the information to the FBI in the first place) tells the FBI to change it. If you think your FBI RAP sheet is inaccurate or incomplete, there are 2 ways to correct the information:

OPTION 1: Contact the court or agency that sent your information to the FBI

Note: Each entry on your FBI RAP sheet should list the specific agency that provided the information. This is how you can tell which agency sent the incorrect or incomplete information on your RAP sheet.

- If the incorrect or missing information is from a CALIFORNIA AGENCY OR COURT:

If the incorrect or missing information is from a CALIFORNIA law enforcement agency or court (for example, a local police department, county sheriff, California state agency, or California state court), contact the California Bureau of Criminal Information and Analysis, and ask them to send the FBI corrected or updated information for your Identity History Summary.

How to contact the California Bureau of Criminal Information and Analysis:

By mail:

Bureau of Criminal History Information & Analysis
California Department of Justice, Room G-118
4949 Broadway
Sacramento, CA 95820-1528

By phone: (916) 227-3849

By email: appagencyquestions@doj.ca.gov.<sup>3297</sup>

- If the incorrect or missing information is from an agency or court in ANOTHER STATE:

If the incorrect or missing information is from a law enforcement agency, court, or criminal justice agency in ANOTHER STATE (for example, a local police department, county sheriff, court, or state agency in another state), you will need to contact the state Identification Bureau for that state, and ask them to send the FBI corrected or updated information for your Identity History Summary.

You can find contact information for the Identification Bureau in every U.S. state on the FBI's website at: <http://www.fbi.gov/about-us/cjis/identity-history-summary-checks/state-identification-bureau-listing>.

- If the incorrect or missing information is from a FEDERAL AGENCY OR COURT:

If the incorrect or missing information is from a FEDERAL law enforcement agency, court, or criminal justice agency, you will need to contact the specific agency that sent in your information—for example, the federal agency that arrested you, the federal prosecutor's office that charged you, or the federal court that processed your case—and ask them to send the FBI corrected or updated information for your Identity History Summary.

The easiest way to find contact information for federal agencies and courts is to search on the Internet using search engines like Google.com or Yahoo.com.

OPTION 2: Go through the FBI directly.

If you don't know where the incomplete or incorrect information on your RAP sheet came from, you can contact the FBI directly to challenge it, and ask them to correct it.<sup>3298</sup>

STEP 1: Write your challenge letter.

In your letter, you should: (1) clearly state that you think there is inaccurate or missing information in your Identity History Summary; (2) clearly identify what information you think is wrong; and (3) clearly explain why the information is wrong. (For a list of common RAP sheet errors, see APPENDIX F, on PG. 1010.)

<sup>3297</sup> State Identification Bureau Listings, FEDERAL BUREAU OF INVESTIGATION, <http://www.fbi.gov/about-us/cjis/identity-history-summary-checks/state-identification-bureau-listing>.
28 C.F.R. § 16.34.

STEP 2: Include proof of the correct information.

You should also send the FBI any proof you have that the particular information in your RAP sheet is wrong—such as court records, transcripts, court orders, court minutes, copy of a plea agreement, police records, or other paperwork or evidence that support your claim. For example, if your RAP sheet is missing information about the final outcome of a case, you should send court documents showing the final disposition.

STEP 3: Mail your written challenge request.

Send your challenge letter and all your proof (supporting documents and evidence) to:

FBI Criminal Justice Information Services Division
Attention: Criminal History Analysis Tad
Clarksburg, WV 26306

STEP 4: Wait for the FBI's review.

The FBI will investigate whether the information in your RAP sheet is incomplete or incorrect by contacting the agencies that supplied it as well as other agencies that might have additional information about your case. If the FBI decides that your RAP sheet is wrong or incomplete, it will correct the mistake(s) and let you know.

APPENDIX H

Fixing Errors in Your Background Check

In California, if you want to challenge information found in your background check, these are the steps you will need to take:<sup>3299</sup>

STEP 1: CHALLENGE the background check company's incorrect information.

You must notify the background check company that ran your background check that there was a mistake in the information included in your background check report.

- Send the background check company a letter to notify them in writing that you are disputing (challenging) the information in your background check. (A sample challenge letter is included in APPENDIX I, on PG. 1016.)
- You should explain why the information is incorrect, and include any proof (documents, facts, and other evidence) to support your claim. Make copies of important documents and include them with your letter.
- You can find the name and address of the background check company in 2 places:
  - BEFORE someone runs a background check on you (such as an employer, private landlord, or creditor), they are supposed to tell you and get your PERMISSION. They must also give you the name, address, phone number, and website of the background check company that they are going to use.<sup>3300</sup>
  - If someone takes any negative action against you (such as refusing to hire you, rent an apartment to you, or give you benefits) based on information in your background check, they must give you an "ADVERSE ACTION LETTER" that also includes the name, address, and phone number of the background check company that did the background check.<sup>3301</sup>

STEP 2: The background check company INVESTIGATES your claim.

Once the company receives your letter, it MUST investigate your claim free of charge.<sup>3302</sup>

- During the investigation, the company MUST review ALL the evidence you sent in and consider any relevant information.
- The company must notify whoever provided the information that you are challenging it.<sup>3303</sup>
- Based on its investigation, the company MUST update, confirm, or remove the challenged within 30 days (see Step 3 for more information).<sup>3304</sup>

You have the right to know what internal procedures the background company uses to investigate your claim. You can ask the company for this information and they MUST provide it to you.

STEP 3: AFTER the background check company finishes its investigation...

The background check company will make a decision about the information you challenged, and must respond to you within 30 days. If you give the company more information that affects the investigation during the 30-day period, the agency can extend the investigation for an extra 15 days. Based on its investigation, the company MUST:

- Correct or remove any information that is inaccurate, incomplete, or can't be confirmed as true;
- Notify the person or agency that provided the information that it has been corrected or removed from your background check;
- Keep in any information that the company confirms is complete and accurate;
- End the investigation (without making any changes) if the company finds that your claim is "frivolous" or "irrelevant." This usually means that you have not provided enough information for the company to investigate your claim.
  - If the company ends the investigation, it must notify you, explain the reasons for its decision, AND tell you what information it needs in order to continue the investigation.<sup>3305</sup>
- Notify you when the investigation is complete, tell you the results of the investigation, AND send you a new copy of your background check.<sup>3306</sup>

<sup>3303</sup> CAL. CIV. CODE § 1786.24, Fair Credit Reporting Act, § 611(a)(1)(A), 15 U.S.C. § 1681i. Within 5 days of receiving your notice, the agency must notify the person or government entity that provided the information that you claim is incorrect.

<sup>3304</sup> CAL. CIV. CODE § 1786.24, Fair Credit Reporting Act, § 611(a)(1)(A), 15 U.S.C. § 1681i. Before 30 days is up, if you give more information that affects the investigation, the agency can extend the investigation for 15 extra days.

STEP 4: FOLLOW UP after the background check company's decision!

- If the background check company DOESN'T remove the information, or if there is still information in your background check that you think is incorrect or incomplete, you can add a STATEMENT OF DISPUTE saying that you disagree with the information in your file.<sup>3307</sup> Mail this statement to the background check company, and tell them to include it in your file. (See APPENDIX J, on PG. 1017 for a sample statement of dispute.)
- The company MUST include your statement of dispute in any future background checks it runs AND clearly state that the information is "in dispute" (being challenged as incorrect).<sup>3308</sup>

STEP 5: NOTIFY anyone who has received a copy of your background check.

If the agency corrects or removes any information in your background check, or if you add a statement of dispute to your file, you should ask the background check company to send a notice of the change to ANYONE who received your background check in the last 2 years.<sup>3309</sup>

STEP 6: If the background check company later puts information BACK into your background check that it previously removed...

If a background check company REMOVES challenged information from your background check, it can REINSERT (put back) the information if the company later finds that the information is true.

- If this happens, the background check company MUST:
  - Notify you the information has been put back in your file;
  - Give you the name, address, and phone number of anyone the company talked to when deciding to put the information back in; AND
  - Give you the phone number of the person or agency that provided the information that the company put back in.<sup>3310</sup>
- You also have the right to challenge any information the company puts back into your background check.
  - You have can ask the background check company to re-investigate any information that it has put back in your background check. The company must conduct another investigation of the information, tell you the results, make any corrections, and give you a new copy of your background check report (just like in STEPS 2-3).

If an employer, private landlord, government agency, or anyone else ran a background check on you within the past 2 years that contained information that you believe was wrong or incomplete, be sure sure to have the background check company notify them that the information is wrong or is in dispute.

Why would a background check company PUT BACK information that it previously removed?

Sometimes a background check company will REMOVE information from your background check—for example, because it could not confirm that the information was true—but later, the company will find out that the information was true and PUT IT BACK on your background check report to make the report complete.

APPENDIX K

Petition for Dismissal (California Expungement)

In most cases, you will need to file papers in court and ask a judge to expunge your conviction. This process is called a Petition for Dismissal. The process is almost the same for requesting mandatory or discretionary dismissal, but there are a few small differences. Remember, it is always good to ask a lawyer for assistance, especially if you are requesting discretionary dismissal.

Find California Court Form CR-180 and CR-181 (Petition and Order for Dismissal) in Appendix KK, on PG. 1070.

STEP 1: Get the court forms you will need to request an expungement from the court: the Petition for Dismissal (form CR-180) and the Order for Dismissal (form CR-181)

- The “Petition for Dismissal” (form CR-180) is the formal document you use to ask the court to expunge your conviction.
- If the judge approves your expungement, s/he will sign the “Order for Dismissal” (form CR-181) to make your expungement an official court order.
- You can get these forms from several places, including.
  - The Clerk of the court where you were convicted;
  - The California Courts’ official website (<http://www.courts.ca.gov/documents/cr180.pdf>); or
  - From your lawyer.
  - A sample form CR-180 and form CR-181 are included in APPENDIX FF, on PG. 1070 for reference. BUT it is always better to get the most current version from an official source, in case there have been any recent changes to the form.

IMPORTANT: If you have convictions from multiple cases, you will need to file a separate petition for each case.

STEP 2: Fill out your court forms (Petition AND Order)<sup>3311</sup>

Here are some tips for filling out the forms:

- Petition—Fill in ALL the information that the forms ask for. You will need the information from your RAP sheet (or court records from all of your cases) in order to fill out the forms.
- Petition question #1—If you are filing a petition to have a felony “wobbler” expunged, you will need to mark “Yes” in the box that asks if the felony is eligible for reduction to a misdemeanor under Penal Code Section 17(b). (See PG. 970 for more information about expungement of felony “wobblers.”)
- Bottom of Petition—If your sentence included probation, check the box for “1203.4.” If your sentence did NOT include probation, check the box for “1203.4a.” If you were convicted of a felony under California’s Realignment Act, check the box for “1203.41.” (See PG. 961 for more information about expungement of felonies that were sentenced under Realignment.)
- Bottom of Petition—Don’t forget to sign the form and put the date!
- Order—Only fill out the top boxes (for “Lawyer or Party Without Lawyer,” “People of the State of California v. Defendant,” and “Case Number”), and leave the rest of the form blank (all of the numbered questions). Make sure the information is the same as the top boxes on the Petition form! The judge will fill in all the other information after deciding whether or not to grant your expungement.
- Petition AND Order—If you are filling out the forms for yourself, you are BOTH the “petitioner” AND the “defendant,” so you should fill in your information wherever you see these terms.
- If your conviction qualifies for mandatory dismissal, you only need to fill out the Petition (CR-180) and Order (CR-181) forms. However, if your conviction only qualifies for discretionary dismissal, you will need to include a few more documents in addition to your petition. (See PG. 962 for more information on the difference between mandatory and discretionary expungement, and to figure out which type of expungement you qualify for.)

***FOR A DISCRETIONARY DISMISSAL, GO TO STEP 3. FOR MANDATORY DISMISSAL, SKIP TO STEP 4.***

THE COURT CLERK:

The court clerk is the person who oversees all of the court’s records, legal documents, and administration. Some courts may have a separate clerk for each department of the court (e.g., criminal court, traffic court, probate court, etc.). If this is the case, you will need to get help from the criminal court clerk. Usually, the clerk will have a separate office, counter, or window at the courthouse. When you go to the courthouse, ask someone where the clerk’s office is if you can’t find it.

STEP 3: (FOR DISCRETIONARY PETITIONS ONLY) Gather additional supporting documents to include with your Petition.

If you are requesting a discretionary dismissal, you will also need to include the following documents. (Note: Make a photocopy of any documents you send with your petition, and keep the original for yourself!)

1. A Declaration. A declaration is a statement that you write under penalty of perjury, that explains why expungement of your conviction is “in the interests of justice.” Your declaration should say why you deserve to get an expungement, and how it will help you succeed in the future.<sup>3312</sup>
  - How have you changed since your conviction? What was going on in your life at the time of the conviction? What has changed in your life since then?
  - What efforts have you made toward rehabilitation? What are you doing to improve yourself and your situation (such as treatment programs, work or school, connecting with family, finding religion)?
  - What are your goals for the future (for example, getting a job or promotion, getting your GED or a college degree, connecting with family, starting a business)?
  - How will getting an expungement help you to achieve your goals?
  - You can use the official Declaration form (MC-031) published by the Judicial Council of California which is available from the court clerk, or on the California Courts website at: <http://www.courts.ca.gov/documents/mc031.pdf>.
  - For tips for what to write in your Declaration, see APPENDIX L, on PG. 1022. For a sample Declaration, see APPENDIX M, on PG. 1023.
2. Letters of Support. Letters of support serve as character references and emphasize the positive impact that granting your dismissal will have. You should ask for letters from people who know you well, and who can talk about your positive qualities, your accomplishments, and your rehabilitation efforts. These can be from your rabbi, priest, or pastor; your employer (current or previous); your teachers; your sponsor or mentor; your counselor or case manager; community leaders and other members of community organizations that you are involved in; and your friends, family, and neighbors. When you ask someone for a letter of support, you can remind them of your accomplishments and explain what you would like them to write about (for example, how you have changed since your conviction, your efforts at rehabilitation, your good character, your efforts to improve yourself and help others around you, and why you deserve to have your conviction expunged). For more information on how to write a Letter of Support and tips for what to write, see APPENDIX N, on PG. 1024. A sample Letter of Support is included in APPENDIX O, on PG. 1025.
3. Proof of Accomplishments. If you have completed any classes or training programs since your conviction (such as vocational training or job readiness programs; GED classes, or other schooling; mentorship courses, reentry programs, restorative justice workshops, or any other treatment programs), or if you have earned any certificates, awards, or degrees, or if there are any other accomplishments that you’re proud of, you should make sure to include this information with your petition! This can be anything you accomplished while you were incarcerated or since you’ve been released. (Note: Make a photocopy of any documents you send with your petition, and keep the originals for yourself!)
4. Letter to Request a Hearing. If you are asking for a discretionary expungement, you should ALWAYS ask for a hearing in front of a judge, so that you have the best chance to convince him/her to grant your request. To ask for a hearing, write a very brief letter saying that you would like to request a hearing on your Petition for Dismissal. Make sure to include your name and case number, and address your letter to “The Honorable Judge” (with the judge’s name, if you know it). Turn in this letter with your Petition and other documents.
5. Other Documents: Each court may have local rules about what additional documents you can include with your petition and what documents you should bring to the hearing. Check with the court clerk about what to do with any other documents that you would like the judge to consider.

STEP 4: Make copies of your petition and supporting documents.

After you have filled out your petition and attached your supporting documents, you will need to make several copies of everything. Ask the court clerk how many copies are required by the court in your county. If you can’t talk to the clerk, make at least five copies to be safe.

Often, the original petition goes in the court’s file (the “docket”), one copy goes to the District Attorney, one copy goes to the probation department, and one “courtesy” copy is saved for the judge. But these procedures may vary by county, so it’s important to ask the clerk how many copies you need to make.

STEP 5: “Serve” the Court Papers

What is “service” and how do I do it?<sup>3313</sup> Service is the formal process of giving copies of the documents in a court case to the other people connected with the case. It is a very important step because it lets the other people know 1) that your court case exists, and 2) what actions have been taken in the case so far. A case CANNOT go forward until the court documents are properly served (delivered). The most common methods of service are in person or by mail, although in some situations, service can be by fax or email also.

In general, for an expungement petition, your papers have to be served on the District Attorney and the county probation department. Ask the court clerk whether there is anyone else who needs to get the papers also.

STEP 6: File Your Petition and “Proof of Service” with the Court Clerk.

After your papers have been “served” on all of the other parties, bring the following documents to the court clerk: Your original Petition; your additional supporting documents (if you are requesting a discretionary dismissal); one set of copies for your records; AND the Proof of Service for your Petition. The clerk will stamp your papers with the date and give you a stamped copy. Remember, the court clerk will usually have an office or counter at the courthouse, so that’s where you will need to go to file your papers. The clerk may or may not give you a court date for a hearing before a judge.

- FOR MANDATORY DISMISSALS: In some counties, mandatory expungements are granted without any hearing on your Petition. Other counties require a formal hearing before an expungement is granted.
- FOR DISCRETIONARY DISMISSALS: If you are requesting a discretionary expungement, you should ALWAYS ask for a hearing before a judge, so that you have the best chance to convince him/her to grant your expungement. Tell the court clerk that you would like to request a hearing and show him/her your letter requesting a hearing, which you should include with your other documents.

STEP 7: Go to Your Court Date/Hearing

If you are given a hearing date, you or your lawyer MUST go to court for the hearing!

- FOR MANDATORY DISMISSALS: If you qualify for a mandatory dismissal, the judge will grant your petition, and dismiss your case. You shouldn’t have to do anything if there is a hearing. You should receive something in the mail from the court within a few weeks confirming that your record has been officially changed.
- FOR DISCRETIONARY DISMISSALS: If you are requesting a discretionary dismissal, the hearing is your chance to explain your case to the judge and persuade him or her that dismissing your conviction is “in the interests of justice.” You will need to show the judge why you deserve to have your conviction expunged, and how an expungement will help you succeed and achieve your goals.<sup>3314</sup> You should be prepared to explain the information in your Declaration and in any supporting documents that you included with your Petition. Make sure you bring extra copies of these documents to the hearing! In general, the judge will tell you right there at the hearing whether or not your expungement is granted.

STEP 8: Follow up!

After the judge grants your expungement and signs the Order making it official, the court will send the information to the Department of Justice and other law enforcement agencies. It may take a few months for these agencies to correct your official criminal record (RAP sheet) to show that your conviction was expunged. You should follow up with the Department of Justice in 3-4 months to confirm that the changes were made. Remember, expungement does NOT erase the conviction from your criminal record. Instead, your RAP sheet will state that your case has been “dismissed [in] furtherance of justice (DISM, FURTH OF JUST)” OR “dismissed pursuant to PC 1203.4.”

If the DOJ has NOT corrected your record after several months, you may need to ask them to do so by filing a “Claim of Alleged Inaccuracy or Incompleteness” (form BCIA 8706). The process for challenging and correcting information in your RAP sheet is detailed in APPENDIX F, on PG. 1010.

STEP 9: If your petition is denied, re-file it

If your petition for expungement is denied, you are allowed to file it again (“re-file”). At the end of your hearing, ask the judge to explain the reason why s/he did not grant your request for an expungement, so that you can take steps to fix the problem before you re-file your Petition. If you forget to ask or cannot get this

APPENDIX L

Tips for Writing a Declaration

The declaration is your chance to present evidence to convince the judge that you deserve an expungement. Here are some tips for writing your declaration:<sup>3316</sup>

1. First, explain the basic information about your conviction and sentence. Tell the judge why your conviction meets the requirements for discretionary expungement (see PG. 963 for a list of requirements).
2. Next, explain why granting your expungement would be “in the interest of justice”—meaning why you deserve to have your conviction expunged, and how the expungement will help you succeed in the future.
3. Here are some examples of things you may want to talk about (but only if they are true for your situation!):
  - a. If there were circumstances that made your life especially difficult at time of your conviction;
  - b. How you are turning your life around;
  - c. Your work and/or school history (including any vocational training, GED or other classes, and other programs you’ve participated in);
  - d. Current opportunities for work, school, and other activities to enrich your life, and how expungement will help you take advantage of these opportunities;
  - e. Your family situation and needs, and how an expungement will help you reconnect with, support, or otherwise benefit your family; and
  - f. Any problems you have had completing probation, and what you are doing to address those problems.
4. You should be specific and honest, and include as many details as possible to give the judge a concrete picture of what happened. But you should not include irrelevant or unnecessary information that might distract him/her.
5. Finally, it is recommended that you ask a lawyer to look over your declaration before you turn it in, if possible.

SAMPLE DECLARATION IN SUPPORT OF 1203.4 PETITION

NAME

ADDRESS

SUPERIOR COURT OF CALIFORNIA

COUNTY OF _____

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA,

Case No.:

Plaintiff

DECLARATION IN SUPPORT OF

VS.

PETITION UNDER P.C. 1203.4

NAME

Defendant

-----

I, NAME, declare:

I believe the following facts justify my petition for expungement:

1. I was convicted of violating California Penal Code, (describe offense), committed on DATE. (Briefly describe circumstances of cases)
2. (Describe life circumstances at time of conviction, e.g.: In 1997, after this conviction for possession of methamphetamines, I was literally “scared straight. I realized that I needed to change my life entirely; I decided to get clean. Although it was difficult, I stopped doing drugs on my own.)
3. (Describe life circumstances since incident/conviction, e.g.: I have not had alcohol for over 10 years. I have not done any drugs for five years. Over the past year, I have participated in Alcoholics Anonymous to get support for staying “clean and sober,” and in order to get my drivers license back to help with finding and retaining a job. I am in the process of joining a labor union of cement masons in order to find work. I am living at a shelter until I can find employment.)
4. (Describe/explain any other contacts with law enforcement since the incident/conviction, e.g. since the 1997 convictions, I have had one contact with law enforcement. I was cited and released for driving on a suspended license. Currently, I am working with the DMV and the courts to get my drivers license back and clear this violation from my record.)
5. (Describe why you need an expungement, e.g., my prior conviction is greatly limiting my job opportunities and an expungement would allow me to work and achieve my goal of self- sufficiency and continued sobriety. I respectfully request that the court use its discretion to expunge my misdemeanor conviction and grant me a second chance to work and support myself. I declare under penalty of perjury of the laws of the State of California that the above is true and correct to the best of my knowledge.

Executed on DATE, at CITY, California

Tips for Gathering Letters of Support

WHO SHOULD I ASK?

- Current and previous employer(s)
- Friends and family
- Mentors or sponsors
- Faith-based leaders
- Teachers
- Counselors
- Community leaders and members of community organizations
- Anyone else who can speak to your character and rehabilitation efforts, and will be seen as credible by the court

WHAT SHOULD MY REFERENCES WRITE IN THE LETTER?

- For a Character Letter from an Employer or Previous Employer the person should:
  - Define their relationship with you. Give specific details about who they are, how they know you, and how long they have known you.
  - Give the reader a reason to respect their letter of support (through their career, community involvement, education, etc.). They need to establish their own credibility.
  - Give specific information and details about your employment (wages, length of time employed, responsibilities, manner of performance, etc.).
  - Provide how they will continue or increase their support for you.
  - Thank the reader for consideration of their letter. They may also want to mention that they are available to provide further information, and provide their phone number or other contact information.
- For a Character Letter from anyone else they should:
  - Define their relationship with you. Give specific details about who they are, how they know you, and how long they have known you.
  - Give the reader a reason to respect their letter of support (through their career, community involvement, education, etc.). They need to establish their own credibility.
  - Give specific information and details about you, focusing on how they have experienced your positive personal assets.
  - Provide how they will continue or increase their support of you.
  - Thank the reader for consideration of their letter. They may also want to mention that they are available to provide further information, and provide their phone number or other contact information.

HERE ARE SOME GENERAL GUIDELINES ON ASKING FOR LETTERS OF SUPPORT.

General Reminders:

- Make it as easy for people as possible! People are busy and letters of support can take time to write. Some ways you can make it easier for the people you are asking to help you are:
  - Give them plenty of time. Don't ask them 2 days before you need to turn in the letter. Give them plenty of time to work on it so they don't feel rushed and can put thought into what they're writing.
  - Give them plenty of information. Make sure to remind them of things they can write about, such as your accomplishments or your positive impact on them.
  - Give them friendly reminders. If someone hasn't responded to you or hasn't given you a letter by the date you asked to have it done by, try writing them a quick email or calling them. Be polite and not demanding. Your message should be along the lines of "I know you are busy, but I was curious if you will have any time to work on that letter of support I asked you about?"
- Have a variety of people write letters for you. You should have letters from people who know as many different aspects of you as possible. Don't get all of your letters from people who all know you from the same activity or area of your life.
- Keep it Short. It is best to keep the letters short, about 1-2 pages. This will make them easier to read and also less time consuming to write.

APPENDIX P

Motion for Early Termination of Probation

To request early release from probation, you will need to file a Motion for Early Termination of Probation in the court where you were convicted. Because this process requires drafting a formal court pleading with accompanying documents, it is recommended that you ask a lawyer for help. Ideally, you should contact the lawyer who represented you when you were sentenced, but any private criminal defense lawyer or Public Defender should be able to help you.

The process for filing a Motion for Early Termination of Probation is as follows:

STEP 1: Write your Motion and Supporting Documents.

There is no official court form for this motion, so you or your lawyer will have to write your own motion. Your motion will consist of these 5 parts:<sup>3317</sup>

1. Notice of Motion—This tells the judge what you want to him or her to do. In other words, it tells the judge that you want to be released early from probation.
2. Memorandum of Points and Authorities—This section explains the law (California Penal Code section 1203.3(a)), the facts about your individual situation, and the evidence you have to justify your request for early release.
3. Declaration—This is your sworn statement that all the facts about your individual situation are true. Your Declaration must include ALL of the facts that you use to make your points in your Memorandum and all the information that you want to tell the judge to convince him or her to grant your request.
4. Proposed Order—This is the document the judge signs if s/he grants your early discharge and terminates your probation.
5. Proof of Service—You will need to give copies of your court papers to the other people involved in your case (generally the District Attorney and the probation department—ask the court clerk if there is anyone else). The Proof of Service proves that you gave copies to everyone who was supposed to get them.

STEP 2: Make Copies & File your Motion

1. Once your motion and other papers are all ready, make copies for everyone who will receive it. Check with the court clerk to see how many copies you will need. Generally, you will need one copy for the DA, one for the Probation Department, and one for your own records, but you should ask the clerk if there is anyone else. You may also want to make a courtesy copy for the judge.
2. Bring the original motion and all copies to file with the clerk in the court where you were convicted. The clerk will file your Motion, keep the original copy for the court file, and give you back the copies you need for yourself and the other parties (DA, probation department, etc.).
3. After you file your motion, the clerk will give you a court date for a hearing before a judge. Ask the clerk what room your hearing will be in.

STEP 3: Serve your court papers on the other parties

1. Service is the official process of giving copies of your court documents to other people connected with the case.
2. Ask the court clerk whether you are responsible for serving your court papers, or whether the clerk will do it directly. If the clerk gives you back more than 1 copy when you file your court papers (see Step 3), this most likely means that you are responsible for service!
3. If the clerk says that you are responsible for service, this means that you must make sure that all necessary parties (DA, probation department, and anyone else the clerk tells you) get a copy of your papers motion in the proper manner.
4. If you are responsible for service, make sure to have your papers served on (delivered to) the DA at least 2 days before the court date for your hearing! The law requires you to give the DA at least 2 days notice of your Motion so he or she can prepare for the hearing as well.<sup>3318</sup>

NEED HELP WITH YOUR COURT FORMS?

Remember, it is recommended that you ask a lawyer to help you with your Motion for Early Termination of Probation. But if you cannot get a lawyer or want to do it on your own, you can find helpful information on the California Courts website:

- Cleaning up your record
<http://www.courts.ca.gov/1070.htm>
- Understanding the basics of court forms
<http://www.courts.ca.gov/1078.htm>

COURT FEES:

Be aware that the clerk will charge you fees for filing documents with the court. The amount of the fees will vary by county. If you cannot afford to pay the fees, you can request a fee waiver (meaning you do not have to pay the fees). Ask the clerk how much the fees are and how to request a fee waiver.

STEP 4: Attend The Hearing

1. When you file your Motion for Early Termination of Probation, the clerk will give you a court date for your motion to be heard by a judge. You MUST go to court for the hearing on that date and time!
2. At the hearing, you will explain to the judge all the reasons why releasing you from probation early is “in the interests of justice”—in other words, why you deserve to be released early from probation, and why being off probation will help you to achieve your goals and avoid further hardships. You should talk about all of the factors discussed above, including (1) your successful fulfillment of your probation requirements and satisfaction of all conditions; (2) your good conduct, efforts at rehabilitation, and other accomplishments (work, school, volunteer efforts, family responsibilities, etc.); (3) what you have learned and how you have changed since your offense; and (4) why staying on probation will cause you hardship (for example, preventing you from finding work, attending school, traveling to see your family, etc.).<sup>3319</sup>
3. If the judge grants you early release from probation or changes your probation in any other way, he or she must explain the reasons for doing so. Also, before the judge signs the Order to officially end your probation, s/he must first notify your probation officer.<sup>3320</sup>

STEP 5: Re-filing Your Motion

1. Remember, a decision to terminate your probation early is entirely up to the judge to decide. However, if the judge denies your motion, you can re-file it. Make sure you find out why the judge denied your request so that you can fix the problem before you re-file. If there is something the judge wants you to include with your motion next time, make sure you include it. If there is something the judge wants you to do before he or she is willing to grant your request, make sure you do it!
2. Finally, although there is no limit to how often or how many times you can re-file, do not be a nuisance! The last thing you want to do is put the decision in the hands of an annoyed judge!

APPENDIX R

How to Reduce Your Felony Conviction to a Misdemeanor under 17(b)

As Part of Your Expungement Petition:

If you want to reduce your felony conviction to a misdemeanor AND get your conviction expunged, it is very easy to do both at the same time. When you have your court hearing for your expungement, the judge will consider both requests—first your request to reduce the conviction to a misdemeanor, and then your request to have it expunged. If you meet all the requirements, usually the judge will grant both of your requests together. (For a list of the requirements for reducing a felony to a misdemeanor, see PG. 968. For expungement requirements, see PG. 960.)

There are two main steps to this process:

- File Your Petition for Dismissal:
  - The Petition for Dismissal (form CR-180) that you must file to get your conviction expunged has a box to check if your conviction is also eligible to be reduced. When you are filling out your Petition for Dismissal, mark the box on question # 1 to show that the conviction is eligible for reduction under California Penal Code section 17(b). (For more information on getting and filling out form CR-180, see APPENDIX K, on PG. 1018.)
  - File the petition in the county where you were convicted. The same petition now serves as both your request to have your conviction expunged AND your request to have it reduced to a misdemeanor. (For details on how to file a Petition for Dismissal, see APPENDIX K, on PG. 1018.)
- Go to Your Court Hearing: When you have your court hearing, the judge will usually consider both requests at the same hearing—first your request to reduce the conviction to a misdemeanor, and then your request to have it expunged. At the hearing, the judge will consider the following:
  - The nature of the offense;
  - The facts of the case;
  - Whether you fulfilled the conditions of your probation;
  - Your full criminal record and personal conduct record;
  - Any objections from the district attorney.

Again, usually the judge will make a decision on both of your requests together.

As a Separate Petition:

If the judge does NOT reduce your felony conviction to a misdemeanor, or if your felony is eligible for reduction but not expungement, you may need to file a separate petition to get it reduced. Your petition will need to show the judge that your felony conviction meets all the requirements to be reduced to a misdemeanor (see PG. 968 for a list of these requirements), and explain why you deserve to have your conviction reduced. It will be entirely up to the judge to decide whether your conviction should be reduced. PLEASE NOTE: This is a formal court document, not just a form you fill out, so it is recommended that you ask a lawyer to help you.

Your petition will have of 3 parts:

1. The Petition—This is your formal request to the court explaining that you are asking to have your felony conviction reduced to a misdemeanor.
2. The Memorandum of Points and Authorities—This is where you state that your felony conviction meets all the requirements to be reduced to a misdemeanor under the law (California Penal Code section 17(b)(3)), and explain why you deserve to have your conviction reduced to a misdemeanor (based on the factors that the judge will consider, listed below).
3. The Declaration—Here, you state all the important facts about your situation and swear that they are true. Your Declaration must include ANY and ALL of the facts that you have included in the Petition and Memorandum sections.

Factors the Judge May Consider:

When the judge decides whether or not to reduce your felony to a misdemeanor, here are some of the things s/he will consider. You should emphasize these in your petition:

- The nature and circumstances of your offense (for example, how old you were at the time; your role in the offense; the specific details of the offense);
- Whether you have taken responsibility for your conviction and learned from it;
- Your attitude in court;
- Your efforts at rehabilitation;
- Your ability to successfully complete your parole;

ROADMAP TO REENTRY

- Your individual situation—why you deserve to have your conviction reduced to a misdemeanor (for example, your work, school, and/or family situation; your accomplishments since your conviction; how you have changed since your conviction; and why reducing your felony to a misdemeanor is necessary in order for you to succeed).<sup>3321</sup>

As we said, you should ask a lawyer to help you prepare your petition, however, we have included an example in this appendix for your reference.

MEMORANDUM OF POINTS AND AUTHORITIES IN SUPPORT OF MOTION TO DECLARE THIS OFFENSE TO BE A MISDEMEANOR

AUTHORITY TO DECLARE AN OFFENSE TO BE A MISDEMEANOR

Penal Code section 17(b) provides:

When a crime is punishable, in the discretion of the court, by imprisonment in the state prison or by fine or imprisonment in the county jail, it is a misdemeanor for all purposes under the following circumstances: . . .

(3) When the court grants probation to a defendant without imposition of sentence and . . . on application of the defendant or probation officer thereafter, the court declares the offense to be a misdemeanor.

The offense in this case, violation of __[code section]__, is an alternate felony/misdemeanor, so it fits within the ambit of Penal Code section 17(b).

In People v Superior Court (Alvarez) (1997) 14 C4th 968, 978, 60 CR2d 93, the California Supreme Court addressed the criteria to be applied in exercising discretion to grant a misdemeanor reduction under Penal Code section 17(b). Among relevant factors are the nature and circumstances of the offense, the defendant's appreciation of and attitude toward the offense, or his or her character traits as evidenced by trial behavior and demeanor. When it is appropriate, the court should consider general sentencing objectives, such as those set forth in Cal Rules of Ct 4.410.

The supreme court indicated that the trial court must focus on the individual defendant as well as the public interest:

(1) "[A] determination made outside the perimeters drawn by individualized consideration of the offense, the offender, and the public interest 'exceeds the bounds of reason.'" 14 C4th at 978.

(2) The court should weigh "the various sentencing considerations commensurate with the individual circumstances." 14 C4th at 979.

(3) "The record should reflect a thoughtful and conscientious assessment of all relevant factors including the defendant's criminal history." 14 C4th at 979.

(4) The sentencing court must focus "on considerations that are pertinent to the specific defendant being sentenced." 14 C4th at 980.

__ [Tell what facts concerning defendant's case fit within the above Standards, and argue in favor of reducing the offense to a misdemeanor.] __

THE DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE MUST BE NOTIFIED IF THIS MOTION IS GRANTED

Penal Code section 13151 states that, when the Court orders any action subsequent to the initial disposition of a case, the Court shall report this to the California Department of Justice. The report is necessary to ensure that defendant obtains full benefit if the Court grants this motion.

CONCLUSION

For the above reasons, defendant asks this Court to reduce __ [describe offense] __ from a felony to a misdemeanor.

reduction under Pen C §17(b)(3).]*

I,     [name]    , declare:

1. I am the defendant in this action.
  2. On     [date]    , I was convicted     [by a plea of guilty or no contest/by a jury or court verdict after trial]     of violation of     [specify code section and offense]    .
  3. On     [date]     the Court suspended imposition of sentence and granted probation.
  4. Probation expired on     [date]    . I have successfully completed all of the terms of probation. I am not now serving a sentence for, and am not on probation for, and am not charged with the commission of any other offense.
- [5. If there are any particularly compelling reasons why this relief should be granted, they can be listed here. SUPERIOR COURT OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA
COUNTY OF _____

PEOPLE OF THE STATE OF CALIFORNIA, Plaintiff, vs. _____ Defendant.	Dept. __[number]__ No. __[case number]__	ORDER DECLARING OFFENSE TO BE A MISDEMEANOR
--	---	--

This Court __[held a hearing on this matter on __[date]__]/has determined that no hearing on this motion is required___. The Court has also reviewed (1) defendant's motion to declare the offense in this case to be a misdemeanor, (2) the records on file in this case, and given the District Attorney and the probation department the opportunity to provide information to the Court.

The Court finds that the defendant is eligible for the relief sought, and that this relief is in the interest of justice.

The Court therefore declares __[describe offense, e.g., violation of Pen C §487(1)(a)]__ in this case to be a misdemeanor, under Penal Code section 17(b)(3).

The Court directs the clerk to notify the California Department of Justice of this action, under Penal Code section 13151.

APPENDIX T

Resentencing & Reclassification Under Prop. 47

RESENTENCING UNDER PROP. 47:

If you are currently serving your sentence (“under sentence”) for an offense that qualifies under Prop. 47, and you are NOT excluded by one of the disqualifying convictions, you may be eligible for RESENTENCING.<sup>3322</sup>

STEP 1: Obtain and fill out a Prop. 47 petition

You will need to get the court forms from the clerk at the court where you were convicted. These forms are straightforward and simple to fill out—you just need to fill in information about your conviction (date of conviction, penal code section, and sentence), and check the box indicating that you are currently “under sentence” and requesting to be resentenced. (Sample petitions from SF, LA, and Sacramento Counties are included in APPENDIX GG, on PG. 1074.)

STEP 2: File your Petition and Serve your Court Papers

You will need to file your petition with the court clerk of the court where you were convicted, and then serve (deliver) copies of your court papers on the District Attorney and any other people who are part of the case. (Ask the court clerk who you need to serve with your court papers).

STEP 3: The Judge Reviews Your Petition to See if You are Eligible

After you file your petition, a judge will review it to make sure you are eligible (qualify) for resentencing.<sup>3323</sup> Remember, in order to qualify for resentencing, you must meet all of the following requirements:

- Your conviction must be for one of the qualifying convictions under Prop. 47 (see PG. 971); AND
- You must NOT have any of the disqualifying convictions (see PG. 971);<sup>3324</sup> AND
- You are currently “under sentence” for the qualifying conviction (incarcerated OR on parole or PRCS).

STEP 4: Qualification Hearing—if Requested

1. When you petition for resentencing under Prop. 47, you do not automatically get a hearing in front of a judge, but you may request one. If your conviction was for shoplifting, theft, receiving stolen property, or forgery/bad checks, you may want to request a hearing so you can prove to the judge that the value of property involved in your crime was under $950—and therefore qualifies under Prop. 47.
2. The DA can also request a hearing to contest (challenge) your petition.
3. If there is a hearing on your petition, you should attend if you can. Whether or not you are able to attend, make sure that the judge has as much evidence as you can find to support your request for resentencing, including evidence of rehabilitation, proof of your accomplishments since your conviction, and letters of support. (See APPENDIX N, on PG. 1024 for tips on how to write a letter of support. See APPENDIX O, on PG. 1025 for a sample Letter of Support.)
4. If you meet all of the requirements for resentencing, you are entitled to be resentenced UNLESS the judge decides that you pose an “unreasonable risk to public safety.” This means that the judge specifically thinks that if you are released, you will commit one of the violent “super strike” felonies listed in California Penal Code section 667(e)(2)(c)(iv).<sup>3325</sup> In making this decision, the judge will consider:
  - a. your complete conviction history including:<sup>3326</sup>
    - i. the type of crime(s) you committed in the past;
    - ii. the amount of injury to your victim(s);
    - iii. the length of time you spent in prison in the past; AND
    - iv. how long ago you committed the crime(s).
  - b. your disciplinary record and record of rehabilitation while you were in prison;
  - c. anything else the judge thinks is relevant.
  - d. You should provide as much evidence as possible that you do not pose any risk to society.

NOTE: There is no universal, statewide petition for resentencing and reclassification under Prop. 47. Each local court has created its own version of the petition, so you will have to get the local form from the clerk of the court where you were convicted. Most courts have created a single form that covers both resentencing and reclassification.

<sup>3325</sup> CAL. PENAL CODE § 1170.18(c).

STEP 5: Resentencing

If your conviction is eligible, your criminal history does not disqualify you, and the judge does not think you pose an unreasonable risk to public safety, you are entitled to be resentenced to a misdemeanor sentence. This means that your felony sentence will be reduced to a misdemeanor sentence instead! You will get credit for the time you've already served, so if you have already served the equivalent of a misdemeanor sentence, you can be released from custody right away.<sup>3327</sup>

- If you were still in prison at the time of resentencing, the judge will likely put you on parole for one year. However, depending on the facts of your situation, you may be able to convince the judge not to give you parole at all.<sup>3328</sup>
- If you were on parole or PRCS at the time of resentencing, you could be discharged right away (if you have already completed the equivalent of a misdemeanor sentence), or the judge may reduce your supervision to probation.

RECLASSIFICATION UNDER PROP. 47:

If you already completed your sentence (including any parole or probation term) for an offense that qualifies under Prop. 47, and you are NOT excluded by one of the disqualifying convictions, you may be eligible to have your felony RECLASSIFIED as a misdemeanor. Unfortunately, you cannot get back the time that you served for the felony, but you can change your criminal record to show a misdemeanor conviction instead of a felony conviction.

STEP 1: Obtain and fill out your Petition for Reclassification

Just as for resentencing, you will need to fill out and file a petition for reclassification. Most courts use a single form for resentencing and reclassification, which you should get from the clerk at the court where you were convicted. When you fill out the form, you will need to fill in basic information about your conviction (such as the date of conviction, penal code section, and your sentence), and then check the box indicating that you are requesting reclassification.

STEP 2: File your petition and Serve your court papers

File your petition with the clerk of the court where you were convicted, and then serve (deliver) copies of your court papers on the District Attorney and any other people who are part of the case. Ask the court clerk who else you need to serve with your court papers.

STEP 3: Eligibility Determination

Once your petition is filed, a judge will review it to make sure you qualify for reclassification.<sup>3329</sup> The judge will check to see whether your conviction offense qualifies under Prop. 47 (see PG. 971) and whether you have any prior convictions that disqualify you (see PG. 971).<sup>3330</sup> Generally, you will not need to request a hearing for reclassification, however, it is possible that you will need one if you have to prove the value of the property involved in your offense to make sure it qualifies.

If you meet the requirements, the judge MUST reclassify your conviction as a misdemeanor.

REQUEST TO REDUCE JUVENILE MARIJUANA OFFENSE (Prop. 64—Health and Safety Code, § 11361.8(m))	CASE NUMBER:  Date: Time: Department:

INSTRUCTIONS

- Use this form if you went to court for a marijuana-related offense when you were under the age of 18 and you want your record changed. You need to use a different form if you were 18 or older at the time of the offense.
- You need to use a separate form for each juvenile marijuana offense on your record.
- If this form asks for information that you do not have, you can contact your attorney. If you don't have an attorney, the public defender's office or the court in the county where you went to court can probably help you get these records.
- How to fill out the form without an attorney:
  - A. Put your name and contact information in the box at the top of the form and in item 1 below.
  - B. Put the address of the court from your court papers here. This form must be filed in the county where you went to court for this offense.
  - C. Fill out number 2 about the marijuana offense.
  - D. If you are on probation now for the marijuana offense, also check number 3 to ask the judge to make new dispositional orders (a new sentence) based on the new law. The new orders cannot be more severe than your original sentence.
  - E. If you have completed probation for the marijuana offense, check number 4 to ask the judge to redesignate your offense to an infraction. So, if it was a misdemeanor or a felony, it will now be classified like a traffic ticket.
  - F. You can check number 5 if you are willing to have any available judge hear your request. If you check that box the presiding judge may have a different judge hear your request.
  - G. A hearing is not required unless you request it. You can check one of the boxes in number 6 if you want the court to set a hearing.
  - H. You can check number 7 if you do not want to come to court if there is a hearing.

For more information about Proposition 64 and filling out this form, go to www.courts.ca.gov/prop64.htm.

1. MY INFORMATION

My name is:

I was born on (date):

2. OFFENSE INFORMATION

On (date): I was found to come within the jurisdiction of the court under Welfare and Institutions Code section 602 for a violation of Health and Safety Code section (check one)

- 11357—Possession of Marijuana
- 11358—Cultivation of Marijuana
- 11359—Possession of Marijuana for Sale
- 11360—Transportation, Distribution, or Importation of Marijuana

This offense has been reclassified as an infraction when committed by a person under the age of 18 under Proposition 64. At the time of the offense, I was under the age of 18.

3. REQUEST FOR A NEW DISPOSITIONAL ORDER (RESENTENCING)

I am currently subject to a dispositional order (on probation) for the marijuana offense in number 2. I request that the order be recalled and relief be granted in accordance with Health and Safety Code section 11361.8(b) so that I will be resentenced.

4. REQUEST FOR REDESIGNATION

I am no longer a ward of the court (probation completed) for the marijuana-related offense in number 2. I request the court's dispositional order be recalled and relief be granted in accordance with Health and Safety Code section 11361.8(f) so that the offense will be redesignated as an infraction.

5. WAIVER OF HEARING BY ORIGINAL SENTENCING JUDGE

I know that I have the right to have this matter heard by the judge who originally sentenced me. I am willing to have any available judge hear the case.

6. REQUEST FOR HEARING

I request a hearing if the prosecuting agency opposes my application. I understand that by checking this box, the court will set a hearing only if it is opposed by the Prosecution/Prosecution Agency.

I request that the court set a hearing even if my application is not opposed by the Prosecution/Prosecution Agency.

7. WAIVER OF APPEARANCE

I understand that I have a right to personally attend any hearing held in this matter and argue on my behalf. I give up that right. The case may be heard without my appearance.

SIGNATURE OF PETITIONER

File this form with the court. The court will send a copy to the probation department and to the prosecuting agency to respond.

TO BE FILLED OUT BY THE PROSECUTING AGENCY

8. PROSECUTING AGENCY RESPONSE

The prosecuting agency has no objection to this petition. Petitioner is entitled to the requested relief without a hearing.

The prosecuting agency does not object to the petitioner's eligibility for relief, but requests a hearing on the issue of a new dispositional order.

The prosecuting agency requests a hearing and objects to the granting of the petition because:

The prosecuting agency does not agree that the petition should be granted because the offense for which petitioner was found to be within the jurisdiction of the court under Welfare and Institutions Code section 602 is not eligible for the requested relief under Health and Safety Code section 11361.8.

Petitioner is eligible for relief, but relief should be denied because petitioner presents an unreasonable risk of danger to public safety if he/she is resentenced.

APPENDIX W

Certificates Of Rehabilitation—Period Of Rehabilitation

The period of rehabilitation is five years residence in California PLUS a period of time (for most, +2 years, but there are exceptions listed below). To figure out your period of rehabilitation, you add the base term of 5 years plus an additional amount of time based on your conviction offense:<sup>3331</sup>

- Base 5 years + 2 years = 7 years if your conviction was for:
  - California Penal Code sections 311.2(b), (c), or (d), 311.3, 311.10, or 314;
  - Any offense not listed here that does NOT carry a life sentence.
- Base 5 years + 4 years = 9 years if your conviction was for:
  - California Penal Code sections 187, 209, 219, 4500, or 18755;
  - Military & Veterans Code section 1672(a); or
  - Any other offense that carries a life sentence;
- Base 5 + 5 years = 10 years if your conviction was for:
  - Any offense that requires you to register as a Sex Offender under California Penal Code section 290 (including any conviction for an attempted offense);
  - Exception: If your conviction was for sections 311.2(b), (c), or (d), 311.3, 311.10, 314, you only need to wait 7 years (see above).

In addition to the above requirements, you must have completed any term of probation or parole that was part of your sentence or was a condition of your release. HOWEVER, the time you spend on probation or parole counts toward your total “period of rehabilitation.”

NOTE: If you served consecutive prison terms, the judge may think that you should wait for a longer period of rehabilitation. If this happens, the judge will deny your COR the first time you apply, and will tell you how much additional time you must wait before you can re-apply.<sup>3332</sup>

NOTE: It is possible to apply for a Certificate of Rehabilitation before the end of your period of rehabilitation. You must convince the judge that granting your Certificate of Rehabilitation early serves the “interests of justice.”<sup>3333</sup> In other words, you’d better have a really good reason why you should get a COR early. The judge may consider your good conduct, rehabilitation efforts, and how important getting a COR is to your success in the future. (This option is not available to you if you are required to register as a sex offender under California Penal Code section 290.)

<sup>3332</sup> CAL. PENAL CODE § 4852.03(a)(4). See also People v. Blocker, 190 Cal. App. 4th 438 (2010) (Refusal to admit guilt of the underlying crime can be a reason for a court to deny a certificate of rehabilitation).

APPENDIX X

Certificate Of Rehabilitation—Petition For Certificate Of Rehabilitation

If you meet all of the eligibility requirements for a Certificate of Rehabilitation (see PG. 981) AND you have completed the period of rehabilitation (see APPENDIX W, on PG. 1056) (or you want to request a COR early), you will need to file papers (called a Petition for Certificate of Rehabilitation) in the criminal court in the county where you currently live. Just like in your criminal case, you have the right to a lawyer to help you with the process of requesting a COR.

NOTE: You must request a Certificate of Rehabilitation from the court in the county where you currently live.

STEP 1: Get and Fill out the Court forms

- You will need to get and fill out 2 forms for your petition (together, they are called an Application for Certificate of Rehabilitation & Pardon):
  - Notice of Filing for Certificate of Rehabilitation; and
  - Petition for Certificate of Rehabilitation.
  - You will also need to get a Proof of Service form—but don't fill it out yet.
- You can get these forms (and instructions for how to fill them out) from:
  - The court clerk;
  - The county Probation Department, or
  - The Public Defender's Office.
  - You may also be able to download them from the website of your county court (or the court any other county, since the forms are the same statewide).

WHAT SHOULD I SAY IN MY PETITION?

The judge wants to know that you are truly rehabilitated. You will need to show that since your release from prison or jail:

1. You have lived “an honest and upright life,”
2. You have behaved with “sobriety and industry,”
3. You have shown “good moral character,” AND
4. You have obeyed all laws.<sup>3334</sup>

The judge will consider all of these factors when deciding whether or not to grant your COR. Your petition should:

- Emphasize all of the positive things that you've done since your conviction (both while you were incarcerated and since your release), such as:
  - your efforts at rehabilitation (treatment or behavioral programs, period of sobriety, etc.)
  - what you've learned and how you've changed since your conviction;
  - successful completion of your sentencing and supervision (parole or probation) requirements; AND
  - any other accomplishments since your conviction, such as employment, school achievements (including any classes, GED, or degree that you've completed), volunteer work, community involvement (church, youth groups, mentoring), and family life.
- If you are requesting a COR to help improve your employment opportunities or for getting a professional or occupational license, make sure you say this in your petition!
- If you have had any new convictions or violations while on supervision, make sure you explain them—why the conviction happened, what you are doing differently now, and why you will not have the same problems again in the future.
- If you are currently required to register as a sex offender for your conviction, you must also convince the judge that you do not pose any threat of committing any sex offenses against children.<sup>3335</sup>
- You should include as many letters of support and proof of your accomplishments as possible. (See APPENDIX N, on PG. 1024 for tips on getting letters of support).

STEP 2: File Your Petition with the Court clerk

- Once you have filled out your court forms, make at least 5 copies and take everything to the court clerk to be filed. Remember, you will need to file your forms with the criminal court in the county where you currently live.

- When you file your forms, the clerk will stamp them, give you back the copies, and give you a court date for your hearing. Make sure the date is at least 30 days away.

STEP 3: Serve your Papers on the other parties

- You will need to serve your court papers on all of the following people:
  - The District Attorney in the county where you live;
  - The District Attorney(s) in every county(s) where you were convicted (if you have convictions in counties other than the one you live in now);
  - The Governor's Office.
- You can serve your papers in person or by mail.
- You must make sure that all of your papers are served on everyone at least 30 days before your hearing (or 35 days if you are sending them by mail). If you do not serve your papers in time, your petition will be dismissed.<sup>3336</sup>
- After you have served all your court papers, fill out the Proof of Service and file it with the court clerk in the county where you live (the same place you filed your Notice and Petition papers in Step 2).

STEP 4: Investigation by DA

- After you file your petition, the judge may ask the DA to do an investigation of your life, conduct, and rehabilitation since your release.
- As part of the investigation, the DA may contact you directly; may talk to your family, employer, and neighbors; and may also get any records or reports related to your conviction, including trial documents, prison records, and probation/parole reports.
- Afterward, the DA will prepare a report for the judge, which will help the judge decide whether to grant your COR.

STEP 5: The Court Hearing

- Make sure you attend your court hearing on the date and time the clerk gave you! Remember, the hearing is your chance to make a good impression on the judge!
- During the hearing, the judge will consider your criminal history, your behavior in custody, and your conduct since your release. The judge will look at any reports or records from the District Attorney's investigation, and may also ask you or other people to answer questions.<sup>3337</sup> You should be prepared to answer any questions from the judge about your conviction, your life and conduct since then, and any information in your petition. Just like in a criminal case, make sure to stay calm and respectful no matter what is said about you or your past.
- In order to grant your COR, the court must find that you are rehabilitated and ready to be a responsible member of society—in other words, that you are ready to have all the civil and political rights of citizenship. If you are required to register as a sex offender due to your conviction, the judge must also find that you do not pose any threat of committing any sex offenses against children.<sup>3338</sup>

STEP 6: Success!

If the judge grants your request for a Certificate of Rehabilitation, s/he will give you your certificate, and will also send a copy to the Governor's Office. The COR serves as an official recommendation from the judge that the Governor grant you a full pardon. The COR also automatically serves as your application to the Governor for a pardon, so you will not have to do anything more to apply for one.<sup>3339</sup> (For information about Governor's pardons, see PG. 984, and APPENDIX Y, on PG. 1059.)

STEP 7: If Denied, The Appeal

- If the judge decides not to grant your Certificate of Rehabilitation, you can re-apply for a COR any time in the future.<sup>3340</sup> However, pay attention to the judge's reasons for denying your request so that you can fix or improve them before you re-file. This will increase your chances of being granted a COR the next time.
- If the judge set a new period of rehabilitation for you (because you served consecutive prison terms, or you have a new conviction), you will need to wait out this additional period before you can re-apply for a COR.

<sup>3337</sup> CAL. PENAL CODE § 4852.10; see also People v. Zeigler, 149 Cal. Rptr.3d (2012).

(court could consider facts of offense for which petitioner had received Proposition 36 drug treatment).

Governor's Pardon—Application For Traditional Pardon Directly From Governor (Without Certificate Of Rehabilitation)

STEP 1: The Application

You will need to fill out the “Application for gubernatorial Pardon” with information about the conviction you want pardoned, any other convictions on your record, and why you deserve a pardon.

You can get the application online at: http://gov.ca.gov/s\_pardonsandcommutations.php, or request an application by mail by writing to the Governor's office at the address below:

Governor's Office
State Capitol
ATTN: Legal Affairs
Sacramento, CA 95814

(There is a sample application included in APPENDIX HH, on PG. 1080, but you should get the most up-to-date version from the Governor's Office or online, in case there are recent changes).

To complete the application, you will need to the following information:

- Your personal information (name, date of birth, address, etc.);
- Information about all of your prior convictions, including those in other states/countries;
- The circumstances of the crime you are requesting a pardon for;
- Why you are requesting the pardon;
- Why you think you should be granted a pardon (such as your excellent conduct, accomplishments, responsibilities, and rehabilitation since your conviction);
- The names of anyone you paid or gave a gift to for helping you with the application.

IMPORTANT: If you are directly applying for a “Traditional Pardon,” also called a “Direct Pardon,” from the Governor, you may want to emphasize and explain the following:

- Your excellent conduct since your conviction;
- You have led an honest and upstanding life since your conviction;
- You have contributed to your community and been a responsible member of society;
- Your responsibilities and accomplishments, including work, school, volunteering, family situation, community involvement, and/or religion;
- You have avoided any further criminal activity.

STEP 2: Notice to the District Attorney

- After you fill out your application, you must notify the District Attorney in the county where your conviction is from that you intend to request a pardon. If you are requesting a pardon for several convictions, you must notify the DAs in every county where you have a conviction.<sup>3341</sup>
- You must use a special form to notify the DAs. The form is included in the Application for gubernatorial Pardon, along with instructions on how to complete the form and deliver it to the DA(s).
- You must deliver your notice for to the DA(s) at least 10 days before you submit your application to the Governor.<sup>3342</sup>
- Once the DA has received your notice, he/she will complete the bottom section of the form to confirm that he/she received the notice, and then return it directly to the Governor's Office.

STEP 3: Submitting your Application to the Governor's Office

At least 10 days after you have sent your notice to the DA(s) in every county where you have convictions to be pardoned, you will mail your completed Application for gubernatorial Pardon to the Governor's Office:<sup>3343</sup>

Governor's Office
State Capitol
ATTN: Legal Affairs
Sacramento, CA 95814

<sup>3341</sup> Cal. Penal Code § 4802.

<sup>3343</sup> See How to Apply for a Pardon, STATE OF CAL. OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR (Sept. 5, 2013), http://gov.ca.gov/docs/How\_To\_Apply\_for\_a\_Pardon.pdf.

STEP 4: The Review

After you have submitted your application, the Governor will begin a review of your case. S/he may request that the judge of the court in which you were convicted, or the DA who prosecuted you, provide a summary of the facts of your case as well as a recommendation on whether or not your pardon should be granted.<sup>3344</sup> The Governor will also typically forward your application to the Board of Parole Hearings for its opinion.<sup>3345</sup> The BPH may then investigate your application by reviewing transcripts and documents from your trial (or any other proceedings in our case), examining witnesses, taking testimony, or whatever else it finds necessary to evaluate your application. The BPH will then make a recommendation to the Governor.<sup>3346</sup> Remember, if you were convicted of more than one felony, the Governor MUST forward your application to the BPH for review.<sup>3347</sup>

IMPORTANT: If you were convicted of more than one felony, the Governor CANNOT grant your pardon without a recommendation from the California Supreme Court.<sup>3348</sup> However, the Governor does not have to send your application to the Supreme Court to get its recommendation in the first place!

How to Seal Your Adult Arrest Record (California State Records)

To get your arrest record sealed, you will need to go through the law enforcement agency and/or court in the county where you were arrested, depending on your situation.

STEP 1: Get and Fill Out the Forms

You will first need to get and fill a “Petition and Order to Seal and Destroy Adult Arrest Records.” Some counties have their own local forms to use for this, but you can always use the standard Department of Justice form.<sup>3349</sup>

To find your county’s local forms (if your county has them), you can check with the county court or on the court’s website, or contact the law enforcement agency that arrested you.

You can find the standard Department of Justice form on the DOJ website at: http://ag.ca.gov/idtheft/forms/bcii\_8270.pdf.

To complete the petition, you will need the following information:

- The exact date you were arrested;
- The name of the law enforcement agency that arrested you (for example, the city police department, county sheriff, California Highway Patrol, or other law enforcement agency);
- The case number or booking number that the arresting law enforcement agency assigned to your case;
- What offense or charges you were arrested for; AND
- The outcome (disposition) of those charges (i.e. what happened in your case).

You will also need to get copies of any documents or other evidence in support of your petition. This may include declarations, affidavits, police reports, or anything else that can be used to identify or describe the arrest. If you are petitioning to seal your record on the basis of factual innocence, you will need to find evidence supporting this claim. These documents will become part of your petition. Make extra copies of your Petition and all supporting documents (at least 4 copies). A sample petition is available in APPENDIX II, on PG. 1084.

STEP 2: File the Petition and Order (plus Supporting Documents)

After you have completed the forms, you will need to file your petition and any supporting documents, with the correct agency. Where you file your petition depends on your situation:

- OPTION 1: If NO charges (complaint) were ever filed against you—in other words, if you never had to appear in court after your arrest—you will give your petition directly to the law enforcement agency that arrested you.
  - You will also need to serve a copy of the petition on the District Attorney of the county in which you were arrested.
- OPTION 2: If charges (a complaint) were filed against you, and you appeared in court, you must file your petition with the clerk of the court where you appeared for the case. (If possible, it is recommended that you ask a lawyer to help you with your case.
  - When you file your petition with the court clerk, the clerk will set a hearing date for your petition.
  - You will also need to serve copies of your petition on the law enforcement agency that arrested you AND the District Attorney of the county in which you were arrested. You must serve your petition on the DA at least 10 days before your hearing date.<sup>3350</sup>

STEP 3: Review/Court Hearing

- OPTION 1: If you gave your petition directly to the law enforcement agency that arrested you, the law enforcement agency has 60 days to review and respond to your petition. If neither the law enforcement agency nor the District Attorney responds to your petition within the 60 days, the petition is considered denied.<sup>3351</sup>

<sup>3351</sup> CAL. PENAL CODE § 851.8. (“If...the law enforcement agency and prosecuting lawyer do not respond to the petition by accepting or denying the petition within 60 days of the running of the relevant statute of limitations or within 60 days after the receipt of the petition in cases where the statute of limitations has previously lapsed, then the petition shall be deemed to be denied.”).

- If your petition is denied—either because the law enforcement agency tells you they are denying your petition, OR because they failed to respond—you can then file your petition with the court and request that the court order your record sealed (follow steps for OPTION 2 above).
- NOTE: You MUST file your original petition with the court. This means that you will have to get your original petition back from the law enforcement agency that you gave it to, and then file it with the court.<sup>3352</sup>
- OPTION 2: If you filed your petition with the court (either first, or after it was denied by the law enforcement agency), there will be a hearing in front of a judge who will decide whether or not to grant your petition.<sup>3353</sup> At the hearing, you (or your lawyer) will present evidence of your factual innocence, and try to convince the court to grant your petition to have your arrest record sealed. The District Attorney may present evidence and argument against you.<sup>3354</sup>

STEP 4: The Decision

If the court finds that you are factually innocent, the judge will grant your petition and order that your arrest record and all related information be sealed for three years and then destroyed. If the judge does not find you factually innocent (denies your petition), you can appeal the decision.

How to Seal Juvenile Records

STEP 1: Get a copy of your Juvenile Records

It is very important that you get a copy of your juvenile record and know exactly what is in it, because you will need this information to fill out your court forms properly. You can get a copy of your juvenile from the Clerk's Office of the Juvenile Court where your case was adjudicated.<sup>3355</sup> Make sure you bring a photo ID with you, or you will not be able to get your record.

STEP 2: Get and Fill out a Petition to Seal Juvenile Records

When you go to the clerk's office to get a copy of your juvenile record, you should also ask the clerk for a copy of the proper form, called a Petition to Seal Juvenile Records, and any instructions that go with it. Follow the instructions carefully, especially when you are asked to list the arrests or charges that you want sealed. ONLY THE ONES YOU LIST WILL BE SEALED! This is why it is important to have a copy of your juvenile record with you so you do not miss anything.<sup>3356</sup>

STEP 3: File your Petition

- Take your completed petition back to the Clerk's Office of the juvenile court you were adjudicated in and file it with the clerk.
- Ask the clerk if the petition needs to be served on any other parties (such as the District Attorney or the Probation Department). If it does, be sure to ask the clerk if the clerk's office will serve it, or if you have to serve the papers yourself.
- After you have filed your petition, you will get a court date for a hearing. The clerk may set the hearing date when you file your petition, or you may receive a Notice of Hearing in the mail (it can take several weeks to get your Notice of Hearing by mail).

STEP 4: The Hearing

- At the hearing, the judge will consider your petition AND get a recommendation from the probation department about whether your record should be sealed.
- You are not required to attend the hearing, but it is a good idea to go so that you can answer any questions that the judge might have. You are also allowed to bring witnesses to testify on your behalf (such as a pastor, teacher, employer, counselor, or other people who know you and can speak positively about you).
- After the hearing, the judge will rule on (decide) whether or not to seal your records. If the judge grants your petition and seals your records, s/he will also order all other agencies that have juvenile records on you (such as the police, probation department, DOJ, and DA) to seal their records also.

STEP 5: Appeal

If the judge denies your petition, ask the judge if and when you will be able to re-file your petition. You should also ask the judge for the reasons why s/he denied your petition, so that you can fix or address any problems before you re-file.

IMPORTANT: As of January 1, 2015, California Welfare & Institutions Code Section 786 changed so that juveniles who successfully complete probation, and otherwise qualify to have their record sealed, will have their juvenile record automatically sealed by the judge, without having to file a petition in court or do anything else.<sup>3357</sup> However, this DOES NOT apply to juveniles who completed their probation BEFORE January 1, 2015. If you completed your juvenile probation BEFORE January 1, 2015, you will still need to file a petition in court to have your juvenile record sealed.

How to Get DNA Expungement

➤ CALIFORNIA

STEP 1: Request expungement directly from the California DOJ

(Note: this is the fastest and easiest way to get your DNA expunged)

If you meet all of the requirements for California DNA expungement, you should:

- Get and fill out the California DOJ's Streamlined DNA Expungement Application form;
- Include the required documents to prove that you qualify for DNA expungement (the Application form will tell you which documents to include, since it will be different depending on your specific situation); AND
- Mail your completed Application form and all documents to the following address:

California Department of Justice
CAL-DNA Data Bank Program
Attn: Expungement Requests
1001 W. Cutting Blvd., Suite 110
Richmond, CA 94804

If you meet all of the requirements and have included all required documents, your DNA MUST be expunged from the California database.<sup>3358</sup> The process usually takes about 2-4 weeks for your DNA to be removed.<sup>3359</sup>

If your request for DNA expungement is denied, you can still file a new request for DNA expungement in court. (However, if your first request is denied, you may want to talk to a lawyer before filing a new request in court, since this may mean that you have another conviction on your record that disqualifies you from DNA expungement.)

STEP 2: Requesting DNA expungement in court

(Note: You can do this if your direct request to the DOJ was denied)

To request DNA expungement in court, you will need to:

- Get and complete the Petition for Expungement of DNA Samples & Profiles (form CR-185/JV-796);
  - The form is available online at <http://www.courts.ca.gov/documents/cr185.pdf>, or ask the court clerk for a copy (or where to get a copy) of the form.
- File your form with the court clerk in the county where you were arrested or where your case was held;
- Serve copies of your Petition on the DOJ's DNA Lab (CAL-DNA Program) and District Attorney in the county where you were arrested or where your case was held; AND
- Have a hearing before a judge. You will need to show that you meet all of the legal requirements for DNA expungement (described above), and it will be up to the judge to decide whether to grant your DNA expungement.<sup>3360</sup>

For more information about DNA expungement in California in general, see Getting Expunged or Removed from the CAL-DNA Data Bank on the California DOJ's website at: <https://oag.ca.gov/bfs/prop69/faqs>.

➤ FEDERAL

If you meet all of the requirements to expunge your DNA from a federal arrest or conviction (PG. 1000), you must:

- Get a certified copy of the final court order from your case, with the following information:

The DOJ's Streamlined DNA Expungement Application form is available online at https://oag.ca.gov/sites/all/files/agweb/pdfs/bfs/expungement\_app.pdf

WHAT IS A "CERTIFIED COURT ORDER"?

You will need to get the court order from the federal court where your case was heard. The court order must be certified by the court clerk (meaning it is a true and accurate copy of the original court order), and must include enough personal information to identify you as the defendant in the case (including your full name, social security number, and/or date of birth). Both the judge and the clerk must sign and date the certified copy of the court order.

<sup>3359</sup> BFS DNA Frequently Asked Questions, STATE OF CALIFORNIA DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE OFFICE OF THE ATTORNEY GENERAL, <https://oag.ca.gov/bfs/prop69/faqs>.

- If you were arrested—The court order must show that NO charges were filed against you, or the charges were dismissed, or you were acquitted of the charges.
- If you were convicted—The court order must show that your conviction was overturned.
- Send a written letter to the FBI to ask that your DNA be expunged from the National DNA Index System.
  - Include all of your personal information (including your full name, social security number, and/or date of birth).
  - Include as much information as possible about your arrest or conviction (date of arrest or conviction; case or docket number; date of dismissal, acquittal, or overturning of conviction).
- Most importantly: Include the certified court order from Step 1!
- Mail your letter and the certified court order to:
  - Federal Bureau of Investigation
  - Laboratory Division
  - 2501 Investigation Parkway
  - Quantico, VA 22135
  - Attention: Federal Convicted Offender Program Manager
- The FBI is required to expunge your DNA from the national database if you meet all the requirements and include the proper court order.<sup>3361</sup>

For more information on expungement of DNA from the national database, visit the FBI's website on CODIS—Expungement Policy, available at http://www.fbi.gov/about-us/lab/biometric-analysis/codis/codis\_expungement.

- 6. If the order is granted under the provisions of either Penal Code section 1203.4, 1203.4a, or 1203.41, the petitioner is released from all penalties and disabilities resulting from the offense except as provided in Penal Code sections 29800 and 29900 (formerly sections 12021 and 12021.1) and Vehicle Code section 13555. In any subsequent prosecution of the petitioner for any other offense, the prior conviction may be pleaded and proved and shall have the same effect as if probation had not been granted or the accusation or information dismissed. The dismissal does not permit a person to own, possess, or have in his or her control a firearm if prevented by Penal Code sections 29800 or 29900 (formerly sections 12021 and 12021.1). Dismissal of a conviction does not permit a person prohibited from holding public office as a result of that conviction to hold public office.

- 7. In addition, as required by Penal Code section 299(f), relief under Penal Code sections 17(b), 1203.4, 1203.4a, or 1203.41 does not release petitioner from the separate administrative duty to provide specimens, samples, or print impressions under the DNA and Forensic Identification Database and Data Bank Act (Pen. Code, § 295 et seq.) if petitioner was found guilty by a trier of fact, not guilty by reason of insanity, or pled no contest to a qualifying offense as defined in Penal Code section 296(a).

PETITION TO SEAL AND DESTROY ADULT ARREST RECORDS – 851.8 PC

PETITIONER:

Penal Code section 851.8 PC provides that a person who has been arrested or detained and is determined to be factually innocent may petition the law enforcement agency or the court having jurisdiction over the matter to provide for the sealing and destruction of the record of that arrest. Petitions concerning arrests occurring on or after January 1, 1981, or accusatory pleadings filed on after January 1, 1981, may be filed for up to two years following the arrest filing date. Until January 1, 1983, petitions can be filed for arrests which occurred or accusatory pleadings which were filed up to five years prior to the statute's effective date of September 29, 1980.

PETITION THE ARRESTING AGENCY (851.8(a) PC

Penal Code section 851.81(a) PC provides in part: "In any case where a person has been arrested and no accusatory pleadings has been filed, the person arrested may petition the law enforcement agency having jurisdiction over the offense to destroy its record of the arrest. A copy of such petition shall be served upon the district attorney of the county having jurisdiction over the offense."

PETITION DENIED OR NO RESPONSE TO PETITION (851.8(b) PC

Penal Code section 851.8(b) PC provides in part: "If, after receipt by both the law enforcement agency and the district of a petition for relief under subdivision (a), the law enforcement agency and district attorney do not respond to the petition by accepting or denying such petition within 60 days after the running of the relevant statute of limitations or within 60 days after receipt of the petition in cases where the statute of limitations has previously lapsed, then the petition shall be deemed to be denied. In any case where the petition of an arrestee to the law enforcement agency to have an arrest record destroyed is denied, petition may be made to the municipal or justice court. A copy such petition shall be served on the district attorney of the county having jurisdiction over the offense at least 10 days prior to the hearing." Note: the petitioner shall be responsible for obtaining the original petition from the law enforcement agency and submission to the court of jurisdiction.

PETITION TO THE COURT OF JURISDICTION (851.8(C)

Penal Code section 851.8(c) provide in part: "In any case where a person has been arrested, and an accusatory pleading has been filed, but where no conviction has occurred, the defendant, may, at any time after dismissal of the action, petition the court which dismissed the action for a finding that the defendant is factually innocent of the charges for which the arrest was made. A copy of such petition shall be served on the district attorney of the county in which the accusatory pleading was filed at least 10 days prior to the hearing on the petitioner's factual innocence."

It is the responsibility of the petitioner to submit any declarations, affidavits, police reports or other evidence, which may exist to support the petition to appropriate the arresting agency or court and to serve a copy of the petition and supporting papers on the district attorney.

Immigrant Legal Resource Center - Warning for Immigrants about Medical & Legalized Marijuana

WARNING ABOUT MEDICAL AND LEGALIZED MARIJUANA

The Problem

- Because of Prop 64, California law provides that any person age 21 or over can legally possess and use marijuana. California also permits medical use of marijuana.
- Because of this, immigrants in California may think that using marijuana will not hurt their immigration status. Unfortunately, that's wrong!! It is still a federal offense to possess marijuana, and federal law controls for immigration.
- If a non-citizen admits to an immigration official that he or she has ever used marijuana, the person can face very serious immigration problems -- even if the person never was convicted of a crime, just used marijuana at home, and it was legal under state law.
- The person can face serious problems if he or she applies for a green card, applies for U.S. citizenship, travels outside the United States, or ICE just questions them on the street.
- More and more, immigration officers are asking noncitizens if they have ever used marijuana— especially in states that have legalized marijuana.

What to do: Legal Self-Defense for Noncitizens

- Don't use marijuana until you are a U.S. citizen. Don't work in a marijuana shop.
- If you have a real medical need and there is no good substitute for medical marijuana, get legal counsel.
- Never leave the house carrying marijuana, a medical marijuana card, paraphernalia (like a pipe), or accessories like marijuana T-shirts or stickers. Don't have photos or text about you and marijuana on your phone, Facebook, or anywhere else.
- Most important, never admit to any immigration or border official that you ever have used or possessed marijuana, unless you have expert legal advice that this is OK. If a federal official asks you about marijuana, say that you don't want to talk to them and you want to speak to a lawyer. You have the right to remain silent. Stay strong – once you admit it, you can't take it back. If you did admit this to a federal officer, get legal help quickly.

TRIBAL ISSUES

This TRIBAL ISSUES CHAPTER covers special laws and programs that are available to or affect tribal members, including tribal enrollment and ID cards, housing programs, public benefits, and the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA).

DISCLAIMER - YOUR RESPONSIBILITY WHEN USING THIS GUIDE: When putting together the Roadmap to Reentry: A California Legal Guide, we did our best to give you useful and accurate information because we know that people who are currently or formerly incarcerated often have difficulty getting legal information, and we cannot provide specific advice to every person who requests it. The laws change frequently and are subject to differing interpretations. We do not always have the resources to make changes to this material every time the law changes. If you use information from the Roadmap to Reentry legal guide, it is your responsibility to make sure whether the law has changed and applies to your situation. If you are incarcerated, most of the materials you need should be available in your institution's law library. The Roadmap to Reentry guide is not intending to give legal advice, but rather legal information. No attorney-client relationship is created by using any information in this guide. You should always consult your own attorney if you need legal advice specific to your situation.

I. INTRODUCTION

There are over 570 federally-recognized tribes in the United States.<sup>3362</sup> Since the late 1980s the federal government has promoted self-determination and self-governance by tribes. In 1975, the U.S. passed the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act of 1975 (ISDEAA), which allowed the federal government to contract with tribes for services.<sup>3363</sup> The goal of the ISDEAA is to “further[] the self-determination of Indian communities without terminating the special relationships between the Federal Government and the Indian people.”<sup>3364</sup> Federally-recognized tribes now operate many of their own programs for their members, such as schools and health care systems. Because of this, as described below, there are special benefits and regulations related to returning to a tribal community, which are specific to your tribe.

Note that this Chapter is new to Root & Rebound’s Roadmap to Reentry and was written in collaboration with the Yurok Tribe’s Wellness Court. There is still limited literature on tribal reentry and not all tribes’ specific procedures for the action steps described below are widely available, so some of the information below is based solely on anecdotal evidence and experience from the Yurok Tribe’s Wellness Court. Please be sure to check with your specific Tribe regarding its rules and regulations.

WHAT IS A FEDERALLY-RECOGNIZED TRIBE?

“A federally recognized tribe is an American Indian or Alaska Native tribal entity that is recognized as having a government-to-government relationship with the United States.”<sup>3365</sup> This designation comes with specific powers and responsibilities. All federally-recognized tribes are eligible for certain federal benefits, as well as funding and services from the U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs. Most federally recognized tribes got their status through treaties, acts of Congress, administrative actions (e.g., presidential executive orders), or federal court decisions.<sup>3366</sup>

WHAT IS THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN TRIBES AND THE U.S. AND STATE GOVERNMENTS?

Federally-recognized tribes have tribal sovereignty, meaning they have the right to govern themselves. The U.S. government treats tribal governments as a separate government. Individual states have no authority over tribal governments, and federally-recognized tribes can regulate activities on their land independently of state control. However, states can have a government-to-government relationship with federally-recognized tribes and often collaborate with states.<sup>3367</sup>

WHAT IS THE BUREAU OF INDIAN AFFAIRS (BIA)?

The Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) is the federal agency that is responsible for maintaining the U.S. government’s relationship with the federally recognized Indian tribes. The BIA oversees programs for and makes laws and policies related to American Indians and Alaska Natives.<sup>3368</sup>

II. TRIBAL ENROLLMENT & IDENTIFICATION

TRIBAL ENROLLMENT

WHAT IS TRIBAL ENROLLMENT?

The U.S. government has created tribal enrollment requirements “to preserve the unique character and traditions of each tribe.”<sup>3369</sup> In order to do enroll, federally-recognized tribes generally require that individuals provide genealogical documentation of ancestry from a specific tribe or tribal community.<sup>3370</sup>

WHAT ARE THE REQUIREMENTS FOR ENROLLMENT IN A FEDERALLY-RECOGNIZED TRIBE?

Tribal enrollment requirements vary by tribe because each tribe sets its own criteria for enrollment.<sup>3371</sup> Most commonly, individuals must be descended from someone on the tribe's base roll or have a relationship to a tribal member who is descended from someone named on the base roll.<sup>3372</sup> Second, most tribes have conditions such as how Native-American you are by blood, whether you have lived with the tribe or on the reservation, or whether you have continued contact with the tribe.<sup>3373</sup> A tribe's specific requirements are usually found in its Tribal constitution, articles of incorporation, and ordinances.<sup>3374</sup> Every tribe also has an enrollment officer or office that can provide information on enrollment requirements.

HOW DO I APPLY FOR ENROLLMENT IN MY ANCESTORS' TRIBE?

Each tribe has its own enrollment process and has the authority to determine whether an individual is eligible for enrollment.<sup>3375</sup> There are 109 federally-recognized tribes in California, and another 78 tribes currently petitioning for federal recognition.<sup>3376</sup> To get information about your eligibility for membership, you should contact the relevant tribe's enrollment department. You may be able to find the contact information for the enrollment office online and you can either call them directly or send them a letter asking to receive enrollment information. If you have relatives in the area close to your Tribe you can ask them to inquire for you and forward the information.

While you are waiting, you should work on preparing your family tree information, particularly as relating to your tribal relatives. This will help the enrollment department figure out your eligibility. Additionally, you will most likely need a certified copy of your original birth certificate. (See PG. 31 to learn how to get a certified copy of your birth certificate.) If you are a Native American adoptee, you can find information on how to obtain your birth records at California Indian Legal Services web site at www.calindian.org/selfhelppdfs/SelfHelpBirthRecords0409.pdf.

You can also contact out-of-state tribes about enrollment requirements by reaching out to specific tribal enrollment offices. Note, however, that several tribes have more than one location and/or tribal name (e.g., Cherokees of Oklahoma, Cherokees of North Carolina, etc.), so you may have to send letters to multiple offices. If you are specifically inquiring as to whether or not you are eligible to enroll, remember that the more family tree information you can send, the easier it will be for them to make that determination.

Once you are enrolled, you must continue to update your address with the enrollment office.

CAN I BE DISENROLLED OR PREVENTED FROM ENROLLING IN MY TRIBE BECAUSE OF MY CRIMINAL RECORD?

Usually not. While each tribe has its own policies and rules around tribal enrollment and disenrollment, having a criminal record is not usually a factor.

However, please note that some Tribes may dis-enroll and/or banish tribal members or expel non-tribal individuals from their reservation if convicted of a sex offense (e.g., this is true of the Hoopa Valley Tribe).<sup>3377</sup>

ONCE I AM OFFICIALLY ENROLLED, HOW DO I REGISTER TO VOTE IN TRIBAL ELECTIONS?

Each tribe creates its own voter registration requirements for tribal elections. The two primary requirements are (1) being an enrolled member of the tribe, and (2) meeting a specific age requirement (either 18 or 21 depending on the tribe). Many tribes do not require that you reside on your Tribe's reservation to vote in a tribal election. If you are currently incarcerated, you may still be able to vote in some tribal elections by mail.

Contact your tribe to get information on specific voter registration requirements and any voter registration forms.

TRIBAL ID CARDS

WHAT IS A TRIBAL ID CARD, AND WHY WOULD I NEED IT?

Tribal identification (ID) cards are issued by tribes as proof of your enrollment and membership in the tribe.

A federally-recognized, tribal-issued ID card is also a valid form of government-issued photo identification in many places, though some places may be unaware of this. For example, a tribal ID card is valid at federal buildings, airports, and banks.<sup>3378</sup> It is also proof of eligibility for certain services such as the federal Indian Health Service; it allows you to opt out of Covered California (meaning, you can get an exemption from the tax penalty under “Obamacare”);<sup>3379</sup> and it can be used to prove your identification for the California LifeLine cell phone program (learn more about the program on PG. 501).<sup>3380</sup>

Note, however, that a tribal ID card is not valid proof of identity for every purpose, so you may want to check before relying exclusively on a tribal ID for any purpose.

HOW DO I GET A TRIBAL ID CARD?

The process for obtaining a tribal ID card may be slightly different for each tribe, and may differ depending on whether you are already enrolled with the tribe.

PLEASE NOTE: Requests for tribal ID cards no longer go through the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA). All requests for tribal ID cards now go directly to the tribe.

Basic steps for getting a tribal ID card:

STEP 1: Determine the name of the tribe.

STEP 2: Call or write your tribe’s enrollment department, and ask if they have forms and instructions for enrollment and/or obtaining a tribal ID card.

STEP 3: Follow any instructions given to you by the tribe, including sending any forms and supporting documentation. If you are not currently enrolled, send the tribe as many details as possible about your family history and tribal ancestry (and if applicable, use the forms they sent you).

You will need to give the tribe as many details about your ancestry as possible – not just your parents’ information, but also information about your grandparents, great-grandparents, great-great grandparents, great-great-great grandparents, and so on. Include information about your family tree and history as far back as you can.

Note: The process for obtaining a tribal ID card is much easier if you or one of your parents is enrolled in the tribe.

IF I AM REGISTERED WITH A TRIBE, WILL THEY HAVE OTHER IDENTIFICATION DOCUMENTS ON FILE FOR ME OR MY FAMILY MEMBERS?

It depends on the tribe and whether you are enrolled. If you are already enrolled with a tribe and trying to recover old identification (ID) documents, you can contact your tribe directly and ask if they have any of those documents on file. There is no guarantee, but it is worth checking!

III. TRIBAL REGISTRATION FOR SEX OFFENSES

IF I AM A 290 REGISTRANT, DO I HAVE TO REGISTER WITH MY TRIBE?

Maybe. Each tribe has the authority to decide whether or not registration for sex offenses is required. Some federally-recognized tribes in California, such as the Yurok Tribe and Washoe Tribe, require registration for individuals who have been convicted of sex offenses under any state or federal law.<sup>3381</sup>

<sup>3381</sup> See Washoe Tribe of Nevada & California, Law & Order Code, Title 31, Sex Offender Registration and Notification Ordinance; Yurok Tribal Code, Public Health and Safety, Sex Offender Registration Ordinance, Section 10320.

MY TRIBE REQUIRES REGISTRATION. WHEN DO I HAVE TO REGISTER?

When you are required to register generally depends on whether you were incarcerated for your registerable offense.

- If you are currently incarcerated, you are typically required to register before your release from imprisonment.
- If you are not incarcerated, you are typically required to register within three business days of sentencing for the registration offense.<sup>3382</sup>
- Remember that registration required by California law is done separately. See Section [173] for more information.

DO I HAVE TO APPEAR IN PERSON AFTER I REGISTER?

Tribes often require that you appear in person within a few business days of establishing a residence, entering, commencing employment, or becoming a student on lands subject to the jurisdiction of the tribe.<sup>3383</sup> Usually you will need to appear before the Tribal Police Department or Public Safety Office.

HOW LONG DO I HAVE TO REMAIN REGISTERED WITH MY TRIBE, AND HOW OFTEN DO I HAVE TO APPEAR IN PERSON?

Policies around length of registration and required in-person appearances differ depending on the tribe. For example, both the Yurok and Washoe Tribes have three tiers of registration. If a person is categorized in Tier One, they must appear in person once every year for 15 years; Tier two offenders are required to appear in person once every 180 days for 25 years; and Tier three offenders are required to appear in person once every 90 days for life.<sup>3384</sup> If your tribe does have an in-person appearance requirement, you should check with your tribe to see where you need to make and record that appearance.

By maintaining a clean record, some statutes/ordinances allow a reduction in registration time periods if certain requirements are met (e.g., complying with all registration, monitoring, and treatment requirements, and by passing a polygraph test). For example, in the Washoe Tribe, a Tier One offender may have his or her period of registration reduced by 5 years if they maintain a clear record for 10 consecutive years.<sup>3385</sup>

WHAT HAPPENS IF I FAIL TO REGISTER WITH MY TRIBE?

Each tribe sets its own penalties around failure to register, which will typically be outlined in each tribe's ordinance regarding registration for sex offenses. Generally, the tribal police department or public safety office will receive information regarding the failure to register.<sup>3386</sup> The penalty for failing to register can be as severe as permanent banishment or exclusion.

IV. HOUSING FOR TRIBAL MEMBERS

WHAT ARE TRIBAL HOUSING PROGRAMS?

Some tribes receive federal funding from the United States Department of Housing and Urban Development (“HUD”) to provide their own housing programs. Each tribe designates an agency, often called a tribal housing authority, to oversee its housing programs. Any tribe receiving federal funds must follow HUD rules and regulations regarding housing eligibility rules.<sup>3387</sup> See PG. 364 to learn more about how a criminal record can impact your ability to live in federally funded housing.

WHAT TYPES OF TRIBAL HOUSING ARE AVAILABLE?

The types of tribal housing available vary by tribe, since each tribe administers its own tribal housing program. Types of tribal housing can include:

<sup>3382</sup> See e.g., Washoe Tribe of Nevada & California, Law & Order Code, Title 31, Sex Offender Registration and Notification Ordinance; Yurok Proposed OR.

<sup>3383</sup> See e.g., Washoe Tribe of Nevada & California, Law & Order Code, Title 31, Sex Offender Registration and Notification Ordinance (“For foreign, federal, state, tribal, and military convictions, a sex offender must appear in person at the WTPD within three (3) business days of entering Washoe Country either after release from incarceration.”), https://www.washoetribe.us/contents/images/documents/LawAndOrderCode/Title\_31\_SORNO.pdf.

WHO CAN RENT UNITS THROUGH TRIBAL HOUSING PROGRAMS?

Each tribe establishes its own eligibility criteria for housing. However, in general applicants must (1) be under income limits as by HUD<sup>3390</sup> and (2) qualify as a member of a tribe.<sup>3391</sup>

HOW DO I APPLY FOR TRIBAL HOUSING?

Applications are typically submitted to the tribe's housing authority. Contact your tribe's housing authority for application instructions and more information.

CAN MY CRIMINAL RECORD AFFECT MY ABILITY TO GET TRIBAL HOUSING?

It depends. Indian tribes and tribally designated housing entities are granted access to criminal conviction records of adult tribal housing applicants and tenants, upon request. However, release of information about juvenile convictions is only permitted if authorized under state, tribal, and local law.<sup>3392</sup>

Tribes can only use criminal records to screen or evict applicants, or enforce leases, and the information cannot be released to anyone who is not an officer, employee, or authorized representative of the tribe or owner of the housing.<sup>3393</sup>

Once you are a resident, owners and managers of housing units can also evict a resident for any current criminal activity from the resident, a member of the household, or a guest of the resident.<sup>3394</sup>

Each tribe establishes its own policies on criminal records. For example, the Yurok Indian Housing Authority has a policy of denying housing for a period of at least 5 years from the date of any felony conviction and for lifetime registered sex offenders.<sup>3395</sup> The Karuk Tribe Housing Authority, by contrast, requires a 5 year waiting period from the date of a conviction, or 18 months from the date of release, for any drug-related crime or any form of assault/battery crime. However, if the applicant completes a drug rehabilitation program, the waiting period is reduced to 1 year. For misdemeanors, more than 1 conviction results in a 2-year waiting period, and more than 2 convictions results in a 5-year waiting period.<sup>3396</sup>

These are just two examples from some of the larger tribes in California. Because some tribes have more restrictive policies than others, you should contact your Tribe's housing authority to learn about their specific restrictions. Additionally, some tribes are exploring the possibility of opening reentry facilities for those returning from incarceration. Your Tribe's housing authority can provide information on any reentry housing programs.

WHAT CAN I DO IF I AM SERVED AN EVICTION NOTICE FROM TRIBAL HOUSING?

The grievance process for tribal housing issues must be done through your tribal housing authority. Each tribal housing authority rules that allow for grievance procedures, which can include administrative hearings and, where applicable, an appeal to Tribal Court.

If you are facing an eviction hearing it is best to be very well prepared. Gather any relevant documents to submit and prepare witnesses available to testify, where applicable. If compromise is possible, be prepared to offer suggestions that are doable for you (e.g., pay current rent and add on for over due rent a certain amount until the balance is paid; if an ineligible resident has occupied the home, evict that person and/or get a restraining order preventing them from occupying home).

V. TRIBAL PUBLIC BENEFITS & HEALTHCARE

INDIAN HEALTH SERVICE (IHS)

WHAT IS THE INDIAN HEALTH SERVICE (IHS)?

The Indian Health Services (IHS) is an agency within the Department of Health and Human Services that provides comprehensive health services to Native Americans. The IHS is the main federal health care provider for federally-recognized tribes.<sup>3397</sup> IHS is not a health insurance provider. IHS provides healthcare services through its hospitals, centers, and clinics.<sup>3398</sup> IHS services are typically only to eligible Alaska Native and American Indians, unless one of the limited exceptions for non-Indians (discussed below) applies.<sup>3399</sup>

WHAT SERVICES DOES THE INDIAN HEALTH SERVICE (IHS) OFFER?

IHS provides health services for Indian communities through HIS local facilities and contracted Purchased/Referred Care programs.<sup>3400</sup> These may include hospital and medical care, dental care, public health nursing and preventative care (including immunizations), and health examination of special groups such as school children.<sup>3401</sup> Importantly, they can screen for post incarceration placements or assist with placements to treatment facilities. Additionally, they can provide post incarceration mental health services.

AM I ELIGIBLE FOR INDIAN HEALTH SERVICE (IHS)?

The IHS health care system is available for federally-recognized American Indian and Alaska Natives in the United States. Members of 567 federally-recognized American Indian and Alaska Native Tribes and their descendants are eligible for services provided by IHS.<sup>3402</sup>

You are eligible for IHS if you are of American Indian descent and belong to an Indian community served by the IHS program.

Non-Indians may also be eligible in certain limited circumstances, including:

- Children (natural or adopted child, stepchild, foster child, legal ward, or orphan) of eligible persons under 19 years of age;
- Spouses of an eligible American Indian, including a same-sex spouse;
- Non-Indian women pregnant with an eligible person's child for the duration of her pregnancy and through post-partum (usually 6 weeks after delivery). A paternity acknowledgement is required if parents are not married;
- Non-Indian members of an eligible Indian's household IF the medical officer in charge determines that services are necessary to control a public health hazard or an acute infectious disease; and
- Others, such as non-Indian employees and veterans, whom may also be authorized for limited services.<sup>3403</sup>

CAN MY CRIMINAL RECORD PREVENT ME FROM RECEIVING INDIAN HEALTH SERVICE (IHS) BENEFITS?

No. IHS does not have any bans on people receiving health care benefits based on their criminal record.

HOW DO I ENROLL IN THE INDIAN HEALTH SERVICE (IHS)?

Once you know that you are eligible for IHS, contact the patient registration office ("PRO") at the facility that serves your area. The PRO will help you through the registration process, identify any additional documentation you need to establish your medical record, and then schedule a medical appointment. You should go to the PRO in person and be ready to provide proof of your enrollment as a member of a Federally recognized tribe.<sup>3404</sup>

You can find a local facility through this website: <https://www.ihs.gov/findhealthcare>.

ONCE I AM ENROLLED IN THE INDIAN HEALTH SERVICE (IHS), WHERE CAN I RECEIVE HEALTH CARE?

A member of a federally-recognized tribe may obtain care at any IHS hospital or clinic if the facility has the staff and capability to provide the medical care. A member of a federally-recognized tribe may not be able to receive services at contracted facilities if they do not meet certain residency requirements.

While residing on your home reservation, the IHS provides health care coverage for both (1) direct care services and 2) Purchased/Referred Care services. If you move away from your reservation or contract health service delivery area ("CHSDA"), the Purchased/Referred Care services coverage only extends for 180 days. On the 181st day, the eligibility for IHS direct care services is limited to the health care that continues at any IHS facility that you present yourself. However, PRC coverage continues if you establish residency on another reservation or contract health service delivery area. You can check with your home or local Service Unit about eligibility - they will be the ones making all determinations and paying bills for approved care.<sup>3405</sup>

WHERE ARE INDIAN HEALTH SERVICE (IHS) OFFICES LOCATED IN CALIFORNIA?

California has 31 tribal health programs, operating 57 clinics. Additionally, IHS funds eight urban health programs. Look online for the nearest IHS office or health care facility at <http://www.ihs.gov/findhealthcare>. For a list of California-specific health programs, see www.ihs.gov/california/index.cfm/health-programs/health-programs.

TRIBAL INCOME AND SSI ELIGIBILITY

I AM A TRIBAL MEMBER RECEIVING PER CAPITA PAYMENTS FROM GOVERNMENT SETTLEMENT FUNDS. WILL THIS IMPACT MY ELIGIBILITY FOR SSI?

No. Per capita payments paid to tribal members under settlement agreements are not taken into account for either SSI or Medicare part D purposes. So, for example, funds distributed per capita for members of the Hoopa Valley Indian Tribe and the Yurok Indian Tribe are excluded from income and resources for SSI eligibility.

<sup>3403</sup> Indian Health Service, Eligibility for Services, Section 2-1.2(B), <https://www.ihs.gov/IHM/pc/part-2/p2c1/#2-1.2>

However, even though these funds should not be counted as income or a resource, the funds must still be reported.<sup>3406</sup>

Please note: It is very important to keep updated addresses on file with your Tribal enrollment office for any issues that may arise with per capita distributions.

DO OTHER FORMS OF TRIBAL INCOME IMPACT MY ELIGIBILITY FOR SSI?

Maybe. Whether or not a source of tribal income is excluded depends on the type of payment. Only specific types of payments and resources are excluded from income.<sup>3407</sup> As discussed above, per capita payments from certain settlements may be excluded from income, and cash, stock, or land from an Alaska native corporation are also excluded.<sup>3408</sup> However, per capita payments from a tribe's commercial enterprises are not excluded. For example, if you are a member of a tribe, payments from your Tribe for distribution of Indian gaming profits do not qualify for income exclusion. These payments must be counted towards your annual income for SSI purposes. If you are uncertain you should contact your tribe who will be able to give you an answer as to the status of your payment. Additionally, if you are incarcerated and know you will be receiving payments of any type, make arrangements with your tribe to have them held, delivered to a reliable payee, or direct deposited in an existing account.

THE TRIBAL TEMPORARY ASSISTANCE FOR NEEDY FAMILIES (TANF) PROGRAM

WHAT IS THE TRIBAL TANF PROGRAM?

Federally-recognized Indian tribes can receive funding to administer and operate their own Temporary Assistance for Needy Families ("TANF") programs. One of the core purposes of TANF is to provide assistance to needy families so that children may be cared for in their own homes or in the homes of relatives. Tribal TANF gives federally-recognized Tribes the flexibility to design welfare programs that promote work, responsibility, and strengthen families. These programs provide time-limited assistance to eligible native families with cash aid and supportive services.<sup>3409</sup>

WHAT BENEFITS AND SERVICES CAN I GET THROUGH TRIBAL TANF?

Because each federally-recognized Indian tribe administers its own Tribal TANF program, the benefits and services will vary depending on each tribe's TANF program. Common benefits include cash assistance for basic living expenses, childcare assistance, job preparation and vocational training, assistance with unforeseeable emergencies, and work assistance.

AM I ELIGIBLE FOR TRIBAL TANF?

Tribal TANF is for low-income tribal families with children, where at least one parent is unemployed. Because each Tribe is in charge of its own TANF program, the exact eligibility requirements depend on which Tribe's service area you reside in. However, there are some general requirements that are fairly consistent across Tribes:

- You are unemployed or about to become unemployed;
- You or another member of your household is able to provide proof of enrollment in a federally-recognized American Indian Tribe or Alaska Native village;
- You live on or near a federally-recognized Indian reservation (many Tribal TANF offices offer services to individuals who reside in counties near their reservation); and
- You have at least one child 18 years old or under living in your home;
- You are low-income.<sup>3410</sup>

NOTE: Even if you are enrolled in a federally-recognized Tribe, some Tribal TANF offices require that at least one child of the family also be able to prove tribal membership or that they are a descendant of a federally recognized Tribe.

Even if you do not meet the criteria listed above, you may still be eligible if:

- You are the third trimester of your pregnancy and are able to verify the child's native status;
- You are the guardian/caretaker of a needy Native American minor;
- You are related to a dependent child and have care and control of a dependent child, you may still be eligible.

WHO IS CONSIDERED “LOW-INCOME” FOR BEING ABLE TO RECEIVE TRIBAL TANF?

This varies by Tribe and by the type of TANF benefits you are seeking to receive. In order to receive Tribal TANF benefits, total household income must typically to be between 125-200% of the U.S. Federal Poverty Guidelines. For example, you can receive cash assistance under Tribal TANF in the Yurok Tribe if your family income is below 135% of the federal poverty line, but you can receive transitional benefits under Tribal TANF until your family reaches 200% of poverty.<sup>3411</sup>

The poverty guidelines are based on the number of individuals are in your family or household. If you do not have anyone in your household or family, the federal poverty line is $12,140. For each additional member of your family or household, the guideline increases by $4,320.<sup>3412</sup>

Additionally, there may also be a cap on the amount of resources you own. Resources include cash or property that you own, can convert to cash, or can use to support yourself. Some examples are savings accounts, stocks, and bonds. Some tribes require that your countable resources do not exceed $5,000.00, whereas others set the limit as low as $2,000.00.

ONCE I AM ENROLLED IN THE PROGRAM, FOR HOW LONG CAN I RECEIVE TRIBAL TANF BENEFITS?

Tribes must set time limits to the length of time you can receive Tribal TANF benefits. This can go up to 60 months.<sup>3413</sup> For example, the Yurok Tribe provides 60 months of available aid.<sup>3414</sup>

WILL MY CRIMINAL RECORD PREVENT ME FROM RECEIVING TRIBAL TANF BENEFITS?

Maybe. There are some convictions and criminal history information that may make you ineligible for Tribal TANF, depending on the particular Tribal TANF program. You can contact your local Tribal TANF office to learn more about their specific eligibility requirements.

The following may make you ineligible for Tribal TANF:

- You are fleeing to avoid prosecution, custody, or confinement for committing, or attempting to commit a felony.
- You have committed fraud in order to receive cash assistance or support services in the last two years.
- You were convicted of a drug felony in the last two years, unless you have completed an approved drug rehabilitation program. But note: Even if a felony drug conviction makes you ineligible, your other family members may still be able to receive benefits based off your income. If, for instance, you failed a drug screening test, your child could still benefit from Tribal TANF cash assistance, but an alternate payee will be required until you become eligible to be included.
- You have been convicted of molesting a child.<sup>3415</sup>

Certain criminal convictions will cause you to be ineligible for Tribal TANF in some service areas, but not all. It is important to contact the Tribal TANF office to which you plan to apply for more information on eligibility requirements.

HOW DO I APPLY FOR TRIBAL TANF BENEFITS?

Contact or walk into a Tribal TANF office and apply for services. There are currently 16 Tribal TANF programs within the state of California that serve different geographic areas. You should contact the Tribal TANF office whose service area you reside in or will reside in upon reentry. Each TANF office (tribal Council may set eligibility for certain programs e.g., treatment or re-entry programs may qualify you.)

For a directory of Tribal TANF offices, visit the website: <http://www.cdss.ca.gov/inforesources/Tribal-TANF/Programs>.

CAN I APPLY FOR TRIBAL TANF WHILE I AM INCARCERATED?

No. You must have a minor child in your home in order to be eligible for Tribal TANF, unless you are in a special eligible program (see above). But, if you are currently incarcerated, you can contact the Tribal TANF office you plan to apply through and become more aware of the specific eligibility requirements and application process so you are more aware of your options upon release.

I BELIEVE MY TRIBAL TANF WAS WRONGLY DENIED OR STOPPED. HOW DO I CHALLENGE THIS DECISION?

The appeals process to challenge a denial or stopping of your Tribal TANF benefits is different with each Tribal TANF office. Each tribe is required to develop a dispute resolution process to challenge the Tribe's decision to deny, suspend, reduce, or terminate assistance.<sup>3416</sup> Appeals are often required to be in writing within 10 business days of the denial.<sup>3417</sup> Contact your local Tribal TANF office to gain more information about its appeals process.

ONCE I AM RECEIVING TRIBAL TANF BENEFITS, WHAT RULES MUST I FOLLOW?

To keep getting Tribal TANF benefits, you must meet the requirements set by your Tribal TANF office. General requirements include that your family income stay under the income limit, satisfaction of minimum work participation requirements, and reporting changes to your income and living situation.

Work participation hours may be met by doing a variety of activities authorized by your Tribal TANF office. These activities may include public or tribal employment, job skills training, community service, secondary and post-secondary education, and workshops. Tribes have the flexibility to establish their own allowable work activities, including culturally-relevant activities such as fishing, hunting, and beadwork. Additionally, you should inquire of TANF as to whether or not your tribe has any special job training funds that you can access, including educational funding.

VI. OVERVIEW OF THE INDIAN CHILD WELFARE ACT (ICWA)

WHAT IS THE INDIAN CHILD WELFARE ACT (ICWA)?

Congress passed the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA) in 1978 in response to a pattern of wholesale public and private removal of Native American children from their homes, undermining Native American families and threatening the survival of Native American tribes and tribal cultures.<sup>3418</sup> ICWA was designed to “protect the best interests of Indian children and to promote the stability and security of Indian tribes and families.”<sup>3419</sup>

Under the ICWA, the presumption is that it is in the best interest of an Indian child and the Tribe for the child to maintain ties to the Tribe. The standards in a child custody proceeding involving an Indian child is generally the same as in a child custody proceeding that does not, except that under the ICWA you must also consider the interests of the child's tribe. Under the ICWA, the tribe itself has protectable rights that are independent of the child and the child's parents.<sup>3420</sup>

In 2006, California's Legislature codified much of the ICWA into state law with Senate Bill 678. ICWA and California law mandate specific standards that must be met before an Indian child may be removed from his or her family or placed in an adoptive or foster care placement. All state courts must follow the standards below in child welfare and custody cases involving Indian children, including:

- notice to tribes of state child custody proceedings;
- active efforts to provide rehabilitative services to the birth family or Indian custodian;
- preferred placements of Indian children with their extended family or other Indian families;
- tribal right to intervene in state child custody proceedings; and
- transfer of jurisdiction to tribal courts.<sup>3421</sup>

WHAT CHILDREN DOES THE INDIAN CHILD WELFARE ACT (ICWA) APPLY TO?

An "Indian child" is defined as: An unmarried person who is under age eighteen and is either: (1) a member of an Indian tribe; or (2) eligible for membership in an Indian tribe and the biological child of a member of an Indian tribe.<sup>3422</sup>

WHAT TYPES OF CASES DOES THE INDIAN CHILD WELFARE ACT (ICWA) APPLY TO?

The ICWA applies whenever an Indian child is the subject of a state "child custody proceeding." Specifically, the ICWA provides that a "child custody proceeding" includes:

1. "foster care placement" which shall mean any action removing an Indian child from its parent or Indian custodian for temporary placement in a foster home or institution or the home of a guardian or conservator where the parent or Indian custodian cannot have the child returned upon demand, but where parental rights have not been terminated;
2. "termination of parental rights" which shall mean any action resulting in the termination of the parent-child relationship;
3. "preadoptive placement" which shall mean the temporary placement of an Indian child in a foster home or institution after the termination of parental rights, but prior to or in lieu of adoptive placement; and
4. "adoptive placement" which shall mean the permanent placement of an Indian child for adoption, including any action resulting in a final decree of adoption.<sup>3423</sup>

This means that ICWA applies to:

1. cases where an Indian child is removed by a county child welfare system (foster care);
2. probate guardianship cases;
3. delinquency cases where the crime would not have been a crime if committed by an adult; and
4. family law cases where custody will be with a non-parent<sup>3424</sup> or that will result in termination of parental rights or adoption (step-parent adoptions).

ICWA does not apply to tribal proceedings or custody disputes between divorced or divorcing parties.<sup>3425</sup>

WHAT ARE THE EXTRA RESPONSIBILITIES REQUIRED UNDER THE INDIAN CHILD WELFARE ACT (ICWA)?

Notice: ICWA requires that notice must be sent to the parent or any Indian custodian and the child's tribe where there is reason to know the child may be an Indian child.<sup>3426</sup> Notice must be provided to incarcerated parents as well. To facilitate timely and effective notice of hearings to incarcerated parents, the social services agency must use the prisoner location system developed by the Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation.

For the jurisdictional hearing, a dispositional hearing, or a Welfare and Institutions Code § 366.26 permanency planning hearing, the notice must: (1) inform the incarcerated parent of his or her right to be physically present at the hearing and (2) explain how the parent may secure his or her presence or, if he or she waives the right to be physically present, appearance and participation. For a review hearing, or any other hearing in a dependency proceeding, the notice must inform the incarcerated parent of his or her options for requesting physical or telephonic appearance at and participation in the hearing.<sup>3427</sup>

Active efforts

“Any party seeking to effect a foster care placement of, or termination of parental rights to, an Indian child under state law shall satisfy the court that active efforts have been made to provide remedial services and rehabilitative programs designed to prevent the breakup of the Indian family and that these efforts have proved unsuccessful.”<sup>3428</sup>

This means the party seeking to remove a child (the social services agency, a person petitioning for guardianship, etc) must engage in active efforts to prevent removal of the child and keep the family intact, or if removal is necessary to provide active efforts reunification services. Examples of active efforts include:

1. Conducting a comprehensive assessment of the circumstances of the Indian child’s family, with a focus on safe reunification as the most desirable goal.
2. Identifying appropriate services and helping the parents overcome barriers, including actively assisting the parents in obtaining those services.
3. Identifying, notifying, and inviting representatives of the Indian child’s tribe to participate in providing support and services to the Indian child’s family and in family team meetings, permanency planning, and resolution of placement issues.
4. Conducting or causing to be conducted a diligent search for the Indian child’s extended family members, and contacting and consulting with extended family members to provide family structure and support for the Indian child and the Indian child’s parents.
5. Offering and employing all available and culturally appropriate family preservation strategies and facilitating the use of remedial and rehabilitative services provided by the child’s tribe.
6. Taking steps to keep siblings together whenever possible.
7. Supporting regular visits with parents or Indian custodians in the most natural setting possible, as well as trial home visits of the Indian child during any period of removal, consistent with the need to ensure the health, safety, and welfare of the child.
8. Identifying community resources including housing, financial assistance, transportation, mental health and substance abuse services, and peer support services, and actively assisting the Indian child’s parents or, when appropriate, the child’s family, in utilizing and accessing those resources.
9. Monitoring progress and participation in services.
10. Considering alternative ways to address the needs of the Indian child’s parents and, where appropriate, the family, if the optimum services do not exist or are not available.
11. Providing post-reunification services and monitoring.<sup>3429</sup>

The above list of active efforts is not exhaustive, and is not a one-size fits all approach. What constitutes active efforts is made on a case-by-case basis and must include attempts to use the available resources of extended family members, the tribe, Indian social services agencies, and the individual Indian caregivers.<sup>3430</sup>

IMPORTANT NOTE: While active efforts services must be provided to incarcerated parents, the timelines of juvenile dependency cases are not altered due an incarcerated parent’s involvement. Therefore, it is critical that incarcerated parents work closely with their attorney to understand what services are available to them and/or a potential family placement and what timelines apply.

Placement Preferences

When an Indian child requires out of home placement, the placement must be in the least restrictive environment that most closely approximates their family,<sup>3431</sup> within the following preference order (in descending order):

1. A member of the Indian child’s extended family;

<sup>3427</sup> See Superior Court of California, Form JV-450 - Order for Prisoner’s Appearance at Hearing Affecting Parental Rights, <http://www.courts.ca.gov/documents/jv450.pdf>.

2. A foster home licensed, approved, or specified by the Indian child's tribe;
3. An Indian foster home licensed or approved by an authorized non-Indian licensing authority; or
4. An institution for children approved by an Indian tribe or operated by an Indian organization which has a program suitable to meet the Indian child's needs.<sup>3432</sup>

County social welfare agencies have an active efforts responsibility to place within this preference order. If placement within the preference order cannot be located or if the placing agency wishes to deviate from the preference order, a court order specifying good cause is required prior to the placement being made.<sup>3433</sup>

Criminal background checks are required for placement of dependent children with relatives or prospective guardians who are not licensed or certified foster parents. Placement might not be allowed if the proposed caregiver has a criminal record.<sup>3434</sup> Certain violent felonies are an absolute bar to placement. However, an exemption may be granted for other crimes, including violent misdemeanors, where there is reason to believe that the potential placement is of good character and would not pose a risk of harm to the child.<sup>3435</sup>

A party seeking placement of an Indian child must either: (a) request an exemption for a potential placement with a criminal record if that placement would satisfy the ICWA's preferences, or (b) "adequately support its reasons for not doing so if failure to request a waiver results in a placement that contravenes the ICWA preferences."<sup>3436</sup>

IMPORTANT NOTES:

1. If you/or your choice for placement have a criminal background and would like to be placement for an Indian child, speak with your attorney, the case social worker and/or the child's tribe to determine whether a criminal records exemption may be available.
2. The child's tribe has an absolute right to alter the placement preference order.<sup>3437</sup>

ARE THERE UNIQUE PERMANENCY OPTIONS FOR INDIAN CHILDREN?

Tribal Customary Adoption

Tribal customary adoption (TCA) is a unique permanency option in California that does not require termination of parental rights. It is a state court adoption that incorporates the customs, traditions, or laws of an Indian child's tribe, in that the tribe creates a Tribal Customary Adoption Order.<sup>3438</sup> The Tribal Customary Adoption Order dictates the terms of the adoption, including continued contact with biological family and the tribe.<sup>3439</sup>

Tribal customary adoption is only available where the tribe determines it is the most appropriate permanency option in a given case.<sup>3440</sup> This is a very important option for Tribal parents who realize at a certain specific time when faced with having to determine a permanent plan for their child that does NOT include them as a full time custodial parent they still have a responsibility to make the best plan for their child and protect their child's tribal and family ties. Ask your tribe, attorney and the social worker assigned to this case to explain and explore this option.

CAN AN INDIAN TRIBE INTERVENE AS A PARTY IN AN ICWA CASE?

The Indian child's tribe may intervene as a full party in any case where ICWA applies.<sup>3441</sup> The tribe is entitled to all rights afforded to any party in a proceeding, including the right to sit at the counsel table, the right to examine witnesses, and the right to be given copies of documents. The tribe has the right to intervene at any point in the proceedings, either orally or in writing.<sup>3442</sup>

HOW ARE CHILD CUSTODY (DEPENDENCY) CASES TRANSFERRED TO TRIBAL COURT?

In cases where ICWA applies, a parent or the Indian child's tribe may request (petition) to have the case transferred to tribal court. The state court must transfer the case, unless it finds good cause to deny the request. Good cause can exist where one of the child's parents objects to the transfer.<sup>3443</sup>

WHAT IS THE MOST IMPORTANT THING FOR A PARENT TO DO IN AN ICWA CASE?

Particularly in juvenile dependency proceedings, it is crucial for parents to fully participate and work with the county and tribal social workers assigned to your case. The timeframes involved in these cases are set by federal law and depending on the age of the child can be as short as 6 months. In order for timeframes to be extended, parents must fulfill the requirements of their court ordered case plan, which can include requirements to undergo assessments, participate in rehabilitative services and have regular visitation with your child. The need to participate in the process cannot be overstated, since courts are legally obligated to seek alternate permanency options for children where reunification efforts with parents are unsuccessful - this means you may forgo any possibility of reunifying with your child.

ICWA is intended to assist you in your efforts to reunify with your child and your child's tribe may also be able to assist. Where your child is eligible for membership in a tribe, but not yet a member it is highly recommended you work with the tribe to establish membership. This will ensure ICWA is applied to your case.

IMMIGRATION

No matter what your immigration status, as a noncitizen you could face a variety of unique challenges due to your criminal record. In this chapter, you will learn more about preparing to navigate through the reentry process in a way that can help protect you and your family from deportation and other immigration consequences.

DISCLAIMER - YOUR RESPONSIBILITY WHEN USING THIS GUIDE: When putting together the Roadmap to Reentry: A California Legal Guide, we did our best to give you useful and accurate information because we know that people who are currently or formerly incarcerated often have difficulty getting legal information, and we cannot provide specific advice to every person who requests it. The laws change frequently and are subject to differing interpretations. We do not always have the resources to make changes to this material every time the law changes. If you use information from the Roadmap to Reentry legal guide, it is your responsibility to make sure whether the law has changed and applies to your situation. If you are incarcerated, most of the materials you need should be available in your institution's law library. The Roadmap to Reentry guide is not intending to give legal advice, but rather legal information. No attorney-client relationship is created by using any information in this guide. You should always consult your own attorney if you need legal advice specific to your situation.

- Information on accessing public benefits and education;
- Options for obtaining identification;
- How to create a family preparedness plan.

I. INTRODUCTION

This Chapter explains special issues affecting noncitizens, regardless of your immigration status. While Root & Rebound does not specialize in immigration law, this chapter is designed to ensure that you have a basic understanding of the ways in which contact with the criminal justice system could impact your status in the U.S. This chapter does not contain information related to your rights in deportation or other immigration proceedings. If you need assistance with such matters, speak to an immigration attorney right away. For a list of referrals, see PG. 1134.

KEY TERMS IN THE IMMIGRATION CHAPTER

Noncitizen—someone without U.S. citizenship. In this chapter, we use “noncitizen” to cover a variety of immigration statuses, including Lawful Permanent Residents, visa holders, refugees, and undocumented persons. These terms, as well as other noncitizen status, are defined below.

Lawful Permanent Resident—also known as a “green card holder,” a lawful permanent resident has permission from the federal government to live permanently in the U.S.<sup>3444</sup>

Visa—a government-issued endorsement allowing a citizen of a foreign country to enter, leave, or stay in the U.S.<sup>3445</sup> Visas are generally divided into two categories: immigrant visas are issued to people wishing to live permanently in the U.S., while nonimmigrant visas are issued to people wishing to come to the U.S. temporarily for a particular purpose, such as tourism, business, or study.<sup>3446</sup>

Refugee—is a person granted protected status in the U.S. due to their membership in a group that is the subject of persecution in their home country. Unlike a person seeking asylum (see below), a refugee must seek referral for this status from outside the U.S.<sup>3447</sup>

Undocumented Person—sometimes called an “undocumented alien,” this is someone who entered the U.S. without legal documents, or who entered the U.S. legally but violated the terms of their visa.<sup>3448</sup>

Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals (DACA)—a program introduced in 2012 by President Barack Obama in order to prevent the deportation of people who were brought to the U.S. as children. DACA participants have permission to remain in the country and get work permits, despite not being citizens.<sup>3449</sup>

Temporary Protected Status (TPS)—a form of temporary protection available to people from certain countries (or parts of countries) who are unable to return due to extreme temporary instability in their countries of origin, including war, natural disasters, and epidemics. TPS beneficiaries are not removable from the U.S. while their home country remains unstable.<sup>3450</sup>

Naturalization—the process by which a person obtains U.S. citizenship.<sup>3451</sup>

Immigrations and Customs Enforcement (ICE)—the division of the U.S. Department of Homeland Security that has authority over criminal violations of U.S. laws related to travel and immigration.

Detainer—an order that a person in custody be held for a certain period of time after release so that another law enforcement agency can decide whether to pick them up to face pending charges.

Removal Proceedings—the legal process for deciding whether the government can remove someone from the U.S.

II. IDENTIFICATION & KEY DOCUMENTS FOR NONCITIZENS & UNDOCUMENTED PEOPLE

WHAT WILL I LEARN?

- What forms of ID are and are not available for noncitizens with various immigration statuses
- Information about Social Security Numbers - who can get them and how
- Information about who can obtain a California state ID card
- Identification options for undocumented people in California

I AM A NONCITIZEN. WHAT TYPES OF ID CAN I GET?

Your ability to get ID varies greatly depending on your immigration status and the type of document. While noncitizens cannot get items such as a U.S. Birth Certificate, Naturalization Certificate, or U.S. Passport, you may be able to get other key documents. In fact, you may be required to obtain some key documents in order to work, drive, or travel legally in the U.S. The following key documents may be available to some noncitizens.

SOCIAL SECURITY NUMBERS & CARDS FOR NONCITIZENS

WHAT TYPES OF NONCITIZENS CAN GET A SOCIAL SECURITY NUMBER AND CARD?

In general, only noncitizens authorized by the federal government to work in the U.S. can obtain a Social Security Number.<sup>3452</sup> Lawful Permanent Residents (LPR), certain visa-holders, refugees/asylees, DACA recipients, and people with temporary protected status (TPS) are generally permitted to apply for and obtain a Social Security Number and card.<sup>3453</sup> The application for noncitizens to get a Social Security Number and card requires different documentation depending on your specific immigration status.

If you are eligible, you can apply for a SSN at your local Social Security office. In most cases, you will be required to show proof of your ability to work in the U.S., as well as official documents from your country of origin that prove your identity and/or age (such as a Birth Certificate or Passport).

The document requirement is more relaxed for two classes of noncitizens:

- Refugees and asylees, many of whom may not have official documents from their country of origin. In this case, the Social Security Administration will accept evidence of refugee status instead.<sup>3454</sup>
- DACA participants who don't have birth certificates from the country in which they were born. In this case, the Social Security Administration may accept a state-issued ID or driver's license.<sup>3455</sup>

For more information on the eligibility and documentation requirements for Social Security Numbers and cards, see PG. 38.

HOW DO I OBTAIN A BIRTH CERTIFICATE FROM MY COUNTRY OF ORIGIN?

Most, but not all, foreign countries record births and will provide certifications of births occurring within their boundaries. You should contact your birth country's nearest Embassy or Consulate in the United States. Addresses and telephone numbers for these offices are listed in the U.S. Department of State Publication 7846, Foreign Consular Offices in the United States, which is available in many local libraries. Copies of this publication may also be purchased from the U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, DC 20402.

If the Embassy or Consulate is unable to provide assistance, U.S. citizens may obtain assistance by writing to the Office of Overseas Citizens Services, U.S. Department of State, Washington, DC 20520-4818. Noncitizens residing in the United States may be able to obtain assistance through the Embassy or Consulate of their country of nationality.

I AM AN UNDOCUMENTED PERSON. CAN I GET A SOCIAL SECURITY NUMBER OR CARD?

If you are undocumented, you cannot get a Social Security Number or card, which limits your ability to work legally in the U.S. and receive certain government benefits. However, it won't stop you from accessing many other services and benefits. For example, a SSN is NOT required to get a driver's license, register for school, get private health insurance, or apply to subsidized housing. Although many companies, such as banks or credit card corporations, may ask for your social security number, you aren't required to provide one if you don't have one. If you are concerned about how your immigration status is affecting your ability to find work, speak to an immigration attorney. See PG. 1134 for a list of referrals.

CALIFORNIA DRIVER LICENSES AND ID CARDS FOR NONCITIZENS

WHICH TYPES OF NONCITIZENS CAN GET A CALIFORNIA ID CARD?

Unfortunately, only California residents who are lawfully present in the U.S. can obtain an official state ID. This means you need federally issued documents proving your immigration status. The DMV will accept any of the following U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Services documents as proof.<sup>3456</sup>

- Permanent Resident/Resident Alien card.
- Temporary Resident ID card.
- Valid foreign passport with valid Record of Arrival/Departure (Form I-94).
- Employment Authorization Document (EAD) I-766 card.
- Valid foreign passport stamped "Processed for I-551."
- Permanent Resident Re-entry Permit.
- Refugee Travel Document.
- Immigration judge's order granting asylum
- Valid I-94 stamped "REFUGEE", "PAROLE" or "PAROLEE", "ASYLEE", "HP", "PIP", Section(s) 207, 208, 209, or 212d(2).
- Valid I-94 with attached photo stamped "Temporary evidence of lawful admission for permanent residence."

I AM AN UNDOCUMENTED PERSON. CAN I GET A CALIFORNIA ID CARD?

No, you cannot get official ID that works for all government purposes if you are an undocumented immigrant living in California, BUT you may be able to get special types of ID that can be used in limited circumstances. This includes:

3. California AB 60 "Undocumented Person" driver licenses, which allow some undocumented individuals to drive legally in California (and California only!);
4. Consular Identification Cards; and
5. Municipal ID Cards (created by some cities for their local residents).

WHAT IS AN "UNDOCUMENTED PERSON" CALIFORNIA DRIVER LICENSE?

If you are an undocumented immigrant, but otherwise meet the requirements to drive legally in California, you may be able to get an AB 60 "Undocumented Person" driver license. It is very important to know that the AB 60 driver license is NOT an official form of ID because it does not qualify you for employment, voter registration, or public benefits in the United States. HOWEVER, an AB 60 driver license will allow you to drive a car legally in California—and California only.<sup>3457</sup>

Proof of Residency: When applying for an AB 60 license, you will need to submit proof that you currently live in California. For a list of documents that meet this requirement, see Appendix H, PG. 103.

<sup>3456</sup> CA DMV, "FFDL 6 Requirements for a California Identification Card," available at https://www.dmv.ca.gov/portal/dmv/detail/pubs/brochures/fast\_facts/ffdl06.

CAN THE POLICE REPORT ME TO U.S. IMMIGRATION OFFICIALS FOR USING AN AB 60 “UNDOCUMENTED PERSON” DRIVER LICENSE IN CALIFORNIA?

No. It is against state law for state police to discriminate against anyone driving with an AB 60 driver license in California, but federal agents in California and all law enforcement agencies outside of California are NOT required to honor your AB 60 driver license.

Depending on local laws and policies, you could face criminal or immigration consequences if you show your California “Undocumented Person” driver license to a police officer in another state—so use it only in California! And do NOT try to use it in federal facilities, like airport screenings or crossing through Customs and Border Patrols!<sup>3458</sup> Airports and Customs are run by the federal government, and they do NOT recognize AB 60 licenses—in fact, they can use it against you.

WHAT ARE THE OTHER LIMITED FORMS OF ID FOR UNDOCUMENTED PEOPLE?

You may be able to get one of these limited forms of ID, which can be used for some but not all purposes:

Consular Identification Cards (CIDs): Some governments issue CID cards to identify their citizens who are living in foreign countries. CID cards can be issued to people who are undocumented or documented in the foreign country. See Appendix I, PG. 109, for a list of countries that issue CIDs. If you are a citizen of one of these countries, visit the nearest consulate to obtain your CID card. In the United States, CID cards can be a helpful ID document as you try to get a driver license, open a bank account, show proof of identity to police, and access other services. For example, in California, you can use a Mexican CID to get a driver license. However, CIDs do not grant you legal presence in the United States or other privileges.<sup>3459</sup>

Municipal IDs: A handful of California cities have begun issuing municipal (“city”) ID cards for their residents. You can use these to get access to city services and benefits. More importantly, they are considered a form of identification by local officials and may provide evidence to get other forms of ID. Additionally, these forms of ID do not require proof of citizenship or legal presence of any kind.

- San Francisco City ID Card — Photo ID card for San Francisco residents to get access to city programs and connect to local businesses. It proves identity and city residency; and it can be used as a public library card and to access other city services. For more information, visit the San Francisco County Clerk’s website at: <http://www.sfgov2.org/index.aspx?page=110>, or call 2-1-1 in the San Francisco Bay Area.
- Oakland City ID Prepaid Mastercard — Photo ID with an optional Prepaid Debit Card banking feature for Oakland residents. For Oakland residents who don’t have bank accounts, it provides an affordable alternative. For more information, visit <http://www.oaklandcityid.com/> or call 1-888-997-3522.
- Richmond City ID Card — Photo ID and prepaid debit card for Richmond residents. For more information, see <http://www.richmondcityid.com/> or call 1-888-997-3522.

TRAVELING AS A NONCITIZEN

I AM A NONCITIZEN. AM I ALLOWED TO TRAVEL OUTSIDE OF CALIFORNIA?

It depends. If you are a Lawful Permanent Resident (LPR), you have many of the same rights as U.S. citizens, including the right to travel throughout the country and abroad. Bring your green card with you, if possible, and be wary of traveling outside of the U.S. for more than six months — this could be interpreted as moving to another country and could put your legal status in jeopardy.<sup>3460</sup>

IMPORTANT: If you are a Lawful Permanent Resident with a criminal record, consult with an attorney before leaving the country — especially if your arrest or conviction occurred after you obtained LPR status. See PG. 1134 for a list of people and organizations you can contact.

III. PAROLE & PROBATION ISSUES AFFECTING NONCITIZENS

WHAT WILL I LEARN?

- The relationship between the federal immigration enforcement agency and the CDCR
- What happens when you are released from CDCR custody with an outstanding detainer
- Information about the immigration consequences of sex offenses
- The limitations on receiving parole services as an undocumented person

ICE DETAINERS

WHAT IS THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN THE CDCR AND IMMIGRATIONS & CUSTOMS ENFORCEMENT (ICE)?

When a noncitizen (or suspected noncitizen) is convicted of a crime, the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation (CDCR) reports that information to someone from U.S. Immigrations & Customs Enforcement (ICE).<sup>3461</sup> ICE then reviews every case to determine whether that person is removable from the country. If ICE officials determine that a noncitizen may be removable, they will place that person on an immigration hold (also called a “detainer,” see below). The process of evaluating whether someone is removable takes place after they have served their entire prison term.<sup>3462</sup>

I AM A NONCITIZEN, AND I AM TOLD I HAVE AN OUTSTANDING DETAINER AGAINST ME. WHAT IS A DETAINER? WHAT COULD HAPPEN TO ME?

An ICE detainer is a written request by immigration officials to a local jail or other law enforcement agency that the agency detain an individual for an additional 48 hours (excluding weekends and holidays) after his or her release date so that ICE officials can decide whether to take the individual into federal custody and begin formal deportation proceedings.

A “detainer”—or “immigration hold”—is one of the key tools U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) uses to apprehend individuals who come in contact with local and state law enforcement agencies and put them into the federal immigration, and often times, deportation system.

Even if you have a detainer against you, the USPC may still grant you release onto federal parole if you meet the other criteria in 28 C.F.R. § 2.18. The presence of a detainer is not in itself a valid reason for the denial of parole.<sup>3463</sup>

When a State or local detainer is outstanding against a prisoner whom the USPC wishes to parole, the Commission may order either of the following:

- In this event, you can only be released to agency that put the detainer on you. When such a detainer is removed, you can’t be released unless the Commission makes a new order of parole; OR
- If you have an acceptable plan for community supervision, you can be released into the community if the detaining officials remove the detainer or don’t pick you up<sup>3464</sup>

For more information on the immigration consequences of a criminal records and a discussion of record cleaning options see PG. 1122 later in this chapter.

CONSTITUTIONAL CONCERNS ABOUT DETAINERS

State and local corrections officials frequently violate the 48-hour limitation by continuing to hold individuals beyond the period allowed by regulation, raising constitutional concerns. Detainers have resulted in the illegal imprisonment of many people—including U.S. citizens, lawful permanent residents, without any charges pending, sometimes for days or weeks after they should have been released from custody.

NONCITIZENS ON STATE PAROLE

I AM A NONCITIZEN CONVICTED OF A SEX OFFENSE THAT REQUIRES ME TO REGISTER. WILL I FACE IMMIGRATION CONSEQUENCES IN ADDITION TO MY TIME SENTENCED TO JAIL OR PRISON?

The interaction between criminal and immigration law is very complex, and the answer to this question depends on what your specific conviction is, and/or what happened when you took a plea in your criminal case.

A conviction of an offense that involves sexual or lewd intent can have a range of immigration consequences. But in some cases where the offense is less serious, careful pleading and effective advocacy may help someone to avoid negative immigration consequences (like avoiding deportation). If you are unsure if your conviction will trigger immigration consequences, it is recommended that you reach out to your defense attorney/public defender's office immediately about these concerns.

IMPORTANT RESOURCE: For general information on the immigration consequences of a conviction that creates a 290 registration requirement, the Immigrant Legal Resource Center (ILRC) offers a detailed guide online at: https://www.ilrc.org/sites/default/files/resources/10\_sex\_offenses\_2014\_final.pdf.

I AM UNDOCUMENTED AND WAS JUST RELEASED ONTO STATE PAROLE. WILL MY UNDOCUMENTED IMMIGRATION STATUS PREVENT ME FROM GETTING SERVICES?

Probably yes. Federal law prohibits most undocumented people from receiving many state and local public benefits.<sup>3465</sup> In California, this includes parole services such as food and transportation vouchers, job placement services, and short-term cash loans.<sup>3466</sup> If you feel you have been incorrectly denied these services on the basis of your immigration status, you can file an administrative appeal using CDCR Form 602.<sup>3467</sup> See PG. 180 in the PAROLE & A PROBATION CHAPTER for more information on the 602 process.

NONCITIZENS ON FEDERAL PAROLE

I AM A NONCITIZEN AND WILL BE RELEASED ON FEDERAL PAROLE. COULD I FACE SPECIAL CONDITIONS RELATED TO MY IMMIGRATION STATUS?

Possibly. Even if you are not currently subject to an ICE detainer, the court has the discretion to order you to be deported and remain outside of the U.S. as part of your conditions of supervised release.<sup>3468</sup>

I WAS RELEASED ON FEDERAL PAROLE AND SUBSEQUENTLY DEPORTED. DOES MY DEPORTATION CANCEL OR END MY PAROLE TERM?

No. Federal courts have determined that in most cases, a person's federal parole term continues even if they have been deported to another country.<sup>3469</sup> While your term of supervision will continue to run while you're abroad, if you reenter the country illegally in that time period, you could face even greater consequences.<sup>3470</sup>

IV. HOUSING ISSUES AFFECTING NONCITIZENS

WHAT WILL I LEARN?

- Information about the Immigration Tenant Protection Act, a new law protecting undocumented renters.
- What to do if ICE comes to your house or neighborhood.

I AM UNDOCUMENTED. CAN MY LANDLORD REPORT ME (OR THREATEN TO REPORT ME) TO IMMIGRATION AUTHORITIES?

In general, no. In 2017, California passed the Immigrant Tenant Protection Act, a landmark bill preventing landlords from reporting — or threatening to report — their tenants' immigration status to authorities as either a means of harassment or to force an eviction.<sup>3471</sup> The Act, a response to an increase in ICE raids and evictions in immigrant communities under President Donald Trump's administration, provides undocumented renters with several important protections (see "Know Your Rights" box below).<sup>3472</sup> But note: the Act does not prevent landlords from reporting or using a tenant's immigration status when complying with specific federal housing programs that offer rental assistance to low-income tenants.<sup>3473</sup>

KNOW YOUR RIGHTS AS AN UNDOCUMENTED TENANT

- Landlords are NOT permitted to ask about your immigration status on a rental application;
- Landlords are NOT permitted to ask about your immigration status at any time in the rental process;
- You are NOT required to tell your landlord about your immigration status at any time in the rental process;
- Your landlord CANNOT threaten to tell authorities about your immigration status in order to force you out of your house, retaliate against you, or harass you.
- Your landlord CANNOT evict you for not having a valid Social Security Number or state-issued ID card;
- If your landlord discloses or threatens to disclose your immigration status, you have the right to sue for 6 to 12 times the monthly rent.<sup>3474</sup>

IMPORTANT: If you feel your landlord has violated your rights under the Immigrant Tenant Protection Act, contact a housing lawyer IMMEDIATELY. See Appendix A, PG. 1128 for a list of referrals.

WHAT IS AN "ICE RAID?"

U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) is a federal law enforcement agency that has the authority to round up people suspected of violating federal immigration laws — particularly those with criminal records — without warning.<sup>3475</sup> During a raid, uniformed, armed ICE agents may surround a person's home and order occupants to open up or come outside for questioning. They can then arrest and potentially order the deportation of anyone they suspect of being in the country illegally. Under Donald Trump's presidency, ICE raids have become more common in many California neighborhoods.<sup>3476</sup>

HOW CAN I PREPARE FOR AN ICE RAID?<sup>3477</sup>

ICE raids are very serious and require assistance from experienced immigration attorneys. While the attorneys at Root & Rebound do NOT have expertise in this area, we offer the following tips from immigration advocates as a starting point to help you become more prepared. If you are worried about being the target of an ICE raid, we recommend speaking to an experienced immigration practitioner.

<sup>3477</sup> These tips are adapted from Immigrant Legal Resource Center's info sheet "Immigrant Rights" (Apr. 24, 2017), available at https://www.ilrc.org/sites/default/files/resources/kyr\_two\_pager\_v2.pdf.

STEP 1: Talk to an immigration lawyer. An immigration lawyer with experience working with clients in reentry can help you prepare for a raid, figure out your and your family's options, and determine if any expungement remedies could help you. They may also have advice on which documents you should and should not have on your person at all times. To find out more about expungement remedies, see PG. 1122. For a list of free or low-cost legal service providers, see PG. 1134.

STEP 2: Develop a family preparedness plan. You and your loved ones need to be prepared for an unexpected ICE raid. For more information on how to set up a family preparedness plan, including various childcare arrangements you can make for your children, see PG. 1120.

STEP 3: Know your rights! If ICE shows up at your house, make sure you, your loved ones, and neighbors know what ICE agents can and cannot do. No matter what your immigration status, remember the following:

1. Remain calm and do not run away. ICE and/or the police may find a way to use your actions against you.
2. You have the right to remain silent. You are not required to speak to an ICE agent. Do not answer any questions, especially about your birth place or immigration status. Tell them you will not answer their questions until you speak to a lawyer.
3. You have the right to demand a warrant. You do NOT have to open your door or let ICE in unless the ICE agent shows you a warrant. The warrant must be signed by a judge with your correct name and address on it.
4. You have the right to speak to a lawyer. Make sure you are prepared with the name and number of an attorney you can contact in the event of an immigration emergency.
5. You have the right to refuse to sign or show any documents before speaking to a lawyer. Do NOT sign anything. ICE agents come to raids equipped with forms that can eliminate your right to speak to a lawyer or have a hearing in front of an immigration judge. Don't sign away your rights!

HELPFUL HINT:

Many California nonprofits make location-specific "Red cards," summarizing your legal rights against ICE agents. Red cards are available in multiple languages.

It may be helpful for you to carry around a red card at all times so you know what to do if you are approached by immigration authorities.

To obtain a red card, go to <https://www.ilrc.org/red-cards>.

IMPORTANT: *If you witness an ICE Raid, you can call the "ICE out of CA Hotline," a phone line that connects with a confidential voicemail, which is monitored by immigrant lawyers and advocates.

Phone: 1-844-TRUST-01 (1-844-878-7801)

Website: www.iceoutofca.org

Many counties also have 24/7 hotlines available to help people report ICE raids and individuals taken into immigration custody. Some hotlines (e.g. Alameda County) provide follow-up and limited-scope legal support for local people

V. PUBLIC BENEFITS FOR NONCITIZENS

WHAT WILL I LEARN?

- Whether you are eligible for certain public benefits;

I AM A NONCITIZEN. WHAT TYPES OF PUBLIC BENEFITS CAN I GET?

Your ability to get various public benefits varies greatly depending on your immigration status and the type of benefit. While many federally funded public benefits, including social security (SSI), are mostly limited to U.S. citizens<sup>3478</sup>, certain noncitizens known as “qualified” immigrants<sup>3479</sup> can sign up for state-sponsored government programs that offer similar benefits.

Qualified immigrants include:

- Lawful Permanent Residents (also called “Green Card holders”);
- Lawful Temporary Residents and visa holders;
- Asylees and refugees;
- People with Temporary Protected Status (TPS).

If you are not a “qualified” immigrant, your ability to get public benefits is much more limited. However, you may still have access to benefits such as healthcare.

CASH ASSISTANCE PROGRAM FOR IMMIGRANTS (CAPI)

WHAT IS CAPI? WHO IS ELIGIBLE?

CAPI is a state-funded program that provides monthly cash benefits (similar to SSI) for aged, blind, and disabled noncitizens who are ineligible for SSI/SSP solely due to their immigrant status. To be eligible for CAPI, you must: 1) Fill out an application in the county welfare office; 2) Be a lawfully present noncitizen; 3) Meet all other SSI/SSP eligibility requirements (except for immigration status); 4) Be ineligible for SSI/SSP solely due to immigration status.

For more information on CAPI, call your local SSA office (listing of SSA offices available at: <https://secure.ssa.gov/ICON/main.jsp> or visit: <http://www.cdss.ca.gov/cdssweb/PG42.htm>

FOOD STAMPS

I AM A NONCITIZEN. CAN I GET FOOD STAMPS?

It depends. There are two food stamp programs: a federal program called the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) and a state program, the California Food Assistance Program (CFAP). “Qualified” immigrants may be able to get federally funded food stamps – but only after they have lawfully lived in the U.S. for five years.<sup>3480</sup> The California Food Assistance Program does not have a similar waiting period. All “qualified” immigrants, as well as a small percentage of non-qualified immigrants, are permitted to apply for CFAP, regardless of how long they have held their immigration status.<sup>3481</sup> Undocumented people cannot get food stamps under either program.<sup>3482</sup>

I AM UNDOCUMENTED BUT MY CHILDREN ARE HERE LEGALLY. CAN I APPLY FOR FOOD STAMPS FOR THEM?

Yes. Even though your immigration status disqualifies you from federal and state food stamps, you can apply on behalf of your children if they are U.S. citizens or eligible noncitizens.<sup>3483</sup> If you are not seeking food stamps for <sup>3478</sup> If you're a noncitizen, you may be able to get SSI if you meet specific requirements; the rules on this are complex. Resources are available from California Immigrant Policy Center (www.caimmigrant.org) and National Immigration Law Center (www.nilc.org).

yourself, you are NOT required to give information about your immigration status, nor are you required to provide a Social Security Number. Although the food stamps office is only required to report you to ICE if it has tangible proof you are in the country illegally (such as a final order of deportation), it is still a good idea not to tell anyone you are undocumented. Rather, explain that you are applying for your children but are not yourself a qualified immigrant.<sup>3484</sup>

HEALTHCARE

I AM A NONCITIZEN. CAN I GET HEALTHCARE IN CALIFORNIA?

Yes. Lawfully present noncitizens and undocumented people can both apply for healthcare through Covered California, which also screens for Medi-Cal eligibility. Only lawfully present people can purchase coverage through Covered California, and applicants are required to show proof of lawful presence. While undocumented people cannot purchase healthcare through Covered California, they may still be eligible for healthcare through Medi-Cal.<sup>3485</sup> They may also be eligible for healthcare under a county program.

I AM UNDOCUMENTED BUT MY CHILDREN ARE HERE LEGALLY. CAN I APPLY FOR HEALTHCARE ON THEIR BEHALF?

Yes. Even if your immigration status disqualifies you from Covered California, you can apply on behalf of your children if they are U.S. citizens or eligible noncitizens.<sup>3486</sup> You do not have to disclose your immigration status when applying on behalf of another person.<sup>3487</sup>

WILL GETTING GOVERNMENT HEALTHCARE COVERAGE AFFECT MY IMMIGRATION STATUS?

No. In general, taking advantage of government health care programs — whether at the federal, state, or county level — should not impact your immigration status or your ability to apply for a green card.<sup>3488</sup> In addition, if you are undocumented and disclose your immigration status while applying for California health insurance, ICE cannot use that information against you or initiate deportation proceedings.<sup>3489</sup>

VI. EMPLOYMENT & EDUCATION ISSUES AFFECTING NONCITIZENS IN REENTRY

WHAT WILL I LEARN?

- What your employer can and cannot ask you about your immigration status.
- Whether your employer can threaten to report you to ICE.
- What to do if ICE comes to your workplace.
- Information about attending college in California.
- Information about eligibility for federal and state financial aid for college.

EMPLOYMENT

I AM UNDOCUMENTED. CAN MY EMPLOYER ASK ABOUT MY IMMIGRATION STATUS?

It depends. Federal law requires employers to verify the work eligibility of their employees at the time they are hired. Once you have filled out the required form (called an I-9) and presented supporting documentation, an employer should NOT inquire into or discuss your immigration status – except under specific circumstances required by federal law.<sup>3490</sup>

I AM UNDOCUMENTED. CAN MY EMPLOYER THREATEN TO REPORT ME TO ICE?

No. If your employer threatens to report your immigration status (or suspected immigration status) as a means of scaring you, this is considered criminal extortion.<sup>3491</sup> Contact an attorney with experience in immigration and/or employment law immediately. For a list of referrals see Appendix A, PG. 1134.

WHAT IS AN ICE WORKSITE RAID?

A worksite raid is the sudden entry of ICE agents into a place of business in order to detect and detain undocumented workers. Under Donald Trump’s presidency, workplace raids have become more common. In response, in 2017 California passed the Immigrant Worker Protection Act, which is designed to protect undocumented workers from unplanned immigration enforcement. The Act limits employers’ ability to let ICE officials into their place of business.<sup>3492</sup> See the Know Your Rights box below for more information.

WHAT SHOULD I DO IF ICE RAIDS MY WORKPLACE?

Under the Immigrant Worker Protection Act, your employer is supposed to prevent ICE from entering nonpublic places without consent or a warrant.<sup>3493</sup> Still, ICE raids can be stressful and may not go according to plan. Remember that all people in the U.S. – regardless of their immigration status – has certain legal rights, including the right to remain silent and the right to speak to an attorney before signing anything. If ICE detains you, you have the right to an immigration attorney. You should create a plan with your loved ones so you are prepared for contact with ICE. For more information on creating a family preparedness plan, see PG. 1120.

EDUCATION

I AM A NONCITIZEN. CAN I ATTEND COLLEGE IN CALIFORNIA?

Yes. In 2017, Governor Jerry Brown passed AB 699, which makes it mandatory for all public schools in California to be accessible to California residents regardless of their immigration status.<sup>3494</sup> In addition, the California Dream Act provides funds for noncitizen and undocumented students to cover tuition at public and private colleges.<sup>3495</sup>

I AM A NONCITIZEN. CAN I APPLY FOR FEDERAL FINANCIAL AID?

It depends. Your ability to get financial aid depends on your immigration status and the type of government aid. Only “eligible noncitizens” can receive federal financial aid – not undocumented individuals. If you fall in one of the categories below, you are considered an “eligible noncitizen.”

- You are a:
  - U.S. national (includes natives of American Samoa or Swains Island) or
  - U.S. permanent resident with a Form I-551, I-151, or I-551C (Permanent Resident Card, Resident Alien Card, or Alien Registration Receipt Card), also known as a green card;
- You have an Arrival-Departure Record (I-94) from U.S. Citizen and Immigration Services (USCIS) showing:
  - “Refugee,”
  - “Asylum Granted,”
  - “Cuban-Haitian Entrant (Status Pending),”
  - “Conditional Entrant” (valid only if issued before April 1, 1980), or
  - “Parolee” (you must be paroled for at least one year, and you must be able to provide evidence from the USCIS that you are not in the United States for a temporary purpose and that you intend to become a U.S. citizen or permanent resident);
- You hold a T-visa (for victims of human trafficking) or your parent holds a T-1 visa. Your college or career school’s financial aid office will ask to see your visa and/or certification letter from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services;
- You are a “battered immigrant-qualified alien” who is a victim of abuse by your citizen or permanent resident spouse, or you are the child of a person designated as such under the Violence Against Women Act; *OR
- You are a citizen of the Federated States of Micronesia, the Republic of the Marshall Islands, or the Republic of Palau. If this is the case, you may be eligible for only certain types of federal aid.
  - Citizens of the Republic of Palau are eligible for Federal Pell Grants, Federal Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants, and Federal Work-Study.
  - Citizens of the Federal States of Micronesia and the Republic of the Marshall Islands are eligible for Federal Pell Grants only.

I AM A NONCITIZEN. CAN I APPLY FOR STATE FINANCIAL AID?

Yes. Unlike the federal government, California does not limit all aid to “eligible noncitizens” only – meaning you can apply for some forms of aid even if you are undocumented. This includes Cal Grants, the Chafee Foster Youth Grant, Middle Class Scholarships and institutional or private scholarships. Eligible undocumented students wishing to attend public schools like those in the University of California (UC) or California State University (CSU) systems may be eligible for the Dream Loan as well.<sup>3496</sup> In addition, under SB 68, a law passed in 2017, undocumented students are allowed to pay discounted resident tuition if they meet certain residency and educational requirements.<sup>3497</sup>

WILL APPLYING FOR STATE FINANCIAL AID JEOPARDIZE MY IMMIGRATION STATUS?

No. Under AB 699, the government is prohibited from collecting information about students’ citizenship or immigration status using their financial aid or institutional documents.<sup>3498</sup> In addition, California public colleges cannot disclose personal information – including immigration information – about its students except under limited circumstances.<sup>3499</sup>

WHAT IS THE “DREAM ACT”?

The Dream Act is a set of California laws allowing some undocumented and nonresident documented students to receive state-based financial aid and institutional scholarships. ## VII. PROTECTING YOUR FAMILY & CHILDREN FROM IMMIGRATION CONSEQUENCES

WHAT WILL I LEARN?

- What a family preparedness plan is and how to create one.
- Various options for childcare arrangements in the event you are detained.
- How to deal with family issues while in ICE detention.

WHAT IS A FAMILY PREPAREDNESS PLAN?

A family preparedness plan ensures you and your loved ones are prepared in the event ICE detains you or a member of your family. It is a good idea to plan for this in advance to ease the stress of ICE detention.

HOW DO I CREATE A FAMILY PREPAREDNESS PLAN?<sup>3500</sup>

The most important thing is to plan for childcare. Ensure that a responsible adult will be available to take care of your child or children if you are detained or deported. Write this plan down and make sure your friends and family are aware of it. Without worrying them, make sure your children understand that they will be taken care of in case of an immigration emergency.

When making your plan, you will have to decide what kind of childcare agreement you want to make with the adult you have chosen. You have several options, some more formal than others. Discuss your options, listed below, with your family and an attorney to determine which is the best fit for your situation.

- INFORMAL AGREEMENT without LEGAL PAPERS or COURT - Just as you can have your children stay with a baby sitter without signing any papers, you can choose to have your children live with someone for a longer period of time without signing any papers. You simply need to talk to the person and get his or her verbal agreement that they will care for your children. This type of arrangement may work well for you if you expect to be detained for only a short time. Make sure that the caregiver you choose does not need public benefits in order to care for your children (like Medicaid or food stamps). Be sure to choose someone whom you trust, and make sure that there is no reason why anyone would object to this choice of caregiver.
- INFORMAL AGREEMENT WITH LEGAL PAPERS without COURT - A Caregiver's Authorization Affidavit is a form to give to your child's school or health care provider so a non-parent relative can enroll your child in public school, make school-related medical decisions, and make other important decisions on your child's behalf if you are unable to. It allows non-relatives to enroll your child in school and to receive school-related medical treatment (though likely not the power to get public benefits such as Medicaid or food stamps for your children). A Caregiver's Authorization Affidavit does not affect your rights as your child's parent - you still have custody and control of your child.
- FORMAL Arrangement— Family court-approved custody - When you make court-approved arrangements, you may have two or three different options: 1) temporary custody (time-limited); 2) custody (also called conservatorship); or 3) guardianship. One option may provide greater parental rights than the other. These family court-approved custody arrangements provide greater stability for your children. They will give the caregiver the right to make decisions for your children, but be aware that they are more difficult to end.

For more information on how to create a family preparedness plan, including sample documents you and your loved ones can fill out, visit www.ilrc.org.

<sup>3500</sup> This section is adapted from Immigrant Legal Resource Center's info sheet "Family Preparedness Plan" (Mar. 2, 2017), available at https://www.ilrc.org/sites/default/files/resources/family\_preparedness\_plan\_v3-20170323.pdf.

STEPS TO TAKE TO CONNECT WITH YOUR CHILDREN IF YOU ARE PICKED UP BY ICE

FIRST STEPS: What to do as soon as possible after you are detained:

- Get your “A Number” (USCIS #). “A numbers” consist of the letter “A” followed by eight or nine digits. This is the identification number for individual’s immigration case and will follow the individual throughout the whole immigration process. It is very important to write down this number and provide to your children’s designated caretaker, your relatives, and close friends so they can stay updated about your case.
- Try to get released. Tell the processing staff (who put your information into the computer) at the detention center that you have children, especially if you are the only person who cares for them. Ask ICE if you can be released so you can care for them. It may be helpful to mention the ICE directive, “Facilitating Parental Interests in the Course of Civil Immigration Enforcement Activities,” when making this request.

Keep asking if you can be released to care for your children, even if ICE does not release you at first. If you ask to be released but ICE will not release you, keep asking, especially if there are any changes to your children’s custody status or concern about their safety.

- Try to get a phone call. ICE is not required to give you a phone call but they may be willing to help if you explain that you have children and need to make sure they are okay and have someone to care for them.
- Request a bond hearing. You should also ask your Deportation Officer how to request release on Humanitarian Parole, Release on Recognizance, Supervised Release or Alternatives to Detention and how to request a bond hearing.

Make sure your Deportation Officer (sometimes called a Case Officer) knows you have children, especially if you are a single parent or the main caregiver for your children. Ask him or her to exercise discretion in your case (“discretion” is a word that has a particular meaning for ICE, so use this word when asking).

ADDITIONAL STEPS: If ICE does not immediately release you, the next steps below may help:

- If you do not know where your children are, try to find out where they are as soon as you can. Once you find out where your children are, ask relatives or friends outside to put money into your detainee account so you can call and talk to your children and the person taking care of them. If this is not possible, tell ICE you need to make arrangements for your children and ask if you can make free calls to deal with child custody issues.
- If you think your children are not with a friend or family member and that they might be in the custody of a Child Family Service Agency (CFSA) (often called “CPS”), you should talk to your Deportation Officer and ask to contact the CFSA right away. CFSA has a 24-hour, toll-free Hotline here: 202-671-7233.
- Request a Family Court Lawyer to represent you if your child is in CFSA custody or there is a Family Court case. Communicate with your child’s lawyer or the Law Guardian.
- Contact your country’s nearest Consulate. Register your children with the Consulate: Your U.S. citizen children will keep their U.S. citizenship even if you register them with the consulate of your home country. Apply for Passports for children - If you are deported and want to take your children with you, it will be much easier to do this if they have passports.
- Maintain Contact with your Children. You should stay as involved with your children as much as possible. You should write letters to them. You are allowed to receive letters and pictures from them even in detention. Take notes on everything you send to your children and receive from them, and save everything you receive. - Maintaining contact and involvement in your child’s care will be an important factor in any CFSA and/or Immigration case.
- Ask for Visitation. ICE will also facilitate parent-child visitation, to the extent practicable, when required by a family or dependency court or a child welfare authority AND documentation is provided of this requirement, including but not limited to: a reunification plan; a scheduling letter; or other documentation issued stating the visitation requirement. It may be helpful to mention the ICE directive on “Facilitating Parental Interests in the Course of Civil Immigration Enforcement Activities” when making this request.
- Participate in all hearings related to the custody of your children either in person, by video (if available) or by telephone. It is also good to have a relative or friend attend hearings, especially if you cannot be there. Alert Family Court or CFSA that your detention is CIVIL and not a criminal matter. Provide A Number to CFSA/Family Court.

- You have the right to an interpreter in family court proceedings. ICE can also provide you with access to interpretation if you need help communicating with people in the immigration detention system. If you do not speak English or if you cannot read or write, do not be afraid to ask the family court, the child welfare caseworker, your lawyer(s) or ICE and detention center staff to provide you with an interpreter and/or other assistance.
- Do not sign any documents related to your immigration or child welfare case if you don't understand what they say.
- If your children are in the child welfare system, you may be assigned a case plan (also called a service plan or a reunification plan). Make sure you do what is asked of you in the case plan because this will impact the outcome of your case. If you cannot do certain things that the plan requires because you are detained or have been deported, make sure everyone involved in the child welfare case knows this. Do your best to complete the services required by the case plan.

VIII. UNDERSTANDING & REDUCING THE IMMIGRATION CONSEQUENCE OF CRIMINAL RECORDS

WHAT WILL I LEARN?

- What a family preparedness plan is and how to create one.
- Various options for childcare arrangements in the event you are detained.
- How to deal with family issues while in ICE detention.

The following information comes from a fact sheet that Root & Rebound prepared with the Immigrant Legal Resource Center (ILRC, www.ilrc.org). It explains the overlap between the criminal justice and immigration legal systems and describes ways you might be able to clean up your criminal record to help with immigration consequences. While these options will not be available to every immigrant with a record in California, we hope more people and families can advocate and stay together with this information and the resources that follow.

HOW MUCH HAVE DEPORTATIONS INCREASED UNDER PRESIDENT TRUMP?

Although the number of deportations began to drop in 2012 after a huge increase during President Barack Obama's first term, the Obama Administration increased the deportation of people with criminal records in recent years. 92% of people living in the U.S. who were deported in 2015 had a past criminal conviction, up from 75% in 2012.

Many different kinds of criminal convictions and other violations of the law can make a noncitizen deportable or unable to change their immigration status. The important thing to know is that contact with the criminal justice system can have a huge impact on someone's ability to stay in the U.S. and it is very important to talk to a lawyer before applying for an immigration status, traveling, or talking to law enforcement.

IMPORTANT WARNING: If you are contacted by ICE while detained/incarcerated, you have the right to call a lawyer or a loved one/family member, and you have the right to be visited by a lawyer. You have the right to have your attorney with you at a hearing before an immigration judge. You do not have a right to a state-appointed attorney, but it is suggested that your loved one/family member contact the organizations at the end of this fact sheet if you are unable to hire one. You must insist on using your rights and should contact an attorney or have one contacted by a loved one before signing anything with ICE - so you do not give up your rights to fight against deportation.

HOW HAVE U.S. IMMIGRATION POLICIES CHANGED UNDER PRESIDENT TRUMP?

Former President Obama's immigration policy publicly focused on deporting people with violent and/or serious convictions; though in fact, most people deported from 2014-2016 under Obama's administration were convicted of nonviolent or immigration-related offenses.

President Trump has been even more outspoken about his plan to deport a wider range of individuals. This includes people arrested and charged with a crime but not actually convicted; suspected gang members; and people convicted of low-level misdemeanors.

On January 25, 2017, Trump released two Executive Orders (E.O.) describing his administration's immigration policy and how it connects to people in the criminal justice system. One E.O. said that the federal government, through the Department of Homeland Security, will now be expanding deportation efforts to more heavily target the following groups: (1) any immigrants who have been convicted of any crime, (2) any immigrants who have been charged with any crime (but not yet convicted), and (3) any immigrants who have committed acts that are a chargeable criminal offense (which we take to mean that immigrants who are assumed to have committed a crime are at risk of deportation under Trump's policy).

IMPORTANT NOTE: Although current federal law already allows the government to deport immigrants based on certain criminal convictions, Trump's Executive Order goes far beyond the current law to include people convicted of any crime and even people who are suspected of committing a crime. It is still unknown how the Executive Order will be carried out, when federal law does not yet permit deportation of all of the groups of people being targeted. While the Trump administration plans to expand the noncitizens they are targeting for deportation, it is crucial that you explore options to make your criminal record more "immigration-safe" - meaning less likely to trigger negative immigration consequences. Contact one of the organizations listed at the end of this fact sheet for legal support.

On February 21, 2017, the Secretary of the Department of Homeland Security, John Kelly, who works for President Trump, released two memos with the federal government's plans to carry out the January 25th E.O.s - including plans to hire thousands more immigration enforcement agents; expand the group of immigrants who are being prioritized for removal (deportation); speed up deportation hearings; and work with local law enforcement to help them make immigration-related arrests. These memos are federal guidelines that give the U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) federal agency the power to more aggressively arrest, detain and deport immigrants with criminal records and undocumented immigrants living in the U.S., or trying to enter at the borders.

GET HELP!

Trump's Executive Orders (EOs) and memos are very threatening to many people. If you are personally affected or know someone who might be, please take a look at the list of legal resources and organizations listed at the end of this fact sheet. These organizations are offering assistance to immigrants and fighting back during this time. They may also be able to advise you about how to make your record more "immigration-safe," meaning less likely to put you at risk of deportation.

WHAT PROTECTIONS ARE AVAILABLE UNDER CALIFORNIA'S STATE LAWS AND THE LOCAL PRACTICES OF "SANCTUARY" CITIES AND COUNTIES IN THE STATE?

"Sanctuary" defined: A "sanctuary" jurisdiction describes cities, counties, and states with policies designed to limit cooperation with or involvement in federal immigration enforcement actions.

California's Statewide Protections:

- In 2013, California Governor Jerry Brown signed the Trust Act into law. As a result, state police cannot detain someone with the goal of turning them over to federal immigration authorities unless the person has been charged with or convicted of a serious crime.
- Similarly, in 2016, Governor Brown signed the Truth Act, which created a number of protections for immigrants in California, including that if ICE places a detainer on someone in jail in California, the jail staff must serve the person with a copy of that detainer, which allows them more time to contact family and an attorney.
- In addition, California issues special AB 60 "Undocumented Person" Driver's Licenses to undocumented Californians, which allow undocumented people to legally drive in California without having their information sent to federal immigration agents. However, these driver's licenses CANNOT be used out-of-state or in federal buildings like airports.

Local "Sanctuary" Protections in California:

- In response to Trump's Executive Order, California "sanctuary" cities and counties are fighting back, providing even stronger protections than the state of California, with San Francisco leading the charge. To learn more about which cities and counties provide special protections for undocumented immigrants, view the "sanctuary" map here: www.ilrc.org/local-enforcement-map. Zoom into the map over your city, and if there is a colorful pin on the map, click it to learn more about local protections.

DO I HAVE ANY OPTIONS IF I PLED "GUILTY" OR "NO CONTEST" IN A CRIMINAL CASE IF I DIDN'T KNOW THE IMMIGRATION CONSEQUENCES OF THAT DECISION?

Maybe. Both state and federal law require criminal defense lawyers to advise their clients of, and defend against, the immigration consequences of a criminal conviction. This means you have the right to receive adequate advice from your criminal defense lawyer about the immigration consequences of your criminal case. The law requires defense lawyers (including public defenders) to ask about their clients' citizenship status; investigate potential immigration consequences; advise their clients about those immigration consequences; and plea-bargain with an eye toward avoiding them. On the next page, you will find a chart that summarizes situations where immigrants have some options to challenge a plea agreement in their criminal case because you were not adequately advised on the immigration consequences.

“Vacated” - a legal term defined: “Vacate” means to erase, cancel or void. We use it in the chart, so refer back to this definition if you are unclear. But note that if your conviction has been vacated, the District Attorney may be able to prosecute you on the original criminal charges. For all of these, ask you attorney for advice about the best path in your case!

Because Trump is prioritizing the removal of people involved in the criminal justice system, any options for getting rid of convictions is especially critical at this point. Consult with an attorney who specializes in criminal and immigration law to find out what makes sense under your particular circumstances.

This chart summarizes different options for challenging your plea agreement if you did not know or understand the immigration consequences of your conviction. You can share this with your lawyer to help you decide which, if any, are the best options available to you.

METHOD for Challenging a Guilty or “No Contest” Plea	WHEN to Bring This Challenge	WHAT to Challenge in Your Criminal Case	TYPE OF RELIEF You Get if Challenge is Successful
Cal. Penal Code section 1018. An application/motion in the trial court. ### ARE THERE ANY OTHER WAYS THAT I CAN CLEAN UP MY RECORD THAT MIGHT HELP ME FOR IMMIGRATION PURPOSES?

Maybe! Some of California's "record-cleaning" or "expungement" laws may help you reduce certain felonies to misdemeanors, and/or dismiss certain convictions - which in some cases can also help reduce your chances of being targeted for deportation and other negative immigration consequences. Below is a summary of California's record-cleaning laws that may help people with their immigration status.

To get help pursuing one of these "record-cleaning" options, contact your local public defender's office or call Root & Rebound's free and confidential Reentry Legal Hotline any Friday at (510) 279-4662 for a referral to a free expungement legal clinic.

Dismissals (also known as "expungements"):

When lawyers refer to "expungements" in California (which don't really exist here), they usually mean "dismissals," which allow people to dismiss a felony or misdemeanor conviction after completing any time they were sentenced to jail, prison and/or probation. While dismissals can help with applying to some jobs and housing, they usually do not erase the conviction for immigration purposes. However, there is one important exception for certain first-time simple possession offenses that occurred before July 14, 2011, where a dismissal may help with immigration consequences.

Reducing Felonies to Misdemeanors:

The following newer laws help people reduce felonies to misdemeanors for all purposes, including for immigration purposes.

- Under Cal. Penal Code section 17(b)(3), the court can reduce felony "wobblers" - offenses that originally could have been charged as either felonies or misdemeanors - down to misdemeanors if you were not sentenced to state prison.
- Under California's Proposition 47, you can petition the court to reduce a felony conviction for simple drug possession or a lower-level theft offense to a misdemeanor (called "reclassification" or "redesignation").
- Under California's Proposition 64, you may be able to change your record (called "reclassification") if you have a conviction for a marijuana offense, which means you might be able to reduce or dismiss prior marijuana-related convictions.

A WARNING ABOUT "LEGALIZED MARIJUANA" UNDER PROP. 64 IN CALIFORNIA:

Although California state law permits some use and cultivation of marijuana, federal law does NOT allow this - and remember, immigration is run by the federal government! So please read and share the warnings below!

- Don't use marijuana until you are a U.S. citizen. Don't work in a marijuana shop.
- If you have a real medical need and there is no good substitute for medical marijuana, get legal counsel.
- Never leave the house carrying marijuana, a medical marijuana card, paraphernalia (like a pipe), or accessories like marijuana T-shirts or stickers. Don't have photos or text about you and marijuana on your phone, Facebook, or anywhere else.

Most importantly, never admit to any immigration or border official that you ever have used or possessed marijuana, unless you have expert legal advice that this is OK. If a federal official asks you about marijuana, say that you don't want to talk to them and you want to speak to a lawyer. You have the right to remain silent. Stay strong - once you admit it, you can't take it back. If you did admit this to a federal officer, get legal help quickly. See Appendix JJ on PG. 1087 for more information.

SPECIAL NOTE: Cal. Penal Code section 18.5(b) (effective January 1, 2017) is a recent state law that reduces the maximum possible sentence for any California misdemeanor from 365 to 364 days retroactively. This is important because under federal law, certain offenses can lead to deportation if they carry even a potential sentence of one year or more. This new law is retroactive, meaning it applies to old misdemeanors as well those current and future cases. However, if you were convicted of a misdemeanor before January 1, 2015, and were sentenced to a term of one year, you must proactively ask (“petition”) the criminal court that sentenced you to change your sentence under this law.

Completing a Drug Diversion Program:

In addition, under Cal. Penal Code Section 1203.43, someone with a drug offense who received a “deferred entry of judgment” (DEJ) can get rid of the conviction for immigration purposes. You are considered to have a conviction for immigration purposes if you entered a plea of guilty even if the charges were later dismissed through a diversion program; so getting relief through Section 1203.43 gets rid of your guilty plea for immigration purposes as well. Upon completion of the court-ordered DEJ program, you must file papers with the court to ask the judge to withdraw the guilty plea and dismiss the charges once again under Section 1203.43.

If you have any questions, please see the list of additional resources and legal organizations listed below - many help people fight deportation. You can also call Root & Rebound’s free and confidential Reentry Legal Hotline any Friday at (510) 279-4662 for a referral.

Chapter 7 | LEGAL AID FOR FAMILY & CHILDREN ISSUES

Self-Help Family Law Resource You Will Find in Almost Every County in California:

- Family Law Facilitator in Your County! NOTE:
Every family court should have a Family Law
Facilitator, which is someone who can help you with court forms, answer questions, provide general information about family law issues, and walk you through the steps of your case if you do not have a lawyer. (To find your local Family Law Facilitator go to

For more information on what it means to be an undocumented person in the United States, you can contact a referral and information hotline such as 1-888-6-CHIRLA (1-888-624-4752), provided in English and Spanish by the Coalition for Humane Immigrant Rights of Los Angeles. The hotline is open Monday through Friday, 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., and can provide direct services or refer you to other organizations that can help you. It is safe for noncitizens and undocumented people to call this hotline.

You can also check out these free resources online:

- Immigration Advocates Network (IAN): IAN works to provide communication and cooperation between organizations working with immigrant communities. On IAN's website you can access a database with contact information for nearly 150 organizations helping immigrants in California. Website: <http://www.immigrationadvocates.org/nonprofit/legaldirectory/search?state=CA>
- National Immigration Law Center (NILC): NILC is a national organization that defends and advances the rights of low-income immigrants and their families. On NILC's website, you can find a list of additional California organizations that support immigrant families. Website: <http://www.nilc.org/calres.html>
- National Network for Immigrant and Refugee Rights (NNIRR): NNIRR defends and works to grow the rights for both documented and undocumented immigrants. Website: <http://www.nnirr.org/drupal/about-us>

Other Issues:

> LEGAL AID FOR PRISON CONDITIONS:

NOTE: Most of the organizations listed under this category of "Legal Aid for Prison Conditions" will do statewide work, even if their headquarters is located in a particular region of California, so you should contact any and all of these organizations with questions related to prison conditions.

GUIDE APPENDIX B:

SOCIAL SERVICES IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR READERS:

Root & Rebound is a reentry legal advocacy nonprofit. Our approach is based on the idea that attorneys and advocates can transfer powerful legal knowledge and skills to those who are in reentry and otherwise impacted by the criminal justice system, as well as the families, agencies, and communities that support them. With such a severe “justice gap” in our country and only one legal aid attorney for every 8,000 indigent people in California, we aim to create and share reentry legal information and resources that empower people to know their rights and options in reentry, with an educational approach instead of the traditional 1-to-1 client-attorney relationship.

As part of our approach, we produce reentry resources like the Roadmap to Reentry: A California Legal Guide, and other accompanying toolkits; we train community members, currently and formerly incarcerated people, and professionals working with the reentry population on this information; we run our weekly Reentry Legal Hotline (every Friday, 9 a.m. - 5 p.m., at 510-279-4662—we accept Collect Calls); and we respond to prison mail from currently incarcerated people looking for information about their rights, options, and supportive services in reentry.

We realize that information about legal issues related to reentry are often accompanied by the need to meet other basic needs post-release as well, things like food, housing, employment, health care and treatment, and other forms of social services support. While Root & Rebound is NOT a social service agency—meaning we do not directly provide housing or jobs—we recognize the importance of making those connections with social services providers in the community and do our absolute best to know which agencies across the state of California are providing supportive social services to people in reentry.

We are constantly discovering new community resources in California, and they are always expanding, diversifying, closing or otherwise changing. Because of this, it was not practical to list every social service agency in our Roadmap to Reentry guide. Instead, we have created a series of county-based template information letters at our office. The information letters are collections of referral lists and flyers, guides produced by other organizations, and directories from county governments, as well as contact information for the organizations we have worked with or trained in the past. We add to these templates when we find new resources and try to check to make sure the contact information is current on a yearly basis—but we do not have the capacity as a legal office to make sure they are 100% up-to-date.

If you would like a social service referral in the community to which you are returning (for example, you are looking for food, housing, employment or workforce development services, public benefits enrollment, health care, reentry support, legal aid services, etc.), OR believe you know of agencies and services that we don’t, please feel free to write Root & Rebound a letter at the following mailing address: 1730 Franklin St., Suite 300, Oakland, CA 94612, or call our Reentry Legal Hotline any Friday, from 9 a.m. - 5 p.m., at phone number (510) 279-4662 (we accept Collect Calls). You may ask for resources for all counties you are interested in, and we will send you the information that we have in our office. In addition to contacting our office, you can also try some of the following statewide resources listed below for referrals.

Finally, we have listed here some resources that are specific to certain populations, which may be helpful, and which you may write or call us to request.
