Early intervention is available to families with children with developmental delays between the ages of birth and three years. Transition services are provided to families when their children turn three in order to ensure they receive continuous intervention in community or school district settings.

Families and Early Intervention staff work as a team to develop a plan with outcomes and strategies appropriate for the unique needs of a child. The team may recommend services from the following list to support and assist families in meeting their child's individualized plan.

- Service coordination; parent training, counseling and home visits; screening, evaluation, and assessment; family needs assessment; assistive technology & devices; audiology services; medical diagnostic/evaluation services; nutrition services; occupational therapy; speech-language therapy; physical therapy; social work services; special instruction; transition services; vision services.
- The Early Intervention programs are provided at no cost to the family. Families are asked to provide billing information for their insurance but never billed for unpaid balances.
